Chinese Re-establish Control Along Mandalay Rd.

LONDON, March 30 — (AP). — Chinese defenders of the Mandalay road have counter-attacked Japanese troops at the eastern anchor of the Allies' Burma Front, recapturing Nangyun and Kyungon airfield 10 miles north of Toungoo, a Chinese communique declared to-day.

It said Chinese defenders at Toungood "continue to repulse the Japanese attack which has become stronger because of reinforcements."

The announcement from the Chinese Field Headquarters said the Chinese had imposed tight military control on the Pyinmana area, 50 miles north of Toungoo, because of reports that "a mob of more than 1,000 Burmans" was robbing the bullock carts of Indian refugees, had killed 12 Indians, and destroyed a section of railroad.

On the western flank of the battlefront, British mechanized forces were fighting Japanese troops at Paungde, 30 miles south of Prome, in the first phase of a fight for the oil fields of Western Burma.

At Paungde, on the railroad from Rangoon to Prome, gateway to the oil fields reconnaissance patrols made contact with the Japanese on Saturday and the fight, apparently still raging, intensified quickly as the Japanese poured in more men and the British command moved up armored forces.

First Japs Reach North Ontario

VAUCOUVER, March 30—(CP).—J. H. McVety, regional supervisor of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, announced that 130 Japanese, some Canadian-born and some naturalized, left last night for work on government road projects at Schreiber, Ont., near Fort William, and others are to follow.

Mr. McVety, who is handling employment of the men here for the Dominion Department of Labor, said they were sen' as part of the 3,000 Japanese which Premier Hepburn of Ontario said his province would take to do government road work there. All Japanese being sent to Ontario are either naturalized or Canadian-born.

CARACAS, Venezuela, March 30 —(AP).—The Ministry of War and Marine announced today that beginning April 1 the Gulf of Paria, between Trinidad and the mainland, would be mined.

The United States has at Trinidad a defence base which was leased from Britain in the destroyer trade of 1940.

Raising The Toll

LONDON, March 30—(CP)—British planes patrolling the coasts of Norway and Denmark torpedoed and probably sank a German supply ship and set afire a small ship last night, the Air Minister announced today. Torpedoes were released at two other German ships, but the pilots were unable to observe the results because of heavy anti-aircraft fire. Rationing Due Unless Buying Spree Is Halted

TORONTO, March 30.—(CP)—Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trades Board, in a speech here today said Canada's "best organizing brains" must be harnessed to the task of "directing and planning a completely co-ordinated and integrated economy" for total war production.

In a luncheon address to the Canadian Club, he also warned that unless people halted the present "buying spree" a "consumer rationing program" would be necessary.

Nothing short of maximum production would do, Mr. Gordon said, "anybody who regulates his effort by reference to a profit motive is a menace to the safety of the state."

He concluded his speech in these words: "I am not advocating any form of gigantic government monopoly of business or industry, any more than I advocate collective farming or slave labor.

"On the contrary, I have seen nothing in bureaucratic control which justifies a belief that government officials could suddenly take over the management of business and industry in this country. My appeal is for every person responsible for any part of our productive machinery to sit down with others in the same line and work out ways and means to obtain maximum production, regardless of immediate or future advantage...

"Six months from now—a year from now—it may be too late. You will need iron discipline and strength of purpose...If you really mean total war, don't keep up a parrot cry for leadership, get yourself in a position where, by sheer weight of organization and available productive capacity, you will produce, and produce, and produce."

The chairman of the W.T.P.T.B. reviewed the circumstances making prices control necessary in Canada.

Many Supplies Critical

Necessity for a price ceiling meant that domestic and foreign materials were scarce and becoming scarcer. "In many, many directions our supply situation is becoming critical," Mr. Gordon warned.

He said the retail price was considered "the line which must be held

Place Canada On Pacific War Council

Britain, Holland, China To Sit Along With Aussies, N.Y. And U.S.

WASHINGTON, March 30—(AP)—Creation of a new Pacific War Council, giving representation to Canada, Australia and New Zealand in consideration for war problems, was announced to-day by the White House. President Roosevelt called the first meeting for Wednesday.

Great Britain, the Netherlands, and China, along with the United States, also will be represented.

In announcing the Council, Mr. Roosevelt said in a statement:

"It is imperative that all of the United Nations now actively engaged in the Pacific conflict consider together matters of policy relating to our joint war effort.

"An effective war can only be prosecuted with the complete co-operation and understanding of all the nations concerned. The new Ciuncil will be in intimate contact with a similar body in London."

White House officials were unable to say immediately whether the Washington Council would be charged with directing action in the Southwest Pacific war theatre or whether that would be left to the London Council. Presumably, however, there will be complete teamwork between the two.

The President has asked that these persons sit in on the first Council meeting:—

Hume Wrong, Counsellor of the Canadian Legation; Walter Nash, New Zealand Minister to the United States; Herbert Evatt, Australian Minister of External Affairs, now here on a special mission; Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands Minister; Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, and Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador.

OTTAWA, March 30.— (CP). — Formation in Washington of the new Pacific Council was welcomed by an official government spokesman to-day.

Close For Wavell

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 30—(CP).—Lt.-Gen. Sir John Laverack disclosed today that Gen. Archibald Wavell crashed in a plane in enemy territory near the Egyptian border in April, 1941, and was missing for 36 hours.

The Germans and Italians were unaware of the crash (which apparently was at about the time of the Axis push which recovered Cirenaica, Gen. Laverack said, and Gen. Wavell finally reached the British lines safely.

German Troops Fire On Women Rioting For Food

MOSCOW, March 30—(AP). — Disturbances in which German women shouted for bread for their children and storm troopers fired on the demonstrators followed upon Propaganda Minister Goebbels' announcement last week of reduced rations in Germany, Tass agency reported today.

"Outbreaks took place in Cologne, Chemnitz and Duesseldorf," the Russian news agency said.

"In Hamburg and other towns, workers protested collectively against the reductions. Spontaneous women's demonstrations gathered in front of Nazi party headquarters.

"They demanded bread for their children. Shouts resounded through the crowd: Put an end to this accursed war!"

'Police were unable to disperse the crowds. Storm Troopers opened fire on the women and the demonstrations were scattered."

(Goebbels, in an article published by the weekly newspaper Das Reich told the Germans that if the new food restrictions, which he admitted "cut deeply into the life of every German," had not been made there 'would have been serious food difficulties in six months.")

India Decides This Week On Freedom

Same Constitution As Britain's Drafted Themselves

By H. R. STIMSON,
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW DELHI, March 30—(AP).—Indian leaders debated in secret tonight British proposals to grant the great sub-continent Dominion status after the war. At the same time Sir Stafford Cripps appealed to the 390,000,000 people of India for acceptance of the plan.

'Our proposals are definite and precise," the War Cabinet member said in a radio address. "If they are rejected, nothing can be done until after the war."

The executive committees of the All-India National Congress, chief political party of the Hindu population, and the Moslem League deliberated the proposals at such length that it appeared unlikely that decision would be reached until later in the week.

Sir Stafford continued to interview individual leaders, including the Premier of Bengal and Dr. Ghimrao Ramji Ambedkar, leader of India's 50,000,000 untouchables—the lowest Hindu caste.

Some Dissatisfied

In the Congress and in some other circles, disappointment was expressed over Sir Stafford Cripps' announcement that the defence of the teeming sub-continent must remain in Britain's hands during the war.

Sir Stafford, explaining to the Indian people the proposals he has laid before their leaders in a week of conference, broadcast tonight a speech in which he said that "the British people wished to give India the same constitution as Great Britain."

"We cannot here and now set about forging a constitution for India," he declared. 'That is too important to improvise in a hurried way. The new constitution must be agreed upon by the Indian people themselves."

He said that if the Indian people required any help in the constitution of their new government, Britain would gladly give it.

"The defence of India is being dealt with as a part of the world-wide defence against aggression," he said.

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 30 — (AP). — Japanese forces have made a 27-mile withdrawal in New Guinea as the result of floods rolling down the mountainsides of the Markham valley and their position is further menaced by heavy American and Australian air blows which have crippled 10 per cent. of their entire cruiser strength, Australian war reports said today.

Japan's recession from the high point of her invasion of Australia's outer islands was marked by Air Minister A. S. Drakeford, who declared that in addition to her cruiser losses she had suffered destruction of 48 bombers and fighters in recent weeks.

(Military quarters in London said official Allied reports list 1,025 Japanese planes destroyed since Pearl Harbor. . This would be from a fourth to a sixth of the Japanese air force).

"These successes, achieved with comparatively small forces, are no longer to be regarded as merely of tactical significance," he declared. "They have made a marked strategical diff' ence to the war."

2 Squadrons Wiped Out.

Claiming air superiority over New Guinea, he said the equivalent of two Japanese air squadrons were destroyed in Allied air attacks on March 21, ranging from Timor to Rabaul in New Britain.

No single operation during the Malayan campaign had so destructive an effect upon Japanese power as the Lae assault, and it is doubtful if even the attacks launched from Palembang in Netherlands Sumatra were so devastating to Japanese shipping, he declared.

Seven Japanese transports were sunk, burned or beached at Lae, three destroyers damaged and numerous smaller craft destroyed aside from the cruisers—a total of 23 ships lost—he added.

Dispatches from Port Moresby, the New Guinea anchor end of the great barrier reef defences of north-eastern Australia, told of the Japanese withdrawal in the Markham Valley.

A downpour inundated the flatlands along the Markham River and its tributaries, where the Japanese were attempting to establish many subsidiary airfields, and forced the Japanese to withdraw from most of the valley, these dispatches said.

As a result, Japan's New Guinea forces now were centred at Lae, Salamaua and Finschhaven on the coast, where they landed March 8 and succeeding days. Their greatest penetration of the valley had been to Nadzab, 27 miles inland.

Wet Season Starting

Moreover, the dispatches said, the wet season in New Guinea is just beginning.

U-Boats Left High And Dry As Pump Station Is Blown, Main Lock Gate Wrecked

May Force Sea Raiders To Abandon St. Nazaire
Commando Lose Heavily But Do Job
Canadian Squadron Plays Aerial Escort

LONDON, March 30—(CP).—Damage which British commandos inflicted at St. Nazaire in a daring raid Saturday morning should cripple that German submarine base for a year and curtail U-boat activities in the North Atlantic for some time, a well-informed suorce said today.

Any submarines in the basin probably were left high and dry, experts declared, by destruction of the pumping station and the main lock gate, while those now at sea wi'l have to return to other bases.

They visualized the possibility that constant bombing of St. Nazaire by the Royal Air Force might make repairs so difficult the Germans would be forced to concentrate their underseas raiders elsewhere—perhaps at Lorient or Bordeaux.

Survivors of the commandos who carried out the raid received a heroes' welcome on their return home yesterday and their exploit was acclaimed as one of the most spectacular in British military history—ranking with the famous first Great War assault on Zeebrugge. It was announced last night that a Canadian squadron with the R.A.F. coastal command helped escort the returning raiders. The fliers, however, said the trip was uneventful.

An informed source said that as a matter of fact British losses in killed wounded and missing probably were less than 100.

Costly But Successful.

Although it was announced the percentage of British losses in casualties probably was high, official reports on the outcome of the raid pictured 't as a great success.

German assertions that defence batteries had thwarted the main purpose of the raid by sinking the former United States destroyer Buchanan before she could be rammed into the main lock of the basin with her five-ton load of explosives were fatly denied.

On the contrary, a communique said, the Buchanan—renamed the Campbeltown—rammed the centre of the lock gate so hard that "she came to a standstill only when the bridge was abreast the gate itself."

A graphic eyewitness account of this exploit was given by Gordon Holman, Exchange Telegraph cor-

Hun Destroyer Sun Raiding Northern Convoy

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), March 30 — (AP). — The German high command claimed today that Nazi destroyers had attacked a convoy en route from New York to the Russian port of Murmansk and had sunk a 10,000-ton transport loaded with tanks and munitions. The Germans acknowledged the loss of one destroyer.

The communique added that an engagement had been fought against superior escort vessels and that one cruiser had been hit.

LONDON, March 30 — (CP). — The attempts of German submarines and men-o'-war to cut the supply route to Murmansk, as reported to-day by Berlin, had been expected by Britain for some time.

The Germans are beginning to feel the effect of United States and British supplies reaching the Russian Arctic port, informed circles said.

The dispacth of the battleship Tirpitz to northern waters and the escape of the Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau raised the possibility of surface raiding against the route.

Hamilton Blaze Costs $150,000

HAMILTON, Ont., March 30 — (CP).—An early morning fire — Hamilton's second big one in two weeks—swept through the four-storey Copp Building, at 112 York street, today and caused damage expected to reach $150,000.

Discovered shortly after seven o'clock, the blaze was only brought under control after a stubborn, one-hour fight. All downtown equipment responded to a general alarm and even when they gained the upper had the firemen still had to contend with smouldering piles of cloth.

By the time the general alarm sounded, the flames had spread to the eastern part of the almost block-long building and demolished the upper floor in the central block. From the four sides of the building, firemen poured tons of water into the heart of the blaze and aerial hose lines prevented the fire spreading to adjoining buildings.

Although the roof collapsed, the firefighters were able to direct the water to the danger centre by pushing hoselines through upper windows on the building's east side.

NEW YORK (AP)—Trustworthy advices received from Europe today by The Associated Press said travellers who recently visited Paris reported that six German officers were shot and a score of others sent to prison camps in Poland on charges of negligence at the time of the R.A.F. raid on the Paris area March 3. These reports said almost all the officers in charge of the air defences of the city were attending a gala party. Among the officers at the party, it was said, were those responsible for sounding an alert. These reports said the noise of the party was so great that the officers failed to hear the bombs and probably would not have know of it until it was all over had not the manager happened to go outside.

Offer of Freedom Puts India to the Test

Cripps' 10-Day Ultimatum To Show If Statesmen Can Rise, Unite For Occasion

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Britain's offer of independence to India in the form of Dominion status puts Indian leaders to a supreme test to show what calibre of statesmanship they possess to warrant self-government.

It is not an easy moment for either party, for the problems are mountainous. There will be heart-burnings among those who seek utter severance from the crown. However, teachers like Gandhi, who who is one of the great minds of our time, will recognize that in conceding even the right of secession to the greatest of her possessions, Britain has gone about as far as one would expect the Mother Country to go this side of the Millennium.

Even the difficult issue involved in the Moslem demand for a state separate from the Hindus is taken care of by a provision that there may be more than one Dominion Government in the Indian Empire. Thus, unless one section of the population insists on imposing its will on another section ,this politico-religious dilemma finally may be solver.

Sir Stafford Cripps, blunt man of few words, who conveyed this offer to India, has said that he has a fortnight to devote to the negotiations, and that the proposal must be accepted in toto. But what sounds like an ultimatum probably is softened in the minds of the Indian leaders by their knowledge that this Leftist statesman has been championing the cause of Hindustan's self-government. Reports from New Delhi indicate that Sir Stafford has made considerable progress.

Many of Britain's Conservative statesmen hold that India isn't ready for self-government. They base this view on the fact that according to the latest official figures some 87 per cent of the people are illiterate in this vast country which contains close to a fifth of the world's population.

Untold millions are primitive peoples, treading the paths their ancestors trod centuries ago. Moreover, this huge peninsula has small claim to nationalism, for there are many races, and some 220 languages are spoken, incredible though it seem. Also, the castes, which form great barriers between the different classes of the population, run into thousands.

Hindustan's answer is that she has many brilliant and highly-educated men and women upon whom to draw, and that the only way a country can learn to govern is to govern. Government cannot be learned in correspondence school.

But the immediate question is far bigger than whether India is absolutely ready for self-government. She is faced with the greatest crisis in her modern history—the grave threat of Japanese invasion. Unless the people of India get squarely behind the British government for the defence of their country they may shortly suffer the horrors of being overrun by Nipponese hordes. And probably such an attack would encourage an invasion by the barbarous tribesmen of the northwest frontier, up by the famous Khyber Pass.

True, we fully expect the Allies to win this war, and in the long run they would free India of the Japanese yoke. But the Allies couldn't replace the lives lost or wipe out the terrible memories of the invasion. Now is the time for Indian to rescue herself, and not after she has endured such a hell.

Dandelion Rubber Coming

Canada Seeks Seeds From Russia For Prairies

WINNIPEG, March 30 —(CP) — Production of synthetic rubber from wheat starch and natural rubber from the Kok-Sagyz plant, a member of the dandelion family which may be grown in western Canada if the supply of seed can be obtained, as forecast at the eighth annual National Farm Chemurgic conference recently concluded at Chicago, Cecil Lamont of Winnipeg, representative of the North-West Line Elevators Association, said in a statement issued here today.

"Steps are being taken immediately by the North-West Line Elevators Association to obtain seed of the Kok-Sagyz plant for experimental planting in western Canada," Mr. Lamont said.

Although this type of dandelion has grown so far only in Russia, Mr. Lamont said the agricultural department of the Association will plant test plots as soon as seeds are available. The root of the plant originally contained six to 12 per cent of raw rubber and experimenters have increased the yield of rubber to 27 per cent.

Mr. Lamont has left for Ottawa to try to arrange importation of seeds from Russia in time for experimental planting this year.

Losses Slow Japs At Bataan

Yank Gunners Pick Raider Off At 27,000 Feet

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—The United States war department reported today that Japanese attacks on the Bataan Peninsula in the Philippines dwindled after having been repulsed with heavy losses.

Hostile air raids continued day and night on the fortified island of Corregidor, however, a communique said, adding that one enemy plane flying above 27,000 feet was shot down by anti-aircraft shells.

On the southern island of Mindanao local skirmishes took place meanwhile between patrols at three widely separated points.

Following repulse of a heavy Japanese attack on the Bataan Peninsula on Saturday, fighting continued throughout the night but died down at daybreak yesterday, the war department said.

NEW CHARTER OF FREEDOM IS IN THE HANDS OF INDIA'S MILLIONS

Must Await Victory, Set Own Fate

Secede If It Wishes, Ghandhi Alone Skeptical

By H. R. STIMSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW DELHI, March 30.—(AP)—A charter for freedom is in the hands of India's millions today to accept or reject.

The final triumph for the cause of 390,000,000 varied, contentious inhabitants of the great sub-continent still depends, however, on three things.

First was the stipulation in Britain's offer, announced yesterday by Sir Stafford Cripps that self-rule must await until after the war which, even now, threatens her with invasion.

Then, India must decide that the offer of Britain's war cabinet is acceptable.

And her bickering patchwork of minorities must work out a formula to make independence a working reality.

The first invitation was that the British plan would be acceptable although Mohandas K. Gandhi, the leader in whom India's struggle has become personified, was reported as wary the proposal would keep India from attaining full political integrity.

In brief, Sir Stafford's announcement envisaged a new Indian union after the war which would be a Dominion within the British Empire with the right, if it chose, to secede.

Defence With Britain

Until the end of the war, however, India's defence would remain under British control and Britain would expect her people to marshal all their manpower and resources to beat off the enemy already based in the Andaman Islands and in Burma.

Sir Stafford's outline held forth the possibility of two autonomous Indias—one for the 77,000,000 Moslems, a big minority, and the other for the dominant 240,000,000 Hindus. States or provinces which do not adhere to the new constitution, he said, could agree on a separate constitution which Britain would recognize as having the same full status as the Indian union.

The machinery, he said, would be through an Indian Constitutional Congress with which Britain would

Eastern Ontario Seed Burns In Mariposa Fire

LINDSAY, March 30.— All the barley, wheat and pea seed that was to supply te farmers over a wide area of Eastern Ontario for 1942 seeding operations was lost Saturday afternoon with a total loss of $125,000 when fire destroyed the grain and seed elevator of Hogg and Lytle at Mariposa Station.

The fifty-four foot square by sixty foot high frame and galvanised iron building was filled to the roof with seed graded and cleaned and ready for shipment not only to nearby points but to stations located all across Canada. The seed alone was worth $100,000 and the matter of immediate substitute supplies is an important problem.

The fire started in the cupola, either from friction in the belting or defective electric wiring, and although the Lindsay fire brigade sent equipment and the C.N.R. sent an engine with 8,000 gallons of water, nothing could be done to prevent destruction of the building. Luckily the wind was blowing from a direction which protected nearby buildings. The heat warped C.N.R. rails.

Draper Appeal Before Court

TORONTO March 30 — (CP). — The appeal of Gen. D. C. Draper, Chief Constable of Toronto, against his conviction by Judge L. V. O'Connor at Cobourg on a charge of dangerous driving was before the Ontario Appellate Court at Osoode Hall to-day.

The Chief was fined $300 on a charge that on September 28, 1941, he "did unlawfully drive a motor vehicle on King's Highway No. 2 in a manner dangerous to the public.."

The appeal was heard by Chief Justice Robertson, Mr. Justice Middleton, and Mr. Justice Gillanders. It was presented by T. N. Phelan. J. E. Anderson, Lindsay, appeared for the Crown.

The substance of Mr. Phelan's reasons for appeal was that the trial judge erred in the construction and application of the section under which Chief Draper was charged; that he erred in failing to distinguish between negligence which creates civil liability and neligence which creates criminal liability. He further contended that His Honor failed to distinguish between negligence which creates an offence under the Highway Traffic Act and that which creates an offence under the Criminal Code.

"The main ground of the appeal," stated Mr. Phelan, "is that the learned judge misdirected himself as to the ingredients of the offence under the section. If there was an error of judgment or the accident happened from inadvertence or if there is some similar explanation no conviction lies under the section."

Witnesses Claim Car Driver Drunk

Arrested on the night of Saturday, March 21 when his car stalled at the corner of Charlotte and George streets Hugh Buchanan was charged with drunken driving when he appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning

He pleaded not guilty and was defended by John A. Bradshaw, while Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C, prosecuted.

Evidence for the crown was given by Constables John Stevenson and Harold Mesley who were on traffic duty at Charlotte and George street and who said that Buchanan staggered when he got out of his car and smelled of liquor, and by Inspector James F. Reid, who was on duty at the police station when the accused was brought in.

On the contrary Miss M. Clark, a defence witness, said that she had ridden in Buchanan's car a short time before he was arrested and noticed nothing wrong with his condition.

The court adjourned for luncheon at this stage.

As a result, Japan's painful occupation of the valley has been made a fruitless accomplishment.

Mr. Drakeford said "the American and R.A.A.F. attacks on Lae March 10 and since have probably crippled more than 10 per cent of the total cruiser strength with which the Japanese entered the war."

Some Light Raids

The only enemy thrusts during the week-end were air blows Saturday on the northern Australian port of Darwin—its seventh — and the New Guinea island harbor of Port Moresby—its 21st—raids which, a communique said, achieved the invaders little and cost them probably six planes destroyed and two damaged.

Underscoring the waning power of the Japanese air offensive, Prime Minister John Curtin said Darwin was raided by only seven enemy bombers, yet it was the costliest attack there for the Japanese so far. Two planes were shot down, another probably destroyed and a fourth possibly bagged.

Direct advices from Port Moresby said today that heavy floods had forced the Japanese back from their inland advance from their Lae and Salamaua bases on the east coast of New Guinea. Rainfalls of more than 40 inches were said to have spread mountain tributaries of the Markham River into torrents which have flooded the valley between Lae and Nadzab, 27 miles away.

Gen. McArthur, United Nations commander in the southwest Pacific, already has met Gen. Thomas Blamey, commander of Australia's land troops, and they are believed to have discussed the main outlets of the defence problems along with other high Australian and United States officers.

Sweeping changes have been indicated, among them Gen. Blamey's announcement that commando units will be organized.

Want Wavell Kept On.

Sir Stafford added that he has proposed that India's commander in chief, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, should retain his position as a member of the executive council.

"We have invited the appointment of a representative of the Indian government to take a position in the war cabinet," he added. "When the war is over India's representatives will take their places side by side with those of other free nations in order to make her own contribution to the building of a new world order."

Sir Stafford said that if the proposals were rejected then nothing could be done until after the war.

"Our proposals are definite and precise," he said. "If they are rejected nothing can be done until after the war. That would be a bitter blow. I personally am convinced of the soundness of these proposals. It is with the greatest hope that I look forward to the next few days."

Dealing with the war, Sir Stafford said: "We stand by our duty. We will give you every protection we can. But with your help that protection will be more effective and more powerful."

He concluded his address by saying:

"Let us march together, side by side, through the night of high endeavor and courage towards the dawn of a new world of liberty for all peoples."

at all costs" and that, if necessary, the Board was prepared "to provide a subsidy to control an extreme situation." He added that "the payment of subsidies, in necessary cases, is a means of ensuring supplies and, as well, of controlling prices."

Turning to the question of total war production, he said "a buying spree of serious dimensions has been going on during the past few months. It is affecting almost everything for current use that one could name and it is beginning to place a serious strain on some supplies. This means that drastic action will have to be taken very shortly unless people decide to act reasonably. There is no need for panic buying of the essentials of life.

"If, despite this warning, people persist, then a consumer rationing program will be necessary with all its discomforts, and waste of money, equipment and trained personnel... Anybody who buys more than current needs of anything is definitely undermining the war effort of this country and playing directly into the hands of the enemy."

The Axis leaders knew that the resources of the democracies in raw materials and manpower exceeded that of the Axis. The reason why Hitler and the other Axis chiefs had challenged the democracies was that "Hitler was certain the democratic system could not organize its tremendous productive capacity for total war."

Must Prove Hitler Wrong

"Only the united and determined answer of the people of the democracies can prove Hitler wrong," Mr. Gordon said.

The shock of war in the Pacific, with Japan destroying sources of supplies essential to this continent, should make it clear, he asserted, that tremendous changes in methods of production and the civilian mode of living will have to be made and, further, that the need is "terribly urgent."

"I try not to be accused of hysteria," he said, "but it may be that a good dose of hysteria is needed right now to ensure that our march toward total war is not delayed by an inadequate understanding of the terrible danger in which we stand."

Turn About

VICHY, March 30—(AP).—Dr. Carlos de Ambroisis Martins, militant Rightist and head of the "Protection group" which held former Vice-Premier Pierre Laval in 'protective custody' when he was ousted from his position in December, 1940, was reported under arrest today.

Ten other persons were also said to have been taken into custody with Martins, who for the last several months has been head of the semi-official service supplying information to Marshal Petain and Vice-Premier Jean Darlan.

McNaughton Crosses With Convoy

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A BRITISH PORT, March 30 — (CP).—Thousands of newly-arrived Canadian troops moved into camps in the United Kingdom today, ready to start training for the "big year" their Corps Commander expects 1942 to be.

Lt. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton returned to Britain with the new troops and went ashore with Mrs. McNaughton after giving a shipboard interview in which he said that in the coming months "no appropriate opportunity to kick the other fellow—the enemy—in the back will be wasted."

"We are always looking for it," he said. 'On the other hand, there will be nothing foolhardy or likely to involve needless loss of life."

1st Darwin Raid Costs 240 Lives

MELBOURNE, March 30.—(CP).—Possibly 240 persons were killed in the first Japanese raid on Darwin Feb. 19 Prime Minister John Curtin reported to-day.

Deaths in Darwin itself totalled 15. The other victims were in the harbor or in air fighting

The Prime Minister was reporting on the inquiry by Justice Charles Lower into the surprise Jap attack. The inquiry was started after there had been criticism of conditions in Darwin and some comparisons with the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

"It is definite that the number killed on land and sea and in the air will not exceed 240" Mr. Curtin said.

"That figure may be reduced but it won't be increased when more waterside workers communicate with the railway commissioner or with shipping agents who employed them. The interests of security had prevented me from stating previously the number killed or drowned in the harbor or on the wharves.

"The report confirms information published earlier that deaths in the town numbered only 15.

"Damage in the town itself was very small. There is no reason to suspect espionage as the cause of the raid. There was none.

Facts Given W.A. On Australia

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 30 (ENS)—Mrs. Jack Clark was guest speaker at the regular meeting of St. John's W.A. held Thursday afternoon, and to the nearly forty members she delivered an address on "Australia," giving many interesting facts about the continent "down under." The president, Mrs. W. F. Scott, presided for the meeting and Mrs. C. K. Stephen and Mrs. George Hammond jointly conducted the devotional exercises. During the business final arrangements for the annual Mother and Daughter banquet scheduled for April 17th were made. Other numbers on the program, arranged by Mrs. T. J. Craighead and Mrs. W. Johnson, were a vocal solo by Mrs. Ed. Bates and a reading by Mrs. C. W. Turner. Refreshments were served at the close.

They Complain

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), March 30 (AP)

THE German high command complained today that the "civilian population of Luebeck suffered severe losses" in the British bombing attack on that major Baltic port Saturday night. No mention was made of other damage caused.

(Luebeck is the principal port which handles trade between Germany and Sweden. It also is a supply port for German troops in Norway and on the extreme northern Russian front.)

Soviets Rout Hun Push At Kalinin

Great 5-Day Battle Fails To Relieve Army at Staraya Russa

MOSCOW, March 30 (AP)—The Red Army has turned strong German attempts to regain the initiative on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow into a Nazi rout in a five-day battle which cost the invaders at least 2,450 dead and many wounded, it was reported today.

Red Star, Russian army newspaper, proudly said "the initiative remains in our hands."

At one point of the Kalinin front, which has seen some of the bloodiest fighting of the winter, it was reported the German 427th Regiment was routed, two battalions were annihilated and the Germans lost more than 1,000 soldiers and officers killed.

The Russians officially reported that one unit in the Kalinin front battle repulsed the attack upon its line, killed about 500 enemy officers and men, put six enemy tanks out of action, smashed seven earthworks and captured much booty.

The mid-day communique said several inhabited localities on the central front were liberated and 500 enemy officers and men were killed.

One unit fighting for the village "K" destroyed five guns, 15 machine-gun nests and 10 mortars and killed more than 250 men and officers, the communique said.

The German air force raided Moscow yesterday for the second time this year. One or two planes penetrated the city's roaring defences and hit a number of houses with bombs, causing some casualties, it was announced. Three German planes were reported destroyed before the city.

Weekend Death Toll Claims Nine

By The Canadian Press.

Recovery of six bodies from Lake Ontario during the week-end brought the toll of fatalities for the two days to nine.

Five Centre Island residents drowned when their boat went down between Centre Island and Toronto early Saturday. Drowned were Mr. and Mrs. John Deacon William Powers, R. J. Parkinson and William Bristow. The bodies were recovered in a ferry slip at Hanlan's Point Sunday.

The naked body of an unidentified man was found by a group of Hamilton boys in the inlet of Hamilton Bay Saturday. The body was badly decomposed and doctors said it was difficult to determine the cause of death as it had been in the water for weeks and perhaps months.

A fire Saturday night which destroyed a farm house near Powassan claimed the life of Jean Cameron Smith 73, well known hospital matron and missionary. Miss Smith was trapped on the second storey of the house.

Mary Jane Covert two month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Covert, of Ottawa, was found dead in her carriage Sunday. Doctors said the baby choked to death after becoming entangled in her clothing.

Gerald Lloyd Cleary, 34, of Shelburne, died Saturday of injuries suffered a few hours before when he was crushed by a falling lump of frozen sod and gravel in the gravel pit in which he was working.

Oshawa Youth Is Given 3 Years In Cobourg Case

COBOURG, Ont., March 30.—(CP).—Appearing for sentence on 15 charges of breaking and entering and theft, Mike Zakarow, 22, of Oshawa, Ont., was sentenced to concurrent terms ranging from six months to three year in Kingston penitentiary.

William Zabihoyle, of Oshawa, who was involved with Zakarow in two of the charges, received three years concurrent on each.

Steve Ryzak of Oshawa, received two years less a day in the reformatory on each of seven breaking and entering and theft charges to run concurrently. George Siblock, of Oshawa, received six months definite and three months indefinite on three breaking and entering and theft charges. On one charge of breaking and entering Dave Greenburg of Oshawa, was given two years less a day in the reformatory.

George Cowle of Oshawa, who faces eight similar charges will come up on Thursday.

The six were arrested some time ago after break-ins which occurred in various parts of the province at garages and stores.

Magistrate R. B. Baxter presided over theier trial.

In county judge's criminal court, the trial started this morning in connection with robbery and assault charges against Elmer Lee of Toronto. In connection with the same offenses, Lloyd McAnerin of Toronto, formerly of Cobourg, received three years in the penitentiary when he came up in Bowmanville court during February.

The case had its origin, the Crown alleges, in a robbery which occurred on December 21, 1941, at Cartwright Township, when Mrs. W. Mountjoy, elderly Cartwright Township woman, was slugged and robbed. It is stated that a stranger called at the Mountjoy home on December 21 and asked if he could get someone to pull his car out of the ditch. Mrs. Mountjoy told the stranger that her husband was not at home and the man left. Five minutes later the stranger re-entered the house, slugged the woman over the head with a blunt instrument and carried her to a rear shed. While she was locked in the rear shed, she was robbed of a $100 gold watch. When the effects of the blow on her head wore off she started to cry for help. Her cries were heard by neighbours who came and released her. Police were advised by the women that two men took part in the robbery. Later it was learned that the two had fled in a car bearing a Toronto license number. As a result of investigations carried out by Detectives French, Heron and Hunt of Toronto and Provincial Constable Dymond of Bowmanville, Lee and McAnerin were arrested.

Shipmates

Francis M. Wakefield, LEFT, and his 17-year-old son, Francis, Jr., are shown greeting each other at the U.S. naval training station, Great Lakes. The father enlisted as an electrician's mate, second class; the son is an apprentice seaman. They hail from Yankton, S.D., where Mrs. Wakefield, wife and mother of the sailors, will work in a hospital for duration.

IODE Sponsors Salvage Drive In Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 30 (ENS)—Reports on the activities of various groups by their leaders and a summary of the salvage campaign were given to the 33 members present at the regular meeting of the I.O.D.E. Bemersyde Chapter on Friday evening. The Regent, Mrs. G. A. Ironside, presided, and as their regular special feature Mrs. W. Johnson delivered an interesting address on the Phillipine outpost.

Mrs. Sidney Hopping, war convener, told members that seven more helmets were required to complete their quota of ditty bags and Mrs. George Hawthorne disclosed a number of quilts had been donated to the branch during the past month. She read the names of the following donors—Mrs. J. Boyle, Mrs. T. Patrick, Mrs. A. Petherick, Mrs. A. Brunton, Mrs. H. Shaw, Miss Jean Wallace, Ladies of Zion church, Ladies of Tabernacle church. During the past month members had themselves completed 5 quilts she said by working in the I.O.D.E. rooms.

Collect Old Records

No longer need anyone worry about what to do with their old gramaphone records since according to Mrs. J. Storie (Group I leader) the Bemersyde Chapter will be glad to dispose of as many as they can get to record manufacturers, who are glad to pay them five cents each for collecting them. Mrs. Storie pointed out that the records must not be broken or damaged since this would make them of no value. Anyone having a pile of old records they wish to dispose of can either leave them at Davidson's Garage or call Mrs. R. J. Locke, Mrs. Jack Cowell or Miss Grace Irwin.

The lucky ticket for the rug, being raffled by Group V, was drawn at the meeting and Mrs. William Nelson was announced the winner. Proceeds of the draw amounted to $9.00. Most important report of the evening was given by Salvage convener Mrs. J. M. Ferris, who announced that $73.20 had been realized from salvage sold since February 24. She emphasized the need for volunteers to help with sorting, and as a consequence the names of members who will assist during the next two weeks were listed. It was decided that the afghan donated by Mrs. H. D. Atkinson should be retained by the branch till a later date when a draw would be conducted, and members were of the opinion the final session of the marathon bridge, which has been in progress for the past two months, should be held in the I.O.D.E. rooms rather than in a private home.

In their newly organized drive to collect salvage here on Saturday when the branch had exclusive use of a large truck made available by the corporation Mrs. J. M. Ferris told the Examiner that the work had been greatly expedited. She said that people were for the most part following the instructions of bundling and tieing contained in pamphlets distributed last week and as a result the work of sorting had been almost cut in half. "There is not nearly so much work," she said. Three truck loads of salvage material were brought in from Wards I and II on Saturday, but as was previously anticipated the large number of cars parked in the business section made it impossible to collect from the stores. Though no definite arrangement has been made as yet it is expected a collection from places of business will be held on a special day other than Saturday.

One-Act Play On 'Lit' Program

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 30 (ENS)—With a one-act play heading the bill Form II students of the High School presented the program given in connection with the Literary Society meeting held on Friday afternoon. The vice president, Helen Wood, was in the chair for the opening number, a chorus for the entire form "They Started Something," and following this minutes of the last meeting were given by Loretta Forestell. Marjorie Wallace gave a guitar solo and Frances DeCarrol, assisted by a girl's chorus sang "Dear Mom." Following a harmonica solo by Robt. Cosby and a Chorus singing "Deep in the Heart of Texas" the one act play was presented. The cast included Georgie Rutherford, Flora MacDonald, Robert Cosby, Frances DeCarrol. Title of the play was "Mildred Is My Name." After a vocal solo by Frances DeCarroll and a piano duet by Muriel O'Rourke and Colletta O'Keefe, Marion Robertson gave the critics report which concluded the meeting.

Scouts Hold Outing

Two miles south of town, on a knoll close beside the Trent River, whose blue waters had turned a muddy gray as countless streams made full by winter's snow melted, and flushed into its bed, members of the Campbellford Boy Scout Troop held their first outing of the season. They left town at eleven o'clock and after preparing dinner over an open camp fire three of the group, Norman Lofchy, Gene Pace and Grant MacColl were informed by assistant Scout Master Jack Connor that they had passed their second class cooking test. After eating the boys practiced tracking through the bud filled wood and returned to town with another lesson in Scouting learned.

Sentinel Lodge, L.O.L. 2322 held their first dance of the year in the Orange Hall, Petherick's on Friday evening. The affair was well attended by people from the four corners of the Township of Seymour, and music for both round and square dancing was provided by Douglas Ingram and Milton Blakely. Refreshments were served at the close by the wives of Lodge members and Lorne Barnum who was at the door said proceeds would be over $30.00. The money will go into the treasury of the L.O.L.

This Is What A Battle At Sea Looks Like

Thinks Canada Not Awake Yet

GUELPH, Ont., March 30 (CP).—A hope that Canada's will to bring all possible strength to bear on her war effort is unflagging was expressed here last night in an address by Harold Fair, former Canadian Press parliamentary correspondent in London.

Speaking on a program presented in aid of the Guelph Daily Mercury British Distress Fund, Mr. Fair said "somehow or other I can't feel the spirit of urgency in my Homeland."

"Maybe I've not been back long enough and perhaps I've looked in the wrong places but I don't think we realize our peril sufficiently. I think also things are too comfortable here. We've got to contribute some blood, sweat and tears to the common struggle and prepare to see our comforts go by the board as they have in the old country.

"Gen. McNaughton called the Canadian Corps a dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin. Let us dedicate ourselves to seeing that the dagger has all the momentum that a free people can give."

Mr. Fair, who returned to Canada this month after 2½ years in The Canadian Press London Bureau, described the worst of the London bombings and the difficulties under which the British people live. "But ...there's an awful lot more of old London standing than the Germans knocked down," he said. "As for the spirit of the Londoner — and Britons generally—all the Hitlers and tyrants in known history together couldn't shake that."

Obituaries

MRS. JOHN WELLS

PORT HOPE March 30.—(ENS)—The death occurred at the Port Hope Hospital, after several weeks' illness, of Mrs. John Wells in her 70th year, on Friday night, March 27.

Mrs. Well, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Mercer, leaves to mourn her passing, her husband, Mr. John Wells, one daughter, Mrs. W. R. Martaggart (Violet) of Port Hope, and one son, Ernest John, also of Port Hope, and one granddaughter, Margaret Martaggart.

The funeral service was held on Monday afternoon at 2 p.m. from the family residence, 36 Princess street, Port Hope.

MRS. AGNES JANE HAY

CAMPBELLFORD, March 30.—(ENS)—A charter member of the Campbellford Rebekah Lodge Agnes Jane Hay, 69, was buried here on Saturday as many of her friends joined in paying their last respects to this fine lady. Mrs. Hay passed away on Thursday following a lengthy illness that was climaxed by a stroke last Sunday from which she never regained consciousness. Born in Seymour Township the deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Diamond and following her marriage 47 years ago she lived for nearly 27 years in Seymour West before moving to Campbellford. Though she had no children of her own she raised two nephews, Jim of Toronto and Charles of Campbellford and her kind disposition and generous nature endeared her to many. Mrs. Hay held various offices in the Rebekah Lodge here and three years ago was one of the members to receive the 15-year jewel. Predeceased by her husband seven years ago she is survived by two brothers, Sam of Seymour and John of Toronto.

Rev. G. N. Maxwell conducted the funeral from Bennett's Funeral Parlors and interment was at Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Sam Covert, Morley Tanner, Ernest Haig, J. F. McGregor, Charles Nicholas and Percy Sherwin. Messrs. T. J. Craighead, Geo. Smith and Harry Bennett were flower-bearers.

Setbacks Loom In Milk Prices

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—The battle of the Atlantic is promising to stir up trouble for the United States Agriculture Department in the country's dairy barns. And, unless that battle soon takes a turn for the better, the trouble may spread to the hog and cattle feed markets.

A tightening on the oceanic shipping situation, resulting from sinkings in the Atlantic and to diversion of boats to the Pacific for movement of war materials to the battlefronts, has curtailed food shipment overseas.

Consequently, purchases for lend-lease shipment have not been of sufficient volume to maintain prices of dairy products and raw milk at levels established when such buying got under way last summer and fall.

With the big production season for milk just ahead, further price setbacks may be inevitable, dairy officials said, unless the shipping situation improves or the government buys in much greater volume and stores the surplus for possible future shipment.

Protests against recent declines in prices of milk paid by manufacturers of dairy products are beginning to pour in on the department from dairymen, who complain that, because of advances in feed and labor costs, there is less to be made from dairying than a year ago.

These protests warn that further milk price setbacks may interfere materially with efforts of the department to obtain this year an eight-per-cent increase over last year's record milk output.

SHE TOOK SOME BLAME

LONDON. — A 21-year-old girl was remanded for 14 days and advised to try to join one of the women's war services when she said she would "share the blame" for a 22-year-old Dunkirk survivor being sent to prison for six months for housebreaking.

Municipal Act Shifts Powers

TORONTO, March 30—(CP).—To members of the Ontario Legislature, whether back in their home constituencies for the week-end adjournment or still here in Toronto, perhaps came the full impert today of Hon. T. B. McQuesten's bill which received first reading in the House yesterday.

The Bill, titled an Act to Amend the Department of Municipal Affairs Act, gives Mr. McQuesten in his capacity as Minister of Municipal Affairs, over-riding authority on every detail of municipal jurisdiction.

There are two sections to the amendment. One invests in the department general supervision over municipalities and their affairs and control and charge over the performance of the municipalities' duties and obligations.

The second section, transferring the power of oversight from the department to the minister reads: "There shall be a department of municipal affairs, over which the minister shall preside, and the minister shall have the power to act for and on behalf of the department."

As it stands now the act gives the department the powers of general supervision over municipal institutions and their administration.

Fern Hodgson Stars In Track Meet

PORT HOPE, March 30—(ENS).—Seven-car convoy passed through Port Hope on Sunday afternoon en route from the Army athletic meet in Hamilton, where representatives from the different military districts took part. For the first time in history there were entries from the C.W.A.C. in which Volunteer Fern Hodgson of Port Hope won the 50-yard dash and was one of the group which won the relay race. Miss Hodgson received her early athletic training at the Port Hope High School, and was the first Port Hope girl to join the C.W.A.C. with which she is now stationed in Kingston.

Mrs. George Scott was in Toronto on Saturday attending the wedding of her brother John Pearce of Toronto, formerly of Port Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Lent and Miss Melba Lent of Toronto were week-end guests of Mr. Lent's brother, Abbot Lent of 24 Bloomsgrove Avenue for the week-end.

Fraserville YPU Honors Member

FRASERVILLE, March 30 (ENS)—The weekly meeting of the Y.P.U. was held on Thursday night at the home of Miss Elmer Pue, with the president, Elmer Hogg, in charge.

Culture convener, Jean Holden, took over the meeting. Mrs. K. Larmer gave the devotional; Jean Staples read a poem; Jean Holden gave the topic on "Love They Neighbor," and Ray Bothwell read a poem.

A short address was read to Mrs. Keith Larmer, who leaves this week for her new home at Oshawa, expressing the regret of the society in losing such a faithful member, and a picture was presented by Mrs. L. Hewitt, to which Mrs. Larmer made fitting reply.

Contests were enjoyed and home-made candy was served by the hostess.

Are You a Sufferer From Rheumatic Pains?

These pains come from an inflammation in the muscles and are generally caused by a deposit of poison in the blood called uric acid which produces the irritating and painful effect that causes many days and nights heavy with pain.

During the past 60 years Canadian people have found that by purifying the blood stream, Burdock Blood Bitters aids them to enjoy freer body movement with less rheumatic pain, as B. B. B. helps to tone up the system and clear up the uric acid in the blood, and probably help fortify the system against future attacks.

Oliver Defines Relief Limits

TORONTO, March 30—(CP).—Municipalities may give relief up to 50 per cent. over the basis established by the Campbell report and the Provincial government will absorb one-half the cost, Hon. Farquhar Oliver, Minister of Public Welfare, announced yesterday.

The Campbell report was drawn up by a committee under Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Company of Windsor, in 1932 and it set out what was considered equitable allowances in food and other necessities for those on relief.

Mr. Oliver said a recent survey indicated that the cost of food, particularly, had increased 50 per cent. as compared with the 1932 prices and the province had based its decision on this.

Practically all municipalities approached in the matter had agreed the maximum was sufficient., Mr. Oliver said. Toronto, however, had adopted the Tisdall report which provided for greater relief allowances and for this reason the province had been compelled to set a maximum.

"This decision is final and Toronto need not bother whining on the doorsteps of Queen's Park for any further redress in this matter," Mr. Oliver said.

Reinforcements

LONDON, March 30 — (CP). — Reuters News Agency reported hearing the Rome radio say to-day that "a major British naval force passed the Cape of Good Hope on its way to the Indian Ocean."

The broadcast was quoted further: "The force included two large battleships, two aircraft carriers, several cruisers, and smaller ships."

Farmer Severs Toe When Axe Slips

HASTINGS, March 30—(ENS).—While splitting wood on Friday afternoon, Frank Walsh, Asphodel Township farmer, suffered a painful accident when the axe glanced off a block of wood, severing the small toe of his left foot and making a deep gash nearly three inches in length along the sole of the foot.

Although he is able to get around with the aid of crutches, Mr. Walsh does not expect to be back at his farm duties for quite some time.

Cobourg Briefs

Cobourg merchants are beginning to feel that they need not look at the weather forecast in the newspapers to find out what it will be like Saturdays. They are coming to the conclusion that it is going to rain. For the past three Saturdays it has rained intermittently with depressing result on business.

Cobourg bank managers have sent out a general notice that those who have purchased Victory Bonds in the recent drive, may procure them at their bank. The owners are asked to call for their bonds as soon as possible as they are awaiting delivery.

Richard Shurat of Sackatchewan and Donald Walker of Toronto, two magazine salesmen, were arrested in Cobourg Saturday night by Constable E. Houghton. Shurat is charged with being drunk and Walker with drunk driving.

I'm a better man than you —and I'll prove it!

Our contempt for the Japanese has got us into a lot of trouble. They have set out to do a certain job, and up to now they've done it according to schedule. Their present drive means that every man in the field, in the navy, in the air force, is doing his utmost—and every civilian at home backing their men to the limit.

Is a Jap a better man than you are? Can they plan, produce, act, with greater determination and efficiency than Canadians?

Their one hope of success is in a "blitzkrieg." A "blitzkrieg" means fighting a war as though it must be finished in six months. It's up to us to beat them at their own game. Here's the way to do it—prepare for a long war, and work as though the whole thing had to be finished in six months.

Modus Vivendi

During every great conflict the common people of the combatant nations receive a few intimations that, however great their sacrifices may be and however high the principles for which they fight, there are some people who are profiting by the war and that to these profiteers bloodshed, even when the blood is that of their own countrymen, is less important than gain. The exposure by Thurman Arnold of the dealings of the Standard Oil Company with I. G. Farbenindustrie of Germany in the matter of a formula for the production of synthetic rubber leaves a nasty taste in the mouth. The excuses which have been offered by the company seem feeble and their protestation that they were merely trying to establish a "modus vivendi" seems shabby. It will take more than a scrap of dog Latin to sweeten the temper of the people of the United States, not to mention their allies. For what, after all, is a "modus vivendi" but "a way of living?" Are not the United Nations at war for a way of living? Indeed they are, but not, it seems, the same way of living as Standard Oil.

It is the exposure of such deals as this which sickens those who believe the capitalist system to be a good one. Capitalism places more responsibility upon the individual than any other economic plan; it permits every man to get the highest return for his abilities which is possible, and it encourages individual enterprise by promises of gain. It also leaves the way clear for chicanery and shady dealing. Like democracy, capitalism is a direct and accurate reflection of the people who use it. In this case, the reflection is not a pleasing one.

Such cases as this leave the defenders of capitalism dumb, but they make advocates of communism and socialism bitterly and volubly articulate. What is Russia to think about this sort of kidglove treachery? What rebuttal can be made to those who demand a rigorous governmental control of industry? What Fifth Column could strike a deadlier blow than this company which is so suavely seeking a 'modus vivendi' which will allow it to prosper, whoever else may suffer? A "modus vivendi" may be a way of living, but by a happy paradox the way of living for which the United Nations fight is no "modus vivendi." A "modus vivendi" is, apparently, a shabby way of playing both ends against the middle.

Our County Council

Any idea of cutting road expenditures during wartime apparently does not meet with enthusiasm by the majority of the members of the Peterborough County Council according to the "get together" which they held for two days last week. The council was told that the government had intimated that road expenditures would have to be cut in half but whether this was the final word on the matter was not ascertained. However, what did the Peterborough reeves and deputies do? In a night session on Friday the members confirmed the 2½-mill road levy they passed in January. The significance of this course is that the council will expend in excess of the departments' limit $20,000 on which there will be no subsidy paid by the province. Ordinary the county would receive half that amount as a rebate but as an indirect effect of the war this excess will be paid by the county treasury.

A representative of the American Nepheline Company asked for some work on a few miles of road and it was suggested that the government might help in addition to the 50 per cent. subsidy but to this suggestion one of the patriotic members of the council asked the government to spend $75,000 probably 25 times more than is needed to keep the road in reasonable shape this year. Thus in spite of war our rural legislators still believe in spending as much as they can themselves and also getting as much as possible out of the government.

Recent county councils seem to be horribly in need of information regarding their duties and problems which come before them. They often seem bewildered and without confidence and absolutely opposed to the assumption of any further responsibilities. It was not always thus. There have been councils with real stalwarts, men who were prepared to give leadership. There were then fewer resolutions and more action. Petty and sniping remarks were out and the business of the county was their main concern and problem. In those days a resolution was a matter of deliberation and if passed it secured some attention.

We do not like making comparisons but this newspaper follows closely the procedings of two counties councils and the business of the United Counties' Council is carried on with the same deliberation and dispatch as of old.

Our county council is badly in need of constructive leadership and there are members in the present council with the ability to furnish that leadership. We would urge the members to study the situation and find the weakness. Then get down to business and approach the problems with self reliance and confidence in themselves.

We were rather surprised to find that only a few ratepayers get copies of the auditors' reports. The ratepayers of the townships are furnished with statements of receipts and disbursements before each nomination meeting. The ratepayers, however, know little of the financial operations of the county and much less than the city ratepayers know of the civic business.

There should be tabulated in some form for the information of the public the fees and mileage paid to each member of the council from his own township and also the county. This information cannot be gathered from the auditors' reports as many of these items are buried. Fees paid members of the city council were turned over to the War Victims' Fund. It is not to be expected that county councillors can emulate this example, however the total amount paid each member should be available to the ratepayers of the county just the same as the city council's fees are available.

Also if published reports gave a resume of the business instead of dealing in generalities we believe they would be much more in demand by the county ratepayers.

The 7th and 8th Divisions are being mobilized in Canada; thousands are being called under the compulsory training scheme and we all have our last tires on our cars until long after the end of the war. By fall many cars and trucks will be off the roads. In other words this country is in the midst of the greatest struggle in history with the possibility of direct attack a constant threat, hence it befits every citizen and every municipal government to do its utmost in the prosecution of the war effort.

Our Crucial Year Is Still Young

The words of confidence which Winston Churchill spoke to the Central Council of the National Union of Conservative and Unionist Associations (the clumsy official name of the Conservative party in Britain) would, as he well knew, be heard by free peoples everywhere with feelings of elation. People who have short memories have already forgotten that Mr. Churchill promised us a hard year in 1942, and they have taken the bitter news which came as a fulfilment of that promise in a spirit sadly lacking in courage and determination; let us hope that these same excitable folk will not take the Prime Minister's latest pronouncement in a holiday spirit. What he said was: "I cannot offer any guarantee that we are at the end of our misfortunes. It would be foolish for us not to be prepared for further heavy blows, but just as last year I warned you that we could not have successes unchequered by reverses, so now in 1942 we need not expect to have reverses unrelieved by successes." The successes may be late in coming, but they will come! If we are not confident of that, why do we continue to fight?

Too many people take a day-to-day view of the war, and a fortnight of bad news casts them into the depths of depression. There is a tendency also, human nature being normally disposed toward gloom, to make much of bad news and to minimize good news. We have recently put out of action one of Italy's most powerful battleships, and that exploit has received less than its proper amount of attention. It is customary to assume that defeating Italians is a simple matter and carries little weight, but this is a foolish attitude. The Italian navy is still powerful enough to make the Mediterranean very hot for us and the sinking of one of its best ships is a matter for rejoicing. Similarly, we have become accustomed to the brilliant Russian counter-offensive and are apt to discount it. On a large-scale map the Russian successes do not seem great, but actually they are of considerable magnitude, and have cost the Germans more dearly than any fighting in which they have so far engaged. The U.S. is still strapping on its seven-league boots, but the forthcoming campaign based in Australia will tell the first part of their tale. The first three months of 1942 have been black, but we have nine months to go, and in nine months we may bring forth the first unmistakeable tokens of victory.

Our year of trial is still young. Churchill tells us that we "cannot lose this war except through our own failure to use our combined, overwhelming strength and to use our multiplying opportunities that will present themselves to us." So let us buck up and stop groaning and get on with the job, as fast as we can.

Be Ready For Salvage

The intensification of Canada's industrial war effort will lead to a correspondingly intensified salvage campaign in a short time. It is hard for Canadians, who live in a land of plenty, to realize that salvage is really important. We are so used to having what we went in such abundance that we unwittingly throw some of it away that the idea of salvage as something more than an amusing pastime has not really sunk into our national consciousness. It is high time, however, that every Canadian man and woman became a junk-dealer.

Britain has shown us what can be done with salvage. It is now a serious offence there to throw away a piece of paper, however small. Paper is used in every sort of ammunition. A ton of waste paper, when properly treated, produces 18 hundredweight of new paper. Ten single sheets of ordinary note-paper make cartridge wads for a whole round of Bren gun ammunition. One single waste paper factory in Britain now makes necessary parts for 13 different varieties of munitions.

A ton of waste paper will make all the expansion joining which is needed for a mile-long aircraft runway; or it will line three army huts; or it will line the quarters of 96 merchant seamen; or it will make 71,000 dust covers for airplane engines. In the munitions field a ton of paper will make either a necessary part of 1,500 shell containers, or 9,000 shell fuse components; it will make 11,000 mine assemblies, or 47,000 cartridge boxes or 64,000 packing cases for 40 mm. shells.

Equally surprising figures might be quoted showing the usefulness of discarded tins. Fats which are often thrown out because they are too dirty or useless for cooking are perfectly good for use in munitions. Most cellars contain a quantity of old metal, and your old lawn-mower, a disused bed, or a baby carriage can all be used in war industry.

Canadians must learn to use imagination in dealing with their rubbish. There is almost nothing except actual kitchen refuse which cannot be used in some way in war industry. Look around your home now, and when the call for salvage comes, knows what you have to give and be ready with it.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Too many people confuse taking the offensive with merely talking the offensive.

"In war times," says the Kitchener Daily Record slyly, "a profit is sometimes without honor.

"Child Experts Going Abroad" says a headline. If that means the Quiz Kids we hope they never come back.

"Mr. King Will Throw Light On Relations With France" says a headline. We feel that any connection with Vichy ought to be kept dark.

The new 40-mile an hour speed limit is going to relieve drivers of some of our older models of considerable embarrassment.

But the Quebec Chronicle Telegraph says: "Won't the flies be mad when they don't find the sugar bowls at eating-places this summer?"

A sign in a George Street window lists the benefits accruing to enlisted men, and one of these is "Chaplin Service." Meaning Charlie, we presume?

The Parliamentary shenanigans of Monsieur Liguori Lacombe have caused his removal from the House for a time. This is probably the first occasion when a whole party has been ejected from the House for simultaneous misconduct.

WAR

One day flamed upward from the dawn and said,
"O World, I bring you tidings strange and dread,
My sword and shield with dripping blood are red,
But be comforted.
For on the morrow I will rise again
On victor-wings in triumph over pain—
The Lord, the God Omnipotent doth reign."
The valiant soul awaits the morrow's sun
In that firm faith by which all wars are won.

A Remarkable Victorian Bishop

By RAYMOND MORTIMER

I HAVE an odd, frivolous taste for the biographies of Victorian ecclesiastics. Presumably everyone requires some light reading, and such books, I find, are as exciting as Mrs. Christie's or Mr. Nicholas Blake's, vastly more amusing than Mr. Wodehouse's. With great enjoyment, therefore, I have lately been reading Canon Macdonnell's Life of Archbishop Magee. I cannot recommend this except to the very few who share my taste, yet these two volumes, issued in 1896 by a publisher called Isbister, do shed some light on human nature and particularly on Homo Victoriensis. Magee was, I think, the ablest as he was certainly the most eloquent of Victorian bishops. Witty, unbuttoned, and uncommonly good company, he was highly popular except with bigots. Born in 1821, the son of an Irish clergyman and the grandson of an Irish archbishop, he took Holy Orders as it were by inheritance. Today a higher view is taken of the priestly office, and moreover the Church offers fewer and much smaller prizes, so that a particular vocation is needed to make a brilliant man into a parson. In those days it was common for clever and ambitious young men to enter an ecclesiastical career. Magee was absolutely solid in his faith, but he had the temperament of a barrister or a politician rather than of a priest.

FROM 1849 to 1860 he served as a curate at Bath, and his preaching gained a wide reputation. In 1859 he was offered a living, which he refused, "after a mental struggle, the sorest I have ever gone through, and which leaves me at this moment so physically and mentally prostrate that I can hardly bring myself to write at length all those reasonings which brought me to my conclusion." (The living was in the wildest part of Donegal.) Six months later he was offered Quebec Chapel in London: "Oh, how I shrink from the anxiety and responsibility of the coming decision. We must pray earnestly for guidance and help." He was guided to accept. (It was "confessedly the most prominent and important post for a preacher in London.") But his health failed him, and soon he accepted the rectory of Enniskillen. In 1864 he was made Dean of Cork. Four years later his growing impatience with the narrowness of his Church of Ireland colleagues induced him to apply to Disraeli for an English living. "Very reverend Sir," the answer came, "I regret that I cannot comply with your request, for I felt it my duty"—Magee gloomily turned over the page—"to recommend her Majesty to nominate you to the vacant see of Peterborough." As usual a letter confided to a friend his feelings: "I could not have imagined beforehand how much of dismay and actual pain the reception of a Prime Minister's offer of a bishopric would cause." He overcame his dismay. Finally, in 1891, Lord Salisbury offered him the Archbishopric of York: "You may imagine how dazed I felt by such an offer, accompanied by a request for a 'yes' or 'no' by telegram....It was a tremendous decision to make at a few hours' notice....After such prayer and consultation as I could give, I telegraphed 'yes.'" Magee was not physically strong, and one would accept all these hesitations more readily were it not for an incident in 1864. The Bishop of Meath was dying. Magee expected to succeed him, but suddenly the Government fell. "The Bishopric of Meath would, I believe, have been mine had Dr. Singer's death taken place just three weeks sooner than it did. Three weeks of an expiring, and seemingly useless, life lay between me and all that the bishopric implies." One has an uneasy feeling that if the seemingly useless life had not been thus prolonged, we should have had a letter telling us of the dismay, the pain, the consultations, the prayers, the same mental struggle, that had been necessary before the bishopric could be accepted.

THE other point about Magee that fascinates me in his altruistic gloom. He had a rare capacity for enjoyment, and his career was a series of triumphs, but he was in constant distress; the country, he felt sure, was going to the dogs. He began his tenure of the see of Peterborough, which lasted twenty-two years, with a speech in the Lords denouncing the calamitous disestablishment of the Church of Ireland. Lord Derby, himself a great veteran of oratory, declared that in his experience the eloquence of this speech had never been surpassed and very rarely equalled. Henceforward the bishops were always pushing Magee forward to advocate their more unpopular opinions, till he complained that he was "the gamecock of the Episcopal Bench." (The other peers, he said, treated the bishops as parvenus." He made a brave attack on a bill for suppressing vivisection, and another upon a bill for introducing the form of tyranny euphemistically called "Local Option." "I think it better," he said, "that England should be free than compulsorily sober," and there were yelps from every fanatic in the three kingdoms. Increasingly he became a prey to the gloomiest forebodings. Archbishop Tait, he wailed, was an infatuated Erastian; anti-clericalism was spreading in the Universities; the clergy were more and more taken up with "ritualistic gewgaws"; Mr. Gladstone, though totaly unfitted to rule, had obtained another majority; our democracy was ignorant, feeble and selfish beyond all other democracies; and dissenters were demanding that the bells of the Established Church should toll at their funerals. "The England of thirty years hence," he wrote in 1878, "will surely be the nastiest residence conceivable for anyone, save infidel prigs and unsexed women." The House elected in 1886, he declared, was Republican: "I give the Church of England two parliaments to live through." And then all this talk of Socialism! Christ had said "My Kingdom is not of this world"; it was therefore a huge mistake to turn the kingdoms of this world into His Kingdom. Disestablishment would be followed by revolution, and he only hoped he might be spared to spend his few surviving disestablished years on the Lake of Como.

THE groans of nineteenth-century notabilities now seem ironically amusing. The Paris of the Eighties and Nineties provided for the priviliged the most agreeable and stimulating life, I think, that has ever been obtainable upon this planet; yet Flaubert and the Goncourts never ceased whining. They, it is true, had seen a humiliating defeat and an alarming revolution. But the English knew an ever-growing prosperity, and how incessant were their complaints. The disestablishment of the Church of Ireland was, in fact, the harmless and overdue abolition of an insolent anomaly; the spread of ritualism produced—to put it at its lowest—an immense amount of innocent pleasure; even the Deceased Wife's Sister Bill would have legalised only marriages that were permitted throughout Catholic Europe. If Bishop Magee found all this so agitating, what, one may ask, would be his feelings if he had been born sixty years later and saw what we are seeing? (There are moments, I notice, when one longs to drop bombs not on, but near, almost all the eminent Victorians.) I fancy that Bishop Magee, if he were now alive, would indeed be gloomy, but not a whit gloomier than he actually was. Reasons for dismay may have become more cogent, but the causes of dismay remain the same—for more of them are usually subjective. Groaning over the indisputably horrible present, alarmed by the potentially more horrible future, we may envy what we imagine to have been the placid lives of our grandparents. But their anxiety, it seems, was hardly less harrowing than ours. Moreover, compared even with ourselves eighteen months ago, we, too, are in fact very enviable. We have the right to be amused by the lamentations of a Magee, but are we not also a little ridiculous if we indulge to draw from the life of so great a preacher something resembling a moral lesson.

Corregidor, Malta Thorns

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, March 30 —(AP)— Whatever their ultimate fate, two tiny island bastions in far seas, the one British and the other American manned, are proving sharp thorns in the conquest pathway of the Axis mates.

They are Malta, dominating the Mediterranean waistline, although within hardly a stone's-throw of the Italian shores, and Corregidor, even more effectively denying Japan the use of Manila Bay, guarding the flank of the American-Filipino army on Bataan—definitely disrupting Tokyo's schedule.

As to Malta's role there can be no question. It has been persistently bombed night and day month after month at close range. Yet Axis boasts of bomb hits on British warships there sufficiently confirm continued British use of Valetta harbor as a sea base within less than sixty miles of Italy.

BATTLE CONTINUOUS

The British command on Malta estimates that its defense has cost the Axis fifty planes downed during this month of March alone. That the sea floor about the island is strewn with the wreckage of many, many times that number of enemy aircraft and the bodies of their crews goes without saying. The battle of Malta has been continuous since Italy entered the war.

The men of Corregidor's batteries likewise have scored heavily against otherwise unchallenged Japanese air-power. The vital role of the fortress and its flanking forts in the defense of Bataan that has thrilled the Allied world is incontestable.

A new Japanese commander, fresh from his victory at Singapore, was rushed to Luzon. It is his mission to erase the blot on Japanese Army prestige that the names of Corregidor and Bataan represent.

Corregidor and its batteries still stand in his way. His first move is to renew the air assault on that fortress in recognition of the fact that, while Corregidor holds out with flaming guns, his hopes of restoring Japanese prestige except at prohibitive cost remain meagre.

LESSON DRIVEN HOME

Malta and Corregidor are again demonstrating the lesson so bitterly brought home to Britain by escape of the Nazi battlecraft Gneisenau, Scharnhorst and Prinz Eugen from Brest. High-altitude bombing against small targets is a hit-or-miss affair. The attackers must swoop low within the range of anti-aircraft fire to be sure of a hit, and invariably they pay heavily for that.

The contours of Valetta Harbor, a narrow waterway rimmed with rocky heights on both sides, make either effective bombing or torpedo plane attacks on ships at anchor there especially dangerous. Their attack path is predictable, grooved by physical characteristics. Gunners below know in advance where to look for them to make the flat runs necessary for sighting bombs.

Failing to blot out Malta by air, Axis strategy has sought to blanket it while reinforcement convoys bound to Libya bypass the Malta hornets' nest. To what extent they have succeeded still is uncertain. The battle of the Libyan desert has shrivelled into mere skirmishing since the second British retreat to lines east of the Libyan hump.

British interception of Libyan-bound Axis shipping far up in the Ionian Sea, off Albania and off Calabria at the toe of the Italian boot, clearly indicates, however, the round-about and dangerous course such Axis convoys are forced to steer because Malta has proved itself a miniature Gibraltar.

To The Editor . . .

HELP FOR GREECE

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—In today's Examiner there is a picture of Gustave Persson, master of the Swedish motorship Sicilia. It is pointed out that "The Sicilia will sail from New York, bound for Piraeus, Greece, with 2,150 tons of flour, 10 tons of medicines and medical supplies, and 500,000 units of concentrated vitamines, for relief of starving Greece....She will be the first ship passed by all governments, to carry food to an occupied country in Europe...."

Despite the pre-war efforts of heroic Greece to make the country self-sufficient in the breadgrain (the home yield has been moved forward from 11½ million bushels in 1929 to 36 million bushels in 1938) Greece still needs to import almost 25 per cent of her people's breadgrain needs, or just 16½ million bushels. This latter bushelage which must come into Greek ports, is the equivalent of just 500,000 tons of the raw grain. If the reader will revert to the tonnage of flour in that "Mercy Ship," the ratio between the supply and the needs "of starving Greece" will be pathetically apparent.

On the other hand, the United Nations must be aware of the fact that, according to a grain authority: "The Governor of the National Bank of Greece stated that, in 1938, the country was self-sufficient in certain food products to the following extent: potatoes 97.9%; vegetables 81%; maize 78%; and wheat 70%. From this it seems that, for Greece, absolute self-sufficiency for the breadgrain is still far off."

I have no doubt that the supplies could have been "spread" across the needs of the little country's 7,000,000 people—had there been any real attempt made in that direction by the tyrannous invader. Then, too, armies of occupation also "move on their stomach" and, in this case, of course had first call on the supplies. Finally, there is the well-known Nazi technique of shipping food from occupied areas to the German people, for which Nazi "paper" is exchanged in payment (!) but is merely streamlined looting.

It will be observed, however, that we ship flour rather than the raw grain. I presume it would take a 7,000-ton wheat cargo to equal those 2,150 tons of flour? Jack Canuck's flour-mills should be running now, at capacity, instead of 75 per cent capacity, rather than in 1943. I realize that the profit motive will not do this job!

Recent Bride Honored

Mrs. Percy E. Dyer (nee Grace Kimble), bride of Saturday, was much feted prior to her marriage. On Saturday, March 19, she was guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. C. Palmer. At the home of Miss Alma Duffy, Miss Duffy and Miss Alice Kimble were hostesses at a cup and saucer shower. The office staff of the De Laval Company presented her with a large round mirror and she was presented with a silver cream and sugar set and tray by the teachers and officers of St. James' Sunday School.

Rannie—Stephens

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 30 (ENS)—A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Rear street parsonage of Rev. J. R. Bick on Saturday morning at ten o'clock, when Beatrice May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stephens of Seymour East became the bride of G. Mitchell Rannie, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rannie of Seymour township. The bride wore a becoming rose crepe street length frock with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. In her hair she wore a halo of rose buds. Miss Elsie Rannie, who was her only attendant, chose a pale blue crepe with black accessories, and a corsage of Briarcliff roses. Mr. Harold Milne of Seymour East assisted the groom.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of Mrs. B. Burleigh where members of the immediate families of the couple were the guests. Later Mr. and Mrs. Rannie left for Ottawa by train and on their return they will reside near Tweed. For travelling the bride donned a fleet blue suit with matching hat and accessories.

Bailey, Miss M. Wood, Miss B. Richardson, Miss B. Hughes, Miss B. Belleghem, Miss D. Burgess, Miss M. Matchett. Coffee and sandwiches were served to about 250 men and communal hymn singing was enjoyed by everyone.

57th Chapter Holds Birthday Tea

The Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. was the scene of a pretty tea on Saturday, when the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E. held a tea on the occasion of their 30th birthday.

Tea was poured at a long table covered with a beautiful lace cloth, and centered with a big bouquet of daffodils and stocks flanked by lighted ivory tapers. Mrs. William Langford, Miss M. Rogers, Mrs. R. E. Clarke, and Mrs. Gordon Hall.

An attractively home-cooking table, centered with a basket of colored Easter eggs, was supervised by Mrs. G. M. Stenton and Miss M. McIntyre was selling tickets on a lovely quilt, which was won by Mrs. R. W. Heafield, Mark street.

Mrs. G. H. Cutmore was the efficient general convener of the tea, and Mrs. J. S. Fanning, Mrs. U. E. Waterman, Mrs. F. Merrett, Mrs. Charles Scott, Mrs. W. Hughes, Mrs J. E. Johnston and Mrs. George Melton assisted in the serving of tea. Mrs. R. G. Cottrell and Mrs. W. E. Conway were hostesses in the Green room.

Guests were received by Mrs. G. H. Cutmore, Mrs. A. W. Turner, Regent, and Mrs. J. A. Dewart.

Grace R. Kimble Is Wed To Percy E. Dyer

St. James' United Church was the scene on Saturday of the marriage of Grace Roseila, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Kimble of Lindsay, to Percy Evan Dyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dyer of Peterborough. The Rev. F. W. Craik officiated and wedding music was played by Miss Alma Duffy, A.T.C.M. During the signing of the register, Miss Wilma Lockie sang "Because." The church was decorated with large foliage plants.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gracefully gowned in a floor-length dress of ice blue taffeta with a gathered bodice full skirt and long puffed sleeves. She wore a finger-tip veil of blue net caught with white roses and carried a bouquet of dream roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Alice Kimble, who wore a frock of pink net with lace insets in the long, full skirt, a square neckline and short puffed sleeves. She wore a small cluster of spring flowers in her hair, and carried a bouquet of spring flowers. Mr. Frank Dyer, brother of the groom, was best man.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, where the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of navy crepe, a rose felt hat and a corsage of roses. The groom's mother also received, wearing a gown of copen blue crepe, and a corsage of roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a trip to Toronto. Mrs. Dyer wore a rose wool dress and hat and navy coat and accessories. On their return they will live at 487 McDonnel Street.

FEWER AUTOMOBILES MEAN INCREASE IN HOME LIFE

Families Are Going To Become Better Acquainted, and Children Less Worry to Parents

It would be funny if it were not so tragic, that the horror of war which seems most appalling to the great majority of people is the prospect of having to stay at home after their automobile tires wear out. It is the fear of that disaster that has gotten them down. Everywhere you go you see people beating on their breasts and hear them wailing over the terrible hardships they will have to endure when they are compelled to use their own legs for motive power instead of gasoline, and when they will have to spend their evenings in the bosoms of their own families, and sleep in thei rown beds instead of tourist cabins. It is not too much to say the general public considers that in parting with its car it is making the supreme sacrifice for its country that puts it in the hero class and entitles it to have its breast covered with medals, and to tell its grandchildren tales of the sufferings went through in the great war. Well, of course, none of us enjoy giving up our luxuries, but let me buck up these disconsolate ones by reminding them that just as nothing in life is as good as we expected it to be, neither is anything as bad as we feared it would be. There is still balm in Gilead, and they are going to find a lot of pleasure in reviving the quaint old customs of the B.A. (before automobile)age.

For one thing, they will rediscover the home, which has practically been a lost institution for the past 30 years and of which the present generation only knows by hearsay, and they will find it isn't such a bad place, after all. In fact, after they acquire the habit of staying at home because they can't go anywhere else, they will like it.

More Peaceful Life

They will find that there is something very soothing and restful in coming back to a quiet, peaceful spot where they can put on their old shoes and drop the smirk off of their faces after a hard day's struggle with the world, instead of having to doll themselves up and step out to a night club. Also, that there is something about the flavor of a good home-cooked dinner that no high-priced chef ever quite gets.

Likewise, the knowledge that the car is safely jacked up in the garage, accumulating rust and dust instead of breaking speed laws on the boulevards, is going to give many a father and mother the first good night's sleep they have had since Junior and Mamie got big enough to sit behind a steering wheel. They will no longer have to lie awake at night wondering if their youngsters are lying dead in a ditch, or engaged in a petting party in a parked car on a lonely road.

And when home becomes a place of permanent residence, so to speak, instead of just a hangout that they pop into to change clothes when they are rushing from one spot to another, it will give husbands and wives a chance to renew their acquaintance with each other, and children an opportunity to know their parents better than just being able to recognize them by sight.

Renew Real Acquaintanceship

For married people to be thrown upon each other for companionship will save many a divorce and make many a husband and wife furbish up the old line of charm they used in their courting days. And it will give children a respect for their parents they have never had before to descover that all of Mom's and Pop's ideas didn't come out of the moth balls, but are shrewd and up-to-date, any that they are good company who really do know almost as much as the teen-agers do.

Nor need girls bemoan their fate in being forced to spend their evenings at home. It is their opportunity if they only had sense enough to see it. For the boys also cannot go to places that are far, far away, and that drives them for entertainment and amusement to the nearest little lady spider who sits in her parlor and spins her web.

Any maiden who has a nice, comfortable home in which she can gather together a group of her friends, where they can turn on the radio and dance, or play cards or games, or pop corn or make fudges, and who has a mother who will shoo the family into the background and let the youngsters raid the ice box, will never lack for dates. For the boys will literally and figuratively eat it up because it will give them good times and save their pocketbooks.

And in the home a girl has a far better chance of catching a husband than she has when she is speeding around with a boy in an automomile from roadhouse to roadhouse. Going 75 miles an hour the boy friend's thoughts have to be concentrated on his machine and not on Arabella. Nor is he prompted to pop the question in a restaurant with a waiter hanging around listening. But sitting quietly at home with Arabella beside him on the sofa, looking like an angel in the firelight and feeding him on chocolate cake she says she made herself—well, it is all over except sending out the wedding invitations.

So, perhaps, it isn't going to be so bad not to have new tires, after all.

The Way of a Sailor

Dear Dorothy Dix.—I am a young sailor and although I am not going to burden you with a description of myself, I must tell you that I have a magnetic personality so far as girls are concerned. Being a sailor I have met many girls in many ports and I am afraid I have left a trail of broken hearts behind me. Now I have met the girl I would like to travel with to the end of the road, and I would like to marry her. She has given up a fellow she has been going steady with for five years for me. Do you think I would be doing this girl an injustice to marry her? —James.

Answer.—Probably. Inasmuch as you are such a fascinator and are so fickle, I think it would be better to leave the girl to marry her old reliable steady.

SALLY'S SALLIES

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, March 31

Exceptionally propitious auguries are found in this day's sidereal pattern. There is forecast of a radical, sudden and probably dramatic upheaval or change, which may have not only far reaching and profound effect on the life but give solidity, cohension and enduring stability to the fortunes and the future. Perhaps strangers as well as old friends, relatives, elders or old-established institutions may hold conspicuous influence in this. There should be a relief from static affirs, with an increase and security in real possessions, perhaps trusts.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of thrilling, and dynamic as well as radical moves, changes, associations and objectives, which will dramatize and give point to the future destinies, as well as give solid growth, security and endurance to the fortunes, progress and personal felicity. Romance and adventure as well as stabilization of the possessions, investments and position and prestige are presaged. There may be surprising benefits from elders, relatives or old institutions.

A child born on this day should have unusual talents, with much originality, ingenuity, depth and sound judgment and purpose.

Meat Pie

(Contributed by Mrs. Eric Jackson)

One pound beef shoulder, ¼ pound pork shoulder, 3 tablespoons shortening, 1 onion minced, ½ cup celery, 2 potatoes diced, 2-3 cup carrots, diced, salt to taste, about ¼ teaspoon peper, celery salt is optional.

Method: Cut meat in small pieces, dip lightly in flour, brown in hot frying pan with hot melted shortening. Add a little hot water, cover, simmer until tender. Place meat and vegetables in buttered baking dish, cover with gravy made of meat drippings with 2 tablespoons of flour. Add salt to taste. Cover with crust as follows:

Crust: 1½ cups flour, 4 tablespoons shortening, ¾ cup milk, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt. Sift flour, salt and baking powder together. Work in shortening, slowly add milk, roll to ½-inch thickness. Place over meat, but moisten rim with water to hold pastry. Prick dough with fork for steam to escape. Bake in hot oven until brown. Serve with lettuce and tomato salad or cole slaw.

Apple or Peach Cake

(Contributed by Mrs. Eric Jackson)

One egg, 1 cup milk, ½ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon melted lard, 2 cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon lemon extract, sliced apples or peaches, cinnamon, mixed with a little sugar and nutmeg.

Beat egg, add sugar, alternately add milk with flour sifted with salt and baking powder. Mix thoroughly, add shortening. Pour in greased baking tin, place slices of apple or peach ½ inch thick into batter, sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar mixture. Bake in moderate oven. Ideal for children's or men's lunch boxes—at it keeps fresh for a long while.

Thanks Mrs. Jackson for these two excellent contributions. Keep up the good work, readers.

DUMART AND SNELL EACH SCORE TWICE AS FLYERS TAKE SERIES

Ottawa Flyers Overpower Hamilton 8-3

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, March 30 — (CP). — When hockey talent started gravitating to the Capital in numbers a few weeks back, sport writers promptly tagged Coach Bill Touhey of Ottawa's Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers "The old woman who lived in a shoe."

They based that quaint paraphrase of the old nursery jingle on the theory that the Ottawa coach had so many forwards he wouldn't know what to do. But Touhey fooled them.

He fooled them so completely it would hardly be far-fetched to-day to revamp the couplet to read: "Touhey had so many forwards the opposition didn't know what to do."

That was the way it worked out against Hamilton Majors as Flyers overpowered Coach George Redding's Ontario champions 8-3 on Saturday night before 6,257 home fans to complete a three-game sweep of their best-of-five Eastern Canada semi-final series and qualify for the semi-final round of the Allan Cup playdowns. Their next opponents will be Glace Bay Miners or Quebec Aces.

Joined Team in February.

In all three games against Majors, their first serious opposition since they entered the Allan Cup eliminations, Flyers won in the stretch drive while Majors crumbled under the weight of overwhelming attacking power. And in all three games they used to best advantage such starry players as Milt Schmidt, Woody Dumart, Johnny Acheson and George Snell, all of whom joined the team in February.

Under Canadian Amateur Hockey Association regulations permitting each team to dress 13 players for the playoffs, including goalies, Touhey has been using three forward lines and one defence pair, with stalwarts like Schmidt, Dumart and Acheson dropping back occasionally to give the starting defencemen a rest. The system has been paying dividends.

Disastrous Third.

Saturday night, the Hamilton club matched speed for speed against Flyers most of the way and remained within one goal until disaster struck them in the final period as the Air Force scored four goals without a reply.

The series proved one other point —the Air Force doesn't rely entirely on Schmidt and Dumart, the two members of the Kraut line still in action now that Bobby Bauer is on the sidelines with a fractured collarbone. Between them, the Krauts obtained only three goals of the 19 Flyers scored in the series.

Dumart got two on Saturday to split scoring laurels with Snell, the Winnipeg boy who is replacing Bauer. The shifty Al Campbell-Pickles MacNichol-Buddy Hellyer line picked up singletons, and Vic Haneberry got the other.

Polly Miocinovich, one of Hamilton's hardest-working representatives, scored their most brilliant goal on a solo rush. Defenceman Edwin (Smack) Allen beat Goalie Len Pinke of Flyers on a blue-line shot, while speedy Johnny Conick counted Hamilton's other goal from the right side.

He Caught It

News that Toots Mirabito of Syracuse, who wears glasses except when he's fighting or playing football, won the Intercollegiate heavyweight championship Saturday is our excuse for telling this one about another short-sighted Syracusan. Phil Allen, who will marry Virginia Guilfoil, the golfing lovely, this Spring, was a swell pass catcher a couple of years ago. But due to short sightedness, he occasionally would miss one that didn't come quite near enough for him to see. That happened one day when a catch would have won a game for Syracuse. When Phil went to call on Ginny that night he learned that her father had been investing in a football pool and stood to collect $1,000 if Syracuse had won. Phil's pals say that he really caught it then—from Pop.

News From Training Camps

MIAMI, Fla., March 30 (AP) — Clarence Jonnard, new coach of New York Giants, formerly caught in the National League at Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and is a twin brother of Claude Jonnard who pitched for the Giants in the days of John McGraw.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—Hans Lobert's biggest headache these days is the physical condition of his Philadelphia Phil pitching staff. Si Johnson, Frank Hoerst and Tommy Hughes aren't in condition and Cy Blanton, despite a good start, is throwing poorly.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, wasn't too confident that Whitlow Wyatt, his opponent in the recent holdout battle, would be in shape as the pitcher made his first appearance of the season yesterday against Washington Senators. MacPhail bet $25 the Senators would score at least twice but Wyatt blanked the American Leaguers and struck out four batsmen.

LOS ANGELES — Bill Nicholson, 200-pound Chicago Cub outfielder who led the club in home runs the last two seasons, is clicking again this spring with three round-trippers in the last three games. He hit 25 in 1940 and 26 last year.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — New York Yankees are about ready to discard the nicknames of "Bronx Bombers" and "Ruppert Rifles." Yesterday's 3-2 loss to St. Louis Cardinals was their eighth game this season decided by a one-run margin and all their 11 blows in the fray were singles.

TAMPA, Fla.—Before the Cincinnati Reds broke camp today, Rookie Pitchers Ben Wade and Les Hinckle and Outfielder Eddie Lukon were ordered to report to the Syracuse Chiefs' training camp at Fort Lauderdale, pending disposition of their contracts.

BELLEVILLE, March 30.—The Trenton R.C.A.F. Fliers evened the series with Windsor Alumni Saturday night in the Ontario Senior Basketball finals by defeating the visitors, 48 to 39, at the No. 5 I.T.S. gymnasium. Windsor won the first game of the best two-out-of-three series last week by a score of 27 to 19.

Large Crowd On Hand

The largest crowd to ever witness a basketball game in this city turned out to see the contest. Prior to the senior game two teams of the Simpson's Volunteers played an exhibition game as an added attraction. Deciding game of the Ontario senior finals will be played in Toronto next Saturday.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The intimation from the Minister of Pensions and Health that the department is entirely in favor of wartime sport as a developer of sound bodies and as a tonic for war nerves is an official recognition of a theory that we have advanced in this column more than once. There is a place for sport even in a nation at war. It should not be allowed to interfere with the country's war effort of course and there is a certain amount of objection to making sport a profession during times of national emergency. But games in the spare time of men who are making their contribution by doing a honest day's war work in industry are something else again and we are glad that the Minister of Health and Pensions has come out flat-footedly and put his O.K. on such contests. Britain has long since recognized that so far as sports do not interfere with the carrying out of the war they should be encouraged and so even when air raids threatened daily cricket, football and other games went on if not quite as usual, at least as a steady diet and they drew big crowds, so big in fact that a limit had to be put on the attendance.

Day by day in every way the C.A.H.A. gives notice that sport for sport's sake is a forgotten doctrine in the modern management of "amateur" hockey and that about the only thing that counts today is the size of the gates that can be drawn. President Dudley declared the other day that it was absolutely necessary that the junior and senior playoffs in their later stages should be played in the largest arenas in the country and thus the home town fans of numerous clubs who have followed their team all season are deprived of a chance to see them in their battles for Dominion honors. And now comes the announcement that because the Montreal Royals defeated the Maritime junior champions in the opening game 12 to 3 the rest of the series will be wiped out and Royals have been declared the winners. There is only one reason for cancelling the rest of the series and that is fear that the one-sided nature of the Montreal victory had killed the remaining games as box office attractions. Royals undoubtedly would have won out anyway but surely the kids from the Maritimes were entitled to a chance to get back into the running and to show what they could do in the remaining games of the round. To have the whole thing wiped out in this drastic manner will surely do the game no good in the Maritimes.

The break by which the Toronto Leafs won Saturday's game was on a play that has long caused hockey experts to suggest that possibly a change in the rules to prevent just such an advantage might be in order. Schriner had been serving a penalty and had completed his time just as Stanowski broke away from his own territory with the puck. Schriner hopped out of the penalty box and was just in the right position to pick up a pass from the defenceman and coast in for a goal. More than one hockey student contends that a break like that in the case of a player just returning from durance vile for an infraction of the rules should be made impossible. They point out that the sudden appearance of a player ready to take a pass changes the whole situation around like a flash and gives the defenders little chance to shift in time to meet the new threat. Several suggestions have been made as a change in the rule to cover the play. One is that a player returning to the ice from a penalty should not be allowed to take place in a play in the neutral area. Another and this one seems to meet the point more closely is that no such player shall be allowed to take part in the play while his own team has the puck. That would stop a break-away made possible by the unexpected return to the ice of a penalized player, preventing such a play as gave the Leafs their winning goal Saturday night.

A Real Battle Certain

The championship of the intermediate section of the Ladies' Basketball League will be decided tomorrow, Tuesday evening, when Westclox and Y Gym will meet in the third game of the final series. The fixture is scheduled to get under way at 7 o'clock sharp and should be a red-hot argument between two strong teams. They are so evenly matched that it would be difficult even to hazard a guess as to the outcome. The Y girls won the first game by a small margin but when the teams met in the second game last Friday night they wound up the regulation period on even terms with 14 points each and for the first time this season overtime had to be played. In the extra session the Westclockers who had been 11 points behind at the half got rolling and managed to pick up three points to win 17 to 14 and even up the best two-of-three series. It is the rubber game tomorrow night and judging by the two contests already played the rivals will battle neck and neck all the way down the stretch. The two final series in the loop this year have been about the closest in the history of the organization. Generals and Quakers, now tied up in the senior finals will settle their differences Wednesday night with a game at 7 o'clock.

It's A Tough Series

Toronto Maple Leafs breaking even with New York Rangers over the week-end are one game up on the series, leading three games to two with the sixth game coming up in Toronto tomorrow night. While the big edge is with the Leafs those Rangers cannot be counted out yet. With the potential scoring power Lester Patrick's machine possesses the Young Men of Manhattan are always dangerous and they are the more so right now because they have been getting far more help from Goalie Jim Henry than the critics predicted. The rookie goalie who goes to the Navy as soon as the hockey season is over has been one of the stars of the series. Rangers on the other hand have fallen down just where they were expected to show the most strength. The high-powered rough-neck line of Watson, Hextall and Patrick has not yet got rolling, although scores by Hextall and Patrick in the last two games, their first in the series may be a token that the highest scoring combination in the N.H.L. has at last opened the throttle. The series really hinges on tomorrow night's game in Toronto. If the Leafs win it will be all over of course but a Ranger victory, sewing up the series would make the Patrickmen favorites to take the title by grabbing off the seventh game which would be played in New York Thursday.

* * * * * *

While Rangers were winning from Leafs Sunday night Jack Adams' hot Detroit Wings virtually grabbed off the semi-final series by invading Boston and winning their first game on Bruin ice in over four years. That win was surely the payoff for the Wings have been unbeatable at home in recent weeks and should take the second game and the series Tuesday and qualify for the Stanley Cup finals. Detroit's 6 to 4 win over Boston was won in the first 12 minutes when the Wings scored three markers. Jack McGill, rookie Bruin did his best for the Boston cause by scoring three goals but his feat was not enough to save the Rossmen.

Pirates, Browns Share Honors Citrus League

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP).—Major league baseball teams are getting plenty of exercise in the sun-bathed citrus circuit, but they may have to wait until the July All-Star game to determine anything in the way of superiority between the American and National loops.

Sixty-eight exhibition games have sent teams from one league against those from the other in the first month of Grapefruit competition, and today they are neck and neck, with each league owning 34 decisions.

First place in the Grapefruit standings is shared by the Pittsburg Pirates and the St. Louis Browns. The Pirates have won 12 of their 16 starts and the Brownies nine out of 12 for a percentage of .750 each.

Both teams, incidentally, also top their respective circuits in inter-league competition. The Browns have won all five of their games against National League teams, while the Bucs have taken five out of six from American League clubs.

Washington's Senators, who missed a chance to take the lead in the Sunshine League when the Brooklyn Dodgers stopped them, 6-1, yesterday, are pushing the pace-setters with 14 victories in 19 games —all against major league opposition. The Nats have won seven out of ten with National League teams and seven out of nine in their own circuit.

Fourth place belong to St. Louis Cardinals, who also have confined their activity to major league clubs, including nine games with the world champion New York Yankees.

They swept a two-game series with the Yanks during the week-end, running their Spring record to 15 wins and seven losses. In 18 games against American League teams the Cards have taken 12, half of them from New York.

The Philadelphia Phils, Grapefruit leaders a week ago, bumped into the New York Giants and the Browns in recent days and dropped a pair to each, landing in fifth place in the standings with seven victories and five defeats.

For those who insist on comparing the strength of the two leagues, a tip might be lurking in the record of the Boston Red Sox, who finished second in the American League pennant chase in 1941.

Held out of the Grapefruit cellar only by the Boston Braves, the Red Sox have won half of their ten games against National League teams but have played seven games with their own American League clubs and lost every one.

Remember When—

By The Canadian Press

Rookie "Pep" Kelly sniped both goals in Toronto's 2-1 overtime win over Boston Bruins, giving the Leafs the National Hockey League title, seven years ago tonight. With Bruins leading 1-0 and less than three minutes to go Kelly evened the count. His second tally came shortly after the overtime session started. Kelly was traded to Chicago in 1937 and now plays for Springfield Indians.

Smugglers Heyday

Jerusalem, March 30 (AP)

SMUGGLERS within the German army are selling Nazi military stores by the truckload at black markets of occupied Poland and severe punishment has failed to stamp out the practice, Polish authorities here said today. They said the average price for a truckload of clothing and other commodities is 6,000 zlotys. (The zloty was worth 19 cents by pre-war standards, but now is based on the reichsmark and is not quoted in foreign exchange.)

Mendoza's momentum carried him right out of the ring with his opponent. He won the fight and meets James Anderson in a semi-final.

"MEXICAN MASQUERADE"

By CECIL CARNES

THE STORY: Allan Steele posing as magazine photographer, seeks Dr. Sargent and daughter, on U.S. mission in Mexico's Peninsula, who have disappeared; also news of Harry Bishop, maddened by mysterious injection while on same mission. Bishop, found, repeated only "The yellow devils!" Allan, after meeting with enigmatic Col. Escobar of Rural Guard, checks in at Inn of Thousand Delights, quizzes its proprietor, Sun Su, a Chinese working with U.S.

BEAUTIFUL—AND EVIL?

CHAPTER V

"The yellow devils!" Sun Su repeated slowly. "And that was all Mr. Bishop could remember?"

Allan nodded.

The Chinese lifted one broad hand and brought it down softly on the desk in the gesture of a man suddenly struck by an idea. It was his turn to look about them before leaning forward and dropping his voice to a note that barely carried across the intervening space to Allan's ears. And his tone was pitched to the accent of the most extreme gravity.

"That gives me a thought, senor! I will tell it to you, but if you should repeat it—say, to the wrong person—it would be my death warrant. Promise me, senor your utmost discretion!"

"I promise, Sun Su," breathed Allan, impressed by the proprietor's manner. "Shoot!"

"There is something strange going on, senor, not far from here. Ten miles south there is a little group of islands, small and large. They lie much nearer the Peninsula than to the mainland. Only a narrow strip of water separates them from this coast, so a man lying concealed on any nearby hilltop can get quite a good view, even with the naked eye, of what is happening on the biggest island."

"Well," prompted Allan impatiently as Sun Su paused, "what IS happening there?"

"Six months ago, the islands were leased to a Japanese fishing company. A concern of considerable financial backing, clearly, for they have a large number of fishermen employed and have erected a modern cannery which is wonderfully equipped. The project has been a great success, judging from the monthly shiploads of canned fish that go to Japan — and sometimes to my country, where no doubt it is served to the Japanese army of occupation."

Again the Chinese broke off, as if marshaling his facts in order. After the opening sentence, Allan had to force himself to listen with due attention. The word "Japanese" had sent his thoughts flying to a sick man and his one reiterated phrase. "The yellow devils! The yellow devils!" Was that the answer?

"How did you learn all this, Sun Su? I don't imagine they advertise their business much around here."

"Decidedly not. Nor did I learn it myself, for my big body does not permit me to move abroad in this climate. But I have friends among the native fishermen, most of them Peninsula Indians who are jealous of a rival so powerful; they bring me stories occasionally. They sometimes watch the cannery, though they have been warned they'll be severely beaten if they are caught spying."

"That's interesting. And the company employes?"

"All Japanese. They are never permitted to go far from the islands. However, there are two persons connected with the company who come and go as they please. They are Eurasians. One is a remarkably beautiful woman of about 30—the most beautiful woman I've ever seen. She lives at the cannery, but she sometimes makes trips to Mexico City and usually spends a few days, on her way, at this modest inn." Again the Chinese hesitated before adding deliberately: "I believe, senor, she is just as evil as she is beautiful."

"Indeed! And the second privileged person?"

"The man with whom I was talking when you came in. His name is Poona Gungas. He acts as servant, or bodyguard, for the woman."

"I see. And you believe this fish cannery may be just a blind for some more nefarious racket?"

Sun Su inclined her head affirmatively.

"We live in a trouble world, senor. Japan has no love for your country —and here we are quite close to the border!"

"Mmph. Mexico is a neutral country and supposedly our friend. If anything wrong is going on, the authorities should spot it and tip us off. Your Colonel Escobar, for instance; wouldn't he be apt to know all about a foreign fishing outfit in his district?"

"I fear Colonel Escobar has been led far from the path of duty," said Sun Su, shaking his head. "She is indeed very lovely!"

Steele whistled softly.

"So that's it, eh? The lady who is very beautiful and very evil seduces the young officer! What does she get out of it?"

Sun Su spread his hands. "To know that, senor, might be to know all. I can only tell you the pair are thick as—how do you say it in English?—thick as thieves, yes? Once he accompanied her on a trip to the capital; they ride and swim together; whenever the lady stays here, the colonel is a regular visitor."

Allan was reminded that the officer had been coming from the Inn of One Thousand Delights when they met. In that case. . . .

"Does she happen to be staying here now?"

"Yes. She came yesterday and will be here for several days."

"Mmph. I must try to meet her."

"That will not be difficult. In fact —listen, senor!" The Chinese held up a warning hand. From somewhere behind him, Allan heard the tap-tap-tap of a woman's heels; the sound was coming closer. "In a moment she will be here."

"It was Allan's cue to dissemble. Promptly, in a quite unnecessarily loud voice, he was engaging a room, ordering a bath prontissimo if not sooner, and feeding Sun Su the same yarn he had told Escobar about being a magazine photographer on business bent in these parts. The proprietor played up to him smoothly.

"We are honored by your presence, senor. We will do our unworthy best to promote your happiness and comfort. The room will be shown you, and your baggage placed in it. The bath and showers are just down the hall. You have come to a good place for photography, senor; there are many interesting things to photograph—if a man points his camera in the right direction!"

Then the tapping of heels was still and Allan knew she was standing beside him. He glanced sideways from the corner of his left eye, and almost caught his breath. She was tall, slim, and easily more beautiful than Sun's enraptured description. A faint, seductive breath of perfume widened his nostrils. Her hair and eyes were dark, he noted, her complexion a soft, clear

LEAFS AND RANGERS BREAK EVEN IN TWO GAMES ON WEEK-END

Apps And Schriner Put Two Goals In First Games, Shibicky Collects Two On Sunday Night

By H. M. PETERS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, March 30 (CP) — New York Rangers still are in the hunt for the Stanley Cup today, thanks to a stout-hearted display of hockey skill by the front line that used to be their top trio—Neil Colville, Alex Shibicky and Mac Colvile.

This line, ably backed by defenceman Babe Pratt and Goalie Jim Henry, last night led the Rangers to a 3-1 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs in the fifth game of their four-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series.

Faced with elimination, with Toronto ahead three to one in games following a 2-1 victory in Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday night, the Rangers swept into a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Shibicky, and held it throughout, with each team scoring a goal in the last five minutes, Rangers by Lynn Patrick and Toronto by Pete Langelle.

Play Again Tuesday

This sent the series into a sixth game, to be played at Toronto to-morrow night. If the Leafs muff the chance of sewing it up in that game, a seventh and final game will be staged here Thursday with the final winner going on to play Boston or Detroit for the cup.

Departing from his strategy of the first four games, Coach Frank Boucher called upon the Colvilles and Shibicky to mark Syl Apps, Gordon Drillon and Nick Metz, the powerhouse line of the Leafs who among them have scored five of Toronto's 10 goals in the series.

Coach Happy Day of the Leafs did not want this, preferring to send the big line against the outmatched Ranger top line of Phil Watson, Bryan Hextall and Patrick. Consequently the first period was marred from the spectators' pointof view by continual line-changing as each coach sought to have his views prevail.

Rangers got their way, as both Shibicky's goals were scored while the Apps line was opposing the Colville line. But, after the game it was evident that the Rangers were annoyed about the whole thing.

The rules state that the visiting team must tell the referee what line they are starting, and the home team meets that decision. Under ordinary conditions the starting lines play around three minutes, then are changed.

Lines Changed Often.

But last night, the moment the face-off was made Day pulled out the Apps line, sending in his second-string Billy Taylor, Lorne Carr and Dave Schriner. Boucher met that shift by throwing on the Watson line. Back came Apps. Back came Colville. And all the while this was going on the Rangers kept up a bistering attack.

Boucher saiad that in Tuesday's game he is going to insist upon the Colvilles facing the Apps. If necessary, he said, he will keep shifting lines all night. He admitted that such strategy might backfire where it succeeded last night, but that is his decision.

Shibicky got his first goal at 2.01, after a quick series of passes by Pratt and Neil Colville. The same trio clicked again 14 minutes later, Shibicky once more being the markman.

Play was even and hard throughout the second period and most of the third. Then with about four minutes left Patrick drove in a pass from Watson for his first goal of the series, and Langelle diverted a shot by Johnny McCreedy to beat Goalie Jim Henry, who had hoped for a second shutout to go with the 3-0 he achieved here last Tuesday in the third game.

Scored Twice On Saturday.

Toronto won their third victory of the series, and their second at home, by scoring twice late in the third period Saturday night.

Apps broke the 0-0 stalemate in the 10th minute by flashing through to take Drillons rebound and beat Henry. The play had been started by Defenceman Wally Stanowski, who also made the rush that led to Schriner's goal at 13.08.

The Rangers got one goal back, when Hextall scored at 17.31 on a pass by Watson to bring the New York string of non-shutouts to 105. But the Leafs stood firm for the remaining 21½ minutes.

Day is confident the Leafs will end the series to-morrow night. Before taking a late train for Toronto he pointed out that Rangers have not won a game at Toronto since opening night last November, since dropping five in a row, and "we don't intend to let the start now."

Boucher will have Rangers work out here this afternoon, taking a night train for Toronto. The train will arrive about eight hours before game time.

Dave Leether Is Nominated Vice Of O.A.S.A.

GUELPH, March 30. — Five acclaamtions have been accorded to officers in the Ontario Amateur Softball Association for the coming season, but keen competition will prevail for the other offices, when delegates gather in Governor Simcoe Hotel, at Simcoe, on Good Friday, for the twentieth annual meeting of the association, it was announced here to-day by Secretary Verne McIlwraith.

The veteran secretary has once again been returned to that office without competition. He is the oldest member of the executive committee in years of service, having been first elected to the executive committee in 1926, and has been elected every year since. After serving as acting secretary for a couple of years, he was appointed to that office in 1930 and elected secretary in 1931. He is commencing his thirteenth year in the secretaryship.

W. Lloyd Alguire of St. Catharines has also been acclaimed as treasurer. It will be his sixth season in control of the association finances, during which time the organization has been placed on a sound financial basis.

S. H. Armstrong, veteran Toronto playgrounds official, has been acclaimed again as honorary president and Harry S. Briggs, Hamilton, long an A.A.U. of C. governor or the O.A.S.A., is again honorary vice-president. Auditors, named by acclamation are Alexander Webster and Rube Horning, both of Hamilton.

Harry Sniderman of Toronto, who is seeking a second term as president of the O.A.S.A., will be opposed by Alan H. Jefferess, Hamilton and George H. Spooner, Galt.

The ifve seeking the first vice-presidency are A.H. Jefferess, Hamilton; J. R. Brush, Sarnia; G. H. Spooner, Galt; D. Leether, Peterborough, and H. Rollins, Belleville. Six are nominated as second vice-president: H. Rollins, Belleville; J. R. Brush, Sarnia; G. H. Spooner, Galt; A. H. Jefferess, Hamilton; O. H. King, Simcoe and D. Leether, Peterborough.

For the six executive offices eleven are nominated: D. G. Smith, Toronto; F. R. Feaver, Hamilton; E. A. Simpson, Kingston; J. R. Brush, Sarnia; O. H. King, Simcoe, A. H. Jefferess, Hamilton; H. D. Ovenden, Wainfleet; W. Morris, of Stratford; G. Spooner, Galt; H. Rollins, Belleville, and D. Leether, Peterborough.

Great Man O'War Observes 25th Birthday

Man O' War as a great racer
Man O' War — the king
Winning Withers in 1920 in record time
Birthday party: Owner Samuel D. Riddle.

"Big Red," that's Man o' War, considered by many turfmen to be the greatest thoroughbred ever bred in America, was 25 years old March 29, and once again rules as "King for a day" at Lexington, Ky., where he has been in stud for many years. Man o' War, son of Fair Play-Mahubah, was born in 1917. Purchased for $5,000 as a yearling at the Saratoga auction by Samuel D. Riddle, "Big Red" became one of the turf's greatest campaigners, winning 20 of 21 races in 1919-1920, his two great years as a competitor as a two and three-year-old. Man o' War was not nominated for the Derby in 1919, but he did beat the Kentucky Derby winner, Sir Barton, in a $50,000 match race in 1920. Man o' War's earnings for the two years of racing totalled $249,465. He set five records in 1920. He won the Withers, Dwyer, Belmont, Jockey Club and Lawrence Realization stake races that year. In the Lawrence, Man o' War was the shortest priced favorite of all time, the odds being one to 100. Man o' War has sired many great horses, including two Kentucky Derby winners, Clyde van Dusen, winner in 1929, and War Admiral, winner in 1937.

It's Spring – But Definitely

If there was any lingering doubt in your mind about the advent of spring, this ought to dispose of it. The Columbia Varsity rowing crew takes to the great outdoors and begins daily workout on the Harlem river, which is now clear of menacing ice cakes. The rowing lions have been working indoors for the past month.

Terriers Are Favored To Win Series

By The Canadian Press

The highly regarded Portage La Prairie Terriers, undefeated since Jan. 5, are betting favorites to make it three straight to-night in their best of five series with Fort William Hurricane-Rangers at Winnipeg and advance to the Western Canada junior hockey final.

Winner of the Thunder Bay-Manitoba series will meet either Regina Abbotts, Saskatchewan junior representatives, or Edmonton Maple Leafs from Alberta. Edmonton and Regina renew their battle at Regina to-morrow night after playing a 2-2 overtime tie in the first game of a best of five series Saturday night.

In the senior division the Port Arthur Bearcats from Thunder Bay play the third game of a best of five series to-night at Calgary against Lethbridge Maple Leafs of Alberta, with the Lakehead six leading 1-0 in games. The first game ended in a 4-4 draw and Port Arthur took the second 4-1.

Kimberley Dynamiters, carrying British Columbia senior colors, and Saskatoon Quakers, best in Saskatchewan, move to Moose Jaw for the third of their best of five series. Each won one game, Quakers by a 6-4 count Thursday and Kimberley 4-3 in overtime Saturday.

A Great Forward Line

The Portage La Prairie kid-line of Lin Bend, Joe Bell and Bob Love, the most potent forward offensive seen in Manitoba Junior company for years, almost single-handed whipped the Lakeheaders Saturday, accounting for eight goals in an 11-4 victory. Ball had four goals, Bend three and Love one. The first game ended 7-6 for Terriers.

Bud Poile, the one-man threat for Fort William scored four times in the opener but was held Saturday to two assists as Morris Hamilton, with two, Gus Bodnar and Bill McEwan were the goal-getters.

All the scoring was packed into the third period in the Regina Junior go, with Edmonton Maple Leafs blowing a 2-0 lead on goals by Johnny Black and Freddy Smitten. Joe Metka and Garnet Dryburgh deadlocked the issue in the last six minutes.

The Laprades, Edgar and Bert, each scored once as Port Arthur moved to a 4-1 win over Lethbridge Saturday. Al Kelly and Bill McKenzie were the other scorers while Hector Negrello kept Maple Leafs from a shutout. Third of the Laprades, Raymond, failed to get into the scoring picture.

Gordon Wilson, a former Saskatoon Junior, emerged the hero in Kimberley's overtime senior victory. His second goal cinched a 4-3 victory. Benny Redisky netted the other Kimberley counters.

Syd Fenn, Tommy Reid and Mel Neilsen collected Quakers three goals all in the third period.

Caps Capture First Game 5-4

INDIANAPOLIS, March 30—(AP)—American Hockey League followers today were looking forward to one of the closest playoff finals waged for the Calder Cup in some seasons and to add weight to this belief is the nip-and-tuck battle which opened the playoff final between Indianapolis Capitals and Hershey Bears, the two survivors.

It was a game typical of the come-black qualities which carried both teams into the league playoffs after a wobbly start early in the season, but last night it was Caps' turn to take the honors as they whipped home three goals in the second period to gain a 5-4 decision.

The loss was a bitter pill for the Bears to swallow for after falling behind a 1-0 count early in the game, they scored three quick goals in the first frame for what looked enough to win. Hal Jackson, husky Cap rearguard got one of these back before the initial period ended, then Caps really put on the pressure.

At 1:21 of the middle frame Doug McCaig tied the score and Connie Brown who tallied the first Indianapolis goal, picked up another, with Jackson coming through in the same canto for his second tally of the game.

Hershey put up a desperate fight in the third frame to overcome their Western section rivals, but Harry Frost's goal at 5:08 of the session was the nearest they came to catching Caps.

It was Veteran Roger Jenkins who put Bears on the right road early in the game with two quick goals, then Wally Kilrea accounted for the other tally which gave Hershey its short-lived advantage in the first period.

The second game of the best-of-five affair will be played in Indianapolis Tuesday with the teams moving over to Hershey for the third and fourth games.

Detroit Whips Bruins 6-4 In First Game

BOSTON, March 30—(CP).—The scoring ability that Detroit Red Wings lacked so lamentaly during the last National Hockey League season has turned up like a blood transfusion in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

When Wings bounced Boston Bruins 6-4 here last night in the first game of their best-of-three semi-final series, it was the second consecutive six-goal splurge for a club to which goals had come painfully during the season.

Boston was favored for the series before the game, but after 11 minutes of the first period Wings showed they had no use for the opinions of bookmakers. They led 3-0 at that point and were threatened only late in the third when Rookie Jack McGill popped in his second and third goals of the night.

Wings' last victory over Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup quarter-final was a 6-2 affair, but the observers could be excused for passing it off lightly, Canucks being what they were. But six goals against the great Frankie Brimsek is something like sinking a destroyer with a bow and arrow.

Play at Home Tuesday

Detroit probably will be favored for the series when it resumes in Detroit Tuesday night. The Wings haven't lost a game at home for a couple of months. The win last night was their first on Boston ice since December 7, 1937. If a third game is necessary it will be played here Thursday.

Mud Bruneteau popped in the first Detroit goal after 19 seconds of the first period. Eddie Wares and Carl Liscombe counted second and third goals for Wings before Roy Conacher bagged Boston's first. Liscombe sniped another in the second before Don Grosso scored Detroit's fifth and McGill got the first of his three. Syd Abel scored in the third before McGill got his last two.

In addition to having scored more goals (14 in four games) than any of the other three teams remaining in the playoffs, Detroit has the highest individual scorer of the post-schedule series in Carl Liscombe. Liscombe has four goals and two assists for a total of six points.

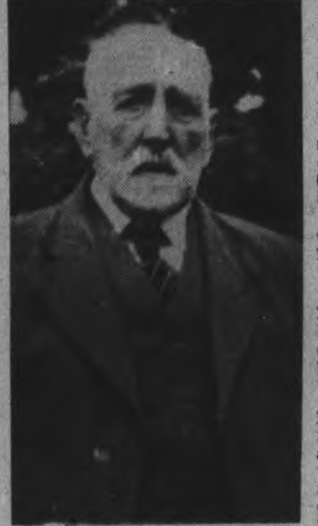
Cavan Loses Noted Citizen In T. Donaldson

MILLBROOK, March 30 (ENS) — The community lost an outstanding citizen, and one of the oldest residents of the township, in the passing of Thomas Donaldson, in his ninety-second year, following a lingering illness. Mr. Donaldson, whose whole life had been spent on the farm homestead, a few miles east of Millbrook, and facing on Provincial Highway 28, was a son of the late Joseph Donaldson, and his wife, Mary Wilson, pioneer and highly-respected citizens. Had he lived until May 4, Mr. Donaldson would have reached his ninety-second birthday, and in his long and useful career as an enterprising and successful farmer had seen many changes take place.

Fifty-eight years ago the marriage of Thomas Donaldson and Jane Syer took place, his wife predeceasing him by eight years. In 1925 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, and in May, 1939, Mr. Donaldson's family held "open house" in honor of their father's ninetieth birthday, when friends from far and near called to offer congratulations and best wishes. A staunch Liberal in politics, he had a life-long membership in Centreville Presbyterian church, of which he was a trustee; he was a charter member of Millbrook Lodge I.O.O.F., No. 308; and also a charter member of the Millbrook Agricultural Society, having at one time been its president, and to the end of his life an honorary director.

The first year government made available the Certificate of Merit for the member of the local society having the most outstanding record of service, the executive unanimously decided on Mr. Donaldson as the recipient, and went in a body to his home to present the diploma. Every winter the visit, for a social evening together, was repeated, the hospitality of the Donaldson home being well known, and the occasion one much looked forward to by host and guests alike. Several years ago he was a member of Cavan council, and before his retirement held the office of deputy-reeve.

The immediate surviving relatives include: three sons, Percy, of K[illegible]; Harold, of Toronto; and H.



THOMAS DONALDSON

Stuart, on the homestead; and two daughters, Mrs. J. H. Davidson (May), of Camborne; and Evelyn, at home; another daughter, Mrs. Edward Hannah (Amy), was previously deceased. There are seven grandchildren.

The funeral, which was largely attended, and under the auspices of the local Oddfellows' Lodge, took place on Friday, at 2.30 p.m., from his late residence, Lot 23, Concession 5, Cavan, the service for the church being conducted by Rev. A. Raeburn-Gibson, B.D. and for the I.O.O.F. by the chaplain, Rev. A. L. Sisco, and the Noble Grand, Harold Tate.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, the flower-bearers being six nephews: Ray Syer, Cavan; Roy Smith, South Monaghan; William Steinkraus, Peterborough; Harold Donaldson, Junior, Toronto; Stuart Lang, of Peterborough; William Skitch, of Cobourg, and two neighbors, Stuart McGill and George Berry. The pall-bearers were: for the Oddfellows, Brothers J. H. Isbister, Harold Tate, and Roy Greer; and three neighbors, Willis Hall, J. Whittington, and J. H. Might.

Interment was in the family plot at the historic Centreville cemetery.

respondent who accompanied the British forces and reported the Campbeltown went to her appointed end with guns blazing defiantly.

"She defied German submarines, mines and concentrated fire from shore batteries until she crashed through boom defences and charged the dock entrance," he said.

Holman said the British naval forces approached St. Nazaaire while the R.A.F. was bombing the harbor.

"German flak rose into the sky in staccato bursts as we entered the estuary of the river," he declared "Tracer shells went up on either side of us, forming a strange gothic archway of fire.

"Suddenly two powerful searchlights swept the water, picking up the leading ships. The Germans fired a burst of flak. Then came another and a more continuous burst, which the Campbeltown answered.

"In a second the whole river was covered with a fantastic cross-cross pattern of fire....

Through Boom Into Locks.

"The Campbeltown continued on her way under constant fire from both sides of the river and a motor gunboat and blazed her way past the last barrier before the entrance to the drydock.

'The Campbeltown finished her last journey magnificently by shooting up a German flak ship which she left in flames before speeding up to about 20 knots for the charge into the gates. She piled herself up on them with the sureness of a ferret diving into a hole."

Holman's story was borne out by a member of the Campbeltown's crew, who was at a gun station as the destroyer—affectionately known to the British tars as "Old Buck"—dashed into the harbor.

"The engine room crew carried on until after the Campbeltown had crashed into the dock gates and right up to the end they gave her steam for 20 knots," he said.

Holman reported the Germans put up fierce resistance to the commando units put ashore, but said that tremendous explosions indicated British forces had carried out extensive demolition work.

A communique said the pumping station and dock operating gear were destroyed "and other demolition was carried out according to plan."

The Germans acknowledged the British forces "actually succeeded in getting a foothold in certain places in the port area."

Canucks in Escort

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, March 30—(CP Cable).—A Canadian squadron with the R.A.F. Coastal Command helped escort the returning St. Nazaire raiders Saturday, it was disclosed last night, but the fliers said the trip was uneventful.

PO. D. A. Ross of Sherbrooke, Que., said :"All we saw in the way of opposition was a new type of Dornier bomber which sheered off when it spotted us. Apart from that the long trip was absolutely quiet."

One plane flown by Wing Commander A. C. Brown, an Englishman who led the Hudson, suffered a damaged wing, but landed safely.

Other Canadians on the flight included Squadron Leader Fenner Douglas of Ancaster, Ont., an Sgt. J. C. Tate of Brantford, Ont.

to complete Canada's plan for a two-corps overseas army are being trained in Canada and will be brought to Britain as rapidly as ships are available.

The Canadian army will be built up of three infantry divisions, two armored divisions, and two army tank brigades, with all corps army lines of communication and base units additional.

He expressed keen pleasure over his inspection trip to Canada and the United States and declared: 'I feel sure the decisions taken will bring useful results. I don't know of a single thing left unsettled."

Full Aid, All Branches

He said it was evident to him that the government and people of Canada "are thoroughly determined that the maximum support in this war against Hitler will be given and that applies not only to the army but to the air force and, equally important, to industry."

When the general was asked to comment on the British press demand for offensive action against Germany he said: "We don't win wars by sitting in defensive positions, however important they are.

"With the Canadian force we've had two things in front of us — to contribute the maximum of our power to help in the defence of the British Isles and to prepare ourselves for attack on the Germans abroad as the proper opportunity comes.

"Throughout all these long and weary months of waiting we have never lost sight, in training or purpose, of the need for offensive action. We are endeavoring to make our force hard-hitting, mobile and long-range."

He warned that the launching of an offensive was in part a matter of patience because "it doesn't do any good to use troops prematurely. What we want is no blow struck casually, but some continuing effect on the enemy."

He described his survey while in Canada as being divided into three main divisions: basic training of the Canadian Army; industry and its progress on war weapons; development by Canadian industry of new war devices which will make Allied armament more effective.

Canadian industry he said. "can use its wits and develop something better than the Nazis have got."

Amazed at Conversion

He said he was "literally amazed" at the conversion of Canadian industry to wartime production and said that some feel that with the accomplishment of the conversion "the best brains in industry can be spared to develop newer weapons to keep ahead of the enemy."

The general said he had been impressed by the increased rate of production effected through development of methods that in some cases cut down machine time as much as 40 per cent below European standards.

He was struck, too, he said, by the high quality of war products being turned out in Canada.

He mentioned the recent appointment of the Canadian Army technical development board under Col. Victor Sifton, master general of the ordnance, a body designed to put before production the things found wanting in Canadian armament during field tests.

"We have quality," he said. "We must not be impatient at this time. Quantity will come and the big flow of materials is just starting....I don't believe there is anything in war equipment that Canada cannot make."

The endeavor to improve arms is being carried through to the fighting men themselves, so that every man in the army will be able through his own organization to suggest improvements in design in the light of experience gained in the field.

More Equipment

He said he was interested in getting more equipment for men in the army in Canada and more instruction by men in service with the overseas army.

This plan, he said, would provide a constant stream of competent, hand-picked men from the overseas army going to Canada to teach the new army the lessons learned in Britain. Candidates for commissions in the ranks of the overseas army will be returned to Canada for instructions in officers training centres and before returning to Britain will make instructiona tours of eight to nine months.

The soldiers Gen. McNaughton brought with him were from almost all the army services as well as the Royal Canadian Air Force. They were engineers, artillerymen, army service corps troops, men of the chaplain service medical corps and infantry.

They landed after a routine crossing under the protection of the navy which produced no incidents.

Three of eight nursing sisters aboard developed German measles and there was a slight incidence of mumps.

Maple Syrup Is Down 25 Cents To $2.75 Gallon

At $2.75 a gallon maple syrup was down in price 25 cents a gallon from a week ago. Sunny days and frosty nights during the last part of the week flushed the flow of sap, and bush farmers reported substantial canning of syrup.

"I don't think this is going to be a syrup year," one man remarked to the Examiner. "However, we'll know all about it when we put the fires out under the evaporators."

Most of the local producers were represented on the market Saturday. Herb Doig brought about forty gallons of syrup from his bush up near Ketchecum Lake, and John Moon & Son from outside Orillia had a fairly large supply at the general price of the morning, 75 cents a quart or $2.75 a gallon.

Potatoes were about the same price as in the previous week. J. Healey of Westwood quoted White Stars at $2 a bag and Katahdins at $1.75. R. Kinmen tagged his Cobblers and Katahdins at $2.

Erle Tully of Smith was asking $2.50 for his special seed Warbas, Chippewas and Irish Cobblers.

A former Peterborough man now living in Toronto passed up the local syrup. "I can buy all I want in Toronto at $2.50 a gallon," he said, "and I am not going to pay an extra 25 cents here and have to take it back home."

Butter was unchanged at 37 and 38 cents. One woman surprised the reporter by asking 35 cents for butter.

"I don't know what they are asking," she saiad. "I have not been on the market for nearly a year, and as soon as we begin sending to the creamery again, I'll not be in to market."

Butter is obviously worth more than 35 cents a pound, but that exceptional case is mentioned with reservations, because it was humorously suggested to the seller that most of the regulars would hardly welcome her after her long absence if they knew she was two and three cents under the market price. Another woman quoted two pounds of butter at 75 cents.

Eggs ranged all the way from 25 cents a dozen for pullet size to 40 cents for extra special big ones. The general price was 28 to 32 cents, and quite a few baskets of ungraded eggs were noticed at 30 cents.

Broiler chickens were 32 cents; chickens generally were 30 cents a pound and hens around 27 and 28 cents.

Norman Moncrief's supply of apples was reduced to the one variety, Starks at 60 cents a peck or $2 a bushel.

Vegetables of last year's crop were comparatively few, but seemed ample. Carmen Fisico had carrots at 30c, parsnips 35c and beets 25c the six quart baske, and turnips at 5 cents each. New onions were 5c a bunch.

sign a treaty to "cover all necessary matters arising out of the complete transfer of responsibility from British to Indian hands."

Also, he added, it "would make provision in accordance with undertakings given by His Majesty's Government for the protection of racial and religious minorities."

Speaking at a press conference after another day of conferences with Indian leaders which, he said, made him "more cheerful and increasingly cheerful," Sir Stafford made clear the offer was tentative as yet.

All or Nothing.

He said it was only a declaration of what Britain's policy would be "if it met with sufficiently general and favorable acceptance from various sections of Indian opinion."

The Indians have a choice of all or nothing, Sir Stafford stated bluntly: "The scheme goes through as a whole or is rejected as a whole."

He promised an explanation of the plan to the people in a broadcast to-night.

The favorable portent, besides his own optimism, is the belief in political circles that the left and Right-wing Leaders in the All-India Congress Party—Gandhi's — will combine in favor of the plan. The Moslem League, second largest of India's organized parties is expected generally also to support it.

Gandhi was one of the Indian leaders with whom Sir Stafford talked yesterday as he neared the limit of his time here, set for the end of the week. Others were Pandit Govind Belabh Pant and B. G. Kher, former Premiers of the United Provinces and Bombay.

Soviets Rush

Moscow last was raided March 6. Prior to that, the city's alarms had not sounded since Dec. 23.

Germans Still Hang On.

The Germans are stubbornly holding strong points at Staraya, Russa, where their 16th army is encircled, and at Rzhev, but the Russians have driven a wedge deep into the territory between those cities. However, the entire front has remained substantially unchanged for weeks despite the heavy fighting.

The unsuccessful German counter-attacks were said to have been aimed at relieving the Nazis in Staraya Russa but instead the Russians said their plight was increasingly difficult.

Russian soldiers and tanks on the muddy southern front have captured 10 villages in recent days.

Izvestia, Soviet government organ, said one Ukraine village identified as "Zh" was taken in a surprise dawn attack which caught German officers and troops at breakfast.

In a nearby village, Izvestia added, a German battalion was annihilated and the headquarters of the 211th infantry division was captured.

Tass News Agency said 12 districts on the Smolensk front had been cleared of Germans.

The Russians honored guerillas on the Leningrad front with a special communique announcing that in eight months they had killed 16,075 German soldiers and 643 officers, including three generals, and captured or destroyed huge quantities of war material.

LOGISTICS

Strategy is the planning of warfare.

Tactics is the execution of those plans.

Logistics, the third branch of military science, is the supplying of everything necessary to strategy and tactics—in the right amount, at the right place, at the right time.

Now, in total war, we must apply the science of Logistics to all of our activities as a nation—civilian as well as military. WE-ALL are part of the Victory Program.

Our supply lines are literally life lines of the United Nations. Manpower and munition-power are the controlling factors.

Today, Logistics dictates strategy—determines tactics.

The governments of the United Nations have appropriated billions of dollars but they cannot appropriate one single second of time.

Time favors those who appreciate it as the priceless commodity it now is.

In war, when we save time we save lives—and we make our individual contribution to Victory.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

MILK FOR BRITAIN.
Pupils of the Warsaw public school on March 17 staged a St. Patrick's tea, sale and program from which they realized the sum of $10. This sum they have turned over to J. A. MacDonald, treasurer of the Milk for Britain fund. Fred Hampton is the principal of the school. A donation of $1.00 has also been received from Warden Lean of Burleigh and Anstruther.

WELL-KNOWN TO THE TRADE.
Garage owners and operators in this city and suburban area will be glad to learn that S. D. Ballard, manager of the U.M.S. Division, General Motors, is scheduled to address the local Garage Operators' Association at the Empress Hotel on Monday night. He will probably advise on recent war developments as it affects the garage industry.

BETTER HIDE THEM.
Many veterans of the last great war, who enlisted when they were seventeen or eighteen have been given the go-by by the recruiting officers because they walked into the recruiting office displaying the Mons ribbon. One veteran who is just 43 years of age, stated he took off his medal ribbons, and hopes thus to get consideration as a recruit.

POSTED ON DUTY.
Sgt. Bud Clarke, of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, arrived home on Saturday after many months of intensive training in England. He wears the shoulder badge indicating proficiency in the handling of Bren Gun Carriers, and it is understood he will be posted as an instructor to a camp in Quebec. He was formerly city traffic officer on the Peterborough Police Force, and has been given leave of absence for the duration.

DO IT TO-DAY, GENTLEMEN.
The ladies who toil every week collecting and sorting salvage down at South Central school, are wondering if there isn't at least two men in the city who will come down a few evenings during the week and operate the paper baler. The work is just a little too strenuous for the women, and they feel the men might do this much as a contribution to the war effort, and get some good exercise at the same time. Any man who will volunteer, should telephone Mrs. P. J. Kearns, at 4207, Mrs. Clair Collins at 5413 or Mrs Paige Rowell at 6767.

PLENTY OF SNOW.
Tom Ephgrave motored up to Balsam Lake on Saturday and reports there is about three feet of snow in the woods in different locations. The roads will be impassable, off the main highway if a heavy rain comes, he believed. The road down from Wilberforce is very muddy but passable.

GRAIN ELEVATOR BURNS.
The grain elevator at Mariposa station owned by Hogg and Lytle burned to the ground on Saturday afternoon with the loss of considerable grain. The buildings burned two years ago, and now are razed to the ground again. Fire fighters were unable to cope with the flames, which raged furiously for more than three hours.

NO LONG ADJOURNMENTS
When two local men charged in police court today with being drunk pleaded not guilty and asked for an adjournment, Magistrate Langley refused to grant the request. "I have been issuing warnings that these cases will have to go on," he said. However the police were not ready to go ahead this morning and the cases had to be adjourned—but only until tomorrow morning. The two men who pleaded guilty to a drunk charge today were fined $10 and $2.50 costs.

COLLIDE AT CORNER
Cars driven by Walter Killoran, Lakefield Hotel, Lakefield, and Pte. Stanley Lockey, Military Training Centre met in collision at Brock and George streets Saturday night. Lockey had been driving east on Brock street and was making a turn to go north on George street when his car met in collision with Killoran's automobile which was travelling north. The damage was not extensive.

CLOSED ON SUNDAY.
Yesterday was the last Sunday, until further notice, that the Public Library will be open from 2 until 5 p.m.

AIRMEN'S NAMES WANTED.
The Women's Auxiliary of the R.C.A.F. in Peterborough is desirous of getting the names of all men from this city and district who are serving with the Royal Canadian Air Force. Names are to be telephoned to Mrs. G. H. Roper, 4327, or Mrs. C. H. McWilliams, 7602.

HOME ON LEAVE.
L/Cpl. Eric Hogg of the Irish Regiment of Canada is home on two weeks leave. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Hogg, 91 Brock street and is slated to take an instructor's course at Farnham, Quebec.

YOUNG WIFE CHARGED.
Arrested in Picton, Doris Marie Donahey, 18 year old Peterborough woman, was charged in police court this morning with taking $40, the property of her husband, with intent to desert him. The young wife, who told Magistrate Langley that she had been married three years ago, when she was only 15, pleaded not guilty and the case was adjourned until Wednesday.

MORE CONFUSION.
A great many people have the wrong conception of the changes affecting new suits. The major changes which are in effect now are as follows: No trouser cuffs, no trouser pleats, no double breasted suits. The lapels are the same as on the old styles. No vents or buttons on the coat cuffs. Otherwise the suits remain the same with perhaps a few minor changes but they have not changed to the extent some people believe.

WAS HEARD CLEARLY.
Captain Rick Roberts, serving in the British Isles with an artillery unit, was on the air Saturday night. The message came through very clearly, and he said in part that he was feeling well and that the unit was highly organized and ready for action any time.

NO STEEL FURNITURE.
Existing stocks of metal furniture such as tubular chorme chairs, and tables are all that will be available for the duration. Local furniture dealers are unable to purchase any more of this furniture, but most of them have some stock on hand. The order is that none will be available at the end of April, but actually no new stock can be had now.

30 UNITED WITH ST. ANDREW'S
At a largely attended communion service in St. Andrew's United Church on Sunday 12 young people who had been trained in a series of preparation classes by the minister lasting eight weeks and who had fulfilled all the tests of the United Church were received into membership. F. E. Kerr, B.A., clerk of session assisted the minister, Rev. Dr. E. W. Young at the reception service. Eighteen adults coming from other congregations joined by certificate.

A TRAFFIC ACCIDENT
As Sidney Young, driving a car owned by Miss Sarah German, 521 Hunter street west on Charlotte street reached the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets, there was a collision with a car driven south on Aylmer street by Elmer Worr, 184 Lappin avenue. The steering-rod and fender of Miss German's car and the left rear fender and left rear hub cap of the other car suffered.

GASOLINE STOLEN
A quantity of gasoline was stolen from a car and a truck owned by J. L. P. Smith during Saturday night. They were parked behind Smith's store on Water street.

BICYCLIST IS HURT
Jack Heffernan, 18 Brioux avenue, received a cut on his right hand Saturday when he was knocked off his bicycle in a collision with a motor car at Rink and Aylmer streets. The cyclist was riding north on Aylmer street and Clarence Haywood, 98 Stewart street was driving his car west on Rink street. Hayood swerved his car to the right, trying to avert hitting the bicyclist but the two vehicles came together and Heffernan was tossed off.

BAILIEBORO SPEED LIMIT
The speed limit through the village of Bailieboro on Highway 28 has been set at 30 miles an hour and signs to that effect have been erected on both sides of the village. Motorists are warned that the speed limit will be enforced strictly.

EXTRA DELIVERY SATURDAY
Special permisison for all retailers to make an additional delivery on Saturday, April 4, has been granted by the Administrator of Services, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, it was announced today. This action has been taken in consideration of the previous day, Good Friday, being a public holiday. The permission for an additional delivery applies only to April 4, it is stressed. Otherwise deliveries are limited to one a day.

RECEIVE COMMUNION
More than 100 young people of St. Peter's Parish, members of the Junior League received Holy Communion in a body at the Cathedral at 7:30 Sunday morning. Following mass, they went to the K. of C. hall on Simcoe street for breakfast, and folowing breakfast, V. J. McElderry, K.C., County Crown Attorney addressed the young people. He spoke on the "Dream of Gerantius" by Cardinal Newman.

Elders Honored In Unique Church Service

A congregation of more than one thousand persons paid a reverential tribute to its elders, especially to Mrs. Joseph Milburn, at the Sunday morning service at George Street United Church.

Mrs. Milburn will be one hundred years old next Thursday, and although she was unable to be present with the congregation, a deep and grateful sentiment of respect pervaded the extraordinary service, and reached out to Mrs. Milburn in the tangible medium of a congregational resolution accompanied by beautiful flowers.

Rev. J. R. Trumpour of Bridgenorth, secretary of the Presbytery, conveyed its message to the congregation and to Mrs. Milburn and other aged members of the church, and the sermon for this special occasion was preached by the minister, Rev. H. L. Roberts. The hymns chosen were Mrs. Milburn's favorites: "What a friend we have in Jesus!", "O Love that will not let me go," and "Abide With Me."

Many sermons preached during the year are directed to youth encountering life's problems for the first time; less frequently other sermons are intended to help those in middle life, sometimes regarded as a dangerous period, Dr. Roberts said.

"This morning we are preaching to the elderly people of our congregation, to the aged. Quite a number of the members are around the age of inety years, and some of them are able to attend church reguarly. I visited them during the week, and I bring from them their message of love to the congregation."

The Bible runs the gamut of all experience, Mr. Roberts said. It mentioned a great deal about the aged. It related the fortunes of Joshua who lived to seventy-five years, of Moses to 120, Jacob 149, Isaac 180, and of Methusaleh who lived to the extreme age of 969.

"And it shall come to pass at evening time it shall be light," was the text from Zacharia quoted by Mr. Roberts. Treasures of the evening light of life were in the mind and the memory, in character and in the abiding ministry of that life, and the ultimate treasure of an immortal hope.

Dr. Roberts quoted from Browning's "Rabbi Ben Ezra":

"Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be
The last of life from which the first was made.
My times are in God's hands,
Who said a whole I plan.
Youth shows but half.
Trust God,
See all, nor be afraid."

Toward the end of the service G. C. Staples moved a resolution of congratulation to Mrs. Milburn on attaining her one hundred birthday this week. It was seconded by Alex. Stewart and was presented to H. G. Walker to Rev. Mr. Trumpour to the lady the congregation was honoring, accompanied by the unanimous sentiment of the congregation.

The flowers from the congregation and from the ladies of the church were dedicated by Mr. Roberts, and with a letter from the congregation were delivered to Mr. Trumpour to be taken to Mrs. Milburn.

Many farmers from Smith township, old friends of the Milburn family, were present at the service.

MILLBROOK

Edward Eakins Passes Away

MILLBROOK, March 30.—(ENS). —The death of Ted Eakins as he was familiarly called, took place with startling suddenness on Sunday, March 29 following a comparatively brief period of ill health in his 60th year. Deceased was the youngest son of the Samuel Eakins and his wife Sarah Jane Richardson, early residents of Millbrook. He was born and brought up in this village where all his life had been spent. For many years past Mr. Eakins carried on a large and successful hardware business and in connection with this was agent for the Brantford Roofing Company, obtaining many contracts in the village and throughout the countryside.

In politics he was a staunch Conservative, and in religion was a member of Grace Presbyterian church and active in its interests and support. He is survived by his widow whse maiden name was Ethel Alice Ferguson, a niece of the late Squire Alex Ferguson, a prominent business man of this community in its earlier years, and by one daughter, Mary at home, also by two brothers, Councillor J. R. Eakins of Millbrook and William J., of Toronto, and by four sisters, Mrs. John Dawson, Millbrook, Mrs. William Turner of Victoria, B.C., Mrs Henry J. Armstrong of Toronto and Mrs. J. R. Arthur Mulligan of Cleveland, Ohoi.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday, April 1, at 2 p.m. from his late residence, Anne street, the service being in charge of Rev. Raeburn Gibson, B.D. Interment in the Presbyterian cemetery, Millbrook.

W.R.L. Blackwell Architect For Station CHEX

Walter Blackwell of the firm of W. and W. R. L. Blackwell, Peterborough, designed the studios and transmitter house of radio station CHEX, which is going on the air on Tuesday night. In designing the new studios, Mr. Blackwell has given to the Peterborough Broadcasting Company the finest in Canada. Building radio studios is an entirely different job than other construction work, for it is in the radio work that the transmission of sound has to be taken into account and the studios must be as nearly soundproof as possible. Radio engineers who have already visited CHEX have been loud in their praise of Mr. Blackwell's work.

Woman Injured As Cars Crash

As the result of a traffic accident at Armour and Park Hill Roads early Sunday morning, a woman was injured and had to be taken to hospital, two automobile were damaged, one considerably and a driver faced a charge of reckless driving in police court this morning.

George Faiers, 209 Bethune street was driving his car east on Park Hill Road and as he reached Armour Road his automobile was struck by another machine driven north on Armour Road by David McMurray, R.R. 4, Lakefield.

Mrs. Faiers who was a passenger in her husband's car was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital suffering from shock and possible internal injuries.

After the collision McMurray's car travelled across the intersection until it crashed into a post on the side of the street, badly damaging the headlights, bumper, windshield and fenders.

Constable Leo Murphy who investigated the accident arrested McMurray on a charge of reckless driving and arraigned before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning the accused pleaded guilty.

As Magistrate Langley wished to hear some evidence before sentencing the prisoner, McMurray was remanded until tomorrow for sentence, with bail fixed at $500.

Final Parade Tuesday Night

It is expected that a large number of members of the Prince of Wales Rangers will be on parade to-morrow night at the armoury when the regiment will hold its last parade under the present set-up. The annual pay parade of the unit will be held immediately following route march.

Members of the Prince of Wales Rangers, whether they are now in the active unit rejected or members of the reserve unit, are invited to attend this last night together. The parade will fall in at the armoury at 7.45 and will be followed by a route march through sections of the city.

Obituaries

EDWARD J. McEWEN
A retired farmer and a resident of Peterborough for the past 22 years, Edward James McEwen, 20 Manning avenue, died Monday morning at his home, after a chronic illness of some months. He had been in fair health during the past few weeks, and observed his 73rd birthday on March 16.

Mr. McEwen was born in Chicago, a son of the late James B. McEwen, and Mary Rome, and he swept the greater part of his life in Smith township where he farmed with considerable success. He was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Jennie Graham, and one brother Roy McEwen, now living in Regina, Sask.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday, April 1, from the family residence at 20 Manning avenue at two o'clock in the afternoon with interment in Little Lake Cemetery. Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. J. D. Smart, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

WILLIAM J. SKUCE
The death of William J. Skuce occurred this morning at his home 122 Lock street. He had been ill only a comparatively short time from a general debility associated with his advanced years.

Mr. Skuce was born at Mount Horeb, and after farming for many years and retired and moved to Peterborough. He was employed for quite a long time in the meat department of R. C. Braund's store at Park and Albert streets, and subsequently at Latimer's store, Aylmer and McDonnel streets.

In both those neighbors Mr. Skuce has become well known and made many friends. He had lived for years on Albert street, and had won the respect of the residents of that section of the city. His death will be greatly regretted by a large number of friends. A man of sound judgment in many ways he was one of the minority of people everywhere who doubted the continuance of the economic order of life that was flowing along so expansively in the decade after the last war, and in fact predicted closely in its incidence the financial collapse and the long depression which set in with it.

Mr. Skuce is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. H. Gould of Edmonton and Mrs. Herb Frost of this city, and one son, Harlan L. Skuce of Philadelphia; also by one sister, Mrs. J. W. Shaw of Oshawa, and two brothers, Fred of Drumheller, Alta., and Matthew of Redlands, Cal. He was a member of Trinity United Church.

The funeral of Mr. Skuce will take place Wednesday at 2.30 p.m. from the funeral home of A. Comstock & Sons, 305 Water street, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Dr. Easton will conduct the service.

Ivan Fletcher Goes On Active Service

As indication of the increasing strength of the Prince of Wales Rangers was seen in Part 2 orders this morning with the appointment of two acting platoon commanders for platoons 4 and 5. They are Lieut. J. J. Urie with platoon 4 and Lieut. L. Bateman with platoon 5.

A steady flow of applications is coming to the armoury daily for enlistment with the Rangers but each day sees a percentage of the men rejected for various reasons.

Pte. Ivan Fletcher, Keene bus driver and member of the Prince of Wales Rangers was observed this morning on the drill floor with the unit as he went through the body bending exercises. He held the rank of sergeant in the Rangers (RF) and he will probably receive his promotions shortly. As a matter of fact, the only moan heard during P.T. was from the bus driver. He developed a charleyhorse.

On Friday and Saturday, fourteen men presented themselves for enlistment with the unit.

Those taken on strength last Friday not including those who applied for enlistment that day are:

KEITH GERALD NELSON, single. Next of kin, mother, Mrs. Annie Nelson, 348 Stewart street, Peterborough.
HAROLD ALBERT CAMPBELL, married. Next of kin, wife, Mrs. Frances Aileen Campbell, 467 Albert street, Peterborough, Ont.
ROBERT VERNON SMALLWOOD, single. Next of kin, mother, Mrs. Edna Smallwod, Baldwin, Ont.
JOSEPH BERKELEY BOYLE, married. Next of kin, wife, Mrs. Wylma Mary Boyle, 548 Homewood avenue, Peterborough, Ont.

Those taken on strength last Thursday were:

WILMOT ANDREW MacFARLAND, single. Next of kin, mother, Mrs. Lemmine MacFarland, Fenelon Falls, Ont.
DAVID ARTHUR WARNER, single. Next of kin, grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Higgin, 496 Glendennan, avenue, Toronto, Ont.
ELGIN CLARE WHITE, single. Next of kin, mother, Mrs. Bertha White, 319 Burnham street, Peterborough, Ont.
WILLIAM CLAYTON DUNLOP, single. Next of kin, mother, Mrs. Blanche Dunlop, 503 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont.

In the latest list of appointments and promotions, Private A. E. Carravaggie and Private H. V. Bateman are appointed lance-corporals.

Police Raided Gas Station

A squad of provincial and city police raided a gasoline station and refreshment booth on the Warsaw Road early Sunday morning and as a result two men faced liquor charges before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

Peter Petrakos, chef, who said he was born in Greece, was charged with keeping or exposing liquor for sale.

Defended by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C. he pleaded not guilty to the charged and was remanded until April 9th when the crown was not ready to proceed today. Bail was fixed at $500.

Archie Barbeau, 66, was charged with selling liquor and he, too, pleaded not guilty and was remanded in his own bail of $500 until the same date.

Provincial Constable Price Morris, Provincial Traffc Offcer L. A. McClure and Constable Leo Murphy and John Morrow took part in the raid.

City May Secure Another Site For Incinerator

An incinerator site alternative to the Townsend street property may be mentioned at a meeting of the property committee this afternoon, Alderman Swanston remarked to the Examiner this morning.

"City Engineer Parsons will have a report for us one of these days, and from what he has already mentioned to me there is a possibility that we may have to look around for a new location for the incinerator," Alderman Swanston said.

"Mr. Parsons finds that footings for the new building and especially for the big brick smoke stack will have to be carried down from 15 to 20 feet. I am told that an estimate of the cost of that kind of foundation is around $800 a foot.

On account of the height and weight of the chimney and the need of a sound basis for the incinerating plant, the foundation is highly important. There had been some mention some months ago, when we were talking about the contract, that we might run into trouble down there because most of the city yard was largely filed in. Long ago there used to be a wide bay there."

The Townsend street property is one of the most desirably central locations for an incinerator that could be found. In fact it is the only one, and most of the aldermen in recent councils for the last four or five years have been agreed that the property is ideal for that incinerating purpose.

Alderman Swanston said he was already looking around for some other place to be prepared for the possibility of having to move, and has already been over the old Hilliard farm, owned by the city, up near the Queen Mary Hospital.

It is recalled that when Fred T. Tuggey was chairman of the property committee he had convinced himself that the best plan was to motorize the department and get a new site a short distance over the Douro boundary of the city.

Breeders Given Certificates

Certificates of superior production, issued by the Canadian Holstein-Friesian Club, were presented Saturday to the owners of five Peterborough cows which had won this special distinction last year.

Three certificates went to Joseph Tully and two to Norman McConkey. The presentations were made by Robert Holtby of Port Perry.

The meeting of the local Holstein breeders Saturday afternoon emphasized the fact that although the Peterborough Club has only fifty members it won five certificates, whereas Peel county branch, with 200 members was awarded only six.

C. D. Graham, chief of the extension service of the Holstein Association showed a film of "Black and White" cattle from Prince Edward Island to British Columbia, and gave an instructive talk generally on present day problems facing the industry.

Mr. Graham said the holstein Association of Canada was the strongest breed organization in the British Empire, that it was truly democratic in its structure and operations, and that it exercised a strong influence on the agricultural policies of this country. He also said that it could be a great deal stronger and more useful if each member would assume a full measure of responsibility toward the association.

Stewart Nelson presided at the Saturday meeting in the office of F. C. Patterson, agricultural representative.

Tire Blows Out Car Ditched

When a tire on the automobile in which they were riding blew out and the machine went into the ditch and turned over after striking a sign post and a telephone pole, two men escaped with slight injuries and two other passengers were unhurt.

The car, driven by Francis Asta, Nova Scotia apartments, was travelling north along Highway 28 when the accident occurred 300 yards south of Gill's butcher shop, south of Lakefield.

When the tire blew out the car went out of control, ran along the ditch, struck a highway curve sign and then a telephone post and finally turned over, coming to rest with its wheels in the air.

Gerald Markley, R.C.A.F., Trenaon, sustained a cut on his face and Asta was suffering from chest injuries after the crash.

Provincial Traffic Officer L. A. McClure and Provincial Constable Price Morris investigated the accident which occurred early Sunday morning.

LEAVE IT TO THE MEN.
Dagwood of the comic strip, has a penchant for getting into embarrassing situation, but there is a salesman working for the Examiner Radio Station CHEX who felt his ears burning this week. He found an apartment after much hunting, but his furniture cannot be delivered for some weeks. His wife arrived on Thursday so he took advantage of a fellow worker's offer of some furniture which the latter had stored here. He obtained a bed, table, chairs, gas stove and other essentials but forgot the linen. The friend told him everything was there and to just help himself. He did, but being a man knew little about it, and when he arrived at the apartment with all the so-called linen, his wife explained to him, that he had brought bedding and linen to completely outfit a nursery, and they have no children.—McG.

Hall's School Gives Aid To War Victims

The people of the Fairview district have been generous supporters of the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, so it is only natural that their children should wish to follow their example, for example is ever a better instructor in contrast to that of precept. Situated close to Fairview church is Hall's school, where children, 26 in number, are preparing themselves for their future responsibilities, and the teacher of this school, Miss M. O. Golden, donated a blanket, for which the children sold tickets for a draw, and together with some $2.00 which they saved from their valentine party they managed to go over the $30 mark, which was equally divided between this fund and the Red Cross, to give them the credit of $15.20 which is acknowledged in the lists for today.

The draw was made at a social evening held in the school on March 12 in honor of Mr. and Mrs. L. Martin, who were celebrating a wedding anniversary, by their little four year old son Jimmy, during entertainment which included games of Bingo and a number of comic stunts.

The devotion of the Employees of the Brinton Peterborough Carpet Co. Ltd. to the cause of helping the people of Britain is really wonderful. Today there is listed their forty-first contribution for $10. This particular donation included $2.30 made at a one cent bingo party held in the lunch room on March 26, and their grand total now stands at $530, bringing them closer to the per capita average of $2 per person of the employees.

On Tuesday night a refreshment booth will be operated in the Hall immediately adjoining the Gym in the Collegiate Auditorium for the Dance being held in conjunction with the opening broadcast of Station CHEX, and Mrs. C. H. Crouter of Edison Avenue, and Mrs. Fred White of McGill street will be in charge of this particular feature, the net proceeds of which will all come to the fund. They will have soft drinks, sandwiches and confections for sale.

Drunk Sentenced To Three Months

"You have set up something of a record," Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., remarked to a local man who had been convicted in police court this morning of having as a third offender been drunk in a public place. The accused was sentenced to three months in jail.

He pleaded not guilty but after Magistrate Langley had heard the testimony of Constable John Morrow and John Stevenson and the story told by the accused himself registered a conviction.

When the two previous convictions were admitted it developed that after the accused had been convicted for the first time he had been allowed three days in which to pay his fine, but was arrested for the second time almost at once and sentenced to jail for a month as a second offender. On the night he got out of jail he was arrested as a third offender.

Men 18 to 45 Banned From Some Jobs

Failure of people to read news articles concerning the new regulations in the National Mobilization of man-power has caused considerable confusion, and already men from the non-essential occupations are trying to obtain employment in other non-essential businesses and are being turned down by the managers.

One case in point concerns a salesman who is 42 years of age and who sought employment in a local factory which falls into the non-essential category the manager of the factory pointed out that regulations do not permit him to hire anyone between the ages of 17 and 45 unless that person has a rejection slip from the army, or an apparent disability that would prevent him from serving in the active forces.

To free men from service with armed forces, the Government has forbidden entry into a wide variety of occupations of physically fit men of military age.

These prohibited occupations include: book-keepers, cashiers, stenographers, typists, clerks, messengers, salesmen, cab drivers, and any job in the wholesale, retail, real estate or advertising business.

Any occupation in, or directly associated with entertainment, recreational or personal service, including but not restricted to theatres, film agencies, motion picture companies, clubs, bowling alleys, pool rooms, sports, barbering and hairdressing, domestic service, dyeing, cleaning and pressing, laundering, hotels and lodging houses, baths, restaurants, cafes and taverns, shoe shining, guide service and funeral service.

Any occupation in the manufacture or production of:

1. Biscuits, confectionery, cocoa;
2. Aerated and mineral waters, and other beverages;
3. Bread and bakery products;
4. Liquors, wines, beer;
5. Rubber products;
6. Tobacco, cigars, cigarettes;
7. Leather and fur products;
8. Textile products;
9. Furniture and upholstering;
10. Photographq;
11. Printing, publishing and engraving;
12. Radios, refrigerators, washing machines and vacuum cleaners;
13. Jewellery and watchmaking;
14. Pottery and china;
15. Soaps and toilet preparations and articles;
16. Mattresses;
17. Musical instruments;
18. Barber shop and beauty shop equipment;
19. Cameras and films;
20. Sporting goods;
21. Games, toys and novelties.

Any occupation on the repair of clothing, boots, shoes, furniture and household equipment, jewellery, watches, musical instruments.

These regulations went into effect on Monday, March 23rd, and are retroactive to that date.

The rules do not mean that any man of military age in any of the occupations named above must quit his job, but it does mean that if he quits the job, he cannot obtain employment with another firm doing the same work. He will have to either join the army, or obtain work in an essential industry.

"UNREALITY"
"Unreality" was the subject for the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ Scientist in Peterborough on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "If a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand." Selections from the Bible included the following from I John 5:21, "Little children, keep yourselves from idols." Correlative citations from the Christian Science Textbook included the following: "The human mind has been an idolater from the beginning, having other gods and believing in more than the one Mind."

IN MEMORIAM

PATTERSON.—In loving memory fo Archie Wellington Patterson, who was killed one year ago today, March 30, 1941.

His faint, last wish we would like to have heard
And breathed in his ear one last parting word.
Only those who have lost are able to tell
The pain of the heart in not saying farewell.
—Fondly remembered by his Wife and Children.

KEMPT.—In loving memory of my dear father, Alfred Kempt, who passed away a year ago to-day, March 30, 1941.

Dear father passed beyond us,
'Twas but a year ago to-day;
It seems more like a hundred years
Since God took him away.
I watched beside his bedside
As the lonely hours passed,
And how my heart was broken
When I saw you breathe your last.
—Ever remembered by his daughter, Pauline Kempt.

PATTERSON.—In loving memory of Archie Wellington Patterson, a dear son and brother, who passed away one year ago to-day, March 30, 1941.

Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear,
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
The pearly gates were opened
A gentle voice said, "Come,"
And with farewells unspoken
He gently entered home.
—Sadly missed by Mother, Father and Sisters.

CENTS OR SENSE?

IN MEMORIAM

JEWELL, John.—In loving memory of a dear son and brother, killed in tragic death one year ago today, March 30.

Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break, but all in vain.
To have, to love, and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never:
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.
—Fondly remembered by Mother, Father, and two Sisters.

JEWELL.—In loving memory of my dear husband, John Earl Jewell (Jack), who died suddenly March 30, 1941, one year ago to-day.

There is a wife who misses you sadly
And finds the time long since you went,
And I think of you daily and hourly
But try to be brave and content.
But the tears that I shed in silence
And I breathe a sigh of regret,
For you were mine, and I remember,
Though all the world forget.
—His loving wife, Vera.

DAWSON.—In loving memory of Mother, Father, and Brother, who passed away five years ago.

If all the world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the ones we loved so well
Come smiling through our door.
Their lives were that of sacrifice,
Their hearts were true and tender,
They toiled so hard for those they loved
And left us to remember.
—Ever fondly remembered—Jean and Ruth.

ivory. She was wearing something white and very flimsy, and with the delicate odor of scent, that gave her an aura of cool freshness which made Allan uncomfortably self-conscious. He hoped he didn't look quite the mess he felt—dusty, disheveled, sticky and steaming from every pore.

"Any letters or messages for me, Sun Su?"

Her voice was deep and rich and soft, so that Allan was moved to think of liquid velvet. Or was it more reminiscent of the smooth sweetness of honey pouring from a jug? Though her question was addressed to the Chinese, her dark eyes were frankly regarding himself; so frankly as almost to be a trifle bold.

"There is nothing," Sun Su. "And, senorita, may I have the pleasure of introducing an American guest—Senorita Minor, this is Senor Steele."

"I am so glad to meet you, Senor Steele," said the warm voice in Spanish. "At this season, a new face in San Saba is welcome."

Allan removed his panama and swept the lady a bow. In view of what he knew of her, he decided a somewhat florid compliment might not be out of place in this somewhat florid country.

"This is the Inn of One Thousand Delights, senorita," he declared fervently. "Now I have met the one, I care nothing about the thousand!"

It got past. She smiled bewitchingly.

Berne, March 30 (AP).

BULGARIAN sources declared today that King Boris has agreed to Bulgaria's active participation in the war at the insistence of Hitler, who has been reported campaigning in the Balkans for additional manpower to hurl against Russia this spring.

The King's decision, these sources said, was approved yesterday by a majority group of the Bulgarian parliament which usually considers important matters before they are put to actual vote.

Home Lessons in Designing Clothes

Starting With Own Dresses

Do friends admire your taste in clothes? Dress designing may be your hidden talent!

Why not see if you can't design something for yourself? Our home instruction book shows how professional designers go about it.

You may start your design with just an idea and a straight piece of muslin. This muslin you pin to half of a dress form and cut out at neck and arms to form a foundation pattern.

Then comes the creative part! On the foundation you suggest becoming lines with pins and colored thread, moving them around until you're satisfied.

To add height, you might indicate diagonal pockets or plan on vertical lines or stripes.

And, if you can design clothes for yourself, you can do it for others if you like! Designers are paid well!

Our 24-page instruction book tells how to make an original design, take measurements, cut foundation and working patterns. Tells how to market your ability.

For your copy of "Dress Designing Self-Taught" send 15 cents in coins or stamps to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of instruction book.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

LONE HONORS VALUABLE

UNGUARDED KINGS and queens have a value at No Trump which they do not possess in suit contracts. Besides the service they render in trump declarations, of promoting lower honors to the rank of trick takers, they frequently result in stopping the run of a suit by the defenders, through constituting a stopper. This is due to the habits of opening leaders, who have learned by experience the advisability of frequently leading from high honors against No Trumpers — leads which they would not consider against suit contracts.

North: ♠ Q ♥ A K 7 ♦ A K 10 9 8 6 ♣ K Q 2

West: ♠ K J 10 9 3 ♥ Q 10 6 2 ♦ 3 ♣ 6 5 3

East: ♠ 8 7 6 4 2 ♥ J 8 4 ♦ Q J 5 ♣ A 7

South: ♠ A 5 ♥ 9 5 3 ♦ 7 4 2 ♣ J 10 9 8 4

(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	2 ♦	Pass	3 ♣
Pass	3 ♦	Pass	3 NT

North, a keen bidder, said afterward that he would not have made a two-bid, forcing to game, on his hand if that singleton spade had been a lower card. Because of its probable value at a No Trump game, he considered that such a bid was justified, since South might have enough to make game opposite that big hand and yet still not have enough to answer a call of 1-Diamond.

It is a good thing that singleton was the queen. West led his spade J, the Q winning. After South gave up a club to the A, he won the returned spade with the A and then ran eight more tricks, taking a total of 10 and thus gaining one above his contract. Just notice what would have happened if that singleton spade had been lower. With only one spade stopper, South would have been set as soon as he lost the lead.

West could have beaten the contract by leading the spade K, but in the long run that would be losing bridge. Over the span of some dozens of No Trump contracts bid as this was, the J would prove the most profitable.

Tomorrow's Problem

North: ♠ K 7 5 ♥ A 9 8 4 2 ♦ 7 ♣ Q 10 8 2

West: ♠ J 10 9 4 3 ♥ Q J 6 ♦ J 4 2 ♣ A 3

East: ♠ Q 8 2 ♥ 10 7 3 ♦ Q 10 9 ♣ K 9 7 5

South: ♠ A 6 ♥ K 5 ♦ A K 8 6 5 3 ♣ J 6 4

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

Can you express, in clear-cut simple terms, the reasons why declarer should establish a certain suit, immediately after the spade lead against his 3-No Trumps on this deal, instead of some other suit?

British Sub Returns From Year's Prowl

Il Duce's "Mare Nostrom" was a happy hunting ground for the British submarine Utmost, which returned to Britain recently. The crew of the Utmost is shown on her deck with their own skull and bones flag on which varied designs record their exploits during a year-long tour of the Mediterranean. During that time he torpedoed and almost certainly sank an Italian cruiser; torpedoed seven enemy supply ships and a deeply laden Italian transport which blew up; carried out successful gun action against a damaged enemy supply ship laden with motor transport; rescued a Blenheim bomber crew of four and carried out other successful exploits.

Special Watch On Gas Pumps As Coupon Check

OTTAWA, March 30 — (CP). — Plenty of warning has been given the motoring public, Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle pointed out yesterday, adding that he does not intend to put on extra staffs to handle the last-minute rush of the thousands who have not yet obtained their gasoline ration books.

The Oil Controller said yesterday it was not possible to put on extra staffs as all applications had to be checked, and therefore no speeding up process was possible. Each one would have to take his turn, he declared.

Next Wednesday, when the rationing system goes into effect, spotters will be on the watch all across Canada to see whether gasoline is sold without coupons.

"If a service station is caught in this or any other infraction of the rationing order it will be padlocked and the owner will be subject to very severe penalties," Mr. Cottrelle saiad. "The motorist will also be subject to the same heavy penalties and any future application he might make for a ration book may be refused.

"If a motorist fails to get his book by next Wednesday the fault will be his. If a motorist has no ration book he gets no gasoline. Ample warning has been given and every motorist has had sufficient time."

Norwood W.I. Holds Euchre

NORWOOD, March 30 — (ENS). —A very successful euchre was held by the Women's Institute of Norwood on Wednesday evening in the Orange Hall, at which eight tables were played. The successful contestants were: First ladies, tied, Mrs. J. Parker and Mrs. Harry McConnell, and the cut for prizes resulted in Mrs. J. Parker being awarded first prize and Mrs. Harry McConnell second; the first man's Miss Greta Buck, playing as man, and second man's prize, Cecil Watson. The consolation prizes were awarded to Mrs. K. Edmunds and Alexander Innis.

The money raised was for the war work of the Institute. The Sewing Committee of the local W.I. meets each Thursday in the Orange Hall, when some of the ladies piece blocks for quilts, while others quilt or tie down quilts. Other sewing is also done at the meetings.

Work completed since June, 1941, includes seven quilts to the Salvation Army two quilts to the I.O.D.E., one quilt to the Red Cross, as well as 14 quilts on hand to be given to the Salvation Army when called for. Nine quilts were sold to raise funds for war work, and six were also quilted to raise money for the same purpose.

Two girls' dresses, one pair of boy's pants, and a cushion top were also sent to the Salvation Army.

A donation of two quilts were received from Mrs. Dan Rogers, one quilt from Mrs. Thompson, and four quilt tops from Mrs. Oitment.

I.O.D.E. To Buy Fighter Plane For Australia

NORWOOD, March 30—(ENS).— The regular meeting of the 40th Northumberland Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the chapter room with a good attendance, Mrs. W. B. Tucker, Regent, in the chair.

Several letters of thanks from overseas were read. The treasurer reported over $230 had been spent on war work during the last month. The convener for overseas boxes reported that about sixteen had already been sent for the spring shipment at an approximate value of $3.00 each, with about the same number to be forwarded in the very near future.

A splendid donation of ten large quilts, five crib quilts and five pairs of socks were received from a group of ladies in the setlement of the Brick School just north of the village, also a great amount of sewing done by the Baptist Church ladies, including ladies' nightgowns, babies' nighties, dresses and shelter aprons and soakers. Some of this material was donated.

Mention was made of the Order's new project, namely the buying of a Hurricane fighter plane at the cost of $50,000 for Australia in this her hour of need. It was decided to make a public appeal in the village for this very worthy cause. It was also decided to hold the annual Mile of Pennies drive in June again this year.

In place of the regular "treat box" for our overseas soldiers, a motion was carried that we send cigarettes in June.

Mrs. Carleton reported that the I.O.D.E. Guides had held their initial meeting the evening before with twenty-four members present.

A most nteresting and illuminating article was read by the secretary regarding the impersions of the film cameraman during the recent commando raid on the islands of Vaagso and Maaloy. Many were the thrilling adventures that Cameraman Jack Ramsden had during the short but eventful raid. Jack Ramsden is a nephew by adoption of Mrs. Walter Bitten, a valued member of the 40th Northumberland Chapter.

The meeting was brought to a close with prayer and the singing of the National Anthem, after which tea was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. H. Baker.

Fear 5 Drowned In Toronto Bay

TORONTO, March 30 (CP)—Five persons were feared drowned when their boat disappeared in the Bay between Toronto and Centre Island last night.

Those missing are Mr. and Mrs. John Deacon, William Powers and two unidentified men. The party left Centre Island for a trip to Toronto and has not been heard from since.

Mrs. Powers notified police when her husband failed to return home and a search of the Bay was begun. Today lifesavers discovered the oars and gas tank of the outboard motor of the missing boat.

Moslem Leader

Mohammed Ali Jinnah, leader of India's minority of 77,000,000 Moslems, told his followers that they must reserve judgment on the proposals of Sir Stafford Cripps for the future of India. The president of the All-India Moslem League insists the Moslems are a nation and that he would reject any solution that did not provide for separate and autonomous Moslem and Hindoo states. Jinnah accepted an invitation to confer with Cripps.

Ladies' Clothes Restrictions Listed For Fall

MONTREAL, March 30 — (CP). —Wartime restrictions in the manufacture of coats suits, sports jackets, and skirts for women, girls, and young men were announced on Friday by the wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Officials said the restrictions were designed both to conserve cloth materials and help maintain the price ceiling — without interfering with serviceability, wearability or the manufacturers' scope for styling.

Prohibited by the Board's order are: Three-piece suits, such as jacket and skirt with coat to match; jackets with "bi-swing" backs or vents or pleats in the backs; jackets with bulging sleeves or cuffs on long sleeves; coats with balloon sleeves or wool cuffs on the sleeves; and jackets or coats with separate or attached hoods, capes, scarves, shawls or vests.

As it affects women, the order will come into effect only on goods appearing in the shops next autumn, an official said, and the order "respects fashion as an essential element of feminine morale and deals lightly with it."

Dimensions to which women's suits and coats may be cut, listed in the order, permit a wide variety of styles but prevent wasteful use of material. Special permission will be granted manufacturers to exceed approved dimensions when the physical proportions of an individual demand it.

Manufacturers will be allowed to use up wool lining stocks on hand, but after that they must use other materials for linings. Interlinings of wool are banned.

Patch pockets are ruled out, except on sports jackets which are unlined or yoke lined. This will halt a wasteful use of "cloth over cloth," officials said.

Free Jailed Jap Chick-Sexers

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, March 30 (CP).—When Japan entered the war, Britain promptly interned all Japanese Nationals including chick-sexers S. Kawai, T. Tagaki and K. Ito.

Just as promptly rose a storm of protest that the chick-sexers were indispensable to the poultry business. The Home Secretary investigated and the Japanese were released.

Their indispensability was explained by E. Barrett, operator of a big hatchery. Britain's pressing wartime poultry need, said he, is pullets that will grow into egg-layers. Not cockerels, fattening on food so precious, that to save it, a lot of poultry once had to be killed.

Therefore, said Barrett, Britain must raise pullets only. But only the Japanese can tell the difference between male and female chicks in time to avoid waste of quantities of food.

The art of chick-sexing, Barrett went on, is all in sensitivity of touch, and one sensitive-fingered Japanese can "sex" 1,000 day-old chicks an hour, 10 hours a day. The margin of error is one in 400.

He added incidentally that the Japanese are paid $6.50 a 1,000 chicks—$62.50 a day.

The finger-tips of the Japanese are their fortune.

Their landlady told how Kawai, Tagaki and Ito lavish the greatest care on their thin fingers.

"There they are massaging them with a special cream all the time," she said. "They sit for hours doing it. The gentlemen will do no manual work—won't pick up a piece of coal for their fire—won't garden or anything."

King's Nephew Enlists As a Private

Lord Lascelles, 19-year-old son of the Princess Royal and Lord Harewood, and nephew to King George, is a lowly private in the British army now, having joined his fathers old regiment, the Grenadier Guards in that capacity. Guardsman Recruit Lord Lascelles is shown taking aim as he learns the rudiments of rifle marksmanship.

Red Cross Work Sets New High Record

BRIDGENORTH, Mar. 30 (ENS) —The ladies of Bridgenorth are evidently determined not to lower the high record they set for the Red Cross last year. The attendance at the work room has been fifty per cent higher than last year and more than fifty dollars has been given in voluntary contributions.

On Wednesday evening a social evening and handkerchief shower was held in the work room and everyone was invited to attend and view the work that has been done recently.

On display for the navy and army were turtle neck and sleeveless sweaters, seaman's long stockings, the regular socks, scarves, helmets, mitts and gloves.

On display for the British Bomb Victims were beautiful jumpers and blouses with gay knitted cardigans. Other articles too numerous to mention were also in this display.

Numerous woollen suits and other articles were on display for the smaller children.

Several quilts were on display. One was donated by Mrs. Ed. O'Donoghue, Ennismore. One quilt top by Mrs. Hannah Nurse. Mrs. Clayton Telford held a pot luck dinner for some of her friends, and the ladies pieced a quilt top for the Red Cross and donated enough money to buy the batt and lining. Other quilt tops have been pieced by the convener, Mrs. Ella Nicholls.

An afghan has been completed and two dozen handkerchiefs hemmed by the Red Cross Brownies. The Boys Club are collecting salvage for the Red Cross.

After everyone had viewed the work a number of contests and a spelling match were under the management of Mr. George Ball.

A reading was given by Mr. James Jopling. Mrs. Clayton Telford and Mr. Tony Siedel favored the audience with a violin and piano duet. Mr. Glover spoke briefly on the work of the Red Cross. Light refreshments were served.

Among the dozens of handkerchiefs there was noticed several from the primary Sunday School class.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bell, Sammy and Donny, and Mrs. W. Cruikshanks are visiting with Mrs. Bell's mother, Mrs. Bailey of St. Marys.

Mr. G. D. Mann was called to Toronto owing to the illness of his sister, Mrs. R. Adams, who is in the Toronto General Hospital.

Mrs. Jenny Nicholls has returned home from Nicholls Hospital, but will be confined to her bed for some time due to a fracture of the hip.

Mrs. Smith of Lakehurst is visiting with her daughter, Mrs. W. J. Telford.

Rev. Fr. Farrell Addresses CWL

MARMORA, Mar. 30. —(ENS)— Catholic Women's League met in the Parish Hall on Thursday evening with a fair attendance. The president, Mrs. James Black was in the chair.

A letter was read by Mrs. Hugh Brady, from the National President urging the members to co-operate with the War Time Prices and Trade Board. It was decided to hold a Bingo on April 8. Rev. Father Farrel gave an inspiring address on The Passion. Mrs. J. A. Paquet "The Faceof Judas Iscariot". Miss Mary Hughes gave a humorous reading entitled, "The Old Flute".

After arrangements had been made for the annual meeting to be held next month, the meeting adjourned.

Fear Indians To Balk On Defence

Reject Freedom Offer Unless Cripps Weakens, Modifies It

NEW DELHI, March 13—(CP).—Growing indications that the proposal to grant India a Dominion status might break down over Britain's insistence on retaining control of India's defence during the war came to-day from the All-India Congress Executive Committee and other sources.

Mohandas Gandhi's son Devadas wrote in the Hindustan Times that the defence issue might cause the Congress, dominant political party of the sub-continent to reject the offer Sir Stafford Cripps brought from the Briitsh Government. The yonuger Gandhi said opposition was strong in the Congress.

Sir Stafford has stated emphatically at a press conference that there would be no revision in Britain's decision to retain defence control during the war.

The younger Gandhi's article, which presumably reflected his father's views, said the party "was bewildered that one so sensible, so honest and so broad-minded as Sir Stafford should have lulled himself into the false belief that a scheme based on complete control of India's defence by the British Government would prove acceptable to Indian opinion."

Other sources said it was understood that the Congress Committee had told Sir Stafford that it opposed the defence proposal and that this plan had met such opposition that unless substantially changed, the whole Dominion plan might be rejected.

The president of the All-India Congress, Maulana Abdul Kalan Azad, emerged to-night from a 3½-hour meeting of the Congress Working Committee and said the group "was of one mind" regarding the Cripps proposals.

Building Planes Underground For Britain

Women workers do their intricate tasks at the underground factory where planes for the Royal Air Force are built. This factory is situated in the galleries of a disused quarry "somewhere in England." Deep underground it is safe from air raids. Work goes on night and day. Elaborate ventilation and lighting systems make working conditions as comfortable as in an above-ground shop. An interesting item is the tea wagon for the refreshment of the workers (it can be seen at left centre).

Air Support Dwindles; Van Cut Off

Hostile Population Aiding Enemy Reserves Called In

NEW DELHI, India, March 31. —(CP).—British and Indian forces in Burma were in a difficult plight to-day, fighting with inadequate air support, amid hostile people and, apparently, with their motorized vanguards cut off by a swift, deep Japanese advance around their flank.

At the same time, the Chinese, defending the eastern anchor of the United Nations' line guarding the Mandalay road, were fighting to hold the Toungoo stronghold against another driving enemy column.

Chungking said Chinese reinforcements for the out-numbered defenders of Toungoo have recaptured the railroad town of Kyungon, 10 miles north of Toungoo, in their push southward.

He said the rescue force also had destroyed an enemy battalion and captured much booty in the Kyungon area— (probably at the airfield there, which also has been retaken.)

By making contact with 10,000 Chinese troops holding the eastern part of Toungoo against 18,000 Japanese in the western half, he said, communications which were broken before the battle of Toungoo began have been re-established.

Behind British Advance Force

The British communique said a mixed force of Japanese and Burmese had penetrated to Shwedaung, about 10 miles south of Prome, deep behind British mobile units in the Paungde area, 20 miles farther south.

The enemy gain, made by a force which crossed the Irrawaddy River at Tonbo and established roadblocks at Shwedaung, was made despite fierce resistance in which an Indian frontier force inflicted 300 casualties and captured 70 Burmese prisoners, the communique said.

This may prove only a temporary setback, however, since the communique said a counter attack had been launched to re-open the roads and "as yet there is no report of this action."

"Our operations in this area are considerably hindered by lack of air reconnaissance and by the fact that the local population as a whole appears in support of the enemy," the

Singapore White Flag Astounds Tommies Raring For Street To Street Fight To Last Man

LONDON, March 31—(CP Cable).—A British soldier who escaped from Singapore to Australia was quoted today by the Sydney correspondent of the Daily Mail as saying British soldiers "could not believe their eyes" when they saw the white flag hoisted over battered Fort Channing, signalizing Singapore's surrender.

The correspondent, mentioning bitterness among troops who made daring escapes from the beleaguered island, quoted the Tommy as saying "We were almost demented" when the surrender was announced.

"We had heard the fight was going to end," the soldier was quoted as saying. "But we had dismissed the story as more fifth column stuff. We wanted to fight to the finish. We would have fought in the streets to the last man."

Capt. K. R. King of Sydney, who organized the escape of 40 members of his unit, uttered a word of hope to relatives of men listed as missing, saying: "There are scores of men...who will turn up safe and sound. Some are on islands awaiting a chance to get off."

U.S. Pours Planes, Blimps To Patrol As New Spurt Looms In Sub Raids

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, March 31—(AP).—Submarines, which have averaged a ship a day in American waters this month, can be expected to intensify their raiding in the weeks ahead as the weather becomes more favorable.

But better weather will work both ways, naval experts said, explaining it will be equally favorable for air and surface anti-submarine operations with a resultant heavier destruction of raiders.

The experts said the Nazis almost certainly had not reached the full power of their long-distance underseas offensive against coastal shipping and that an increased number of submarines probably will appear in American waters in the near future.

To offset this gloomy prospect, however these authorities cited increasingly-effective anti-submarine measures, including:

1. Assignment of more and more patrol planes and blimps to the eastern sea frontier.

2. More general adherence by merchant ship captains to navy regulations that vessels travelling in coastal waters at night should run without lights and, day or night, should stick to patrolled lanes.

3. Partial blackouts of the heretofore brightly-lighted sections of the coast which are believed to have aided the submarine by silhouetting their targets.

The submarines began prowling along the eastern coast in mid-January and in the last half of that month attacked 11 ships, according to an unofficial compilation of U.S. Navy Department announcements. All but one of these was sunk.

This same compilation, which does not include sinkings that for various reasons of naval policy may not have been announced, showed 16 ships attacked and sunk during February and 31 sunk of 35 attacked during March.

On the other hand the Navy has announced three submarines probably sunk and four damaged of a total of 56 attacks mad through February 23. Results of anti-submarine activity since then have not yet been announced.

Drivers Swamp Gas Stations

TORONTO, March 31 — (CP).—Gasoline sales appear heading for new high levels in Toronto today as motorists rushed to fill up their tanks on the last day of couponless buying. Service stations reported selling the fuel as fast as they could get it into the cars.

"I've been in this business 13 years and I've never seen so many cars coming in for gasoline," said Ed. Harding, Avenue Road service station operator. "By tonight it will be chaos. They'll be driving in here asking for 10 and 15 cents worth of gas just to bring their tank up to the full mark."

A station on Danforth Avenue in the city's east end had such a line-up of waiting cars that a policeman was called in to direct traffic.

Meantime demand for ration books continued just about average, according to Warren Hastings of the Ontario Motor League, although the books will be required tomorrow. Recently daily average has been about 5,000 books.

2 British Ships Hit Nazi Craft Flee; New Leningrad Gains

LONDON, March 31 — (CP). — German naval attacks on a convoy carrying British and American supplies to Murmansk have been beaten off by British and Russian forces with one large German destroyer crippled and three U-boats severely damaged if not sunk, the Admiralty announced to-day. The communique noted that the enemy has admitted the loss of a destroyer in the action.

The first British account of the northern sea battle, about which the Germans have been boasting for four days, said two British ships were damaged, the new 8,000-ton cruiser Trinidad and the 1,375-ton destroyer Eclipse. Both returned to port, however a communique said.

The British and Russians engaged the enemy on Sunday as the convoy was plowing its way slowly through heavy seas. Visibility, reduced by frequent snowstorms, hindered the operations.

The Trinidad opened fire on one large enemy destroyer which she crippled and set on fire, the Admiralty communique said. The Eclipse scored a direct hit on a German destroyer, but the arrival of two more German destroyers forced her to break off the engagement.

Two addiitonal destroyers escaped the Trinidad after she had started to chase them.

The Allied forces, in addition to engaging in the surface battles, discovered the presence of U-boats and three of them were "severely damagd if not sunk."

CCF Urges 5 p.c. Top On Profits

TORONTO, March 31—(CP).—A wealth conscription plan providing a five-per-cent. top on profits, a ceiling on incomes prohibiting anything higher than $10,000 taxable income, increase in Dominion succession duties and compulsory non-interest-bearing bonds will come before the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation provincial convention this week.

Sponsored by the Provincial Council, the plan, to be submitted to the convention which meets on Friday and Saturday, also calls for increase in personal income tax on incomes above $1,500, with greater exemption for dependents.

London, Ont., C.C.F. will move a resolution urging the organization to favor immediate increase of old age pensions, widows' allowances and relief allowances by combined Dominion and Provincial Government action. The resolution declares the cost of living has been increasing steadily for two and one-half years but these allowances, "always disgracefully low," have not been increased.

Another resolution asserts it is treason to exploit for political ends, profit or privilege Canada's desire for an "all-out" war effort.

Denies Oil Firm Disloyal

Official Claims U.S. Defence Heads Reluctant To Co-operate

WASHINGTON, Mar. 31 (AP) — W. S. Farish, President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, described today as without "a shadow of foundation" testimony that the company had prevented or delayed development of synthetic rubber in the United States.

"The facts and the record," he told the Senate Defence Investigating Committee, "are exactly to the contrary."

Farish appeared before the committee to reply to testimony by Thurman Arnold, assistant United States Attorney General in charge of anti-trust enforcement, who charged the company has frustrated development of synthetic rubber in the United States as a result of cartel agreements made with I. G. Farben of Germany before the United States entered the war.

"Any charges that the Standard Oil Company or any of its officers has been in the slightest respect disloyal to the United States is unwarranted and untrue," Farish asserted, reading from a statement.

"I repel all such insinuations with all the vigor at my command. I do so with indignation and resentment.

"Moreover, I wish to assert with conviction that whether the several contracts made with the I.G. did or did not fall within the borders set by the patent statutes or the Sher-

Real Boomerang Riom Trial Halted

VICHY, March 31—(AP). — The Riom trial of five leaders of the defeated French Republic, including two former premiers, will be suspended from April 2 to 15 and considerable doubt was expressed today it ever would be resumed.

There was no official announcement, however.

The five defendants, accused of responsibility for France's defeat in the war, are Edouard Daladier, Premier when France went to war in 1939; Leon Blum, Premier of France's only popular front government; Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin, former Allied commander-in-chief; former Air Minister Guy La Chambre, and Pierre Jacomet, former administrator of defence industries.

(A French-language broadcast by the Rome radio, heard in New York by C.B.S., said the Riom trial would be suspended but that it would "be resumed at some later date in a different form which would conform with the aim that Marshal Petain wishes to attain.")

The trial, which began February 19, has turned into a boomerang against the Petain regime, in the sense that the accusers became accused. The defence turned on the prosecution and Blum and Daladier challenged the legality of the court and inferentially that of the Petain regime.

The court ruled against them, but the testimony quickly turned along military reasons why France lost the war instead of political reasons for her entry into the conflict. The name of Marshal Petain himself was brought into the trial. It was alleged he was responsible for lack of fortifications and preparations for war.

Reds Bleeding Sting Out of Spring Blitz

Ferocious Battles At 10 Springboards Taking Telling Toll Of Hitler's Reserves

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

There is a lot of talk about Hitler's Spring attack along the Russo-German front, as though it were an event which would arrive on schedule like the five o'clock express, but actually the Fuehrer and Stalin are already ironing out their differences in a string of battles whose outcome will vitally influence the trend of the much heralded offensive.

What is going forward now is a series of ferocious encounters for control of key positions which the Nazi chief now holds and needs as spring-boards for his grand offensive.

Beginning at the north, the Nazis are hanging on by their teeth in the Leningrad sector, where the Reds have hammered them back. Some seven months ago Hitler boasted he had in a sack this great industrial city.

Southward lies Staraya Russa, where the Bolshevists have what is left of a Nazi army surrounded and in sorry state. Below and opposite Moscow you will see Rzhev and Vyazma, which lie unhappily within a deep salient and are threatened with encirclement. Next we have Orel, Kursk and Kharkov—the latter two-thirds surrounded by the Reds—strong points in the line protecting the Nazis in the Ukraine. Below this trio a great Russian salient reaches out towards Dnieperpetrovsk and then swings back to Stalino.

And finally there is Taganrog, German key position on the Sea of Azov along the route to the golden Caucasus. Its into the Caucasus that Mother Hubbard Hitler would go in search of oil for her badly lowered cruet, and of grain for her emptying cupboard.

So there you have some 10 positions along the attenuated line, each the crater of a flaming volcano into which the Nazis are feeding men and material with frightful profligacy. If the Bolshevists get those spring-boards they will have imposed a mighty handicap on Hitler for his offensive, which may easily be the turning point of the war.

But whether the Muscovites capture all these citadels or not—and this should be emphasized—they are making the Germans pay a huge price in lives and equipment. The Muscovites also are losing many men, but their reservoir of man-power is unlimited, and their loss of material has been nothing like as heavy as that of the Nazis.

There was a time early in the war when men's lives meant little to the German High Command, and when the Nazis were flush with war machines, but that day of plenty is past. They had reached a period when every man and every machine and every ration of food is of much consequence. That's why 1942 is likely to be the cruicial year.

Winter still grips the battle-line along the northern two-thirds of it, between Kiev and Leningrad, but in the southern sector the snow and frost are giving way to some of the most terrible mud that Europe knows. This will last for some weeks; and will develop farther north as the frost goes.

Probably the soldier would prefer the mud to the sub-zero weather, but the gumbo presents heart-breaking obstacles. We use to get mud of this variety in Flanders during the first Great War, and I've seen it so bad that it took stretcher bearers half an hour to struggle 10 yards with a wounded man. Movement of guns and other equipment is a Herculean task.

RUSSIAN CAVALRY MAKES GAINS AGAINST NAZIS ON WIDE FRONT

Repulse German Counters On Kalinin Sector Drive Through To Take City

Over 500 Nazis Slain In Vain Defence Of Fortress In Smolensk Area Call On Moldavians To Turn Guerilla

MOSCOW, March 31—(AP).—Hard-won gains by Soviet cavalry and infantry fighting on the battle-torn Kalinin and central fronts, where Russian soldiers are bringing heavy pressure to bear upon the Germans, were reported today by the Soviet bureau of information.

The midday communique said a cavalry unit repulsed a stiff German counter attack on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow, drove back the German infantry and occupied an important populated place.

The Germans were said to have lost more than 250 officers and men killed in this action. Prisoners also were reported taken.

On the central front west of Moscow, where the Russians are driving toward the important city of Smolensk, the Soviet command said an infantry unit took a strongly-fortified enemy position after stubborn fighting.

The Russians said the enemy lost more than 500 men and officers killed in that engagement.

On another sector of the front, the Russians were reported to have occupied a populated place and captured much booty.

Tass announced that residents of Moldavia, an autonomous republic in the Ukraine on the left bank of the Dniester River, were urged in an appeal adopted by Moldavian representatives in Moscow to organize more guerilla detachments for the fight against the German and Rumanian occupationists to "expedite the Red army's victory over your enslavers."

man Act, they did inure greatly to the advance of American industry and more than any one thing have made possible our present war activities in aviation gasoline, toluol and explosives and in synthetic rubber itself."

Arnold had testified that the cartel agreements had "frustrated the creation of an American synthetic rubber industry."

Denies Jap Deal

Farish asserted it was "entirely untrue" that "as late as 1939 standard was engaged in an effort to establish relations with Japan contrary to the interests of the United States and without the knowledge of our government."

He testified also that it was untrue that after the fall of France, Standard assisted German interests to establish hydrogenation plants in occupied France.

He described as "unfounded" any allegation that "Standard made shipments to Italian and German air lines in Brazil, contrary to the wishes of the state department."

He acknowledged that D.A.P.G., a Standard subsidiary, planned in 1938 or 1939 to erect at Hamburg, Germany, a plant for producing aviation gasoline.

"As a German corporation, operating in Germany (with which country we were not then at war)," Farish said, "it could not have done otherwise."

Farish also told the committee that in July, 1941, Standard received from I. G. Farben an offer of $24,000,000 in gold, to be delivered at Lisbon, for its Hungarian properties.

"Under advice from the state department and the economic defence board," he testified, "the offer was not accepted."

Farish also took cognizance of testimony that "in 1939 Standard entered into an arrangement with I. G.—called the Hague agreement—adjusting their relations to the situations brought about by the war in Europe; in which be it noted the United States was not then involved."

"This arranement," he said, "was both reasonable and expedient and in the interests of the United States."

Farish asserted that "Standard has no apologies to make for the part it has played in the development of synthetic rubber," adding that "continuously, from January 1939, Standard has been in the forefront of those advocating an adequate Government synthetic rubber program to provide tires for American automobiles."

Puts Blame on Defence Groups.

He submitted numerous copies of correspondence with Government agencies as evidence that Standard sought early to expand production of synthetic rubber, but that defence agencies were reluctant or unable to embark on an extensive program until after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

"In January, 1939," Farish testified, 'a year and a half before the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defence became interested in the nation's rubber supply, Standard, in its effort to find a Government agency to deal with, sought out the Army and Navy Munitions Board and gave it full information covering Standard's synthetic rubber activities.

"Remember, this was in January, 1939. The information furnished the Government at that time included full data about Standard's own butyl rubber as well as information concerning the status of the I. G. Bnua development."

Records of the Government and the company, he contended, "clearly show not only that Standard's technical information about synthetic rubber was given freely to the Army and Navy, but also the Government was urged to act promptly if there was any possibility that rubber supplies might be cut off in the event of war.

"This began eight months before even the European War started and nearly three years before Pearl Harbor."

Farish said that one plan of the company for permitting all American rubber companies to participate in production of Buna rubber was abandoned "because it was questionable under the anti-trust laws."

Arnold told the committee last week that because of its agreement with I. G. Forben Standard turned over to the Germans, before the U.S. entry into war, patents on synthetic rubber which were better and cheaper than any the Nazis had, while at the same time refusing them to American manufacturers.

Observers in London regarded the flare-up of activity from the Irrawaddy to Toungoo as the heaviest fighting of the Burma campaign so far and said both the British and Chinese had thrown in reserves to try to stop the twin Japanese drives.

If the situation is to improve, they said, the road blocks behind the British advance elements must be cleared. They emphasized the United Nations' air deficiency and called it a sign not only that aerial reinforcements had failed to arrive from India but also that the Japanese seem to be attaining mastery of the air over both the British and Chinese sectors.

The Japanese were believed by these sources to have called all their reserves into a great effort to force a decision in Burma before the Monsoon in mid-May bogs down and Burma front in mud until October.

First Jewish Resident Buried Monday

The funeral of David Florence who died Sunday at his home, 342 Stewart street, took place in Toronto at noon Monday from the McCaul Street Synagogue to the McCaul street cemetery. The service was conducted by Rabbi Gold, and the pallbearer were four grandsons of the deceased, Aaron Black, Morris Black, Irving Fine and Julius Fine.

Mr. Florence was born in Lithuania eighty-three years ago, and coming to Peterborough in 1901 he was one of the first members of the present Jewish community in this city to arrive with the intention to live here and the hope of making his way. It is believed that he was preceded only by Benjamin Lastar, who is still remembered by many of the citizens of forty years ago.

On reaching Canada Mr. Florence lived for a time in Kingston and then went on to Toronto. Finally he came to Peterborough in his journeying around to find a place that appealed to him. And here he decided to settle down. He went into the scrap metal business in a small way, and gradually expanded its volume until he was able to acquire a property on the west side of Bethune street, between Simcoe and Charlotte streets, where he built a large warehouse. He became widely known throughout the city and parts of the county, and especially earned the confidence of local manufacturers from whom he bought surplus scrap metals stocks.

Mr. Florence was married in Lithuania, a province of Russia, and when departed from his home land he had to leave behind him his wife and their young family. After six years' residence and work in Peterborough he sent for Mrs. Florence and the children. He used to say that his decision to make his home here was the beginning of a long and happy period. He loved Peterborough for the friendliness of its citizens and for the opportunity the community had afforded him. In return he earned a reputation for honesty and fair dealing, good judgment and an unfailing industry. Coming here as a complete stranger he was able to build up a business that gave him a strong sense of citizenship. He realized from the beginning that he was practically the first of the Jewish people to make his home here, and during those forty years it was his objective to be true to the ancient morality of his faith.

Three years ago he suffered a paralytic stroke from which he never recovered. His younger children were educated in Peterborough, and the family has long been engaged in the business affairs of the city. He is survived by his sons, Louis and Harry Florence, and his daughter, Mrs. P. Black and Mrs. Rose Green of this city, and Mrs. M. Fine of Toronto.

man High Command said today that U-boats had continued attacks against a convoy carrying supplies to Russia by the far northern route, claiming the sinking of two "heavily laden transports totalling 11,000 tons at the entrance of Kola Bay."

A third ship was torpedoed in the heavy seas at the approaches of Murmansk, the Germans claimed, adding "its loss must be presumed." A fourth medium-sized ship was said to have been heavily damaged by bombs.

The Germans reported attacks on this convoy in their communiques on Sunday and Monday, and yesterday, claiming the sinking of one 10,000-ton ship, said it was bound from New York for Murmansk, carrying tanks and munitions for Russia. They addmitted yesterday loss of one German destroyer, but claimed a British cruiser had been torpedoed.

Todays communique acknowledged the loss of a submarine commanded by Lieut. Endrass, holder of high decorations.

"This outstanding U-boat commander together with his brave crew has fallen victim to the enemy, the communique said.

Advances At Leningrad.

LONDON, March 31—(CP).—The Russians reported to-night important new successes before Leningrad, where the Soviet army, striving desperately to open up a land route with the Russian interior, was said to have started rolling up the German and Finnish forces along the whole front.

The Soviet radio reported the capture of an "important strategic point" in the Leningrad area. It did not name it, but it was known that the Russians had long been attempting to isolate or recapture Schlusselburg, east of Leningrad on Lake Ladoga.

Liquidation of the German resistance at this point would open a new rail supply route for the Russians, who have been depending all winter on material transported over the frozen lake.

The approach of spring has intensified fighting in the bleak northern region, and Russian sources said one Red army unit had killed more than 3,500 Germans in two lays. Pravda said Finland had lost 200,000 officers and men during the eight months of the war.

London sources said the Russian army apparently was intent on maintaining [illegible] drive in sufficient force along the entire front in order to keep the [illegible] on the defensive and prevent [illegible]ermany from launching her expec[illegible]ed offensive.

Stirring The Axis

CAIRO March 31—(AP).—British fighting columns penetrated the Axis positions behind the Tmimi-El Mechili line on Saturday night and turned artillery fire on enemy positions at Ras el Eleba, a British Headquarters communique said yesterday.

Another British column attacked a group of 40 enemy vehicles in the Aleima area, and an enemy patrol engaged British artillery between Gazala and Tmimi.

Limitation Of Repair Parts Affect Garages

The biggest problem facing the service men and dealers in the car industry today is the possible limitation of repair parts, rather than any curtailment of rubber or gasoline, S. D. Ballard of General Motors told a gathering of the Garage Operators' Association at a dinner meeting in the Empress Hotel Monday evening.

Mr. Ballard intimated to the men that he was telling them as near as he could ascertain the facts as they appeared to the trade at this time, but he added that no person could forecast with any degree of accuracy, the future. In short, he was discussing the whole picture on an "I think" basis.

Introduced by Al. Lewis, president of the Garage Operators' Association, the speaker suggested that the rubber situation was not so alarming as it appears, but on the other hand the shortage of parts was due to the similarity of materials required to produce the war machine to vanquish the totalitarian enemies. Another point which he thought might affect the trade materially was the possible drafting of skilled motor mechanics to more important war work.

Tires Good Quality

"I don't believe the car will disappear too quickly because of rubber, and I feel under existing conditions that at the end of 1942 fifty per cent of the cars will still be operating, and at the end of 1943, without radical intervention of substitutes that 25 per cent of the cars will still be on the road. This assumption is based on first, the fact that the rubber sold during the past two years was exceptionally good rubber, and as it is now in the possession of the car owners, it remains with him to control their life, and secondly, there is no shortage of gasoline, merely the problem of transportation.

"The Oil Controller's regulations may reduce the measure of the unit, but I doubt if any serious problem will result outside reduction of mileage. The need for service is just as great relatively speaking, on a car with low mileage as compared with a car having high milage. Actually a car in a garage depreciates much more rapidly than one being used.

"Up to the present time the situation is good as regards car parts, but the signs are not too favorable. While it is true that the Washington authorities have authorized the manufacture of a bank of service parts for 1942 and 1943, it does not mean that these will be made, because the raw materials may not be on hand. It still rests with the manufacturer to obtain the necessary material and do the work. For the industry on the whole it may be difficult, but some manufacturers may be in a more favorable position than others because of materials on hand.

Request Consideration

The motoring public should not expect the same efficiency of service as in normal time, but I do believe, that arising out of the ingenuity born of the occasion, that most vehicles will be served to the point of proper operation, bearing in mind the fact that the future is very uncertain, and garages on some types of repairs dealing with actual replacement material may be unable to handle all service jobs. However, in a situation such as this it is the desire of the authorities to preserve the equity of the car owner and also the equity of the business, so long as the preservation of that equity does not interfere with the successful prosecution of the war.

It should be understood at all times that the war effort is paramount, and if the motoring public is inconvenienced in their travel arrangements because of lack of service, they should recognize that the control of the situation does not rest with the garages, but rather with a regulation or requirement covering a government necessity for the war program. In other words, the garages are being slowly but surely placed in a position by circumstances over which they have no control."

The thanks of the group was extended by Roy Girven, past president of the local association.

Fourth Division Swinging Fast To Armor

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, March 31 (CP)—Conversion of the 4th Division to armor is proceeding satisfactorily, it was learned today at National Defence headquarters, and the officers and men of that formation are taking up their new duties and trades with zest.

The division is scheduled to go overseas this year.

The conversion of an infantry division to an armored division is "a big job," Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of the general staff, said recently. At the same time he indicated the troops are showing all the adaptability for which Canadian soldiers have become noted both in this war and in previous conflicts.

Tanks and all the other mechanized equipment which goes with an armored division now are moving to the troops in their eastern training quarters. After re-organizing the battalions and brigades of infantry, and the regiments and batteries of artillery into the formations which make up an armored division, the next step is for the division to work out with its equipment.

The 4th was well advanced towards overseas efficiency as an infantry division when the decision was made early this year to convert it to tanks and so add hitting power to the projected Canadian army overseas.

The process of conversion involved three main tasks—reorganization of the internal economy, as it were, of the division itself and its component units; training of officers and non-commissioned officers in the tactics, administrative tasks and trades peculiar to tank warfare; and provision of many tradesmen in addition to those required by an infantry division to keep the thousands of wheels, motors and tracks rolling.

Train at Borden.

To give the officers and non-commissioned officers instruction in the fine points of tank warfare the facilities of the armored fighting vehicle training centre at Camp Borden, Ont., were used.

The officers and N.C.O's have been going through intensive courses at Camp Borden in relays. As fast as they complete their courses they return to the division to resume their posts and pass on their newly-acquired knowledge to their men.

For the training of additional tradesmen the facilities of the Army Trades School at Hamilton, Ont., have been used. Men from the division who, but for the change, would have been experts in the use of rifle, bayonet, sub-machine gun, Bren gun and trench mortar, go to Hamilton to learn to become expert drivers, motor mechanics, welders, electricians and other types of tradesmen.

The 1942 army program calls for its transport overseas this year to join the three infantry divisions and one armored division now in the Canadian Corps when that organization expands to a two-corps army.

Toronto Youth Gets 5 Years Cobourg Court

COBOURG, March 31—(ENS). — Five years in the penitentiary was the term handed out by Judge D. B. Coleman of Whitby to 21-year-old Elmer Lee of Toronto, who was found guilty in county court yesterday on a charge of robbery with violence in connection with an assault on Mrs. Mildred Mountjoy, elderly Cartwright township woman, who was robbed by Lee and Lloyd McAnerin last December. McAnerin received three years in the penitentiary when he appeared on the same charge before the magistrate at Bowmanville on February. However, it was revealed in court yesterday that Lee, who was once employed on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Mountjoy, had planned the robbery, using McAnerin as an accomplice.

Mrs. Mountjoy, whose health is said to have been impaired since she was struck over the head at the time of the robbery, had to sit down while she gave her evidence. She testified that the accused had worked for her and her husband for some months in 1940 and also for a period of time in 1941.

"At 7.30 in the evening of December 22nd last year, a man came to the door. .. found out later that it was a youth named McAnerin. He struck me over the head and when I tried to run away down the path, he went after me and caught me and shoved me into the garage where he loc' d me up. From the garage window I could see a light moving from room to room and a few minutes after that somebody came out and stood out in front of the house and then went back in. Later I saw a car drive away. As my husband was away, there was nobody around to know what had happened until Lewis Stinson, a neighbor, came and let me out of the garage. We went in the house and found that a desk had been broken into and a bedroom ransacked. I had about $100 in the desk and it was gone. A gold wrist watch was also missing. I used to keep my money in an old handbag under one corner of the mattress in my room and sometimes I kept it in one of the two top drawers of the dresser. When Lee was working for us, I used to pay him sometimes with money from the desk and sometimes with money from my bedroom. After the robbery the mattress showed signs of having been lifted up and the two drawers in the dresser had been ransacked," related Mrs. Mountjoy.

Called At Her Home.

Mrs. Edna Chapman, of Oshawa, sister of the accused, testified that on December 22nd, McAnerin and Lee had called at her home in Oshawa in a green car.

Lewis Stinson of Cartwright township saiad that on his way to call on the Mountjoy couple in connection wtih collecting some money for a presentation to a soldier, he had noticed a green car near the house. It had gone when he reached the house.

"There was nobody in the house but I heard somebody crying out from the garage and I went there and found Mrs. Mountjoy inside. She was hurt on the head and was very frightened. We went in the house and found that it had been ransacked," testified Stinson.

Lloyd McAnerin, who was brought up from Kingston penitentiary to give evidence at the trial yesterday, testified that he first met Lee in Toronto.

"We rented a car in Toronto on December 22nd," related McAnerin, "and drove to Oshawa to Lee's sister's place. Then we went to Bowmanville and north from there to the Mountjoy place. We got stuck in the snow and went up to Mountjoys to get a team of horses. I went to the door and Lee stayed at the side of the house because he didn't want to be recognized as we had decided to rob the house. We decided that practically before we left Oshawa. I didn't know the Mountjoy's. We decided that if we could lock her up in a room we would rob the house. I was up at the door twice and the second time I told her that if she didn't holler she wouldn't get hurt. She ran out of the house and I grabbed her and locked her up in the garage. When I got back, Lee was in the house looking around. We got some money out of the bedroom and some out of the desk which we smashed open. We also got a watch. We got about $86 in cash of which I got $43 as my share. I had a fellow up in Toronto take the watch in and pawn it," testified McAnerin.

Thomas Gallagher, clerk in the company which hired out the car used by the pair, testified that Lee had rented it and that it was a green car.

Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond of Bowmanville, testified that he and Detectives Heron and French of Toronto, had made a search in Toronto for Lee and finally located him at the house where McAnerin roomed. On being questioned Lee gave the police a signed statement.

Lee, who was not represented by counsel, offered no evidence in his defence and had no statement to make to the court.

"There is not the slightest doubt in my mind as to your guilt," commented Judge Coleman. "You are guilty of a particularly serious offense. Taking advantage of knowledge gained while employed by Mr. and Mrs. Mountjoy, you planned this robbery. Mrs. Mountjoy was injured during the robery by the accomplice of Lee. People must be protected from this sort of thing. There is no reason why I should be lenient with the accused. He has a record which goes back to 1936 and is a menace to society. The sentence of this court is that you be imprisoned for a team of five years in Kingston penitentiary."

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, April 1.

A most promising and propitious chain of benefic aspects is found in the astrological map of this day. It holds signs of definite advancement upon cherished goals in social, cultural, proessional, financial and commercial objectives, with much expansion, fulfilment and realization in all desired directions. It may be a fertile and productive time for engineering such transactions with initiative, enterprise, and determination, with those in power or in friendly relations generously disposed to assist.

Those whose birthday it is should be on the threshold of a year of outstanding achievement with progress, promotion, production, and the fulfillment of many cherished hopes and wishes brought into manifestation. This may be in business, finance and credits, expanded business and increased popularity and prestige, with those in high places being generous and dependable.

A child born on this day should be versatile, energetic, efficient and ambitious. It should have much personal popularity and preferment.

Witnesses Claim Driver Drunk

Thomas E. Curvin swore in police court today that the reason that he staggered around after his car had been involved in an accident on Water street north was that he was bothered by a double rupture which made walking difficult, and not because he was drunk as crown witnesses earlier had alleged.

Curvin is being tried on a charge of drunken driving. The case began Monday afternoon and was continued today.

At Monday afternoon's session James Foskett, driver of the other car involved in the accident and his wife who was a passenger in his car on the night in question, Wilmot B. Gordon, and Constables John Stevenson and John Moyes were called as crown witnesses.

Foskett said that he had been driving south, noticed another car coming north, and that suddenly the other machine had turned and crashed into his machine. Foskett said that when Curvin got out of his car after the crash, witness could smell liquor off his breath and accused had walked unsteadily. At the police station afterward, Foskett said that Curvin had demanded a doctor, and asked for one had had been dead for some time.

Mrs. Foskett corroborate her husband's evidence.

Mr. Gordon, who happened along just after the accident, said that Curvin's actions were consistent with a man who was drunk. His speech seemed unusual and witness said that when Curvin's hand was on the door of his car his body seemed to be weaving.

The two officers both said that Curvin was intoxicated. They said he staggered when he was crossing the road after they got to the scene of the accident.

Called by the defence Vincent Fitzgerald, George Dodson and George Colbran who saw Curvin at the Empress Hotel and at the Duffus bowling alley shortly before the accident said that he was sober then.

Dodson said that Curvin had had a glass of porter in the hotel, and Colbran said that two glasses had been consumed, but the witnesses said that the accused was normal when they last saw him.

This morning Curvin swore to having several glasses of stout a short time before the accident, but said they had had no effect upon him. They did not interfere with his driving, and he was quite sober, he said, when the accident happened. As for his staggering, he said that he staggered all the time because of the condition of a double rupture. He had hurt it the night of the accident, he said.

Curvin said that when he asked for a doctor who had been dead, he had no knowledge of the fact that the physician had passed on. "I didn't know it until yesterday," he stated.

The case adjourned for luncheon at this stage.

Allied Airmen Outfight Japanese Aces

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer.

MELBOURNE, March 31 — (AP) — New aerial hammer blows on the Japanese invasion base of Lae, New Guinea, were announced today as reports told again of Allied airmen clearly stamping their superiority over the enemy.

United States flying fortresses over New Guinea have been beating off the Japanese fighter planes in combat five miles high with the tail gunner proving especially deadly against air attacks, advices from Townsville, Queensland, said.

In a tribute to Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commander-in-chief of Allied land forces in Australia, Prime Minister John Curtin announced that the return of part of the Australian Imperial force from the Middle East was achieved "without a single adverse incident."

He also praised the aid of British naval and other forces.

In the bombardment yesterday of the Lae airdrome from an altitude of 26,000 feet, a communique said, direct hits were scored on hangars and runways, and buildings alongside it were set afire. Bad weather hampered the raiders.

Seven Japanese bombers dropped 25 to 30 bombs on the Darwin airdrome, the communique said, but caused neither damage nor casualties. It said one United Nations' plane was reported missing but its crew probably was safe.

No Opposition To Recall

At a reception to Gen. Blamey, Mr. Curtin declared that the British Government and Prime Minister Churchill himself had agreed to the homecoming of a portion of the Australian forces in the Mediterranean basin "to give us the stiffening of battle-seasoned veterans."

Gen. Blamey told interviewers that Australians must be prepared to stand up to anything that comes and warned the people they must give their all, in every possible way, and quickly for 1942 may be the year which will determine the life or death of Australia as a nation.

Whether or not invasion comes, he said, the Commonwealth must be prepared.

"There is no question," he added, "that we have got to win this year or die."

A pledge that neither the government nor parliament would interfere in the military direction of the war in Australia was given by Prime Minister Curtin.

"Military matters are for military men," he said.

The prime minister said the government now had achieved its four initial objectives: association of Australia in the higher direction of the war by establishment of the

Resident Clause Is Suspended

As a concession to the garbage collection contractor, Bert Withers, on account of the difficulty of engaging workmen, the property committee of the council suspended Tuesday the requirement that his employees had to be residents of Peterborough for at least six months. The clause was omitted from the new contract which becomes effective April 1.

Another restriction which was originally proposed by the late Alderman Stocker requiring the contractor to turn in weekly a signed statement of his wage payments was also deleted. However, the committee is insisting that employees "must be careful of garbage contains, and they are to be reminded that politeness to the public is a desirable attribute.

And every day that Sanitary Inspector MacPherson reports a garbage waggon insufficiently covered by a tarpaulin will cost Mr. Withers one dollar which is to be imposed as a fine.

Lady Teachers Ask For Room At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 31 (ENS)—Lady teachers on the Public School teaching staff are of the opinion that some provision should be made for their noon-hour convenience in the school here, and they told the Board of Education this in a letter tabled at the regular meeting here on Monday evening. In their communication the eight ladies pointed out that no proper facilities were provided for the teacher who daily remained to supervise the noon-hour recess, and they recalled that although the matter had been brought to the attention of the Board on a former occasion it had been abandoned when it was considered that no proper space for such a room existed. They contended there was adequate room in the building, and on being questioned in the matter Property Chairman Henson expressed the opinion that a part of the caretaker's room in the basement would be suitable. He explained that a partition would be necessary and following further discussion A. G. Thompson made a motion that the question be left with the property committee who would bring in a report at the next meeting.

Purchase Medals

High School Principal E. H. Greig, asked and was granted permission to divert sufficient money from the Strathcona Trust Fund to purchase 1 silver and 6 bronze medals, which following the customary practice, would be awarded following the regular cadet inspection to leaders. A request for additional shelving in the Kindergarten Primary room was made by Principal Charles S. Haig, and this was left with the property committee.

Reporting on his pet project, the installation of facilities to teach shop work and home economics in the Public Schools, Internal Committee Chairman Dr. H. O. Richardson explained he had gone into the question further with Inspector A. A. Martin, who was convinced of the impracticability of utilizing the existant High School facilities for these subjects. It was the opinion of the Inspector that the work of providing the necessary equipment in the Public School should be proceeded with now. Dr. Richardson said the materials required could be obtained for about $300.00 (which would be returned to the Board by way of special grants in two years), and that the two top rooms in the old High School would be quite suitable for these subjects. He made a motion that the Board proceed to purchase the necessary equipment and that a committee be formed to supervise the work. It was suggested that Harold Dunk and Miss Nellie Striker of the teaching staff should act in advisory capacity on the committee which will include Board Chairman F. C. Bonnycastle, Dr. Richardson and H. A. McArthur.

Pointing out the town had already set a tentative tax rate for 1942 Chairman Bonnycastle recommended that steps should be taken to draw up the board's budget for the year. He suggested the Finance chairman, H. A. MacArthur, call his committee together to go into the matter. Mr. Bonnycastle also stressed the advisability of giving the school heating system a complete check up during the early summer since the warm air controls in one or two of the public school rooms were not functioning satisfactorily.

A communication from the Associated High School Boards of Ontario urging that a representative be sent to the annual convention was laid on the table and the Board adjourned following some discussion as to just where the plans for the High School building should be kept.

Economic Bombing

WASHINGTON, March 31—(AP).—"Economic bombing" to supplement the bombing of purely military objectives such as bridges and tunnels has become an increasingly-important feature in Allied war planning.

British and American intelligence units were disclosed to-day to be compiling a detailed record of the location of basic industries in Germany and Japan.

This is on the theory that more damaging blows to the enemy war production can be struck by hitting plants furnishing power and raw materials to war industries than by bombing factories making the finished products.

Bewdley Man Misses First Prize

PORT HOPE, March 31.—(ENS)—At the Dimes for Victory draw held at the Capitol Theatre each Monday night fourteen War Savings were drawn.

Master of ceremonies was Mr. Ken Hodgert, assisted by two veterans of the Home Guard, Mr. Milton Austin and Mr. Samuel Millson.

The $25 cash prize was won by Mr. R. Hancock of Bewdley who was not in the audience so the cash theatre prize was not claimed.

The $25 War Saving Certificate was won by Mr. Harry Dore, Port Hope; $10 Certificate by Mr. J. B. Ovens, Port Hope.

The $5 certificates went to W. Vick, Elsie May Potts, W. Vick, J. E. Kelly, Lois Burtch, Miss Helen Lingard, Donald Lake (Toronto), Charles Raby (R.R. No. 4), Miss Clara Spicer, Mrs. George Raby (RR No. 4), Bill Carr, Joe Lajoe, Mrs. R. G. Melville, Mrs. P Sloan, 223 Hunter street, Pembroke.

In all $84 was distributed, mostly in Port Hope, but one going to Toronto and one to Pembroke.

On a second count—theft of a sum of money exceeding $25.00 Richardson was acquitted.

Beaver Club Makes Two More Quilts

LAKEFIELD, March 31 (ENS).—Two quilts were completed by the seven ladies present at the Beaver Club meeting held at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Northey on Wednesday. The ladies arrived before 11 a.m. and during the noon hour the usual potluck dinner was enjoyed. As a means of adding to the funds it was decided to sponsor a card party and dance in the Memorial Hall on April 10, at which event the lucky ticket on the woollen blanket, on which tickets are being sold, will be drawn for.

The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. N. S. Higgins on April 8, when Mrs. Higgins will give a report of the Red Cross convention she attended in Toronto.

$3,293.35 Credit Reported In Hydro Bill

The "thirteenth bill" from the Hydro-Electric Commission was a credit for $3,293.35 as reported to the Utilities Commission Monday afternoon.

G. S. Matthews, chairman, pointed out that this surplus remained from accumulated earnings from the Hydro last year after paying $19,521.34 to the contingencies and obsolence fund, and $45,549.20 was set aside for a fund for the stabilization of rates.

The corresponding transfers in the previous year were $49,321 for obsolence and contingencies, and $40,237.60 for the stabilization of rates.

R. L. Dobbin, Utilities manager, said this stabilization charge was apparently on the basis of $4 a horse power, and Peterborough's power consumption has been something in excess of 10,000 h.p. for the last year.

The significance of the stabilization of rates fund is the fact of its anticipation of possible embarrassments to the Ontario Commission after the war. The fund is being accumulated to absorb after the war the slack of an expected slump in business. In other words if post-war conditions suddenly relax the demand for electric power, the Commission would have to begin at once charging rates that would correspond with the lack of business, higher rates. The stabilization of rates fund is devised to be used in such an emergency as that, if it occurs.

Probably Peterborough power consumers do not realize that their equity in the HydroElectric Commission's properties now amounts to $302,039.20. Eventually the provincial power system will be paid up possession and owned by the municipalities.

Substation Land Is Not Taxable

The Utilities Commission should not be charged, nor should they pay, taxes on their substation land at Aylmer and Sherbrooke streets, John R. Corkery, solicitor, advised the Commission Monday.

The Commission does not pay any land tax to Smith township except on the houses adjacent to the filtration plant. There is no tax on the main buildings.

George A. Macdonald, commissioner, suggested that the finance committee of the council be notified that the land tax on the Aylmer street property should be discontinued.

"What does the Commission wish to do about those lots on Romaine street," G. S. Matthews, chairman, enquired. "We bought them thinking we would have to build an additional substation, but we avoided that."

R. L. Dobbin said the lots were now being used as a piling ground for power poles. They would always be worth the $1,000 the city was charging for them.

It was decided to advise the council that the Commission would accept the lots for $1,000. That means the Commission cannot actually own the property. The purchase is made by the council who receive the title deed; but the Commission virtually owns them in the sense of paying for this and other land, and then administering it.

Advised To Sell Hay

OTTAWA, March 31—(CP)—The Agriculture Department today advised Eastern farmers to move their surplus hay to market now, rather than hold it in anticipation of possible higher prices.

Farmers who are not selling are evidently not taking into consideration the fact that hay can be moved from other provinces and sold at prices below what farmers who are holding it expect to get, said Feeds Administrator F. W. Presant.

"Hay already has been moved into Quebec from both the east and the west," he said. "Over 100 carloads are being moved into Quebec from Manitoba by one large buyer alone."

PORT HOPE, March 31.—(ENS)—The first official list of receipts, expenditure and donations for the H.M.C.S. Port Hope minesweeper, which will be launched from our Port Hope harbour, has been released by Mr. R. B. Baxter, chairman of information and publicity.

Mrs. G. V. Strong, who is convener of supplies for the minesweeper has written many letters to old boys and girls of Port Hope telling them of Port Hope's venture and suggesting that they might like to help and many have been the responses.

Mrs. Strong also reports that all the sailors have been adopted by different organizations of the town and that she will be in a position to make this report in full in a very few days. Each organization adopting a sailor agrees to fill a ditty bag and keep it filled for the duration with necesstiies and luxuries. This means that sixty sailors, the full crew, of our mineswpeeper will be well loooked after.

The following is Mr. R. B. Baxter's report:

Preparing For The Plebiscite

Our esteemed contemporary, the Kingston Whig-Standard, has, in two recent issues, presented the best and most carefully reasoned opinion on the forthcoming plebiscite that we have seen anywhere. Common sense about the plebiscite is rare and to be valued above fine gold, for this move on the part of the Dominion Government has provoked a torrent of vain bibble-babble entirely disproportionate to its importance. It is entirely possible to argue about the advisability of holding a plebiscite at this time, but such argument is waste of breath; we are going to have a plebiscite, and that is that. The thing to do now is to make the best of it and, as the Whig-Standard very ably points out, to make sure that we get the answer we want.

The Government has scruples of conscience about sending men who have been conscripted for service within the borders of Canada to fight beyond those borders; it has the power to do so, but it gave a pledge that it would not, and it wishes to be released from that pledge. The purpose of the plebiscite is to ask that it be released from the pledge and not, as many people seem to think, to ask for power to send conscripted men overseas at once. The Conservative party is anxious that the Government be released from its pledge, and so is the C.C.F. It is assumed that the majority of Canadians share this general anxiety that the Government's conscience be soothed and its hands untied and that they will vote "Yes' an answer to the plebiscite question—if they trouble to vote at all. The supposed unanimity of the country on this question is a dangerous thing. This is what the Whig-Standard has to says about it:

> "It is in this very unanimity that the greatest danger will lie on voting day. The principal stimulus that brings out large numbers of voters on any occasion is the excitement of a close, hard-fought contest. Unless very extensive and energetic arrangements are made to get out the vote, unless the public in the regions where everyone is of the same mind about the plebiscite question is really stirred up and stimulated and made to see that a trip to the polls is a very important wartime duty, there is grave danger that the undoubted feeling of the people will not be properly represented in the result when the votes are counted."

Everybody knows the prevailing opinion in Quebec about conscription for overseas service, and the answer to the plebiscite question there will certainly be a thunderous "No!" This does not necessarily mean that the French-Canadians are cowards or that they care nothing for any part of Canada which lies beyond their own provincial boundaries. They are, however, deathly afraid of regimentation, as all minorities everywhere are bound to be, and with good cause. English Canadians, who have never known what it is to be a minority, have shown remarkable stupidity and often a good deal of spite and race prejudice in their approach to this problem, and fuel has been added to their flame by the hysterical behavior of some French-Canadian leaders, for not all the rash and ill-informed politicians in Canada are English-speaking. Quebec will refuse the Government the release which it wants.

But not all the Noes will come from Quebec, and in this a great danger lies. This is what the Whig-Standard says about it:

> "It is not difficult to fo[illegible] what can and may result under such circumstances. Although we hear nobody urging that the plebiscite question be answered in the negative, it is quite possible that those who are very silently going to vote 'No' amount to twenty-five or thirty per cent of the eligible voters. If those who would unhesitatingly vote 'Yes' if a ballot were brought to them in their homes, so that they would not have to go to the bother of travelling a short distance to a polling place, are sure of the outcome that only a fraction of them go out to vote, it is conceivable that the outcome may be adverse."

Clearly there must be preparation for the plebiscite, so that the affirmative vote may be so large that the matter of conscription for overseas service will be settled for good. A small majority will not do, and neither will a comfortable one. The affirmative majority must be overwhelming, and this can only be brought about if everyone goes to the polls and casts his vote, come hell or high water. And our political leaders must give some time in the three weeks or more before the voting-day to explaining the purpose of the plebis[illegible] and the vital necessity that it give a[illegible] reflection of public opinion. In[illegible] few English Canadians with [illegible] and of French [illegible] went to Que[illegible] bogey and whittle down the negative vote in that province. Now is the time for this district to stir itself and, through its local party organizations, to make sure that the plebiscite will bring the affirmative vote which it must have.

Bi-lingual In Name Only

There is a strong impression abroad that Canada is a bi-lingual country. Readers who have travelled in Europe or even in the British Isles have doubtless met people there who assumed that a Canadian could speak both French and English. Officially we are bi-lingual; our governmental documents are bi-lingual; our Governors-General are expected to be ready with a little schoolboy French; the Prime Minister of Great Britain addresses our Parliament in mingled French and English; we have a French and English press. No child which has a year or two in High School can escape exposure to the French language. A little less than a third of our people speak French as their mother-tongue. And what is the result?

The result is continual misunderstanding and friction between the French and the English-speaking population of this country because they do not understand each other and, as is usual when there is a language barrier, there is mutual mistrust. Why should this be? There is, of course, the usual stupid deadlock between the French who will not vitiate their Frenchness by learning any other language, and those English who think that, as they are the majority, they should not have to bother with a tongue spoken by a minortiy. But there are people of both races who are too intelligent for this sort of chidishness. Why do they not make a move toward a really bi-lingual Canada?

The French have put us to shame in this matter already. Few educated French-Canadians are unable to speak and read English to some extent. But how many educated Canadians can read or speak French? How many people in Ontario, for instance, subscribe to a French newspaper? How many of those in this province who are violent on the subject of Quebec's opinions have really read those opinions in their original form?

It is not as though French were an extremely difficult language to learn. It is not as though our schools did not do their best to teach it to the children of Ontario. It is simply smugness and intellectual inertia which makes us so ignorant of what our fellow-citizens really think, and there will come a day when intellectual inertia will cost this country a pretty penny. Few of us are in serious danger of knowing too much, but those Canadians who are content to read one language only are in grievous danger of knowing too little.

It Is Just Possible

For at least a fortnight we have been reading assurances in the columns of our contemporaries that Spring was at hand, and we have reserved our opinion, for we have had some nasty experiences with Spring in the past. However, it is just possible that Spring has come. For anything that we know to the contrary this business which is going on outside our window may be the earth's awakening to new life. Perhaps that rather chilly breeze is really an emanation from the wheels of Flora's chariot. Not many days ago we met a young man whose fancy had lightly turned to thoughts of love, but that is so common a phenomenon that we attach no special significance to it. Certainly that is a crocus which has popped up in the garden but we have known even a crocus to be wrong. The mail is full of poetry of varying degrees of excellence, and that is usually a sign that Spring is on its way, even if it was not actually arrived. Cautiously therefore (for we have no wish to excite our readers unduly) we venture the opinion that Spring may be here.

Spirit And Substance

It is a natural human tendency to invest buildings with importance according to what goes on inside them, and nowhere do we of the British Commonwealth show our leaning toward this sort of transference more markedly than in our attitude toward our various houses of Parliament. A surprising number of us, when we speak of Parliament, think of the Victorian Gothic pile on Parliament Hill, or the Thames-side structure which houses the Mother of Parliaments, or the beautiful modern building at Canberra.

But we are wrong. These edifices, however dear they may be to us, are insensate brick and stone. A Parliame[illegible] those who look behind the word [illegible]e meaning know, is a parle-[illegible]lace where men may speak. [illegible] may tumble down, or be [illegible] by a foe; the right to [illegible]rdier thing. Wherever men [illegible] minds, there is a Par-[illegible]

Houses of Parliament were badly damaged in a Nazi raid. Since that Sunday night of May 10 the Speaker's Chair, the Treasury Bench and many another treasure has been hidden under rubble, but Parliament lives on. Where it meets is a secret; probably many people have discovered the secret by this time, but apparently no Nazis are among their number. The shell, the outward husk, of the oldest and greatest Parliament has gone, but the spirit lives.

The British Houses of Parliament looked old, and many people imagined that they were old, but in actual fact they were built after the destruction by fire of an earlier structure in 1834. The architect was Sir Charles Barry and, as he was replacing a structure built by Edward the Confessor, he took pains not to make his building too new in appearance. But from Barry's structure a vast number of steel girders have already been removed — enough to make four tanks, in fact. The spirit of the Mother of Parliaments still advances against the enemy, and so, in this form, does a part at least of its substance.

Was It a Premonition?

Instances of spiteful and wanton destruction by Nazi troops are too common to have any particular interest but there is a pleasant air of irony about the account which reaches us from Russia of the breaking up of the Tolstoy house. According to an eye-witness, writing in Soviet War News the Nazis, in the course of their retreat from the position which they achieved before Moscow, arrived at Yasnaya Polyana, where the great Russian novelist lived and which had been made into a museum containing relics and manuscripts. The Germans built a huge bonfire of books, straw, firewood and relics from the museum, soaked it in kerosene and set it on fire in the great writer's library; they built another fire in Tolstoy's living-room and another in the room which had belonged to his wife. While the destruction raged some young Russians braved machine-gun fire to enter the house and fight the flames, and so it was saved from complete ruin. The fire lasted for a little more than four hours.

A spiteful and petty action, certainly, but it is easy to understand why the Nazis did it, and it is pleasant to think of the rage and frustration which drove them to such a deed. Was it not Tolstoy who, in War and Peace, wrote a magnificent description of that earlier retreat from Moscow, when Napoleon and his forces were driven backward through the hindering snow and the bitter Muscovite frost? Who can doubt but that a recollection of that passage in one of the greatest of all novels provoked the Germans to a mean and splenetic revenge?

Revenge against the dead, however, is a poor satisfaction. As the German forces died miserably of frost, freezing to the earth in horrible contortions, did any of them remember Tolstoy's description of that phase of the Napoleonic retreat? Was the exhibition of childish spite and caused by a totalitarian premonition of the fate which lay in store?

NOTE AND COMMENT

"Wild life is increasing in Jasper Park," says a news item. Obviously time for the police to step in.

Mr. Hepburn refers to the Legislature as being, in its present state, "a glorified county council." Who glorified it?

Although there are persistent rumors that the horse and buggy are coming back we haven't heard of any bad tip-overs yet.

A British farmer recently pitchforked a German airman back into his wrecked plane, thereby giving him a taste of the world to come.

"This country would reel from the shock of an attempted invasion of the British Isles, but with Britain, it must not recoil," says a contemporary. Very difficult, this business of reeling while standing firm.

THE OTHER SPRING

The first faint promise pulses in the air
With hesitation, yet it still is there.
It tells of rivers yearning to be free
To glide in silence to the waiting sea.
An early robin perching on a gate
Prepares a welcome for his tardy mate,
And high above in ebon filigree
Spread waiting hungry branches of the tree.
Here underneath the soiled and solvent
snow
Where little seeds abide the urge to grow,
The dormant earth lies in prophetic vein
Awaiting its incarnate birth again.
If you would live unto your fullest worth
Renew your soul as God renews the

New Heroes Of Britain, The Commandos

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

IT LOOKS as though the Commandos might oust the R.A.F. from its position as the most romantic branch of the service. The exploits of these daring men have captured the fancy of thousands, and indeed millions, of people in Britain and America. The Commandos have the dirtiest jobs to do, they run the greatest risks, their uniform has no attraction and they are decidedly dirty fighters, but they are the darlings of the army now and they could quadruple their numbers tomorrow if they chose to swell their ranks with volunteers.

The deeds of the Commandos fire the imagination. They strike swiftly, and silently, doing much of their work at night. They knife the enemy; they gouge him in the eye; they may even cut off his head with a deftly used cheese-cutter. They penetrate deep into his lines, disorganize his communications and blow up his supplies. They arrive from the sea, they drop from the air, sometimes they even appear to start out of the ground. They are the Robin Hoods of modern war. Although they function in groups there is no hard and fast discipline or rule for them; they have but one order—to accomplish an objective and return, and if they are so wounded that return is impossible for them, they are expected to keep out of the way and not to prevent others from returning. Being a Commando is no joke, but there are plenty of men who are eager to undertake this romantic cut-throat work.

It is amusing, but also a little sad, to read that a few years ago a proposal was made to equip some forces of British troops with American Tommy-guns. The scheme was vetoed by a General who said, grandly, "We do not intend to introduce the methods of the Chicago gangster into European warfare." Poor General! He still thought war was a gentleman's game. The methods of the Chicago gangsters have been introduced, however, but not by us. The new technique of warfare is, by old-fashioned standards, a very dirty business, but in a war for national existence it is necessary to fight dirt with dirt. The German technique is one of infiltration, distraction and the use of the Fifth Column. Caught unaware, we have sought for something with which to offset such a technique; hence the Commandos.

IT WAS realized in British army circles long before the idea became a catch-phrase with the public that attack was the best defence. But how to attack? Britain was short of everything necessary to wage war. Such attacks as she could make would have to be small-scale affairs, calculated rather to impede and embarrass the enemy than to put him out of commission. And so the Commandos came into being. They were trained by men who had fought in the Spanish War, and who knew the guerilla dodges most useful in disrupting a large force by means of a small one. They learned the use of the knife, for instance. Many of their number, who came from the tough docks of Glasgow, needed no instruction in the use of that handy and silent weapon. They learned ju-jitsu, not as a pleasant exercise, but as a means of killing or maiming an opponent. They learned to set traps for motor-cycle troops and tanks. They became expert in all forms of sabotage. They learned to dig themselves in without being seen, while lying on their faces. They learned, in fact, the complete art of being a dangerous nuisance to an enemy.

Perhaps the most spectacular of these Spanish War veterans was Tom Wintringham, who commanded the British Battalion of the International Brigade. Wintringham learned a great many things in Spain which surprised him and his opinion of the British Army, never especially high, sank lower and lower. When he came back from Spain, knowing in his bones that a general war was not far away, he advanced some proposals for the reform of that army. He emphasized the necessity for mastering three points. These were: (1) Training in infiltration methods and in defense against such methods; (2) Understanding of the relation between infiltration methods and trench deadlock, and a realization that passive defense was no longer a possible course, attack being the only successful method; (3) Clearing out the old army methods, replacing them with initiative, independence, and the spirit of attack and counter-attack.

WE CAN all see now that Wintringham was right, and that the army needed the reorganization which he outlined, but it is understandable that, before the war, his suggestions were regarded merely as the impertinences of an amateur soldier. It took the battle of France and Dunkirk to convince the War Office that he was right. But by that time the Battle of Britain was beginning and time was short, so Wintringham and some of the men who had been with him were enabled hastily to organize the Commandos, daring and desperate shock troops. Since that time the Commandos have never looked back. Colonel Blimp has spluttered and stormed at their unsporting methods, but the common people of England have taken the Commandos to their hearts. • Carrying It To The Hun

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, March 31 (AP)—The day when an Allied counter-invasion is launched on the European continent may be far distant, but the Battle of the Atlantic is being carried to the enemy with a rising tempo.

That is the meaning of the blow at St. Nazaire — the boldest and most brilliantly executed British Commando raid to date. London describes it as purely a tactical operation. It had very definite strategic signifiance, however, in more than one way.

Because of its docks, ships and tidal locks, and its distance from Royal Air Force bases in England—300 miles or so—St. Nazaire is or was an important cog in the German war pattern in the Atlantic. The British raids can be traced to the conclusion both in London and Washington that most of the long-range German or Italian submarines haunting the Western Atlantic were based there.

WILL CUT U-BOAT TOLL

The proof of that will not be long delayed if it is true and if the British force was as successful as indicated at St. Nazaire. Some subsidence in the U-boat ravages on this side of the Atlantic will be certain to follow in due course if that base has been crippled.

A synchronizing Berlin story of a sea-air battle in the Arctic on Russia's Murmansk - Archangel supply route illustrates another effect of those transatlantic U-boat operations, however. Unless they can be checked at the source by such bold aggressive measures as the St. Nazaire raid, withdrawal to coastal convoy work of British and American warcraft now on protective duty on the Russian supply route would be necessary. And the importance of keeping that flow to Russia going and increasing it has been recently emphasized by every high ranking United Nations spokesman, including President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Hitler may not be able to win the war in Russia; but he could lose it there. Furnishing Russia the means to deal finally with his armies, even now attempting to regain the initiative, holds out the greatest hope not only of ultimate Allied victory, but of shortening the war. For that reason the St. Nazaire raid and similar stabbing attacks apt to follow it have more than tactical significance.

OTHER RAIDS TO COME

There was an implication in Mr. Churchill's address to Conservative Party leaders in London last week that new measures to deal with the Nazi submarine menace in the Atlantic were in process. He said the present reversal of the battle trend there against the Allies would be only temporary. The St. Nazaire raid followed so quickly that he must have had it in mind as he spoke.

What other steps have been or are to be taken to deal with either the far roving U-boats or to keep the supply lines to Russia secure is unrevealed. There is no doubt, nevertheless, that London and Washington are concentrating on the problem of beating off German air, surface craft or submarine attacks on Arctic convoys even at the risk of shipping losses elsewhere in the Western Atlantic.

Nor can Berlin fail to expect other Commando raids anywhere along more than 2,000 miles of Nazi-occupied coastline from Northern Norway to the Bay of Biscay. St. Nazaire seems to have proved the value of such coups, regardless of losses.

• Canada's Sawdust Fusiliers

MR. QUENTIN REYNOLDS, the London correspondent of Collier's Weekly, whose books, "The Wounded Don't Cry" and "Convoy," are among the most moving that have been inspired by the war, paid a tribute in an eloquent broadcast on Sunday night to a Canadian military unit in Britain of which little or nothing has been heard. This is the Canadian Forestry Corps, a volunteer force of four thousand men, who are known as "The Sawdust Fusiliers"; every man-jack of them an expert Canadian woodsman; every man trained into an expert soldier.

This force was drawn from all parts of the Dominion, and includes some four hundred lumber men from French Canada. Britain's consumption of lumber in peacetime was enormous. She used eight million tons and imported ninety-five per cent of this, it being more economical to do so than to cut down her own trees. But when war broke out, and the Scandinavian supply was cut off, she was faced with the great difficulty of importing lumber three thousand miles across submarine-infested seas from this Dominion. Someone conceived the happy idea of exporting not Canadian lumber, but Canadian lumbermen, to the British Isles, to develop in Scotland among the virgin woodlands of the Scottish Highlands a new and great lumber industry.

By the middle of 1941 the "Sawdust Fusiliers," who willingly left their comfortable jobs and homes in Canada to help Britain in her hour of need, were producing one shipload of finished lumber daily, thus not only providing for Britain's immediate vital needs, but also making available all the tonnage for urgent purposes that would otherwise have been used for importing lumber,—to say nothing of the saving of ships, cargoes and lives from the U-boats.

carries the fight to the enemy and gives him a taste of his own medicine.

The Commandos have captured the imagination of the United Nations because they fight as individuals, and not as cogs in a machine. The Commando, however large a group he may be with, is likely to find himself alone at any moment; he must use ingenuity, skill and strength to gain his end and avoid capture and death. That is the way most men feel that they would like to fight. To be mown down by enemy fire with hundreds of others has little appeal, but to die fighting a lone game has its charm. Certainly when the great Allied offensive comes, as it must come, the Commandos will pave the way for it, and there can be little doubt that this band of [illegible] a permanent [illegible]

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.—Gen. i, 26, 27.

God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed anything, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things. . . . For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring.—Acts xvii, 24, 25, 28.

This Week In Radio

Every Canadian can take pride in the record of the Royal Canadian Navy which has grown in less than three years from 15 ships to over 350 and from a strength of several hundreds of men to nearly 30,000. A growth unequalled in speed by any country in the world. The ships of the Royal Canadian Navy are to receive a radio tribute on Sunday at 8.30 p.m., CBL. Since the outbreak of the war ships of the R.C.N. have convoyed a steady stream of cargo vessels from Canadian ports, attacked, sunk or captured enemy craft, rescued ships in distress, fought off air attacks, escorted troop-carrying vessels, and kept vigil in coastal waters along the Pacific and Atlantic coasts. The proud record of these men and ships will be emphasized in this special series.

Silver Theatre, heard over CFRB at 6.00 p.m., Sunday, will star this week Mickey Rooney in "Christmas in July." Fred Allen with his usual cast of Kenny Baker and Portia Hoffa will be heard starting Sunday at 9.00 p.m., CFRB.

The C.B.C. is putting on something new this week and will give the world premiere of the new Canadian opera, "Transit Through Fire," with libretto by John Coulter, author of "The House in the Quiet Glen," and music by the distinguished organist - composer, Dr. Healey Willan. The opera will be heard on Sunday at 10.00 p.m., CBL.

President Roosevelt is scheduled to give another of his radio talks on Monday evening and will be heard at 9.45 over most of the big chains.

The Canadian sculptorist, Frances Loring, will tell listeners how to go about developing their latent talents on Friday afternoon at four o'clock, CBL, and incidentally people may gain a fascinating hobby for evenings at home. The easiest and cheapest medium as well as the most attractive is soap so Miss Loring will talk about soap carving.

Arturo Toscanini conducting the N.B.C. Sympony Orchestra is another "Treasury Hour Concert" on Saturday, March 14, at 9.00 p.m., WJZ, will be an outstanding musical event. Earlier the same day the "Met." will present the opera "Faust." Sir Thomas Beecham will be the podium and the complete performance will be carried over CBL at 2.00 p.m.

Four all-star members of the New York Rangers hockey team will compete with their wives on the Battle of the Sexes program, Tuesday, 9 p.m., WEAF. At opposite sides of the table will be: All-Star Leaguer Bryan Hextall and his wife, Gertrude; Walter "Babe" Pratt and his wife, Florence; Clint "Snuffy" Smith and Ella (Clint is a candidate for the famous "Lady Bing Trophy"), and Al Pike, who plays any position on the Ranger team but goal, and his spouse, Angela.

As a result of last-minute arrangements, General Sir Hugh Jamieson Ellis, Southwestern Regional Commissioner for Home Security in England, will be picked up from London for a five-minute comment on civilian defence in Great Britain during the University of Chicago Round Table discussion on "Mobilizing the Home Front," Sunday, March 8, at 2.30 p.m., WEAF.

New Beauty - - - -

To the person who must wear glasses, there is the constant question—how will I look? But new styles in glasses have taken care of that question neatly. Designed to flatter the face, they make the wearing of glasses a pleasure rather than a disfigurement.

St. Luke's Auxiliary

The members of St. Luke's Scout and Cub Auxiliary have been busy at war work at their weekly meetings. In the past seven weeks they have finished and sent away two afghans to Toronto headquarters. The group has enjoyed its work, which has been made pleasant by the following hostesses: Mrs. G. Little, Mrs. G. Fettes, Mrs. McIlvena, Mrs. Gough and Mrs. Laing. After each meeting a delicious lunch was served. The Auxiliary is grateful to Mrs. G. Fettes of 770 Armour road for her donation of a finished afghan to help with the war work. The annual Parents' Night will be held April 28, in the basement of the church, and all parents of scouts and cubs are invited.

Fothergill—Roberts

LAKEFIELD, March 31—(ENS)—The marriage took place quietly in St. John's Church, Lakefield, on Saturday evening, at eight o'clock, of Mary Elizabeth, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Roberts of Palmerston, and Victor A. Fothergill, younger son of Mrs. G. C. Fothergill of Lakefield, formerly of Listowel, and the late Mr. Fothergill, with Rev. S. A. R. Wood officiating.

The bride wore a street length dress of champagne silk crepe with matching accessories. Her corsage was of American Beauty roses and she carried a white prayer book.

Attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jakins.

Relatives were present from Palmerston and Listowel. Mr. and Mrs. Fothergill will reside in Lakefield.

FASHIONS

If you're young, fashion-wise, and clever with your needle, Pattern 9016 is for you! Because it has that ensembled look . . . because both frock and turban are easy to make with the Marian Martin Sew Chart. Dipping seams slim your waist; contrast panels add height to your figure, and so does the contrast turban. Of course a version all in the same fabric is optional too.

Pattern 9016 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2½ yards 39 inch fabric and 1⅜ yards contrast.

Irene Poolman Married To Willis Preston

Knox Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon when the marriage of Irene Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Poolman to Willis "Bill" Preston, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Preston of Norwood, was solemnized by Rev. H. J. Mahoney.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charmingly gowned in a frock of ivory slipper satin, cut on princess lines, with a flowing train. She wore a shoulder length veil of English net and carried a bouquet of red Talisman roses and ferns. She was attended by Miss Fern Preston, who looked lovely in a gown of pale pink net with a bodice of figured taffeta and halo of Butterfly roses. She carried a bouquet of pink Talisman roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Gordon Poolman, brother of the bride. Mr. Leslie McLaren and Mr. Marvyn Preston were ushers.

During the signing of the register Mrs. Leslie McLaren sang "Because."

After the wedding a reception was held at Hooper's Palm Room, where the bride's mother received wearing a gown of town blue and white crepe, matching hat, and corsage of cream roses. The groom's mother also received in a gown of black transparent velvet, with a corsage of rosebuds.

Many beautiful gifts were received by the young couple, among which were substantial cheques from their respective families.

The bridal couple left on a three-day motor trip. For travelling the bride wore a navy suit with matching hat and accessories and a fur neckpiece. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Preston will live at 469 Gilmour Street.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, to the bridesmaid and soloist a necklace, to the best man and ushers tie sets.

Vitamin Buttons Feature of 1942

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Fashion Writer

NEW YORK, March 31 (CP)-This spring you can eat your vitamins and wear them too.

Whether your fancy is for a vegetable plate or fruit compote, you can match your menu to your wardrobe, with a parade of the light-hearted new plastic buttons which simulate everything in the seed catalog, from onions to radishes and from strawberries to pears.

If you're a salad addict, for instance, you may button up your new dress with a row of plastic peppers, beets or tomatoes. If you're a fruit faddist you may choose luscious red cherry buttons, blushing peaches or rosy apples, complete with green leaves. There are lapel clusters to match each of these fruit and vegetables button originals, and the whole idea is designed to add to the general gaiety of life.

Newest in the button parade are the "cut-fruit" series, which are so lifelike you want to bite into the halved cherry or apple which buttons up, your dress or blouse.

As Brighteners

The new buttons are finding their greatest use in brightening up last year's dresses that need a few new touches to put them in trim for another season of wear.

You'd be surprised what you can do with a plain navy blue dress, for instance, and an assortment of bright red strawberry buttons with a splashy lapel ornaments to match.

Summer prints adapt themselves gracefully to the new fruit buttons, also, and home-sewing fans are greeting them with cries of pure joy.

It's a season when clothes depend for their smartness on details of fine workmanship and original trimmings And when it comes to smartening up a plain dress, these vitamin buttons are the berries.

Marjorie Black Weds Boris Hazell

WARKWORTH, March 31. — (ENS).—A pretty wedding took place in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at three o'clock Saturday afternoon when Helen Marjorie Black, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Black, Warkworth, became the bride of Kendrick Boris Hazell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hazell, Campbellford The ceremony was performed before the altar beautifully decorated with daffodils and ferns. Rev. W. E. Smyth officiated.

The bride, wearing a floor length dress of white net over taffeta with torso of white jersey and floor length veil held in place with a matching halo bordered wtih pearls and carrying a shower bouquet of Johanna roses, sweet peas and fern was given in marriage by her father

Her friend, Miss Bettie Henderson, of Oshawa, was maid of honor. She wore a floor length dress of turquoise net over taffeta with lace torso and matching halo. She carried a colonial bouquet of briarcliffe roses and sweet peas.

Miss Lois Fowler of Renfrew, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid and she wore a floor length dress of yellow taffeta with turquoise velvet ribbon sash and a coronet of assorted ribbon flowers and carried a colonial bouquet of sweet peas.

Mr. Basil Reynolds of Campbellford, was best man.

The ushers were Mr. Sam Black, brother of the bride, and Mr. Fred Palisier of Campbellford.

Mrs. Jessie Fleming of Oshawa, played the wedding music. During the signing of the register Miss Gwen Varcoe sang "I love you truly."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Black, mother of the bride, wore a dress of black crepe with corsage of pink carnations and black hat. Mrs. Hazell, mother of the groom, wore a navy dress, beige hat and corsage of red roses.

Following the reception a dainty buffet luncheon was served to about seventy-five guests by eight friends of the bride, Misses Bess and Anne Grant, Lenore Isaac, Pauline Johnston, Grace Thain, Dorothy McCullough, Mrs. Cecil Wartman and Mrs. H. J. Nelson

Mrs. O. M. Alger and Mrs. George Dawe, aunts of the bride, presided at the tea table, which was beautiful with attractive arrangement of silver, cut flowers and the three storey wedding cake.

Later the happy couple left by motor for Toronto, London and other western points. For travelling the bride wore a dusty rose crepe dress, brown tailored coat and brown accessories. On their return they will reside in Campbellford.

The groom's gift to the bride was a one strand pearl necklace, to the maid of honor a three strand pearl necklace, to the bridesmaid a ring, with saphire setting, to the organist a vase, to the soloist a vase, to the best man a billfold and to the ushers ties.

Previous to her marriage the bride was given two miscellaneous showers by relatives and friends and a kitchen shower by several girl friends of Warkworth.

The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Denham and Marion of Brockport, N.Y.; Mrs. O. M. Alger, Miss Margaret Alger, Miss Margaret Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. William Presnail, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cryderman, Miss Jean Cryderman, Mr. and Mrs. Murdock MacDonald, Miss Teresa Lonergan, Toronto; Mr. George Wolfraim, Whitby; Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Alger and Billie, Oshawa; Mrs. Harry Watson, Mrs. Stewart Blake, Miss Laura Wolfraim, Peterborough; Mrs. L. H. Fowler and Lois of Renfrew; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Noble, Baltimore; Miss Dorothy McCullough, Harwood; Mrs. Jessie Fleming, Miss Bette Henderson, Mr. Alf Wilson, Grace Thain, Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. David Fleming, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Elliott, Ailene, Martha and Freda of Tweed; Miss Gwen Varcoe, Roseneath; Mr. and Mrs. Lorne MacDonad and Mrs. Malissa MacDonald, Edville; Mr. and Mrs. Dean McGregor, Miss Mary McGregor, Mr. and Mrs. Earl McGregor and Bobby, Marmora; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gooderich, Marjorie and Muriel, Morganston; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolfraim, Castleton; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hazell, Mr. Ronald Hazell, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Palliser, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Vesey, Mrs. Morley Horseman and Mr. Basil Reynolds, Campbellford

Flatten Boxes, Aid Salvage Work

All your empty cartons are good salvage, whether it's a big corrugated carton or a soap-flake or cereal box. They are all valuable, so don't let them be wasted; and don't let them stand in damp cellars and rot.

A word about getting them ready for the collectors: an empty carton, you know, is a lot of space with some cardboard around it; it takes up room on the truck and in the depot out of all proportion to its weight; and it is awkward to handle.

So flatten out all your cartons. Open them at both ends, pile, and tie them together with strong cord or strips of old cloth, something that won't break easily. That will make the handling much easier and will save time and temper.

And, oh yes Don't, please, put all your small empty boxes unflattened, into one large carton. Bitter experience has shown that this is bound to spill sooner or later, probably sooner, and make a lot more work and waste a lot more time for everybody.

Play your part in the war on waste by flattening the cartons and preventing the waste of time and space.

Home and School Association News

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL.

The regular meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, held on Monday was well attended. It opened with the repetition of the Home and School Creed, followed by prayer by Mrs. R. Kitchen.

Mrs. Laurie Mitchell whom it is always a pleasure to hear, sang two songs "Ferry Ahoy" and "Keep on Hopin." Miss Walker's class won the attendance prize. Marilyn Riddle and Betty Mathers delighted the audience with two piano duets, played in perfect rhythm and harmony, entitled "March in the Arena" and "Blue Danube."

Mrs. J. Collis gave a report on the meeting of the War Service Council regarding saving of salvage, and a letter was read by Mrs. C. McBride asking for volunteers in this work. Helen Curry, one of Mr. Munros Grade 8 pupils, thanked the Home and School members for the book "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which was given their class last month for attendance of parents.

Two teachers of the school gave instructive and enjoyable talks on their enterprise work in their own classrooms. This year each class chose its own subject, around which the pupils studied. Enterprise means the working of all subjects around one central theme.

Miss Helen Staples, Grade 1, spoke first and told how her class's theme was "Little Journeys Through a Child's Garden of Verses." The lessons are studied with different poems as the theme. Miss Staples introduces the poem in the morning and the lessons are carried on throuhgout the day in home economics, number work, writing, art, music, health, etc. The talk was illustrated with a number of attractive colored posters. Miss Staples finished her talk by saying "It is most essential in this time of war to give training for peace to the children of our country rather than the training for war given in other countries."

Miss Helen Bonnycastle, Grade 3, spoke of her class enterprise. They chose "Oil" as their theme. It is carried through the study of the different countries in which oil is found and of the customs of the people, and the way they live as compared with the way in which we are privileged to live. Miss Bonnycastle encourages research work by the children, having them gather pictures and information from home and the Public Library. The audience was interested to learn of the origin of oil and its many uses. It is in Grade 3 that the children graduate from printing to writing.

Mrs. E. Chambers, representative of the Home and School Council, conducted a quiz compiled by Mrs. Milne of the Kingston Home and School Council, regarding rules and regulations of the Home and School work.

Mrs. V. R. Henry read in inspiring parting message from the Home and School Review by Mrs. Grace A. Silcox, who is retiring from the presidency of the Provincial Council.

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

At the Father's Night meeting of the Queen Mary Home and School Association, O. M. Steer, principal of the school, outlined the purpose and aims of the new curriculum. The course of study which comprises this new system is not a mushroom growth or a haphazard step, but the result of long research by a consulative committee, whose duty was to examine the principles underlying the education of adolescents and report them. This committee numbered among its members 20 leading educators of England and Wales, under the chairmanship of the late Sir Henry Haddow. The report of findings, commonly known as the Haddow report, is regarded as embodying the soundest available opinions on education policy and theory, and has become the basis for the reorganization of the educational system.

One great thinker has said that good citizenship is but the lengthened shadow of a well-directed youth. This would seem to have been the guiding light in the new program of studies, which seeks to promote three great ends of human life: first, the formation and strengthening of natural and individual character by placing youth, during its most formative period of growth, in a congenial and inspiring environment; second, to give a training whereby adolescents might learn to delight in pursuits and rejoice in accomplishment, and to instill in him an interest in music and art, in wood and metal work, and in the record of human history so that his leisure hours in maturer years may be filled and dignified; third, the awakening and guiding of practical intelligence for greater skilled service to the community.

There were and still are, two opposing schools of modern educational thought, said Mr. Steer. One attaches primary importance to the individual pupils and their interests; the other emphasized the claims of society as a whole and seeks to equip pupils for service to its organization. Neither is sufficient in itself, but must combine both ideals to a satisfactory degree. The general aim is to offer the fullest scope to the individual while stressing the claims and needs of the society in which every individual must live.

The first program, issued in 1938 has been since revised in accordance with the advice of inspectors and teachers, based on experience. Another new revised course is now in preparation for Grades 7 and 8.

Mr. Steer warned parents that the practice of rushing children into high school before they are 14 has little to commend it.

In conclusion the speaker praised the Home and School movement which has effectually bridged the gap between the two greatest factors in a child's life; and asked for the continued faith and support of this organization and of all people interested in the welfare of the citizens of tomorrow.

Mr. Wagar humorously recalled some of the experiences which went with the old system of teaching, in which a good memory seemed the single essential, and he hoped that the steady revision of methods based on experience of educators would result in a perfect medium of the old and the new. Many people object to the new system on the grounds that it involves too much spoon-feeding of the pupils.

Regret was expressed by Mr. Wagar that boyish enthusiasm in sports seems to belong to the past. The change is due to the variety of interests and is not for the better, Mr. Wagar thought.

The meeting was opened by Mrs. C. H. Crowe, president, and selections were heard from the school orchestra, under the direction of J. Telford. Miriam Collins entertained with a piano solo and community singing was led by Mr. Telford, accompanied by Mrs. H. V. Dobson. Mrs. J. G. Wharry read an article on "Radio for the Child." A letter was read from the salvage committee soliciting help of the members in this necessary war work. Members were also asked to keep open April 16 for the annual spring tea and open house. Mrs. Crowe congratulated, particularly Mr. Telford, on the excellent performance at the Spring festival. The attendance banners were won by the classes of Mr. Steer and Miss Hooey.

Merchant Tars Toast Hostess Of London Inn

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, March 31—(CP).—Ask any merchant seaman if he knows Aunt Liz of the Dead House, and if he's ever come to London, it's 10 to one he does—particularly if luck has been bad

Aunt Liz, voluble, sprightly Mrs. Elizabeth Fry, is the self-appointed mother of merchant sailors the world over. Her waterfront pub, strangely and unaccountably named the Dead House Inn, is the second home of many and the only home of some.

Torpedoed seamen, bombed seamen and seamen just plain broke turn up at the Dead House bar, plastered with "V for Victory" slogans and pictures of Churchill. Aunt Liz gives them clothing, takes care of laundry, sees that they have a place to sleep, loans them money and sometimes bails them out of jail

Wife of Sailor.

When anyone asks Aunt Liz how she came by her mission of mother of the Merchant Navy, she recalls her husband now dead was a merchant sailor. "They're rather like children all these boys," she muses. "They're having the toughest time of all in this war.

"What it's hard to understand about them sometimes is that they're never afraid to go back to the sea, no matter what's happened to them. They all rush to get their names into the labor pool as soon as they're ashore. And then they come to me for an advance on their signing-on note. I can always cash these notes after the boys have been at sea a week—so there's no point in refusing.

An Advisor, Too.

"I try to keep them straight—they don't know the value of money. Take Blondy, the Swede, there," she says, pointing to a hulking figure at the bar. "He came in broke one day and offered to sell me for a pound a suit that had cost him five. I didn't let him do a silly thing like that.

"I said: 'Here's a pound, Blondy. Pay me back later.' He did."

Aunt Liz brings out a letter from a seaman called "Jock." It's travelled half-way around the world to her. "I am sending you a couple of quid to help pay off some of what I owe you. Here's luck and may your bar never be empty."

Any of the boys will drink to that.

Needlecraft Pattern

Show your cleverness in meeting the shortage of material and being right in style by crocheting your dress trimmings. Do colorful buttons in gimp—one like an old-fashioned nosegay, another a daisy. Frogs in crochet are a new and smart note. Pattern 293 contains directions for buttons and frog; illustrations of them and stitches; materials required.

DOROTHY DIX

HARD-BOILED ATTITUDE CAN STOP YOUTHFUL MARRIAGE

Warn a Son you will not Assist Him and He Will Reconsider his Future Life.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—My son who is not yet 19 contemplates marriage with a 17-year-old girl. Neither has finished school. The boy has prospects of a brilliant business career that he will forfeit if he marries now. Aside from this fact, their youthfulness alone should keep these children from assuming the responsibility for which they are not prepared. I have used every argument that I know of to make my boy see that he hasn't a right to ask a girl to marry him until he can take care of her. What more can I say to make him understand and wait a couple of years more? Do you feel that such youthful marriages are ever successful, or that they fail to involve a terrific struggle for many years

A MOTHER.

ANSWER—Probably there is no way to prevent a lovesick boy from committing hara-kiri if he is bent on doing it, for he is at the age when he thinks he is incarnate wisdom and believes himself to be perfectly capable of charting his own life in his own way. Hence the advice of his elders falls on deaf ears, and the experience of thousands of other men, who have ruined their lives by too early marriages, offer him no warning.

Advice Given in Vain

In vain do you tell him that no boy of 19 is capable of experiencing the grand passion. That what he is feeling now is just a passing fancy that he will get over as completely in a few years as he did his taste for all-day suckers and gooey soda water.

In vain you tell him that he is blighting his whole life, not only emotionally, but financially, and that if he marries at 19 he sells himself practically into slavery, for he will not have an opportunity to prepare himself for any except the menial jobs that go to an untrained, half-educated boy.

Nor, with a family to support on a meager wage, will he ever be able to save enough money to take advantage of any opportunity that comes his way. Nor will anyone ever be likely to hold out a helping hand to him because hard-headed business men will think that there is nothing worthwhile in a lad who had not enough self-control and intelligence and character to wait until he was ready for it.

You say, Mother, that you have used every argument to keep your son from making this ill-advised marriage. Have you tried the drastic one of telling him that if he does marry this girl that he cannot bring her home for you to support? After all, the boy is not entirely bereft of reason, and if he is certain that he will have no place to take his bride and nothing on which to feed her it may bring him to his senses.

Protect Your Automobile

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: My wife calls me selfish because I object to her lending our car to her 20-year-old brother who stays out with it until all hours of the morning. This boy was recently in an automobile accident and is financially unable to pay for any damage he may do to the car. We have no insurance on the car. At present my wife and I owe a large hospital bill. Do you think I am selfish in not giving the boy the use of the car? BOB.

ANSWER: I think you are only using prudence and common sense in not wanting the boy to joyride around all night in your car, for there is every chance that some night when he is paying more attention to some little cutie than he

SEVEN CLUBS ARE FULLY REPRESENTED AT BASKETBALL BANQUET

Wartime Sports Endorsed By Ian McRae

A strong endorsation of the importance of sport in wartime was given by Ian F. McRae, works manager of the C.G.E. and Genelco plants in an address at the annual banquet of the Ladies' Basketball League in the Y.W.C.A. last night.

Mr. McRae, who was the guest speaker, said that sport meant sound bodies and they were needed in industry under wartime conditions, and it also meant an escape from worry.

Although the battles for the league championships are not yet over and it was impossible to award the three cups at last night's function, the banquet was a most enjoyable affair. Practically all the members of the seven league teams the Generals, Quakers, Y Gym, Westclox, Electrics, St. John's and Normalites, were in attendance and there were a number of guests of honor, including Mr. and Mrs. Ian F. McRae, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Cutting, Mr. and Mrs. H. Cranfield, Mr. and Mrs. S. Shields, and Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Bannister.

Whitty Thirnbeck, president of the league, ably carried out the duties of toastmaster and the guests [illegible] welcomed to the Y.W.C.A. by [illegible] Brownscombe, general [illegible] the association.

[illegible]les were arranged in a [illegible]ry formation and V place [illegible] small Union Jacks and red, [illegible] blue paper was used for [illegible]ve purposes, the whole ef[illegible] very striking.

After the toast to the King had been loyally honored President Thirnbeck briefly reviewed the season and expressed pleasure at the fact that the C.G.E. teams had come back into the league this season. He thanked the press, coaches and all who had assisted in making the league a success.

In a speech that was off the record, at his own request because it dealt with Canada's war effort and the output of war materials in this country, Ian McRae, who was introduced by George A. Macdonalo, paid a tribute to the part that women are playing in war industries, and predicted that before long that part would be materially increased. Many girls who had never worked in an industrial plant before, he said, would be glad to do so as a contribution toward the war effort.

In concluding Mr. McRae said that although it was necessary to work hard it was also desirable to play hard and he stressed the importance of sport as a developer of bodies and of morals.

Howie Macdonald proposed a toast to basketball, and in so doing pointed out that the banquet was a most unusual one because the intermediate and senior championships had not yet been decided, and therefore no cups could be presented.

Audrey Craig of the C.G.E. Generals made a fititng reply to the toast.

Presentations were made to Sybil Ecobichon, the efficient timer and scorer of the league, and to Joe Cooper, chief referee. These presentations were made by Howie Macdonald.

Then followed presentations by the players of the seven league teams to their respective coaches: Lloyd Grose, Quakers; Herb. Galley, Generals; Art Berube, Electrics; Whitty Thirnbeck, Westclox; Victor Coleman and Bob Dyer, St. John's; Hymie Smith, Y Gym; and Howie Macdonald, Normalites. Miss Caroline Littlefield had charge of that feature of the program.

A very pleasant social hour and dance was held at the conclusion of the banquet.

To-night Westclox and Y Gym will meet in the final game for the intermediate title, and Generals and Quakers clash to-morrow night for the senior honors.

Breaks Record

Fred Wolcott, the ex-Rice Institute track star, still is breaking hurdle records. Fred's latest standard shattering was in the 40-yard low hurdles in the Chicago relays. Fred sprinted over the sticks in five seconds flat for a new world mark. He also tied the record in the 50-yard hurdles.

News From Training Camps

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 31 (AP)—Johnny Hopp, St. Louis Cardinals' utility man extraordinary, is ready for any emergency. He keeps two first baseman's mitts and three outfielder's gloves in his lockers.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — When New York Giants arrived here for their game with the Cleveland Indians, Giant athletes were nearly as numerous as tourists. Both the Jersey City club and the Jacksonville nine, links in the club's farm chain, train here.

TAMPA, Fla.—Ray Blades, former St. Louis Cardinal manager who now coaches the Cincinnati Reds, is stressing bunting practice for the Red hurlers. "I'd fine any athlete who went to bat with orders to sacrifice and failed to do it," said Blades.

SAN QUENTIN, Calif.—A major league baseball club made its first appearance in San Quentin prison yesterday when Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics downed the penitentiary nine, 4-1.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — New York Yankees broke camp today and entrained for Daytona Beach, first stop in their long trek to the Yankee Stadium in New York's bronx. The club leaves its training camp with its poorest spring record in 16 years.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—Optioning of Paul Busby to the Memphis Chicks testifies to the good feeling between Philadelphia Phil President Gerry Nugent and Doc Prothro, his manager last year but now guiding the Chicks. Prothro begged for outfield talent recently and the next day Nugent sent him Busby.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla.—Arky Vaughan, infielder acquired from Pittsburg Pirates during the winter, still is the find of the Brooklyn Dodgers training season. His throwing from third to first has been perfect and in the last four games he has rapped out nine hits.

By FRED D. CRAIG

For the next two evenings the sporting spotlight so far as Peterborough is concerned will be on the Ladies' Basketball League with the final games for the intermediate and senior championships coming up tonight and tomorrow night, with the game called at 7 o'clock in each instance. Tonight the Westclox and Y Gym teams with President Whitty Thirnbeck piloting the Clockmakers and Coach Hymie Smith masterminding for the Y quintet will clash in the final battle for the intermediate honors. Each of the finalists has won a game in the best two-of-three final round so that tonight is a sudden-death affair with the winner taking all. It is anybody's game. Both clubs have played smart basketball all season and on the winter's record there is little to chose between them. Westclox, beaten in the first game and far behind at half time in the escond, had enough fight left to pull that battle out of the fire with an overtime victory and now it is all up to tonight's tussle. It should be a sizzler.

* * * * * *

And the same thing goes for the struggle for the senior championship tomorrow night which finds the now powerful Generals, sparked by Marg Wood and Audrey Craig lined up against the fast Quakers, led by Phyllis Ayres, formerly of the Regina Grads. The two teams have broken even in the final series with a win each and they will settle the thing Wednesday night. Generals won the opening game but Quakers came back last Friday night with a rush that for a while swept the C.G.E. bunch off their feat. Generals rallied toward the end of the tussle and were finally only defeated by a single point. Both teams will turn on the heat early tomorrow night and the most exciting game of the whole campaign is expected by the fans who have been following the fortunes of the two outfits this season. Herb Galley is coaching the Generals while Quakers have been tutored by Lloyd Grose.

A Kingston Bouquet

Bill Walshe has the following reference in the Kingston Whig-Standard to the feat of the Petes in winning the Senior B title: "Kingston hockey officials are particularly pleased with Peterborough's victory in the O.H.A. senior B championship final. The Kingston Combines cast off the mantle when they graduated to top company this winter and it is with satisfaction that the Petes don the garment as a representaive of Eastern Ontario. There is another pleasing factor in the Petes' win and that is Honey Tompkins gets his second senior B crest. He came from Peterborough to help Kingston last year in the title hunt when Walt Gerow was moved by the Army. Harmony, which was the main secret of the Combines' success in their senior B campaign, was evident on this season's Peterborough squad, according to the veteran scribe, Fred Craig. In his 38 years travelling with sports teams the Peterborough Examiner sports editor claims the present hockey champions were the best for team spirit and good fellowship."

* * * * * *

And Ken Colling comes to bat with the following in the Belleville sport sheet: "According to the scoring statistics of the champion Peterborough "Soldiers," as compiled by Fred Craig, Bun Kingdon, starry centre ice player, led his teammates in scoring with 62 points. Kingdon whipped in 26 goals and had 36 assists in 22 games played. Honey Tompkins was next in line and lead the Petes in scoring goals. The Kingdon-Tompkins-Heal line scored a total of 79 goals in their drive to a senior "B" puck championship of Ontario, Heal hitting the target in third place with 18 goals and 25 assists. Incidentally last December this corner predicted that the team to beat Belleville would win the senior "B" hockey championship of Ontario. Well, the Petes beat Belleville. Two senior hockey titles for our district group in successive years is no mean accomplishment, thanks to Kingston and Peterborough. However, maybe it's our turn in '43, after all Belleville hasn't had a puck title since '37, and then we went whole hog—both intermediate and senior "B" crowns."

* * * * * *

George Campbell in the Oshawa Times-Gazette tells how Port Hope supported its juvenile team which eliminated the local Churchills after a tough series: "The third game saw Penetang defeat Port Hope 6-4. Port Hope had more than a thousand rooters on hand, via special train and motor, as well as their own brass band. They whooped it up at a great tempo but faded with their team at the finish. The part that amused us greatly was the manner in which about half of the Port Hope fans stood up all the way through the game. The clean and neatly painted seating accommodation of the Oshawa Arena had no appeal for the "Ontario" rooters. This was a hockey game and their team was playing. They stood up at home and they stood up here—maybe some of them had never been in Oshawa before. However, they were a well-mannered bunch of supporters, noisy and enthusiastic of course, pepped up artificially in a few spots, but still a loyal bunch pulling for their hometown kids. The "Ontarios" almost did it too. They led most of the way, faded early in the third, came back to tie the score at 4-4 and then lost out when two Port Hope players got thumbed to the penalty box within a few seconds of each other and Penetang promptly banged in two goals."

* * * * * *

It's All Important

The game in Toronto tonight, the sixth in the series between New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs, may settle the whole argument no matter which way the fortunes of war go. If Leafs win the battle, that is of course true because the argument will be over. If Rangers win, the series will be merely tied up with each team having three wins but most critics seem to be agreed that if the Patrickmen come through tonight and grab off the decision on Toronto ice to sew up the round they are a cinch to grab off the series on their own cushion Thursday night. Reports, even those written by the Toronto scribes, seem to indicate that the Rangers have been getting hotter and the Leafs cooling out in the last three games and some of the Toronto players have been coming in for a panning from the sports-writers for leaving the bulk of the work to a few of the team. That may be writtne purposely to put some fight into the Leafs in this all important game tonight but it remains to be seen just how effective the verbal prodding from the newspapers proves. At all events tonight's game should be about the hottest of the campaign. And as a tip to fans who want to listen to the game tonight, Station WHN, New York, will broadcast the whole battle, going on the air at 8.30 o'clock, half an hour earlier than the Toronto stations who begin their ether story at the end of the first period.

* * * * * *

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Those Portage La Prairie Terriers who have reached the Western junior finals after beating Fort William in three straight games....The Terriers must have a terrific offence. They have scored 33 goals in the three games....Toronto papers have been riding some of the Leafs as stick-leaners. That may or may not help in the big game in Toronto tonight....Montreal Royals and Oshawa open their series tomorrow and the Montrealers are favorites to take the Motor City kids. The Royals have won 19 games this season without a loss....Detroit have sold old Bucky Newsom to the Washington Senators....He may represent a few wins for the Senators this year at that....There will be no joy in Port Hope today. The juvenile team of that town was eliminated by Penetang who defeated the young Ontarios 5 to 3 in the second game of the semi-final series. Now the Port Hope council can go back to work and other activities can be resumed....Markham started a game last night and for the first time this season did not win. However, the team with all the brothers on the lineup played a tie game with Owen Sound and are still unbeaten.

Memorial Survivors

Bobo Flattens Franklin In First Round

PITTSBURG, March 31.—(AP)—Harry Bobo, 21-year-old Negro heavyweight, joined Billy Conn in a Pittsburg tandem chasing champion Joe Louis today as a result of Hammerin' Harry's spectacular, one-round knockout of Lem Franklin.

Harry earned his chance by clambering from the floor last night to knock out the Clevelander in 2:40 of the opening heat of a 10-round bout. Bobo weighed 209½ against Franklin's 196½.

Bob's feat exploded what Lem intended to be the first start in a comeback after Bob Pastor kayoed him in eight rounds last month while Franklin was riding an astonshing string of triumphs.

An all-time record indoor crowd for Pittsburg, more than 7,000, paid a new high of $23,436.50 to see the home town Harry make good in a large way.

Bobo, who wants to be a minister and finds his favorite diversion in the Bible, looked hopeless for the frist minute against the wild socking Franklin. But after being dumped on his trousers for a three-count, Bobo shifted sensationally and landed a double salvo of left and right hooks on Lem's chin flooring him for a count of eight. Lem took one more trip to the canvas for a nine count before he went down to stay, his head lolling on the ring apron.

Now In The Vatican

ROME (From Italian Broadcasts) March 31 — (AP).— L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican City newspaper, has published a note on the appointment of Ken Harada, former Jaapnese Minister in Vichy, as minister to the Vatican. This was the first confirmation from Vatican sources of the establishment of diplomatic relations with Japan.

(Harada's appointment was announced from Tokyo last week.)

By CECIL CARNES

THE STORY: Allan Steele posing as magazine photographer, seeks Dr. Sargent and daughter, on U. S. mission in Mexico's Peninsula, who have disappeared; also news of Harry Bishop, maddened by mysterious injection while on same mission. Bishop, found, repeated only "The yellow devils!" Allan, after meeting with enigmatic Col. Escobar of Rural Guard, checks in at Inn of Thousand Delights, quizzes its proprietor, Sun Su, a Chinese working with U. S. Sun Su tells him there is Japanese cannery on nearby island; that "beautiful and evil" Eurasian girl connected with it is often seen with Col. Escobar. Allan meets her—"Senor Steele, Miss Minor."

THE COLONEL—TRAITOR?

CHAPTER VI

"You are most polite, senor!" she acknowledged, and while her dark eyes held his, the smile grew faintly provocative. "We will meet again — later!"

"I shall live only for that moment!"

Then she and the smile and the delicate fragrance were gone, taptapping toward the patio. Sun Su touched a bell, and when an Indian boy answered the call, directed him to get Allan's bags from the car and place them in room 7. Allan hardly heard the exchange.

"What's her name—Minor?"

"Asia Minor." The Chinese must have noticed the half-irritable lift of the American's brows, for he spread his hands again in deprecatory fashion. "It is not a jest, senor. I have seen her passport; it was issued by the British government in India—and is quite in order. From another source I have learned her father was an English ship captain who married an Indian woman in Calcutta. No doubt he had a sense of humor, for he insisted on naming their daughter 'Asia.'"

"Well—no matter what she's called, she belongs up in Hollywood," said Allan with conviction. "She'd knock them cold. If you have an opportunity, you might mention to Senorita Minor that I'm prepared to be her slave!"

Whereupon it was the proprietor's brows that went up. Allan left them there, and smiled to himself as he followed the Indian boy and the bags. In a wall mirror, as he left the lobby for a narrow corridor, he had a fleeting glimpse of Sun Su leaning across the desk and staring after him in obvious perplexity.

Asia! It sounded strange at first, but after he had repeated it a few times it began to be rather attractive. A Eurasian, he mused, starting to shed his damp garments when the boy had left him to the privacy of a cool dark bedroom. A British subject, and something of a pariah in her native land; cast out by the Indian element and cold-shouldered by the British. That meant she probably hated the English, mused Allan, which would account for her throwing in with a Japanese outfit —especially if the wily Nipponese were up to something which would be to the detriment of England!

"It all fits in!" he muttered, slipping into a bathrobe. He laughed at the recollection of Sun Su's disapproving countenance. "Watch out for your laurels, my gallant Colonel Escobar! Until I find out if she knows anything about the Sargents or poor Harry Bishop, I'm going to make a strong bid for your Asia's tenderest affections!"

He wandered down the hall, tracing the noise of running water to its source, and in another minute was stretched out in a tub of cool water. While his grateful body proceeded to absorb moisture instead of exuding it, he ran over in his mind what he had heard from the Chinese.

He believed he was on the track of something, though of just what he couldn't yet determine. "The yellow devils!" That was the one lead he had from poor mad Harry, but what better description could you want of a mysterious Japanese group who objected to anybody spying on them?

What could be their secret racket, if any? He weighed some of the more obvious possibilities. A submarine base? No, hardly that, way up in the Gulf of California. A heavily fortified depot for war materials? Perhaps, though again the location did not suggest such a scheme. A supply base for seaplanes and bombers? A base complete with repair shops, oil tanks and ammunition?

"More like it!" he decided, finishing his ablutions with a shower. "But what would that have to do with the missing Sargents?"

He had to give that one up for the time being, he told himself, rubbing hard with a big towel. Dry and deliciously cool, he went back to his room, threw himself on the snowy bed and relaxed. It was a pleasant change from day after day of driving the sedan through a parched countryside beneath a broiling sun. . . .

He began to formulate several plans of campaign. His first care would be to check up on the fishing company, working always cautiously if only from respect for what had happened to Harry Bishop. Had Harry got the goods on them somehow and paid the penalty with his reason?

There were various promising angles of approach—and easily the most appealing was the alluring Asia! He might get some hint from her of what was afoot if he played the game carefully. At least it would be no hardship to have a mild flirtation with the lady in the hope of sneaking a fast one through her defenses.

Presently he heard the sound of a measured step and the ring of spurs from the patio, upon which the window of his room opened. Came the scraping of chairs, followed by the murmur of two voices, a man's and a woman's. Allan listened. He could not make out any words, but he was sure he knew those voices.

He stole to his window and looked cautiously through a crack in its shutter. Yes! Asia and Colonel Escobar, nose to nose at a small table some 20 yards distant. They were talking earnestly, and Allan would have given must to know the subject of conversation. He saw Escobar take a long white envelope, backed with sealing-wax, from the breast pocket of his tunic and slip it across the table to Asia; and he saw the young woman put it carefully in her handbag and close the catch securely.

He did a quick problem in angles and distances. If he wasn't mistaken, the bathroom down the hall might easily be within earshot of the couple. Worth trying, anyhow!

He sped down the deserted hall, his bare feet soundless on the red-tile flooring. Into the bathroom — lock the door—across the room to the window! It was all a matter of seconds. Then he was listening — hard! Escobar was speaking, his voice light but with an undertone of seriousness.

"And when, dear lady, am I to receive the reward you promised me? Could I do more than I have to prove my devotion?"

"It will be soon—now!" Allan had to strain his already strained ears to catch the low response. "You'll have no reason to regret your kindness to me, Alfredo! This—what you have done for me—will literally save my life!"

"I hope it won't cost me mine," said the colonel good-humoredly.

McCarthy Upset Over Yanks; Keeps Rookies

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 3—(AP).—New York Yankees are heading for home with a lustreless beall club, and if people didn't have so much confidence in the managerial genius of Joe McCarthy and the known capabilities of some of his veterans, there might be some doubt about their future.

McCarthy himself is not satisfied. He does not say so, but actions speak louder than conversation, and for the first time in the memory of writers covering the Yanks the team pulled away from camp last night without thinning out the rookies. This was in spite of the fact that some of the Yankee farm clubs are crying for talent.

Pitching Fair; Hitting Weak

The pitching has looked good and bad by turns, the fielding but passable and the hitting has been notable chiefly for its absence. However, the failure to hit as a team has not worried McCarthy, because most of the training parks have spacious outfields which make long flies out of balls that would be home runs for the bombers in the regular season.

Some of the individual players are causing concern, though.

Gerry Priddy and Buddy Hassett, both of them striving to nail down regular jobs in the infield, have been unable to show anything whatever at the plate. When they left Hassett had a batting average of .129 and Priddy owned a modest .179, and as a result the third base and first base position still are as open as when training started.

Priddy has looked satisfactory in the field and may yet find himself at bat. But Red Rolfe, who showed up late because of a recurrence of intestinal trouble, an has not yet played in a game, may be back at his old stand in the hrot corner. He believes he is well again and McCarthy says the veteran looks much better than was expected.

Hassett's rival for the first base position left vacant by Johnny Sturm going to the army is String Bean Ed Levy, who is leading the club hitting with a .342 pace. Levy has been in the Yankees' system for half-a-dozen years, however, without ever impressing the bosses too much.

Has Inside Track.

Levy is a righthanded hitter, which means tat if he were included in the same infield with Priddy, the Yanks would have a slightly lopsided righthand batting order. In addition he still is on the Kansas City roster and can be left there for instant call while the club would probably have difficulty getting waivers on Hassett. These factors seem to favor the Irish thrush from the Bronx opening the season on first.

Somewhere along the way there will be cuts—an outfielder, an infielder, a catcher, four pitchers — but for the present the Yankees are holding on to every one they can just to be sure the club is not as bad as it has looked.

SEE LEAFS HOPES PINNED ON DAY OUT-MANOEUVERING BOUCHE[R]

Or Perhaps Apps Line Can Whip Colville Setup

TORONTO, March 31—(CP)—The Stanley Cup semi-final series between New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs will be resumed here tonight, but curbside discussion has turned from reflections on the spirit (or lack of it) of the Toronto forwards and the strength (or lack of it) of the New York goalkeeper.

The burning question of the moment is whether Coach Day of the Leafs can make a mental comeback to wipe out the decisive strategic victory scored over him by Coach Frank Boucher of the Rangers in New York Sunday. The answer may have an important bearing on the outcome of the best-of-seven series, which Leafs lead 3-2 in games.

Boucher dealt stiff punch in the cerebral cortex in that Sunday game by playing the Colvilles and Shibicky against Toronto's Apps-Drillon-Nick Metz trio. The Toronto stars got nowhere and the New York second line did, which makes Boucher's manoeuver strategic to the extreme. Had it failed, of course, there would have been another description.

There are two alternatives. Day either could decide to yank Apps-Drillon-Metz every time the Colvilles and Shibicky shows or he could string along, let the lines oppose one another and see what happens. It is not impossible that Apps and Company would come to life and make the New York thinking backfire.

If Toronto hacks successfully through the welter of New York thinking to win, the series will be over and Leafs will await a winner in the Boston-Detroit semi-final. Should Rangers win, the seventh and deciding game will be played in New York Thursday.

Probable starting lineups:

Rangers		Toronto
Henry	Goal	Broda
Pratt	Defence	McDonald
Coulter		Goldham
N. Colville	Centre	Apps
M. Colville	Wings	Drillon
Shibicky		N. Metz

Wings Favored Over Bruins In Second Game

DETROIT, March 31.— (CP).— Coach Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings made many predictions as to the outcome of the National Hockey League playoffs at the start of the season and so far most of these predictions have come true.

Early in the N.H.L. season Adams said that the Red Wings would be the surprise team of the circuit, that both Detroit and Boston Bruins would win their quarter-final playoff series against Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks, respectively, and that the Wings would then beat the Bruins and enter the League finals.

Whether Adams predicted correctly in the outcome of the Detroit-Boston series will be decided this week.

The two teams clash in the second game of their best-of-five semi-final series tonight with the Wings high favorites as the result of their 6-4 win over the Bruins in Boston Sunday. Detroit has not been beaten in its last 10 home games and has only tied one of these.

On top of all that, the Wings' victory in Boston Sunday was their first since Dec. 7, 1937.

The Bruins have weakened steadily since they lost their famed Kraut line of Bobby Bauer, Milt Schmidt and Porky Dumart when the trio joined the Royal Canadian Air Force late in the season. The loss through injury of Centreman Bill Cowley, last year's league scoring champion, in the middle of the season didn't help the Boston cause any.

If a third game is necessary to decide the series, it will be played in Boston Thursday.

Terriers Swamp Rangers 15-11 In Wildwest Tilt

By The Canadian Press

A new western Memorial Cup hockey scoring record was posted in the books to-day following the 26-goal barrage in the thrill-packed Portage La Prairie Terriers-Fort William Hurricane-Rangers encounter here last night that ended 15-11 and pushed Terriers into the western final.

An overflow crowd of more than 5,000 fans filled the Winnipeg amphitheatre rink for one of the greatest hockey finishes in years. The Fort William sextet, fightingest Lakehead crew to enter playoffs, bowed out in three straight games in which the total scoring favored the Manitobans 33-27. Portage La Prairie will meet either Regina Abbotts or Edmonton Maple Leafs in the final.

In the Allan Cup division, Kimberley Dynamiters from British Columbia took the lead over Saskatoon Quakers in their best of five series and Port Arthur Bearcats ran their advantage to 2-0 in a similar series against Lethbridge Maple Leafs from Alberta.

Kimberley defeated Quakers 6-1 in the third game at Moose Jaw to go one up on games. Syd Fenn put the Saskatoon champions ahead 1-0 in the second period and the Quakers held that advantage until the 15-minute mark in the third period. Benny Redisky rattled home two goals and Sully Sullivan, Lyle Swaney, Calles and Sandy Sanderson one each in the ast five minutes for Dynamiters.

Bearcats Grab 7-3 Win

Bearcats from Thunder Bay forged to a 7-3 win in the third period, after moving out in front of Lethbridge 3-2 mid-way in the second stanza. Victory sent them out in front 2-0, with the first game of their series deadlocked 4-4.

Al Kelly and Steve Woochy each scored twice for the Lake-headers while Bert Laprade, Bill McKenzie and Len McDougall got one apiece. Mel Lunde and Morey Rimstad scored first period goals for Maple Leafs and "Moon" Mullen got their other counter.

At Winnipeg the high-powered Lin Bend-Joe Bell-Bob Love line of Terriers scored nine goals, while the second line of Wally Stefaniew-Jack McDonald-Bill Gooden got six. High point-maker for Portage La Prairie was Joe Bell with three goals and four assists. The Fort William attack was led by Bud Poile, ace pivot, with three goals and two assists.

The Regina Abbotts-Edmonton Maple Leafs best-of-five series continues tonight at Regina. First game ended a 2-2 draw.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer.

NEW YORK, March 31 (AP) — The rasslers will give you a hint of what to expect if the army keeps on taking young athletes . . . Wladek Zbysko, a prosperous Sullivan, Mo., farmer who held the championship 25 years ago, was back in action at St. Louis the other night, and Strangler Ed Lewis, who is well over 50, has been making a comeback campaign . . . Chances are the New York Commission won't pay any attention to Jimmy Johnston's yelps at today's meeting but the commissioners are the only ones within hearing that can ignore him . . . After the third round Friday Jimmy was telling Abe Simon to rush out and lean on Louis. "That will take 15 or 20 seconds and you'll last that much longer." . . . Leaving the ring Johnston was already complaining about paying a boy $10,000 for a fight and not even waiting for him to be counted out while some guys are paid only $21 a month to get themselves killed.

Today's guest star

Cleaning the cuff

Denver is looking ahead to big-time hockey—but not until after the war . . . And Dizzy Dean, always true to form, is reported holding out for more dough on his radio broadcasting contract . . . Billy Rogell, whose campaign promise was to enlist oldtime ball players to instruct Detroit kids, has persuaded the city council to add $6,000 to its budget to promote junior baseball.

Buck Newsom Is Sold To Senators

LAKELAND, Fla., March 21 (AP) —Louis (Buck) Newsom, the loquacious baseball pitcher, will do his talking now from Washington, where the competition from Congress may be stiffer but no doubt all the more fun for Buck.

Detroit Tigers, who match Newsom in stubbornness over salary if not in the art of discussion, sold the swachbuckling, 34-year-old righthander to Washington Senators last night, and wrote off their last major holdout problem.

General Manager Jack Zeller announced it as a straight cash transaction. The sum was not disclosed, but it was reported to have been considerably more than the $7,500 waiver price. Twice this Spring the Tigers had asked waivers on Newsom.

Newsom's departure from the Tigers, for whom he performed sensationally in the 1940 championship season with 21 victories against five defeats, had been considered inevitable. Buck refused to accept a pay cut from his reported $33,000 of 1941 to a reported $13,000.

The pay cut for Newsom was part of a general salary slash through the Tiger squad after the Tigers' come-down in the 1941 season, during which Buck lost 20 games and won 12.

Newsom has played with 15 teams since he broke into pro ball in 1928 with Raleigh.

There was talk here today that Newsom might not stay long with Washington. The Senators are said to be hopeful of trading him to the Browns for third baseman Harlond Clift. If that happens, Buck will be serving the Browns for a third time. He had pitched for them before going to Washington in 1935.

Sport Equipment Shortage

LONDON, March 31. — (CP). — Sporting activities in Great Britain may be curtailed by lack of equipment as well as by government order.

Factories which formerly manufactured athletic equipment now are turning out war munitions and many of the countries from which raw materials for sports goods were obtained are overrun by German or Japanese forces.

Boxing is one sport most likely to be affected and fight managers already are scouring the country in search of equipment for their boys. If the worst comes to the worst, they say jokingly, they can always go back to bare-knuckle fights.

Football, too, will face a similar crisis when present stocks are exhausted, while with cricket it is doubtful if in future a new ball will be available after every 200 runs as is the practice in first class games.

Many other sports may soon lack equipment. Shortage of rubber already has affected trade in golf balls, and there is a similar lack of tennis and squash balls.

Men's New Clothing Regulations

EFFECTIVE MARCH 25th, 1942
UNDER ADMINISTRATOR'S ORDERS Nos. A-39 and A-49
OF THE WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

It will interest the men of Canada to know that the style regulations really are:

Briefly—the general style of the suit you have had in the past will continue in the future—save those slight differences that will conserve cloth and labor.

(1) Single-breasted suits only will be made with lapels.
(2) There will be no extra trousers.
(3) Trousers will not have pleats or cuffs.
(4) There will be no vents or buttons on sleeve cuffs.

The minute details are contained in Administrator's Orders Nos. A-39 and A-49 of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and apply to all manufacturers of men's clothing including merchant and custom tailors and made-to-measure departments of men's clothing shops.

These regulations do not apply to stocks on hand or orders placed before March 24th.

It is estimated that doing away with double-breasted suits, extra trousers, cuffs, etc., will result in the conservation of 1,300,000 yards of cloth, or sufficient to make 435,000 uniforms for the Armed Forces of Canada.

LONDON, March 31.— (AP) — British bombers attacked enemy shipping of fthe Norwegian coast Sunday night, the Air Ministry announced today, but informed sources said there were no major operations over German territory.

Amplifying previous reports on air assaults on Germany last week, a communique said two German fighters were destroyed over Luebeck Saturday night and one over the Ruhr Thursday night.

The R.A.F. is using fast fighter bombers to pepper German airdromes and industrial targets in occupied countries at night while long-range bombers are blasting Germany itself, the Air Ministry said.

Attacks on German airdromes and an oil refinery near Ghent railroad yards, mentioned in last week's communiques, were made by these fighter bombers and night fighters.

"The fighter command is taking full advantage of the present moonlight nights in maintaining its offensive against the enemy," the news service stated.

"Immediately that the daylight fighter sweeps have ended, night fighters and fighter bombers prepare to take off to carry the war still deeper into occupied territories."

Japs Are Outgunned

Allied airmen describe the Japanese as daring but their efforts have been in vain.

Japanese "stratosphere fighters" attack at heights where snow frequently is encountered. They dive upon the flying fortresses with all guns blazing and come out of the dive just above and to the rear of their intended prey.

This usually is an excellent vantage point from which to blow the bomber to smithereens but the Japanese are finding they have underestimated the efficiency of the tail gun in the huge bomber.

In every instance so far, these reports said, the tail gunner has brought down his man.

ManpowerCheck To Include Farm Employees

OTTAWA, March 31—(CP) — Labor Minister Mitchell announced last night that the Government's manpower inventory, which now is being organized, shortly will be expanded to include individual records of all farm employees.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King outlined in the House of Commons on March 24 an extended national selective service plan to obtain from every Canadian the maximum contribution to the country's war effort.

The plan provided for a national registration by employers covering all employees engaged in commerce and industry.

Mr. Mitchell recalled that the manpower mobilization plan provided that persons employed on farms on March 23—the day prior to announcement of the new plans — would be exempt from military service, "except in a minority of cases when it could be shown that particular individuals were not essential in farm work."

He added "it must, however, be emphasized that this exemption from military service does not apply to persons accepting employment in agriculture subsequent to March 23, unless they are returning from seasonal employment in lumbering and logging, forestry, fishing or trapping."'

When organization of the manpower program will be reviewed."

The Labor Minister said some people had received the impression the supply of farm labor had been so greatly depleted that any one able to work on a farm should immediately accept farm employment. He said this "is quite wrong."

Ralston Tours Prince Rupert

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., March 31 (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston and Air Minister Power today are busy viewing at first hand the defences of Canada's Pacific coast.

The ministers, accompanied by army and air force officials, will visit defence installations in the Prince Rupert district today and hop off for Vancouver later in the Royal Canadian Air Force planes which brought them to this northern coastal town yesterday.

On his arrival here yesterday Col. Ralston said government and military authorities "are fully appreciative of the position in which the people of the Pacific coast find themselves."

The defence minister was noncommital when questioned as to his opinion in regard to defence. But he did say that "we are plugging along just as fast as we can in the matter of defence."

Both Col. Ralston and Mr. Power said they were making the tour "to see and not to talk."

Acompanying Col. Ralston in one of the R.C.A.F. planes on his arrival here yesterday was Major General R. O. Alexander, general officer commanding, Pacific command. Air Minister Power was accompanied by Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of the Canadian air staff, and Air Commodore L. F. Stevenson, air officer commanding, western air command.

OBITUARIES

MISS ISABELLE POLLOCK

WARWORTH, March 3.—(ENS)—The funeral service for Isabelle Pollock which was held at 2:30 Sunday afternoon in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was largely attended. Rev. W. E. Smyth had charge. He was assisted by Rev. Dr. J. R. R. Cooper.

Her death which occurred in the York County Hospital, Newmarket on Thursday was caused by head injuries received in a fall from a speeding ice boat on Lake Wilcon on Sunday, March 22. She was to have been married in June to H. B. Helling of Toronto, who was with her at the time of the accident.

Following her death deceased was taken to Toronto, where a service was held Thursday evening in the funeral chapel of Morley S. Bedford. On Friday the remains were brought to the family residence in Percy township. The whole community was shocked and saddened by her death.

Miss Pollock is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Pollock and was born in Percy township 28 years ago. She attended S.S. No. 5A at Brickley, high school at Warkworth and Peterborough Normal School. For five years she has been a teacher at Toronto Allenby Public School.

Her friendliness, cheerfulness and pleasing personality won for her many friends.

The many floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which she was held.

Besides her sorrowing parents she is mourned by one brother, Donald, and one sister, Mrs. Donald Knight, Norham.

The pall bearers were: Messrs. Arthur Ward, Cecil Hopkins, J. W. Mowat, Percy Campbell, James O'Rielly and George Oliver.

The flower bearers were: Messrs. Harry and Charles Ewing, John Convey, Grant Allen, Clarence Boyce, Gordon McCubbin, Eric McKague and Bruce White.

Interment Warkworth Cemetery.

JOHN CARTER

There passed away on Monday, after a short illness, John Carter of 33 Lansdowne street. Mr. Carter was born 78 years ago in the township of Percy, being the son of Joseph Carter and Sarah King, but the greater part of his life was spent in Otonabee township, where he was widely known and highly respected. On retiring he came to Peterborough to live. He was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Carter is survived by one son Harry of Otonabee, and one daughter, Mrs. Alex Graham of Lakefield; three sisters, Mrs. William Atkinson of Peterborough, Mrs. Robert Steele of Billings, Montana, and Mrs. Alfred Brooks of Hastings, and two brothers, Julian of Renfrew, and Joseph of Peterborough. Mrs. Carter died last September.

The funeral will be held on Thursday at 2.00 p.m. from his late residence, 33 Lansdowne street, with interment in Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Dr. J. D. Smart of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church will officiate.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

ST. LUKE'S (2ND ARMOUR)

The bright moon shone down on the council rock as Alan Northcott led the pack in the grand howl at the last pack meeting.

The story of White Owl was begun at Red Flower by Akela. Knot tying was the main item of practice for study. Mr. and Mrs. Langhorne were guests of the pack for the evening.

Owing to this week being Holy Week, the combined pack practices for the scout craft show will be postponed to the following dates: Thursday, April 9, at St. Andrew's, April 16, at St. Luke's, Thursday, April 23 at Mark street, and Thursday, April 30, at St. Andrew's.

There will be a change for next meeting. The sixers have notified each of their sixes to meet at Akela's and Baloo's home. The Red six at Baloo's home and the Blue six at Akela's home, so bring your models and be prepared to work hard. These meetings will start at 6.30 p.m., as usual.

The troop meeting opened at 7.30. The scout master gave a talk on woodcraft and the coming scout craft show. All the members promise to put in a display.

The troop extends a hearty welcome to Ernest Wade of R.R. 11, Peterborough. He is now a member of the Buffalo patrol.

On Friday next, April 3, the troop will hike to the Warsaw caves. Everybody to be on hand, with bicycles in good shape. Meet at scouter's home at 8.00 a.m. sharp.

AT ST. JOHN'S

A good attendance was recorded at the last cub meeting which took the gorm of a games night. The following games were enjoyed: Rats and Rabbits, Exchange, Bean Bag relay, Post Office, and the old favorite British Bull Dog.

This weeks' meeting is postponed owing to Holy Week, the next meeting will be held on Friday, April 10, at 7.00 p.m.

During the last meeting Donald Searles and Dick Schram received their first stars, and Cub Stuart Wigg gained his two year service star. All cubs are asked to work on their entries for the coming scoutcraft show, the Easter holidays being a good opportunity for getting down to business.

We understand that Akela Cpl. F. R. Pammett has been able to secure his transfer to his old unit, the Prince of Wales Rangers, and we wish him the best of luck back with the old gang.

The crew will meet as usual on Thursday at the den. We would like to see as many as possible turn out. We understand that Ron Gynane is getting ahead with his painting of "B.P." and we hope he will exhibit some of his pictures in the scout craft show.

SACRED HEART

Aholy there, Peter, Father. Those were some of the words of call you may have heard last Wednesday night from the basement of the Sacred Heart Church, if you happened to pass by about 9 o'clock in the evening. Those frantic calls filled with force came from a few ladies, all members of the Auxiliary to the scout group, who had an executive meeting that night, but having a faithful man who looks after the church, who locks the doors up tight to keep unwanted people out after hours (in this case "in") being accustomed to it, he again faithfully locked the door and there were four ladies worried and scared to death until some fair couple came by and heard their plea for freedom and arranged to get them out. We can imagine the looks on their faces being faced with the possibility of being there for the night, and at home no breakfast in the morning.

We don't want you to say that we are one of those who say "I told you so," but nevertheless it did happen. You remember us saying in our last report that after a long search for a leader for the cubs we found a fair young man. And do you remember us saying that we didn't know just how long we are goin gto have him? Well, I'm afraid not very long. He, too, was caught in the draft or russing for recruits and thus we are losing another prospective leader and in the meantime we march on in search for more leaders. Who will be next?

Patrol leaders began their series of special meetings, so that they may carry on for at least a short time, with instructions on "How to get patrol spirit and how to teach tenderfoot test" last Wednesday night, while on Sunday morning instructions were received in "How to make patrol boxes and troop trek carts." We hope that within a short time these will materialize into reality.

Last Tuesday night tenderfoot tests and signalling were on the agenda, finishing up with a camp fire with the Bulldogs growling the entertainments out, while the Foxes barked about the last meeting by reading the troop log. Strict inspection of shoes and patrol corners took many points off the competition, which will close this week for the first part of the year.

Last week at the cub pack, we found Baloo and Baghera carrying on with the meeting. We noticed several boys missing. We believe that the boys think that there are no cub meetings going on; this is a mistake, as business is going on as usual. A good number of magazines were brought in again by some of the boys, but still more could be brought in by some of the others.

SCOUT CRAFT MEETING

At a meeting of the scout craft show committee, held last week, we were glad to find out that preparations are going ahead strong in connection with the coming show. Every troop and pack has been visited and encouraged. Reports turned in show that all sub-committees have prepared their program of events for each one of the three night. Every leader and cub and scout are doing their part to make this event the most successful. It is expected that there will be a display of articles by the A.R.P. committee. We hope and ask that each group try to have a special exhibit of some kind by their own efforts. There will be lots of space provided for it.

Bird houses built and found satisfactory will be if their owners are willing, taken out to the camp grounds to shelter birds out there. Boys making them may justly feel proud to have their bird-houses there for our feathered friends.

As this show is held purely to enrouse the interest of the general public in the work of scouts in Peterborough, there will be no prizes or awards of any kind, except probably a letter of commendation from the executive, in appreciation of the work the boys are doing. I am sure that boys will feel proud to show what they can make, and not expect rewards for their efforts, except the praise of the public who will see it.

Scouter George Groombridge is to look into the publicity end of this affair, and he will get other interested people to help him in this part of the work.

Mr. A. Butcher, in conjunction with the executive committee of this show will look after the arranging of the hall for the exhibits while our friends from the south, Peter Dominik will look after the entries entered. If anything gets lost, blame him for it; he can take it.

With all these arrangements and work, this show can not be anything but a success and we hope that each individual scout, cub and scouted will continue with their support and at the end Mr. and Mrs. Citizen will pass their praises on for the efforts.

ATTENTION, SCOUTERS

Commissioner J. T. Hornsby is still waiting for some of those reports as requested by him about six weeks ago. Why not attend to them at one. We know you are a busy bunch, but these lists are needed. So act now.

SALVAGE

Murray Street troop is warned that it is expected to be on duty at the salvage centre on Friday, April 10, one week from this coming Friday. It is your turn for a good turn. So please prepare to carry on.

US Senate Votes To Double Privates' Pay

WASHINGTON, March 31.—(AP) —The Senate voted 73 to 0 yesterday to boost the starting pay of United States Army privates from $21 to $42 a month.

The measure, which now goes to the House of Representatives, increases the base pay of soldiers and sailors all along the line, adjusts allowances for other personnel in the army, navy, marine corps, coast guard, geodetic survey and public health service and equalizes pay in the ranks of the army and navy. It was the first basic change proposed in the rate of army pay since 1922.

No provision is made for increasing the pay of commissioned officers with the exception of second lieutenants of the army and naval ensigns, whose annual pay would be moved up from $1,500 to $1,800.

Senator Edwin Johnson, chairman of a subcommittee which studied the bill for six months, described the increases as "very moderate." He said he was surprised to find that "the Australians are still a couple of jumps ahead of us," paying their privates $62.10 a month.

Asphodel Couple Honored By Friends

A large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Girven of Asphodel on Thursday evening to extend their best wishes on the occasion of their departure from the farm. During the course of the evening, in which dancing and cards were enjoyed, Mr. and Mrs. Girven were presented with an occasional chair, an end table, and a gladstone bag. These gifts were accompanied by an address which was read by Philip Fitzpatrick. Mr. Girven, in response, expressed the thanks of himself and Mrs. Girven for the kind remarks and lovely gifts.

The base pay in the Canadian army is $1.30 a day.

Desperate Problem

MONTREAL, March 31—(CP).—Leo Trudeau, representative of a Canadian rubber firm, said today the rubber situation was "desperate" and that this problem was one of the most difficult confronting the Dominion Government.

Mr. Trudeau spoke before the annual convention of the motor freight carriers of the Province of Quebec.

"Of all war materials, rubber is one of the most important," he said. "Without rubber, no blitz. Without rubber it is impossible to wage war successfully."

Wheezing in the Chest Points to Bronchitis

The principal symptom of bronchitis is a dry, harsh, hacking cough accompanied by a rapid wheezing and tightness across the chest.

There is a raising of phlegm, especially in the morning. This phlegm is at first of a light colour, but as the trouble progresses becomes yellowish or greenish.

You may find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to help stimulate the weakened bronchial organs, relieve the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts, loosen the phlegm and mucous, and aid nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulation.

Price 35c a bottle; the large family size, about 3 times as much, 60c, at all drug counters.

MAIN STREET —TOPICS—

HOME FROM BRITAIN.

In the convoy that brought three officers and two sergeants of the Glengarry Highlanders were three other ranks. These soldiers are Pte. Jack James; Corporal Trotter and Pte. Stanley Webb.

HE MODELLED CLOTHES.

A husky member of the Canadian Tank Corps, now home on leave, is taking quite a riding from the motor mechanics in the city. This man formerly worked for Gillespie Garage, and three weeks ago, one of the Toronto papers decided they would run a full page of pictures on how well dressed the Canadian soldier is. The local boy was chosen to model the clothes, and it is reliably reported that the blushing, handsome, 6 foot 2 soldier did a fine job.

THE THREE "R'S."

Roy Girven of Hood and Cumming Motors said the garage operators attending the meeting in the Empress Hotel on Monday night were talking the language of tears. They were laboring under the three R's, regulations, rules and restrictions, and waiting for the next barrage of restraining legislation.

INCISIVE CONTRAST.

Says Winchell: "The next time you hear any one complaining about a 10 or 12-hour day, remember that MacArthur's men aren't complaining about a 10 or 12-hour life."

RUSH FOR CUFFS.

Did somebody mention the word "sacrifice" during the last week or so, that same word which has been floating about since the sinking of the "Athenia" back in September 1939? Think of this! Every shop in Peterborough stocked with made-up suits of men's clothing sold scads of them at the week-end—to heroes who objected to sacrificing those things they call cuffs down around the ankle line of their pants. Every little restriction stirs the same quality of re-action. The spirit of grab goes to work whether for sugar, gasoline, rubber and superfluous cuffs on Egbert's pants.

HOCKEY PLAYER GRADUATES.

A.C.1 Jack Jopling, R.C.A.F., graduated as a wireless operator on ground work, at Montreal last Friday, and with him as A.C.1 Ross Zealand of Cobourg. It was one of the largest classes ever to graduate in Canada in the B.C.A.T.S. Jopling played centre for the Peterborough senior hockey squad last year and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jopling of Bridgenorth.

ONE OF THE FIRST.

Mrs. H. E. Moore, Queen Street, Lakefield, happened to be listening to her radio after midnight on Monday and was able to get a testing broadcasting from the new radio station CHEX. Mrs. Moore reports the program came in clear as a bell. Reports from Bethany, Warsaw, Madoc and Bancroft all indicate reception was perfect, and every radio in the district for many miles around will be tuned to 1430 when the station makes its inaugural broadcast at 7.30 this evening.

HERE IS A BOUQUET.

The grapevine has brought information that the workers down in the Genelco plant are determined that production records will be set, and any existing ones busted wide open in the next few months. Apparently these workers are determined that their effort if organized can be a great help in winning the war and they are right. The bouquet goes to these workers who are not looking for leadership, nor letting George do it, but are straining at the harness themselves and doing a good job of it.

GASOLINE RATION CARDS.

Chamber of Commerce officials reported that by closing time tonight well over 80 per cent of the gasoline ration books for this district have been issued. Many of the remainder will go to people who tied their cars up for the winter and have not as yet secured their new markers.

USING KAWARTHA FILM.

The technicolor film, "Call of the Kawarthas," is on its way to Detroit to be shown at the Detroit News Travel Show after a round of projections in the Cleveland area, City Clerk Outram told the Examiner today. It was taken by Fred L. Roy two years ago, and is still telling an attractive story of the summer playgrounds of the Kawarthas.

USE COUPONS WEDNESDAY.

At seven o'clock this evening sale of gasoline without ration coupons stops for the duration, and any service station operator or owner who sells gas in violation of the regulations will have the key turned on his station, and will face either a stiff ine or a jail trem. It means that the man who has not receeived his ration book as yet, can tie up his car until he does get the ration coupons.

THE RUSH IS ON

Service stations will take a beating between five and seven this evening judging from sales of gasoline during the day. The Shell station at Charlotte and Rubidge has been operating at top speed all day, and Joe Detcher on George was starting to feel the pressure at noon. Many stations are trying to get extra help for the rush hours this evening.

Power Peak Is Up 1,300 H.P. In Past Year

Peterboro's electric power peak was 12,000 h.p. for February as compared with 10,700 h.p. in February last year, R. L. Dobbin, manager, reported to the Utilities Commission Monday afternoon.

The electric distribution system, for the second lot of Wartime houses, north of Park Hill was completed during the month. Very little rural work was done other than maintenance.

Mr. Dobbin's review of the waterworks and gas departments follow:

The pumpage for February 1942 was 85,275,000 gallons as compared with 74,686,000 gallons in February 1941. The pumpage has increased about 12 per cent over 1941 due to increased industrial use.

The weather was milder than last year on the average, although there were several days of very low temperature.

The filter plant was shut down from February 1st to February 10th and all water drained out of the clear water basin and the large reservoir. During this time water was taken directly from the river and chlorinated only. The river water was of very good quality, so that there was no danger of pollution. The color was rather high, but this was not important.

The various structures were examined and repairs made where needed. Nothing of any importance was found.

Work was continued on the mains and services for Wartime Housing. 357 feet of 8-inch main was laid on Donegal street, and 30 services; 25 of the latter were lead pipe services, the first we have laid since 1914. The others were galvanized iron pipe.

An air compressor and two pavement breakers were secured about the middle of the month, to be used for breaking frost which in some case was four feet deep.

Fire hydrants have been inspected regularly. Three only were found with ice in them.

A bad leak at the Military Training Centre at the Exhibition grounds was repaired. This was found to be a broken 6-inch main.

Gas Department

The amount of gas made at the plant continues to increase, being 10 per cent over last year.

Serving On West Coast

Pte. William Whitred, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Whitred, of Hastings. Pte. Whitred, who is a radio instructor in the Midland Regiment, left this week for a post on the west coast.

Colonel Dewart Turned Down As O.C. Of Unit

It was with deep and profound regret that the members of the Prince of Wales Rangers learned today from National Defence Headquarters that the first O.C. of the regiment and their present leader, Lt.-Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., E.D., will not be permitted to command the First Battalion on active service because of new restrictions as to the age limits for senior officers.

The news came as a shock because Lt.-Col. Dewart had succeeded in passing the rigorous medical examinations and the regiment was rejoicing in its good fortune at being under the command of a veteran of the first World War and a soldier in whom proven fighting ability is matched with extreme consideration for the welfare of his men.

Due to the strenuous training and gruelling combat drills which active units now undergo, National Defence Headquarters have now sharply lowered the age limits for officers. This is the first time that these new age restrictions have affected the local regiment but it is in line with the revolutionary changes which have been made in Canada's armed forces.

It has now been learned that the present policy is to send a number of officers who have seen active service overseas to all newly mobilized battalions. The new officer commandin the Prince of Wales Rangers will be a high-ranking officer of outstanding ability who will be sent here from England.

Until a permanent O.C. is sent to the unit, Major R. J. Bolton will be acting O.C His long years of service and his popularity with the officers and men of the regiment are a sure indication that the mobilization and training of the First Battalion will continue in the same efficient manner in which they were commenced under the leadership of Lt.-Col. Dewart.

RangersAverage 8 Men Enlisting Daily

Four officers of the Prince of Wales Rangers have officially received notice of their appointments with the unit. Major Robert J. Bolton is to be second in command of the battalion and for the present will be acting officer commanding the unit. Major R. C. MILK FOR BRITAIN.

The Brinton Carpet employees have made their fifth contribution to the Milk for Britain Fund, J. A. MacDonald of the Royal Bank announced to-day. The fifth contribution totalled $5.00, bringing the grand total up to $26.00. It was also reported the sum of $2.00 had been received from Miss Alice Curtis.

Members Of Rangers To Be Interviewed In Radio Program Being Planned

Interviews with members of the Prince of Wales Rangers (AF) Rifle regiment will be a feature of local and district interest when the first interview will be aired Wednesday evening over Radio Station CHEX at 1430 K.C. on your dial. The broadcast will begin at 11.10 p.m., immediately following the closing newscast of the day and will last for five minutes. The program will be heard the same time every evening until April 9 with the exception of Good Friday.

Regimental Sergeant Major Andrew Jackson of the Rangers will be introduced by the announcer and after he has spoken a few words, Sergeant Harry Walsh will give his impressions of the unit, but he has been warned beforehand that anything he might say detrimental to recruiting for the Rangers might be taken out of him when the R.S.M. conducts P. T. exercises Thursday morning.

It is expected these broadcasts will attract much interest because those taking part in them are men whom you will undoubtedly recognize as soon as their names are called.

The initial broadcast Wednesday night will include the first sergeant, first corporal, first lance-corporal and first private to join the Rangers after the call to mobilize was made known. For this reason, they are accorded this special privilege but many others will be heard in the nights to come.

R.S.M. Jackson was the first N. C.O. and Sergeant Walsh was the first in his rank Also to be interviewed by R.S.M. Jackson will be Corporal Geddes Harper, Lance-Corporal Barrett and Private E. F. Francis, all of Peterborough.

TheatreManager Lauds Studios Of Station CHEX

Jack Arthur, district manager of Famous Players, and one of the most widely known musical directors in Ontario, was loud in his praise of the studios of CHEX when he visited the Examiner on Monday. "Your studios are much more modern than any of the others in Ontario. I just wish the people who visit them could take a walk through CBL studios and compare the two. CHEX is without a doubt the finest that could be desired by any director."

Apart from his theatre duties, Mr. Arthur has made quite a name for himself as a musical director on the C.B.C. chain and is often heard on network hookups.

Mr. Arthur's first connection with Peterborough was in his capacity as musical director of the orchestra of the old Hippodrome Theatre in Toronto when he came here and secured Otto Gliddon as his first cornet player. Mr. Gliddon was the son of Rupert Gliddon, then director of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music.

New Recruits Route March Tonight

The last meeting and pay parade of the Prince of Wales Rangers Reserve Force, for the year will be held to-night at the armoury.

It will be a composite parade of the active and reserve force and a full turnout is expected. Since regimental accounts and stores must be transferred and the pay to the men cleaned up at once, it is imperative that all reserve and active members be present.

The dress for all ranks will be battle dress, great coats and wedge caps, rifles and side arms.

The parade will be under reserve battalion arrangements with all officers and men attached to their former companies. Col. Dewart, offier commanding, will address the regiment and Col. Morrow, honorary colonel, will also speak.

Following the fial pay for the year refreshments will be served. This will probably be the last get-together of the old and it is hoped it will be a memorable one.

It is hoped that officers who have been returned from overseas recently and were formerly connected with the Prince of Wales Rangers will be on parade.

High school boys writing exams will be excused from this parade and will be paid Wednesday afternoon after school.

Wartime Houses All Be Filled By End Of April

More Wartime Houses will have to be built in Peterborough if the housing accommodation is to be anywhere near adequate for the wartime industrial workers who are flocking into Peterborough in an ever increasing wave.

This condition is borne out by Stan Longhurst, Wartime Housing administrator, who reported today that already 30 families have moved into the houses in the 3rd project which consisted of 72 homes, and the remainder are allotted and will have tenants before the week is out. The 4th project embracing 78 dwellings, will be complete on April 15, and already 60 of the 78 houses have been taken up by industrial workers engaged in essential wartime industry.

Briefly this means that by April 30, every wartife house in the city will have a tenant and unless immediate steps are taken to provide more accommodation, industrial workers will be camping in tents along the river, because several hundred more are expected in the city to meet the needs of the factories, where the tempo of production is hitting the home stretch, and the factories are really humming.

Tire Thieves Strip Doctor's Auto

The epidemic of tire thefts that has been rampant in many parts of the province hit Peterborough during the night.

Thieves entered the garage of Dr. S. Y. Walsh, 418 Margaret avenue, jacked up his automobile and stole the four wheels, rims and tires. The garage was not locked, it is understood.

During the night also the garage of C. L. Myers, 297 Boswell avenue was entered and there the thieves got away with the spare tire off Mr. Myer's car. The garage was unlocked.

AIR FORCE TALK.

Did you ever hear of a Wog, a Weg, or a Wem. Well they are people. In air force parlance, a Wog is a wireless operator on ground work; a Wag is a wireless air gunner, and a Wem is a wireless electrical mechanic.

Dog Fanciers Sponsor Show For War Victims

On April 8, at 7 p.m., is the date and time set for the Pet Dog Show under the sponsorship of the dog fanciers of the city in aid of the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund. It will be held in the Peterborough Armouries by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., E.D., which incidentally is the finest location possible in the city for such an event as this.

Entry forms are now available through the kindness of J. A. McKone of the Peterborough Business College, and can be procured at the Peterborough Pet Stock Store on Charlotte Street, the Routley China Shop on George Street, the W. J. Welch Barber Shop on Hunter street, or from the secretary of the fund at The Examiner Office. The entry fee is set at the small figure of 25 cents, and all dogs are eligible to enter whether registered or not, or just plain mutts. First, second and third prize ribbons made available as a donation by Milf. Hardill of the Commercial Press and Jack Lewis, the manager of Kresge's Store, will be awarded, and there is already a large list of special prizes which have been given as a donation to the cause.

Admission tickets to the show, printed complimentary by George C. Scott are now on sale throughout the city at 25 cents each, and children who enter dogs can secure admission to the show for ten cents. All purchasers of tickets are advised to write their name and address on the ticket which will deposited in a container for that purpose when they enter the show, from which one will be drawn for the door prize of a registered Boston Terrier donated by Mrs. W. J. Welch.

Tickets are also on sale for a registered cocker spaniel nine weeks old donated for that purpose by A. C. Wolfe, which will be drawn for on the same night. These tickets are selling at 15 cents each, two for 25 cents, or 10 for $1; these having been donated to the cause by the Peterborough Printing Co., Ltd.

All the special prizes will be displayed shortly in the windows of the Men's Style Shop on Hunter street.

Churchill Club Total $951

The Churchill Club, which came into being less than a year ago under the chairmanship of Ross Dobbin, as a tribute to Rt. Hon Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of the Mother of Parliaments, for the express purpose of giving aid to air raid victims in Britain through this fund, is drawing close to the point where they will have contributed one thousand dollars to the fund.

With the contribution of $25, which stands in their name today, their total now stands at $951.10, and is the second largest to be received from any one source for the fund to date. The secretary of the club is suggesting that not very much of a push to add to the membership on the part of the committee could obtain this objective, and place them in the four-figure column.

One personal donation is also listed, this particular donor having already been several times previously noted in the list of acknowledgments for the fund.

Previously acknowledged	$39,194.26
M. F.	1.00
The Churchill Club (17th donation)	25.00
Total to date	$39,220.26

Lakefield Man Fined $29.50 In City Court

David McMurray, R.R. 4, Lakefield, who pleaded guilty in police court yesterday to a charge of reckless driving, following a traffic accident at Armour and Park Hill roads early Sunday morning was today fined $25 and $4.50 costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

McMurray's driving permit was cancelled by the magistrate for a period of six months.

Constable Leo Murphy, giving evidence this morning, stated that McMurray had failed to stop at a stop sign, and his car had struck the rear end of another automobile crossing the intersection and afterwards had crashed into a post. A woman in the other car had been injured and taken to hospital, he said.

"McMurray had been drinking but was not sufficiently intoxicated to be charged with drunken driving," Constable Murphy said.

Three Men Hurt

When an automobile plowed into a truck that was engaged in trying to haul another truck out of the mud on Highway 7 three miles west of Norwood early Sunday morning three men were injured and considerable damage done to the three vehicles.

A milk truck belonging to Duncan and Marie Johnston of Toronto had become stuck in the soft shoulder of the highway on its wrong side of the road and another truck belonging to the same owners was trying to extricate the other machine when an automobile driven by Clinton Crowe, R.C.A.F., Ottawa came along and collided with the first truck. It was pushed back against the stalled truck and both machines were damaged to the extent of around $100 in each case. After the collision the automobile went into the ditch, crashed into a fence and turned around.

Crowe, the driver of the car, sustained a split lip and had his teeth loosened. Jack Merrett, Peterborough, had six stitches in cuts on his face and Percy Payne sustained scratches on his shins.

War—25 Years Ago

By The Canadian Press

MARCH 31, 1917—British captured Vermond and threatened St. Quentin from three sides. German prisoners captured by British during first three months of 1917 totalled 4,679. Gen. Sir Stanley Maude's forces in Mesopotamia occupied Deli Abbas, 60 miles from Baghdad.

No Decision Reached In Traffic Case

Judgment was reserved by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning after the evidence and argument in the charge of drunken driving against Hugh Buchanan had been heard.

"This is a close case and I want to turn it over in my mind" the magistrate stated in reserving judgment until Tuesday of next week.

At the afternoon session yesterday the defence case was continued. Keith Innis, employed at the Buchanan and Godfrey service station, testified that he and Buchanan had left work together on the night in question and that they had gone to his home where each had two glasses of beer. He testified that Buchanan was quite sober when he left his house at 8 o'clock.

Buchanan corroborated the statement in regard to the two glasses of beer and said that they had not had the slightest effect upon him, so far as he knew. He said he had had nothing to eat before drinking the beer but that he was quite sober when he drove down George street and his car stalled at Charlotte street.

J. L. Airth gave character evidence stating that Buchanan's reputation for honesty and good conduct was of the best.

This morning Kenneth Bell who testified that he was locked up in the police station cells when Buchanan was put in there said he thought Buchanan was sober and quite normal when he came in. The witness said the accused walked all right and he noticed nothing unusual in his speech.

After hearing Defence Counsel Bradshaw and Crown Attorney McElderry His Worship reserved judgment.

Hotel Owner Pleads Guilty

Thomas Paulos, proprietor of a Havelock hotel, pleaded guilty in police court this morning to illegal possession of liquor and was fined $100 and $18.55 costs or three months in jail by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

Provincial Constable Price Morris, who with Provincial Constable Archie Grayling and two other officers raided Paulos' place, testified that the officers found four cases of beer and three bottles of whiskey in the stock room of the hotel and more whiskey, a bottle of beer and some wine in a bedroom

D. F. Miller of Havelock, appeared in behalf of Paulos and Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., prosecuted.

Another charge against Poulos of keeping liquor for sale was withdrawn by the crown.

Business Men Plan Organization To Protest Closing Of C.N.R. Line

Business men from every municipality between Port Hope and Lindsay will meet in the Chamber of Commerce at Peterborough on Monday April 6 at 7.30 to formulate plans to get action on keeping the C.N.R. line from Port Hope to Peterborough open for the duration.

Overtures made last summer failed to budge the Transport Board on this particular question, and when an appeal was made last autumn, the reply was that no new evidence had been presented to warrant reconsidering the plea. The heads of the various municipalities feel that recent developments make the operation of this li[illegible] war effort, and they further point out that radical changes in the gasoline and tire situation is sufficient to secure further consideration.

The leaders of all communities including Millbrook, Lindsay, Port Hope and Peterborough, have decided they have dealt long enough with the Transport Board and it is expected the decision on Monday night will be to carry the fight directly to the heads of the Canadian National Railways.

J. J. Dorris stated today that the meeting had been called by the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce in the interests of all municip[illegible]

"For my sake, querida mia, never let anyone guess who gave you what's in that envelope. Even for your dear sake, I've no desire to face a firing squad at dawn! And now—let's talk of more agreeable things. My reward, for instance . . ."

Allan found himself curiously uninterested in the colonel's reward. He went back to his bedroom and started dressing.

So Sun Su had sized up Escobar correctly, he reflected. Moreover, the shrewd Chinaman's comment and the remarks Allan had just overheard matched perfectly with the incident of the "friend" who had hurled the epithet "Traitor!" at the colonel of rurales. No reasonable doubt of his perfidy could remain.

"Seemed like such a decent fellow, too," summed up the American half regretfully. "As he said himself, you can't believe in anybody any more, or figure what they may be up to!"

is to his driving, he will have a smashup that will leave you minus a car and plus a bill for damages to somebody else's car and person. Anyone who lends their cars to adolescents might as well kiss them good-bye.

Your wife is unreasonable in her demands that you provide a car for her brother to joyride in. Evidently she is one of the women who think that the chief mission of their husbands is to support their families and provide them with luxuries.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I have the misfortune of being prematurely bald and it is ruining my life. I not only have to stand unending kidding about it, but I never date girls because I think they would not like to be seen out with me. I cultivate two or three hobbies to fill in my spare time so as not to brood over the good times I could have if only I had hair, but this is a cold way to comfort myself. Is there anything you could suggest that I could do?

BALDY.

ANSWER: Certainly, Baldy. Why don't you use as much sense as women do when their hair gets sparse? They buy themselves a good wig. Follow their example. That is what Mr. Rockefeller did. He wore a wig for many years. And the ambrosial locks of many an actor have been his only by right of purchase. You will say that your boy friends will kid you about this. No doubt they will at first, but they will soon tire of it, and strangers will not know of it, and girls will admire you for your good sense. DOROTHY DIX.

None For Employees

OTTAWA, March 31 — (CP). — Firms owning Consumer gasoline pumps are not permitted to sell gasoline to their own employees, the Department of Munitions and Supply said to-day.

"Consumer pumps are allowed to private companies solely for servicing their own vehicles," Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle was quoted. "They must not be used for any other purpose.

"The same regulation applies to Consumer pumps operated by or for the Federal Government."

SWEDISH EVACUATION

STOCKHOLM — (CP). — Swedish civilian authorities have tried out a new plan of evacuating from the cities all children under 15, sick folk, expectant mothers and people over 70, if and when Sweden is drawn into the war.

Knowing Etiquette Helps Win Popularity

Her Manners Put Men At Ease

The girl who gets the admiration and the dates has a simple secret—really no secret at all! She puts people at ease by always knowing the gracious, well-mannered thing to do!

So, though she knows a woman doesn't usually offer her hand, she extends hers at once when a man does.

If he says, "I'm Boyd Smith—remember me?" she doesn't murmur vaguely, "Well, the face is familiar—" Quickly she smiles, "Why of course I do!" White lies can be etiquette, too.

And if he pays her a compliment—"You look lovelier than ever"—she doesn't giggle or, the opposite extreme, act cool. She gives his sincerity the benefit of the doubt, says graciously, "Thank you."

He treats her accordingly. Knowing she appreciates good manners, he opens doors for her, helps her with wraps, hails the taxicab.

You could get that kind of attention, too! Our 32-page booklet gives the simple etiquette rules girls and men need to know for dating, telephoning, parties, visiting, dining out, dancing, introductions, theatre, sports events. Advises on office manners; also on petting.

[Send] your copy of "Etiquette for Young Moderns" send 15 cents in coins or stamps to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

PICK THE LONGER SUIT

PLAYING A No Trump contract, if your side has the same total number of cards in two suits, it is usually best to work first on the one in which those cards are divided the more unevenly. In other words, the suit which is longer. The reason, which should be obvious, is that, after it is established, you can run a larger number of tricks in it. Sometimes you see declarers, who don't count up the total number of tricks to be produced by different methods, pick the shorter suit to run when thereby they can't possibly get more tricks than one under the number required by the bid.

Believe it or not—South managed to get himself set after West led the spade J. He let it run to his A and then promptly went after the dummy's heart suit, as soon as he realized he could run it if the missing six cards were divided evenly, since he had the spade K remaining as a sure entry into the dummy. He took the heart K and A, led the 9 to West, let the spade 4 be won by the Q, took the next spade with the K and ran two more hearts. He now had six tricks. Adding two top diamonds made eight, but when he dropped the lead then with a diamond, the defenders set him, as East had unblocked by playing the Q on the second diamond trick, so West could take it as an entry for hearts.

When South was asked why he didn't set up the diamonds instead of the hearts, he said he didn't like to try that when he had only a singleton of that suit in the dummy. Imagine such a reason! If he had gone after the diamonds after winning the first trick, he could have counted up nine tricks by getting the same even break of outstanding cards which he needed to establish the shorter hearts. With a good break, diamonds could give him five tricks and hearts only four.

Keeping Out Of It

CAIRO, March 30—(AP) — King Farouk opened Parliament to-day with a speech declaring "Egypt will do all within its power to avoid war."

He added that the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty under which British armed forces use Egypt as a base would be adhered to, and that work on defensive communications would be pushed forward.

Splendid Talks Are Given At Springbrook's Women's Institute

BONARLAW, March 31—(ENS). —The Springbrook W.I. held their March meeting in the Sunday school room at St. Marks church on Wednesday with 24 members and 4 visitors present. The roll call, grandmothers of history, drew a fine response. The correspondence dealt with a letter of appreciation from Pte. Ralph McKeown, on active service somewhere in England, which was read and enjoyed by all. Mrs. John S. McKeown, convener, took the chair for the following program:

The motto, the country as grandmother knew it, was given by Mrs. Thos. Webb and she told several interesting things of by-gone days. Mrs. Ralph Wellman gave a piano solo; Mrs. Clarence McKeown gave a paper on pioneer days—a Christmas of long ago spent at the white house at Bath, Ontario, which has been owned by seven generations by the Fairfields and is still in splendid shape although built in the 70's. Mrs. A. Burkett gave a splendid comic reading; prizes were given for the tallest and shortest grandmother, Mrs. Thomas H. McKeown being the tallest and Mrs. Thomas Cadwell the shortest.

Mrs. Haache, of Deloro, president, was the guest speaker and she spoke on the splendid attendance of the branch, it beging one of the largest gatherings she hal attended this year. She cordially invited all to attend the convention at Ivanhoe on May 19.

A splendid contest was sponsored by Mrs. John S. McKeown, after which a dainty lunch was served.

The next meeting will be the annual meeting and will be held April 29 at Mrs. Thos. Webb's.

Born—At Marmora on Sunday, March 22, to Mr. and Mrs. Simon Mathews, a daughter.

Mr. and Mr. W J Barlow and Mr. John S. McKeows spent Sunday afternoon in Belleville visiting Mrs. Victor Irwin.

Mrs. Dave Wellman visited Mrs. John McKeown on Friday.

Mrs. Simon Mathews is spending a few days at her former home in Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Jones have moved to Stirling.

Mrs. S. S McComb has moved into the house previously occupied by Mr Clarence Wellman.

Mrs. John McKeown and Marion and Mrs. Ralph Wellman spent Friday in Belleville.

SHORT DRIVES IN BRITAIN

The ship was sent into the war zone on appeal of General Douglas MacArthur, before the latter's departure to take command of United Nations' forces in the southwest Pacific.

Trent River Road Drying Up Fast; Good Syrup Year

TRENT RIVER, March 31. — (ENS). — Highway workmen are engaged in taking down snow fence along this end of No. 30 and in grading the road surface which is drying up nicely this spring. Sideroads are slower in breaking loose from the winter's frost, however, and although most of them are passable they are heavy and rough yet.

Raymond Free of Seymour West has more than 600 trees tapped in his maple woods this spring and reports good runs of sap this past week. The majority of the sugar bushes in this vicinity are tapped, with farmers working short-handed in many cases to procure all the syrup possible. General price is $2.50 per gallon.

Group No. 4 of the United Church Ladies' Aid held a quilting and pot-luck dinner in the church dining-room on Thursday last. More than 25 were served dinner by the ladies and one quilt completed.

A miscellaneous shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Preston, who were married recently, was held at the Polmont Orange Hall on Friday evening last. Almost 200 friends and neighbors of the young couple crowded the hall to overflowing, and they received a great many lovely and useful gifts. Round and square dancing was held to the music of Fife's Orchestra of Norwood. Clifford Chaplin was floor manager, and at midnight called the guests of honor forward to receive the gifts with the good wishes of all present. Mr. Preston expressed the thanks of the young couple. Following the presentation lunch was served by the ladies.

Pte. Clifford Dunn, R.C.A.S.C., of Camp Borden, is visiting at his home.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown Seymour West, was the scene of a miscellaneous linen shower and presentation on Saturday evening, when friends gathered to honor their daughter, Miss Phyllis Brown, on the eve of her approaching marriage. More than 60 were present and a large representation from the Trent River United Church King's Daughters Class and Sunday School were on hand to present her with a hymnal in addition to the many linen gifts.

The address was read by Miss Irene Woods and the presentation made by Miss Doris Waters.

Games and contests were enjoyed by all present during the evening and a dainty lunch served at the close.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson, Havelock Road, have purchased the Rigby house in Havelock, and will move to that village in the near future.

Mrs. M. Stewart and Miss Alice Hay of Oshawa are visiting with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hay.

K. Chaplin, F. McLaughlin, P. Logan, Harold Carnrite, and Herbert Carnrite of Peterborough were week-end visitors at their respective homes.

Mrs. George Ellis has returned home after visiting in Lakefield and Peterborough.

A number of cottage owners took advantage of the fine weather this past week to pay a visit to their summer ersidences, Harry Jewett of Toronto, Mrs. Apted of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Loughlan of Toronto, and Dr. McCord of Ohio were at their cottages this past week.

First Bottle Convinced Her Syntona Was Great Medicine

Continued Treatment; Rid of Stomach Gas, Acidity, Rheumatic Pains; Free From Headaches; Sleeps Better

MRS. LOUISE FULCHER

"I had been in poor health for so many years that I really didn't remember what it was to feel otherwise until I began taking Syntona," said Mrs. Louise Fulcher, 11 Edinburgh Street, London, Ontario, recently.

"For years I suffered with stomach disorders. It got so bad that everything I ate caused gas with belching up of hot, sour liquids. This would be followed by heartburn with a feeling of dizziness and little black spots floating before my eyes. My back felt lame all the time and I was seldom free from sore, aching joints and muscles. To make maters worse my nerves became so upset that I'd lie awake unable to sleep after going to bed at night.

"A few weeks ago a neighbor told me of the good results she got by taking Syntona and I decided right there to try it. From the very first bottle I felt some better and I know it was going to help me. With this little encouragement I kept on taking it until now for the first time in years I can eat heartily without suffering afterwards from gas, acid-risings and heartburn. I haven't had any dizziness since and the aches and pains have been relieved. My nerves have calmed down so that I have no trouble getting to sleep at night and as a result I feel so much better in every way that even my work seems easier. I am glad to add my name to the many who are recommending this fine medicine."

Syntona is made from 12 of the finest grade Herbs, Roots and Barks. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and many who have used it say that even after the first few days the whole system takes on a new feeling of energy and vigor.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)

Red Cross Needs To Bring Call For Nine Millions

TORONTO, March 31 — (CP).—An appeal for $9,000,000 in voluntary contributions to the work of the Red Cross Society will be launched throughout Canada May 11, and through the succeeding two weeks, it was announced here today in a joint statement by Jackson Dodds, chairman of the central council, and Mr. Justice P. H. Gordon, chairman of the national executive of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

"The Canadian Red Cross Society needs urgently a minimum of $9,000,000 in order to carry on its work for the current 12 months in the mitigation of human suffering," the statement declared, continuing: "This is the first appeal since October, 1940, to the volnuntary generosity of the Canadian people.

"The Government of Canada recently arranged to supply the funds needed by various war service organizations, but the Canadian Red Cross Society was necessarily excluded from that arrangement. The reason for this is that the Red Cross Society is international, its position rests upon the conventions of Geneva ratified by act of parliament. These require the Red Cross Society to be supported by voluntary subscription, and it is only by maintaining such support that the Canadian Red Cross Society can command the rights, privileges and immunities guaranteed under international law. No belligerent government may finance the Canadian Red Cross Society; to do so would be to destroy the international status of the society and even wipe out its immunity under fire.

Thousands Lend Aid.

"Throughout the whole of the period since the October 1940 campaign, the Canadian Red Cross Society has enjoyed unexampled co-operation at the hands of the people of Canada, the press, the radio and the motion picture industry. Thousands of women in all parts of Canada have worked faithfully and unremittingly to supply the Red Cross Society with the materials that it needs to take care of the requirementh of Canadian soldiers here and overseas, and to look after the needs of the sick and the suffering amohg the bombed-out population of Britain, and to prepare for whatever eventuality may befall Canada itself.

"It is only through the Canadian Red Cross Society that any Canadian can do anything for a Canadian, British, Australian or New Zealand prisoners of war. It is only through the Canadian Red Cross Society's inquiry bureau and its facilities for international investigation that information may be obtained as to missing Canadian fighting men. It is only through the services of the blood donor branch of the Red Cross Society's work that those Canadians who are unable to fight, can supply blood to make good some of that shed by our fighting men overseas.

"The Red Cross is shipping 40,000 parcels to prisoners of war each week and has been asked to increase these shipments to 80,000 per week. The cost of supplying prisoners of war parcels this year alone is more than $5,000,000.

Call To Every Citizen

"The Red Cross Society needs now $9,000,000. With its campaign starting on May 11, it will pursue an intensive canvass in which it hopes to reach every Canadian and to afford every citizen a patriotic opportunity to give to a noble cause.

"We realize that the time for preparation is short, and that every branch and every division of the Red Cross Society in Canada will require to work unremittingly—in some cases almost night and day—to be ready in time for the opening of the drive.

"Any more protracted period of prepartion would conflict with the war financing needs of the government of Canada itself. The Red Cross Society is desirous of co-operating with the government in every possible way. Therefore, the campaign must begin on May 11. The active canvass is designed to conclude on Saturday, May 23. During those two weeks the Society hopes to collect at least $9,000,000 in cash and pledges from the Canadian people.

"We appeal earnestly to Canadians everywhere to prepare themselves now to answer the call and to fill this most urgent need."

Chapter Reviews Group Activities

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 31 (ENS) —A review of group activities was given by leaders in connection with the regular meeting of the Trent Valley Chapter I.O.D.E. on Thursday evening. Highlight of these reports was given by Miss June Burgiss, leader of Group III, which raised $11.75 at a bridge held in the I.O.D.E. rooms. Card winners were Mrs. H. Bleeker, Mr. Jack Smith, and Mrs. H. T. Scott got the lucky chair award. She expressed thanks to J. E. Bitks, Roy Barnum and Burgiss Brothers for donating the prizes. All of the ticket money from a euchre arranged by Group I under Miss Pat Cryderman, was not in so she was unable to give a complete report. Mrs. E. Tinney, Mrs. M. Reid and Miss Geraldine McMullen won the three prizes on that evening. For Group II Miss Helen Wood said a smock was being made with members selling spaces for names on it, but complete returns were not available. The Regent, Miss Clara Lucy, extended a welcome to three new members.

Quick Action On Survey Of Manpower

Will Shift Technical Experts At Once, Urge All Sit Tight

OTTAWA, April 1.—(CP).— The government's new selective service program will be in actual operation in the next few days with unemployment insurance officials acting as temporary selective service officers, Elliott M. Little, director of National Defence Service, said at a press conference to-day.

Preliminary studies intimated some tightening of the program would probably be necessary to provide definite information on labor movement, Mr. Little intimated.

"We have got to be able to at least record the movement of labor," he said, explaining that plans to compile this information accurately were already under consideration and use may be made of the present unemployment insurance organization on an enlarged scale.

Mr. Little told newspapermen who gathered in Labor Minister Mitchell's House of Commons office that it is intended to establish a "planning department" in his branch to assemble details of manpower requirements.

He said it might be necessary to move the "people to the work" or "the work to the people," but that training of new workers under special programs might make large-scale movements unnecessary.

Compiling information on the manpower needs of industry in advance of actual requirements was one of the most difficult phases of the program and would be handled by a re-organized labor co-ordination committee working as part of the selective service advisory board, the director announced.

Results of the questionnaire circulated through unemployment insurance channels would be compiled within three months and further registrations would probably be ne-

Gone In 3 Minutes

NORFOLK, Va., April 1 — (AP). — Weak and numb from exposure, 13 crewmen of a torpedoed Panamanian merchant ship were landed at Norfolk Saturday night by a rescue vessel which picked them up after 45 hours adrift on the stormy Atlantic Ocean in one lifeboat and two rafts.

Two crew members were known dead and 38 were presumed lost, the Fifth Naval District said today in announcing the sinking in 3 minutes of the medium-sized ship, which occurred early Thursday night.

Scotia Fishers Find Subs Let Them Pass

HALIFAX, April 1—(CP).—Fishermen sailing out of some Nova Scotia ports are getting to look on meetings with submarines as just part of the day's work, judging from stories reaching here from the south shore harbors in the last couple of weeks.

According to the accounts, some of which arrive here second or third hand and are difficult to verify, subs have been sighted off the coast by fishing vessels at least six times recently. The stories all agree that the underwater vessels made no attempt to attack the fishermen.

The schooner men generally agree that the subs they saw were enemy craft. Two of them are claimed to have actually hailed schooners, one of them asking for food and having its request turned down.

Here are some of the stories:

1. The crew of the Lunenburg schooner Marilyn Clair were dressing fish one night by the light of a brilliant cluster of electric bulbs on deck when a sub came to the surface nearby and an officer stepped out. He asked in good English the reason for the light and, when he was told, the submarine dived back under.

2. A German sub surfaced beside another schooner — unidentified— and asked for food. After a week on the Banks, the ship had only enough for a quick trip back to port, and its crew said there was none to spare. The submarine left without taking further action.

3. The schooner Robertson II, one of Shelburne, reported being trailed for some distance by a submarine, which made no attempt to molest it.

4. The Robertson I, also from Shelburne, sighted one at dusk, but it quicly vanished in the darkness. This schooner's crew also reported seeing last week two flashes of light that they took for a ship torpedoing.

2,400 Nazis Slain In 2 Battles

Lose 2 Strongholds; Siberian Units Restored To Million

MOSCOW, April 1 — (AP). — German counter-attacks which cost the Nazis 2,400 men in a desperate attempt to regain lost ground were announced to-day by the Russians, who said one crossroads village changed hands several times in a battle into which both sides hurled medium and heavy tanks artillery and planes.

The Germans finally were forced back there, Tass reported, and the Soviet Information Bureau declared that altogether hte Red Army won back three towns in the latest tests of strength.

In the fight for the crossroads town the Germans lost 250 men. Tass said 1,800 German dead were left on another battlefront in the central sector after a four-day battle.

In London a responsible foreign source said to-day that Russia, while mobilizing the bulk of its military manpower against the Germans, had restored its Siberian Army to nearly 1,000,000 men who are fairly well equipped.

The Russians "are watching the Japanese carefully," he said.

The Japanese, he reported, have suggested to Russia that, as a show of good will toward Japan, the Soviet's Far Eastern troops would be withdrawn to a line of demarcation agreed upon by both countries and that certain airports should be abandoned. He expressed doubt the Russians would agree.

This informant said Japan had outlined to the Germans the following disposition of Japan's troops numbering 76 divisions: 14 divisions in Manchoukuo, 13 in China, three in Burma, six in Java, three in the New Guinea area, six in the rest of the Netherlands East Indies, five in the Philippines, three on Japanese islands, five in Formosa, and 18 in strategic reserve.

Finger On Pulse

OTTAWA, April 1 — (CP). —Maj.-Gen. Maurice Pope has been appointed representative of the war committee of the Canadian Cabinet in Washington, for the purpose of maintaining contact with the combined chiefs of staff committee there and the planning committee which operates in connection with that body, it was announced from Prime Minister Mackenzie King's office today.

Oil Head Admits Rubber Facts Not Given Navy

WASHINGTON, April 1 —(AP)— President W. S. Farish testified under questioning today that officials of the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) had not disclosed the full process of manufacturing synthetic rubber to a civilian representative of the United States Navy when the latter inspected Standard's plant in 1939.

This disclosure caused Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Dem.-Wyo.) to assert in a hearing before the senate defence investigating committee that any layman such as he could not "avoid the inference that an official of Standard was instructed to steer the Navy official away from a knowledge of the manufacturing process."

Testimony on the incident came after Farish, replying to charges made last week by the Assistant Attorney General, Thurman Arnold, that Standard has stifled synthetic rubber production in this country because of cartel agreements with the German die trust, told the committee that Standard had turned its information about synthetic rubber over to the munitions board in 1939.

O'Mahoney read from a letter, taken from Standard's files and previously introduced in the record by Arnold, excerpts indicating that a naval representative, identified only as Mr. Kerkenthin, had visited Standard's plant in 1939.

In this letter, an unidentified Standard representative said that Werkenthin came away without any fundamental knowledge of Standard's process of producing butyl synthetic rubber.

Doggedly Bar Trail To Prome Oil

Chinese Shift Back From Toungoo Hold Mandalay Rd.

NEW DELHI, April 1 (CP)—British and Indian detachments cut off from Prome by a Japanese wedge across the road at Shwedaung have battled their way back to the main British line in a two-day fight which left the invaders' forward forces badly mauled, a communique declared today.

Nevertheless, the war report said, the Japanese still are massed in strength at Shwedaung, on the road 10 miles south of Prome, and astride the Rangoon-Prome rail line north of Paungde.

Doggedly, the British and Indian forces still barred the way into Prome, gateway to the West Burma oil fields, with their patrols along the Irrawaddy pulled back to guard their right flank while they waited for the full shock of the Japanese attack from the south.

From the eastern flank of the Allied defence line came word that outnumbered Chinese forces which had held out through five days of terrific attack and air bombardment at Toungoo had broken through Japanese lines and fallen back to the north on the bitterly contested road to Mandalay.

The British communique said Japanese warplanes had complete control of the air over the battlefront.

Little Or No Air Support

British and Indian forces which had been trapped south of Shwedaung by Japanese control of a section of the road to Prome battled their way back to the main British positions under intense attack from the air.

"The attack to clear the road blocked at Shwedaung (planned to relieve this detachment), did not materialize," the war report said, "as the force to the south, consisting of units of Gloucesters, West Yorkshires, Cameronians and Duke of

Hunger Revolts Reported Upsetting Essen Germans Step Up Guards At War Factories

LONDON, April 1—(CP).—The Moscow radio reported today that "hunger revolts" took place a few days ago among workers of Essen, the German munitions centre, and declared police guards and armed storm trooper formations were being increased at German war factories.

The Essen disturbances occurred when cutting of the bread ration was announced a few days ago, the radio said, and such slogans as "We want more bread," "Stop the war," and "Down with Hitler" appeared on factory walls.

Police carry out exercises which involve the erection of barricades and the posting of machine guns on roofs of neighboring buildings when the shifts are changing at Neukoelln and other factory districts of Berlin, the broadcast added, and special police committees have been formed to deal with sabotage.

Two important centres in Poland for the illicit sale of German army gasoline have been discovered and high German officers of the army, air force and Gestapo have been arrested, it was said.

Nearing Labor Shortage In States May See Her Follow Canada's Lead

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 1—(CP)—The United States will face a labor shortage within a few months, says Harold D. Smith, director of the budget bureau.

His statement was taken as further evidence that the United States soon will adopt a general policy of manpower mobilization along the same general lines as the Canadian Government announced a few days ago.

Smith based his prediction of a labor shortage on the fact that a vast army is being recruited quickly at the same time that billions of dollars are being spent by the Government in war orders. The Government is spending $3,000,000,000 a month for war purposes and when the new fiscal year opens July 1, the rate will be increased to $56,000,000,000 for the year on nearly $5,000,000,000 a month.

"As more and more men go into military service," Smith stated, "as industry strive toward that tremendous $56,000,000,000 war production goal, women and students will be needed in our factories and on our farms in number we even now do not appreciate.

"It is hard to believe, in the light of our recent history, that within a few months a great labor shortage will develop, yet that is the situation ahead of the nation."

The regulations announced a few days ago by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, under which Canada's available manpower is being recruited for industrial as well as military purposes, are being studied closely in Washington in anticipation of the need of a similar mobilization in the United States.

Yesterday's announcement that men who recently registered under Selective Service regulations are soon to fill out questionnaires indicating their special training for civilian work is in line with this study.

Studying Four Schemes

President Roosevelt has at least four different mobilization schemes under review and he is expected to make a choice within a comparatively short time because government officials admit the situation is getting worse all the time.

By the end of 1942, it is estimated that 15,000,000 additional workers will be absorbed in war production, about one-third of them women.

Two Batteries To Mobilize

Two more batteries of the 4th Field Brigade R.C.A. have gone active service, Lt.-Col. D. J. Lawrie, commanding officer, announced today. They are the 22nd Battery of Cobourg, which will be a field unit, and the 56th Battery of Lindsay, going as an anti-tank battery. Major E. G. Jones commands the 56th, and Capt. G. A. Dundas is in command of the 22nd Battery.

Mobilization of these two units, now in progress, means that all five batteries of the 4th Brigade have sent a first unit into active service, the 4th of Peterborough, 14th of Cobourg and 45th of Lindsay now serving in England.

The 22nd and 56th Batteries will immediately organize second, or reserve force, units to carry on with home training and to supply reinforcements from time to time to their first units. Enlistments both for active and reserve force are being sought by these batteries throughout the district.

So far no information has been made public on the number of men required to bring these two units up to full war establishment, but it is expected that at least 350 men, all ranks, will be required to bring them up to war strength.

Famed Caste Of Warriors Fear Moslems

Non-Party Leaders Hold Out Hope, See Failure Tragedy

NEW DELHI, India, April 1 (CP) —The Sikh all-parties committee, one of India's minority groups, issued the first rejection today of Britain's offer of post-war dominion status for India.

The Sikhs, a Hindu warrior caste, rejected the plan as submitted by Britain's special envoy, Sir Stafford Cripps, on the grounds that it would leave them at the mercy of the Moslem majority in Punjab Province.

As a result the Sikhs are expected to make common cause against the Moslems with the Mahasabha, organization of Hindu extremists, whose rejection of the offer already had appeared certain.

The chief stumbling block to acceptance was the requirement that India's wartime defence be left in British hands.

The decision of the All-India Congress Party probably will be issued today and the opinion is widely held that the potent, ardently nationalist movement will spurn the British terms.

One Spot Of Hope

A last-minute glimmer of hope was seen, however, in a joint statement of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Dr. Mukund Ramrao Jayakar, spokesmen of India's non-party leaders. The statement said "it would be a tragedy if the Cripps mission failed, for it would produce a keen sense of disappointment and frustration and provoke antagonism which in our opinion would be disastrous in this hour of crisis."

Although urging that Britain compromise somewhat on the defence issue, these leaders said Britain's proposals "make it clear that after the war India will not have to struggle for recognition of its constitutional and international status."

Aurobindo Ghose, Indian spiritual leader whose sanctuary is at Pondicherry, also sent a message to Sir Stafford Cripps congratulating him upon his broadcast of Monday explaining the proposals.

The answer of the Congress party's working committee, it is understood, is being drafted by Mohandas K. Gandhi and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, both former Congress presidents, for final consideration by the committee today.

Dewan Uncertain On Hog Bonus

TORONTO, April 1.—(CP)—Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan refused to commit himself today as to whether the Ontario Government will continue its hog bonus this year.

"I want to encourage hog production, but I can't exactly say what will be done," Mr. Dewan said in speaking before the agriculture committee of the Legislature. "It will be dealt with in the budget," he added.

The budget is to be tabled tomorrow.

The minister said that 100,000 hog feeders had received approximately $900,000 in bonuses in the past year. A subsidy of $1 is paid on Grade A hogs and 50 cents on B1 carcasses and Mr. Dewan said 81.4 per cent of the hogs marketed came within this category.

The minister said to extend the bonus to B3 hogs—a slightly heavier type—would mean "a big item."

WASHINGTON, April 1—(AP).— The United States War Department reported to-day that the Japanese, in a heavy attack on the right centre of Lt.-Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's line in Battaan captured some of the advanced positions, but were halted in fierce hand-to-hand combat before they reached the main American-Filipino line.

SABOTAGE IN AFRICA

PRETORIA—(CP).— The South African Government has offered a reward of $4,470 for information in connection with cutting of telegraph and telephone lines between Pretoria and Cape Town.

5,000 Japs Slain

CHUNGKING, China, April 1 —(AP).—More than 5,000 Japanese dead have been counted by the Chinese around Toungoo, Burma, up to March 29 in heavy fighting which still is raging, a Chinese communique declared today.

Plenty Of Wheat

WASHINGTON, April 1—(AP).— The United States Agriculture Department said to-day the world may have a larger supply of wheat this year than ever before despite two successive short war crops and prospects that 1942 production may be smaller.

This is because the surplus existing in the world's four leading exporting nations—Canada, the United States, Australia, and Argentina — is the largest of record.

India's and Ghandi's Blindness Sad Blow

Defenceless, She Quibbles Over Control Of Salvation – Japs Howling At Gates

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Pessimism emanating from New Delhi regarding the fate of Britain's offer of Dominion status is causing widespread expresion of fear that India, having sought so eagerly and so long for independence, now is going to fail to rise to the occasion and seize the opportunity of centuries.

This is far more than a family affair in the British Empire. It is one of the paramount issues of the moment for the whole world, for, with the hordes of the Rising Sun milling at the gates of Hindustan, the course of the war is involved.

It is astonishing to hear Indian leaders insisting that they can't accept Britain's qualification that conduct of the war remain in her hands. India has no military experts, and she hasn't even a butter-paddle with which to defend herself.

In short, it is disappointing to India's host of friends and well-wishers to see her hesitate.

One wonders what has happened to Gandhi. He is the greatest individual force in all India. There's small doubt that he could persuade acceptance or rejection of the British offer.

Here's one of the outstanding leaders of generations. For long years he has battled for Indian independence. He has gone to prison many times for his crusade. He even journeyed to England in his loin cloth and shawl to plead his cause.

And yet now Gandhi hesitates over an offer which, if it doesn't give him precisely what he wants, assuredly must lead to it. Having defended Gandhi in many arguments in Conservative quarters in England, and having even folded my long legs up to sit on the floor and listen in admiration to his words of wisdom, I feel at liberty to ask what has happened to his famous sagacity.

Gandhi is a great man, spiritually and mentally, but he is stubborn. You can move a mountain easier than you can move this 85-pound man once his mind is made up. You've seen the way he has forced both the authorities and his own followers to come to heel with his innumerable hunger-strikes. It always was the other fellow who gave in—never Gandhi.

But this time the other fellow isn't in position to give in. The way matters stand, with the Jap successes continning in Buram, Gandhi may find himself not only without dominion status but a slave under the Japanese yoke.

One sometimes wonders whether the Indians realize their danger; Gandhi doesn't believe in war and declines to employ force under any circumstances. A few weeks ago he asserted that if the Nazis came to Hindustan, the All-India Congress Party, of which he is spiritual head, would give them the fight it has given Britain—that is, passive resistance.

That's all very well, but if India thinks she can beat the Japs by passive resistance, she has a brutal awakening coming. This is a grim time when idealism must be bolstered by realism—or call it plain horse-sense. Certainly it is a dangerous moment to be arguing on the battlements.

Whole Convoy Docks Safely

Britain Reinforces Guard On Run To Russia

LONDON, April 1 — (CP). — Officials announced to-day that Northern Sea patrols and escorts for Russia-bound convoys have been reinfroced and htat all of the convoy attacked earlier this week in the opening phase of Germany's Arctic Ocean offensive to cut the Soviet supply lines had "arrived safely at a Russian port."

London circles which confirmed the safe arrival af the ships laden with war material for the Red Armies did not identify the port, but reports from Stockholm said the ships had reached Murmansk, the nearest of the two chief Russian Arctic harbors. The other is Archangel.

Blizzard Ties Manitoba Days

WINNIPEG, April 1 — (CP). — Manitoba has recovered from one of its worst snow and sleet storms in 25 years.

The blizzard raged over the province last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, disrupting transportation and communication lines and burying city streets and rural highways under snowdrifts ranging from 5 to 15 feet high in some places. The censor permited publication of news of the storm outside this province to-day.

Train travel west of Winnipeg was at a standstill in some districts. One east-bound train arrived in Winnipeg 51 hours late. Passengers told of drifts "as high as mountains" at some places along the right of way through the Prairie.

Full Tanks Save Coupons

Scramble Last Day Takes Edge Off Rationing

By The Canadian Press.

Ontario motorists took the first day of gasoline rationing in their stride.

A survey by The Canadian Press indicated neither a mass "leave the car in the garage" movement nor crowded public transportation facilities.

General belief was that the war-dictated restriction, which forced Canadian to use coupons for the first time in the conflict, would require a few days to have full effect because of the widespread scramble Tuesday to fill gasoline tanks.

Indicative of the province-wide reaction was the Toronto Transportation Commission's report of "no noticeable change" either in passenger or vehicular traffic in the provincial capital.

MOSCOW, April 1.—(AP).—Russian soldiers fighting on the central front occupied three inhabited localities and beat off several German counter attacks with heavy losses to the Nazis, the Russians announced to-day.

On the Galinin front, northwest of Moscow, one unit successfully repelled a German counter attack and inflicted losses on the Germans in a pursuit. The report said more than 350 dead Germans remained on the battlefield.

Action At Sevastopol.

LONDON, April 1.—(CP). — Red army men of Sevastopol, veterans of a 150-day siege, are reported counter-attacking to-day in the Crimea preliminary to vast spring engagements which London observers believe will involve about 4,500,000 Germans and 7,000,000 Russians.

Moreover, there were Axis accounts of new Russian thrusts against Kharkov, Donets Basin industrial centre.

Bucharest advices relayed by the Vichy radio said Soviet armored forces, following artillery preparation lasting until Monday midnight, had launched an offensive at the German defences of Kharkov from three sides, north, east and south.

Tass declared the Germans had sacrificed 45,000 men, including "units reserved for their much-advertised spring offensive," in vain efforts to capture Sevastopol, Soviet Black Sea naval base, and that action to break their ring is under way.

Judgment Reserved On Driving Count

After Magistrate Langley had heard the balance of the defence evidence and the arguments of Defence Counsel T. J. Carley, K.C. and Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., Tuesday afternoon in charge of drunken driving against Thomas Curvin he reserved judgment in the case until next Tuesday.

"I want to go over some features of the evidence," he informed counsel in announcing his decision.

The last witness called by the defence was Dr. C. M. Scott, who was called to the police station at 11:30 o'clock on the night Curvin was arrested, and saw accused there. Dr. Scott said that he had not made any of the tests sometimes used in such cases but said that from his obervation Curvin seemed somewhat nervous but otherwise his condition did not seem to be unusual.

OBITUARY

MRS. FRANK E. DURIEN.

A former resident of this city, Mrs. Frank E. DuRien, passed away at her home, 40 Caroline Avenue, Toronto, on Tuesday, March 31, in her 63rd year.

The late Mrs. DuRien, whose maiden name was Pearl Foster, was born in Warsaw, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Foster. Her illness was of brief duration. She lived for many years in this city where she established a wide circle of friends by her interest in church activities, and later lived for a few years at Oshawa.

Surviving is one daughter, Mrs. E. Padbury, Toronto; five sisters and one brother, Mrs. N. Williston, and Mrs. A. T. Lumley of Toronto, Mrs. S. Burkhart of Oshawa, Mrs. T. Miller and Mrs. C. B. Chapman, both of Peterborough, Richard Foster of Flossmore, Illinois. Mrs. George Mein, who died last July, was another sister. Five grandchildren also survive.

The funeral will be held on Thursday, April 2, at 3.30 in the afternoon from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons, 305 Water Street, and interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. A. W. Filer of All Saints' Church will conduct the funeral services.

IS FINED FOR SPEEDING

Pleading guilty to speeding on Aylmer street Tuesday night Walter Woodward was fined $10 and $2.50 costs in police court this morning. Chief Constable Newhall informed the court that the accused was travelling at more than 50 miles an hour when he was caught by Constable C. J. McGillen.

TIRE IS STOLEN

Tire thieves were busy in this neighborhood again last night and at Fowler's Corners, a spare tire was stolen from the automobile of William Burgomaster. Mrs. Burgomaster heard the thieves at 4 o'clock this morning and saw a car drive off with no lights showing. The Burgomaster car was parked in the yard, some distance from the highway.

CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Bruce Thornhill, who told the court he had come down from Lindsay to join the army and had enlisted here Tuesday morning pleaded not guilty to a charge of vagrancy in police court this morning. At the request of the crown he was remanded for a week. "The police want to make some investigations" Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry told the court.

BUILDING PERMITS UP

Fourteen building permits here last month totalled $17,170, as follows: one garage $95; two dwellings $5,800; and miscellaneous $11,275. In March last year five permits were issued for $2,700. Total for the first three months this year, as reported from City Engineer Parsons' office, was $30,570, and in the first quarter of 1941 the amount was $13,325.

CASE IS WITHDRAWN

A charge against a young married woman of stealing $40 from her husband with intent to desert was withdrawn in police court this morning at the request of the husband. "This is a domestic affair and some arrangement is being arrived at," announced Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C.; concurring in the request that the case should be withdrawn.

ELDERLY MAN FINED

A 79-year-old man pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to having been drunk last night and was fined $10 and $1 costs or seven days in jail. When he told the court that he had wanted to go out to a farm today Magistrate Langley informed him that he should have thought of that before he became intoxicated.

CARS DAMAGED

Cars driven by Mrs. Helen Gray, First street, Cornwall and Alfred Davis, 272 Rogers street were damaged Tuesday in a traffic accident at Simcoe and Aylmer streets. Mrs. Gray was travelling west on Simcoe street and Davis south on Aylmer street when the collision occurred. No one was hurt in the crash.

LOSES ANOTHER MAN.

Dennis Fitzgerald of Zeller's, like many other merchants, is beginning to feel the pinch for lack of male help. During the past year, four men, one after another, have enlisted. Jack Arundel is a sergeant-pilot with the R.C.A.F. in Britain, Harry Whitehall and Douglas Steele are also in the air force, and on Thursday evening Louis Vitarelli, of the hockey playing family leaves to join the Rangers. He is the third member of the Vitarelli family to don the uniform, one brother Dootch is in the air force, and Pete is overseas with the Engineers.

Rangers Parade For Last Time As Reserve Unit

(By P.W.R.'s Reporter)

There were indications of joy and sorrow last night as the Prince of Wales Rangers (AF) Rifle regiment paraded for the last time as a unit under the former organization as a reserve battalion. Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., E.D., former officer commanding, sounded both notes when he told the men it was a red letter day for the regiment because it has now become an active unit but he expressed regret for the many former members of the Rangers who were in the unit but were rejected for active service due to age and strict medical tests. As a final touch of regret for the officers and men of the now active force, Col. Dewart informed them personally that his position as officer commanding must be relinquished due to the Department of National Defence not having approved his appointment, because of the new regulations governing the age limit for officers of his rank.

A memorable scene which will long remain in the minds of citizens of Peterborough and men of the old and new Rangers took place when the complete regiment paraded for the last time down George street to Sherbrooke to Aylmer and back up George street to the armoury under the command of Col. J. A. Dewart and also headed by Major R. J. Bolton, second in command and Col. H. A. Morrow, honorary colonel of the regiment. The parade was preceded by the Prince of Wales regimental band under the command of Captain W. H. Peryer. To the tune of lively and spirited march music, the men presented a picture of military efficiency as they paraded with shouldered rifles.

Former officers of the Rangers, Major James Turnbull and Captain J. G. Armstrong from overseas and Lieut. R. Dixon were on hand for the parade. Col. Dewart said it was a great pleasure to have these men on parade with present and retiring members of the unit. He told the parade that Major Turnbull was retured from overseas because "he was too old to take his place in this young man's army." With refernce to Captain Armstrong, the officer commanding said he was in Canada to take a course of instruction at Kingston.

"I welcome you men who have joined the first battalion since the unit was ordered to mobilize," Col. Dewart said. "Now that you are in the regiment, it will be your duty to uphold the honor of the Rangers at all times. You are in a friendly regiment and you can be assured of a square deal so long as it is within the power of your officers to grant it to you. This is a red letter day in the history of the regiment because it is now a unit in the active forces of Canada."

To Separate Units

Col. Dewart expressed regret that the regiment will be divided and will now perform as two separate units—the active forces which will be the first battalion and the second battalion which will remain in Canada and will be composed of officers and men who were unable to get into the first battalion and others who will join later. "Many of the men of the second battalion have been unable to stay with the active battalion through no fault of their own," he pointed out. Through limitations of age and medical fitness these men were forced to revert to the second battalion, said the officer commanding.

At this stage, Col. Dewart told the parade that some members of the unit "who did not come within the categories I have mentioned have not yet joined the first battalion. I hope they will realize their responsibility in this matter," he said. "Their opportunity will only last as long as mobilization is effective."

"It is one of the greatest misfortunes of my life not to be able to continue on command with the Prince of Wales Rangers," the retiring officer commanding said. "However, you and I are happy to know that Major Bolton, your second in command, will be acting officer commanding for the present."

The regimental funds raised principally by the giant bingo game of last year have been preserved for mobilization and will be equally divided between the first and second battalions, he revealed.

"My tenure of command with the regiment has been most pleasant and tonight, on relinquishing my command, I thank everyone from both units for their past support," concluded Col. Dewart.

The armoury rafters echoed with loud cheers for the retiring officer commanding and when Col. Dewart asked for cheers for Major Bolton, again the men were loud in their approval.

Lt.-Col. H. A. Morrow, honorary colonel of the regiment, in making brief remarks, declared that Col. Dewart had made his regiment one of the best in military district 3. "I wish you all luck." Lt.-Col. Morrow told the men on active service, and I hope I'll be here to welcome you on your return."

Praise For Col. Dewart

Lt.-Col. M. H. Park spoke of the hard work and constant attention Col. Dewart had given to his regiment and that he had hoped the unit would have had Col. Dewart's services. To both battalions Lt.-Col. Park declared they can only show how proud they are of their former O.C. by carrying on the tradition of the regiment and keeping up an honorable record. "We wish you the best of luck," he said. Major Bolton added his words of praise for Col. Dewart and declared that no one realized more than he the great loss caused by the loss of the retiring officer commanding.

Upon dismissal a pay parade was held, then refreshments were served and the balance of the evening was spent by the men of both battalions in friendly relaxation together.

A Tribute To Chex

Toronto, April 1 (CP)

ALEX ELLIOTT (Lib. Peterborough), participating in the Throne Speech debate in the Ontario Legislature yesterday, drew a laugh by jocularly declaring he had to choose between speaking 20 minutes in the Provincial House or one minute at the opening of the new radio station, CHEX, in his home town.

"I decided to speak in the House, believing the members were more hardened to withstand my remarks," he added.

In a more serious vein, the young Peterborough lawyer said the opening of the new 1,000-watt station marked a new era in communications east of Toronto.

26 Men Apply For Enlistment

By P.W.R.'s Reporter.

Rank of the Prince of Wales Rangers are filling out by the daily list of applicants presenting themselves for enlistment with the unit. Each morning at physical training sees several new faces making heir first break into the regiment and it is not until a day or two later that one can easily pick out the new ones for they are bound to be a little stiff in the muscles, but in the matter of another day they are in fine shape again and none the worse for their healthful training.

The daily schedule calls for inspection and P.T. each morning beginning at 8.15 a.m. In the hours that follow, the men are given an hour at the Y.M.C.A. for a swim, lectures are given, marches, rifle exercises and more drills are held with the schedule alternating daily. The P.T. period includes officers as well as the other ranks.

Men of the unit have been requested to make out a special will form, a sample of which has been posted on the bulletin board and to have it completed this week if possible.

On Monday and Tuesday of this week a total of 26 men of Peterborough and district applied for enlistment. Of this total 11 came to the armoury yesterday. Five men were officially taken on strength of the regiment:

Strength Increase.

Pte. SUTHERLAND, Ian Mackay. Status, single; next of kin, mother, Mrs. Catherine Sutherland, 476 Parnell street, Peterborough, Ont.

Regimental March Will Salute All Programs Of The Rangers

The Prince of Wales Rangers opened their series of radio broadcasts at ten minutes after eleven o'clock this morning, when Major L. C. Honey gave an interesting address to radio listeners of Peterborough and district, following the first playing on the air of the Prince of Wales Regimental March.

In the course of his talk, Major Honey gave an outline of many programs to be heard in the series of Prince of Wales Rangers radio broadcasts.

The martial air which was a salute to this program is the Regimental March of the Prince of Wales Rangers, Major Honey said. "It is called 'The Buffs' and is known as an old rifle regimental march. The Rangers Band, under the direction of Capt. W. H. Peryer has recorded this piece, right here in the local armouries, and it is with real pleasure that we are able to hear it as a musical salutation to eacr Ranger program."

Since September 4, 1939, the officers, N.C.O's nd men of the Prince of Wales Rangers have been expecting and awaiting the mobilization of our regiment—I say our regiment—it's as much yours as it is mine, it is not Peterborough's alone either, it belong to the District as well. On March 11th the call came—your regiment, my regiment, Peterborough and District's regiment, is now answering the call to the colors.

The purpose of these broadcasts is to bring your attention the local picture and the process of mobilization, as it will undoubtedly be of interest to all of us to listen in on the first of the series tonight at 7.45 when Lt. Col. Dewart, M.C., will recount for us the part of this regiment in the annals of Canadian history—and give many interesting details regarding reorganization at various times in its formation. Lt. Col. Dewart is one of Peterborough's ablest historians and raconteurs.

You have all heard the song about the Sergeant Major. That hard-fisted, hard-boiled, blood-thirsty fellow, who, at least in story, is the terror of generals and privates alike. Believe it or not, we are going to have one on the air tonight at 11.10, right after the newscast. Yes, Regimental Sgt. Major Andy Jackson will interview the first sergeant, the first corporal, the first lance-corporal, and the first private to join the Rangers.

Tomorrow at 11.10 a.m., our medical officer, Capt. Joe Dawson will speak over the air on some phases of the medical examination of the recruit. And again tomorrow at 8.15 one of our former public school principals, Major R. J. Bolton, will address you on the advantages of early enlistment and the various specialists' appointments.

At 11.10 p.m. after the news again we will hear the Regimental Sergt-Major interviewing the Orderly-Room Sergeant, Sgt. H. Robson.

On Good Friday, the three broadcasts will be conducted by the clergy. At noon, 12.25 to 12.30 p.m., Adjutant Buckley of the Salvation Army will address you; at 7.45 p.m., the Rev. Dr. George Easton will be the speaker, and later at 11.10 Monsignor O'Sullivan will go on the air.

On Saturday of this week, at 11.05 the Quartermaster, Lt. Homer Borland will tell you something about equipment and how the quartermaster's stores function.

On Saturday at 7.45 His Worship the Mayor is going to have something to say—in fact he is going to have some soldiers with him and I believe he is going to have a few words to say to them—I'll give you a cue—they were former members of our regiment and are wearing plaid trousers.

Legion Total Is Now $674 For War Victims

Month by month, with a regularity that fully typifies their conduct during the momentous years of 1914 to 1918, the veterans of the last Great War who are banded together locally in what is known as Branch 52 of the Canadian Legion under the leadership of G. Gimblett their president, have been doing just as steady work as they did in the days gone by, to help the people of Britain, through the city and district Fund for British War Victims, and this same steady work is reaching proportions of which they may well feel justly proud, for with their 17th contribution which is acknowledged today in an amount of $69.31, their grand total stands at the impressive figure of $674.44. This money represents part of the proceeds of their social games held every Wednesday in the Legion Hall, which are conducted in the interests of the Welware work which they carry on amongst the veterans themselves.

The St. David's Welsh Society is only a small group locally, numbering about 25 on its rolls, under the leadership of Mrs. G. Pakenham, their president, but they certainly are helping the war effort in a big way, giving assistance to various war charities, among which this fund has its place, and today we record their 4th donation for $10 to bring their total up to $40.

Two personal donations are also listed, and the Penny Box at the Peterborough Store of the Canadian Tire Corporation adds a further $1.25.

This coming Saturday the stall on the market made available to the fund through the kindness of the Mayor and City Council, will again come into operation to assist in the work of the fund, through the efforts of the Lily Lake Sunday School and Chritian Endeavor under the direction of Miss Enid Hancock. This marks the second effort of its kind that this group has made to help the people of Britain through this fund.

Bicyclist Suffers Injuries To Leg

Alex. Urbach, 639 Donegal street, received injuries to his leg at noon today when he was knocked off his bicycle in collision with an automobile at Reid and Dalhousie streets. The boy was riding his bicycle north on Reid street and at the intersection of Dalhousie street, his wheel was struck by a car driven by George Pogue and also travelling north. The accident occurred when Pogue attempted to make a turn at the intersection. The injured boy received treatment at the Standard Medical Clinic.

cessary to gather information on specific types of manpower available.

Eventually this registration would probably cover all employable persons Mr. Little said.

Since Prime Minister Mackenzie King's annonucement of the manpower program March 24—including the freezing of farm labor and the exemption of essential farmers from compulsory military training—there has been some movement back to farm, the director told newspapermen.

"We believe it is largely a seasonal movement normal at this time of year, but the whole situation of farmers is one of the matters we are studying," he said.

The position of farmers who left the land last fall and accepted employment in war industries and who are thus not eligible under the exemption clause was one point receiving consideration, he added.

To those uncertain what action they should take to make a greater contribution to the war effort on the home front, Mr. Little had this to say:

"Sit tight and carry on the job you are doing. Keep on the job you are trained to do until you are told you are needed in another job."

Women not now employed could give valuable assistance by registering at unemployment offices, he suggested.

Highly skilled technical personnel would have to be moved from non-essential jobs quickly.

"We must take some trained technical people off their present jobs, the war effort can not wait for training," he said.

The primary purpose of the whole selective service plan was to have information quickly available to meet definite needs. While the program was essentially a war move, part of it would have to be carried over to meet the post-war needs of the re-establishment period.

"As far as possible the work will be taken to the people, rather than the people to the work," he said. Large scale movements of workers would probably prove inefficient involving as much secondary labor in housing and other services as would be provided by the groups moved.

"Our job is to save man-power," Mr. Little said.

Training would be carried on largely through an expansion of the present program being conducted in schools and industry by the Labor Department.

Particularly in the training of women, care would be taken to avoid newly-trained persons pushing out of employment experienced workers.

Dealing with the "restricted occupations" in which no physically-fit man between 17 and [illegible] may accept new employment, Mr. Little said rulings would be given on specific cases where there was doubt, whether or not an occupation was restricted.

Newspapers And Radio.

"Some occupations are only partially essential," he said, citing newspapers as an example. "Not all the activities of a newspaper are essential today or might be essential in the future. We will have to study what part of a newspaper is essential and what is not."

Radio fell into the same category as newspapers.

"Certain activities of radio can be dispensed with and some can not," he said.

Regimental Pay Of Rangers Deadline April 10

Officers of the Prince of Wales Rangers and orderly room staff are working overtime to clean up details of the change over to active service, and the full co-operation of all men in the reserve unit is asked at this time.

It was announced today that the regimental pay of the Prince of Wales Rangers' reserve force must be cleaned up by April 10 at the latest, for the training year ending March 31, 1942. If the pay is not cleaned up by that date, it will be forfeited and returned to the District Paymaster.

Pay can be obtained on any Tuesday or Thursday evening at the Armouries, from 8 until 10, until the closing date mention above. Reserve unit soldiers are also reminded that everyone who has not turned in belt, frogs, demin or other military equipment, must do so immediately.

Good foods always make the meal, but when those foods cost less, your enjoyment is doubled. For the Easter meal, Red & White Stores offer a fine selection. All are outstanding values.

Gallant Rescue Proves Fatal To Gilmour Man

TWEED, April 1.—(ENS).—Fail- ing to rally from severe burns sus- tained whe[n] he brought his fath- er from [thei]r blazing home, one mile east [of] Gilmour on March 21, Bruce Mc[K]enzie, 68, succumbed to his injuries in the Belleville Gen- eral Hospi[tal] early on Tuesday. McKenz[ie's] 86 year old father, William Mc[K]enzie, died from burns a few hour[s] after his admission to the hospita[l] following the fire which totally de[stro]yed the home and contents.

The fi[re] which has now exacted a toll of two lives, started from faulty [st]ovepipes near midnight, Saturday March 20. The younger McKenzi[e] endeavoured to extinguish the blaz[e] with water, and failing in that, dashed into the blazing building to effect a gallant rescue of his f[ath]er. Both men were ter- ribly bur[n]ed, and rushed to the hospital.

Chief C[o]roner Dr. J. J. Robert- son, stated that unless something unforseen ar[o]se, no inquest into the deaths wo[uld] be held.

The la[te] Bruce McKenzie was born in S[e]ymour township, North- umberland county but had resided practically all his life in the Gilmour district. He was a member of the United chur[c]h at St. Ola.

He is surv[i]ved by one sister, Mrs. B. F Hinch[c]liffe, of Dryden, Onta- rio, and one brother, Mr. Alexander McKenzie, of Gilmour.

Convicted of the theft of a mo- tor car by means of conversion, Mansell Jon[e]s of Mallorytown, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail. Jones appeared in the Judg[e]s' County Criminal Court held be[fo]re His Honour Judge Madden an[d] pleaded guilty as charged.

Jones was arrested on a warrant issued by C[hief] C. J. Hayes of Tweed, afte[r] he had purchased a used car an[d] later resold the ve- hicle, which was being financed in the first instance.

Failed U[nder Test]

HALIFAX, April 7—(CP).—Fire Chief J. W. Churchill said today "numerous" lengths of hose supplied by the Domi[n]ion for Air Raid Pre- cautions pur[p]oses have burst when tested under the pressure of port- able pumps s[u]pplied with the hose. The fire chief said the hose appear- ed to be new and he knew of no ex- planation wh[y] it should burst.

Second-In-Command

Major J. R. Bolton of the Prince of Wales Rangers, who has been appointed officially to be second in command of the regiment, it was revealed today. He is well-known locally, particularly in matters of education. Major Bolton was principal of King Edward School for 17 years and principal of Central School for four years prior to his enlistment with the Rangers last year. Major Bolton has seen continuous service with the Canadian Militia since 1920. He has been a member of the Peterborough Rangers and Prince of Wales Rangers since 1923. Major Bolton was adjutant of the regiment on the A. and T. staff since June of last year.

WithdrawAmendment To High School Act

TORONTO, April 1—(CP).—Alex. Elliott's bill which would permit a separate school trustee to be appointed a member of the Board of High School Trustees was withdrawn by the Liberal member of Peterborough in the Ontario Legislature today. The measure was to correct a situation in Peterborough where the separate school representative on the High School Board for the past few years was also on Separate School Board.

Mr. Elliott said he had discussed the matter with the Minister of Education, Hon. Duncan McArthur, and with the member for Prescott, Aurelien Belanger, and had been informed by the latter there were certain "inherent objections," which would make the measure undesirable as a general amendment applicable to all municipalities with High School Boards. For that reason he was withdrawing the measure.

Gas Ration Cards Reported Stolen

COBOURG, April 1.—(ENS)—First instance of theft of gasoline ration cards in the district was reported here this afternoon when Claude Russ of Baltimore informed Chief W. J. Carey that his ration book was stolen from his car while it was parked in Cobourg. The ration cards were stuck up behind the rear vision mirror before he left the car, Russ said, and when he came back they were gone.

Magazine Salesman Given Seven Days

COBOURG, April 1. — (ENS) — Donald Walker, Toronto magazine salesman, was sentenced to seven days in jail when he appeared before Magistrate R. B. Baxter yesterday afternoon on a drunk charge. Constable E. Houghton discovered Walker driving in an erratic fashion near King street and placed him under arrest. Walker's companion, Richard Shuratt of Toronto, pleaded guilty to being drunk and was fined $10 and costs.

Indifference Of People Seen In Crucifixion

CAMPBELLFORD, April 1 (ENS) —Rev. J. R. R. Cooper, pastor of Warkworth United Church, was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Tabernacle Y.P.U., held on Monday evening. He spoke on "Passion Week," delivering a very instructive address, reminding his listeners that no one Christian creed had any monopoly on the symbol of the Cross. Dr. Cooper raised an interesting question regarding the Crucifixion, suggesting that it was not alone the influence of popular groups that was responsible but also the "indifference of the people themselves." Germany's new so-called National Church with one and a half million youthful adherents who have Hitler's "Mein Kampf" as their bible and the sword as their cross, came in for a scorching blast from the speaker, who saw little hope for an order based on such teachings.

President Alex. Stephens presided for the meeting and he was assisted with the devotional exercises by Mrs. Edwin Grills and Mrs. Edna Bibby. Rev. J. R. Bick moved a vote of thanks on behalf of the young people to the ladies of the congregation who had assisted with congregation who assisted with banquet on March 23, and during the business the group passed a motion authorizing the purchase of a $4 war savings certificate which will be given to the church and will on maturity apply towards its debt. Rev. Mr. Bick introduced the speaker.

$110 For War Victims

Taking stock of the result of their work on behalf of the British War Victims' Fund on Monday evening members of the Thumbs Up Club had reason to be well satisfied with their accomplishment. A complete accounting of receipts, $115.50, and expenditures, $5.50, revealed they had $110 to give to the fund as their initial contribution. The quilt, made by members and raffled on the night of their bingo party last Saturday, brought in $65.40 and was won by Miss Nellie Ross of Meyersburg, who was so pleased with winning it that she gave the club a cash donation of $2. Receipts from the bingo which Mr. Earl Craighead assisted the ladies in conducting, amounted to $48.10, and though they paid out of their own pockets for 16 prizes, averaging $1, they expressed their thanks to Mrs. H. J. Taylor, A. Rappaport, W. J. Callaghan, and the Robert Simpson Co. for donations. Mrs. Charles Collins read the group a letter of thanks she had received from Mrs. H. M. Aitken, who acknowledge receipts of a 49-piece layette and some children's clothing from the club. The former was forwarded to the Reading Hospital and the latter to the Manchester and London Nursery Schools, she revealed.

Bridge and Euchre

Sufficient blocks for another quilt were completed at the regular meeting of Christ Church Parish Guild held on Monday evening at Miss Gertrude Maynard's. When finished this will bring to six, the total made since the first of the year by the guild members for whom sewing and quilting are considered as secondary to their other activities on behalf of the church. Miss Maynard reported to the meeting that the Men's Club had agreed to co-operate in sponsoring a bridge and euchre on April 13 and announced the club had decided to postpone their meeting on April 13, thus giving precedence to their organization. Committees for this affair are as follows: Tables and cards, Mrs. Hilton Beatty; refreshments, Miss Ethel Bedford; prizes, Mrs. R. A. Linton.

Death For Hoarding

BERNE, Switzerland, April 1 — (AP)—The first two death sentences under Germany's drastically-strengthened food regulations have been handed down against two women who were nurses in a children's home, dispatches from Berlin said today.

They were found guilty of hoarding four tons of sugar, candy and soap.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels warned recently in the weekly publication, Das Reich, that the "most drastic penalties" would be imposed on hoarders and black market food operators.

No More Vacuums

WASHINGTON, April 1—(AP). —The War Production Board today ordered production of vacuum cleaners halted after April 30, as a preliminary to converting the $85,-000,000 industry entirely to war war work.

"Tools Of War" Film Shown At Lakefield

LAKEFIELD, April 1—(ENS).—Citizens of Lakefield were privileged to see the movie "Tools of War," sponsored by the Federal Government in the Memorial Hall on Monday evening. There was also a special showing at 3.30 p.m. for the pupils of the Public and High Schools.

The first reel dealt with the oil in its various stages from the crude to the very refined variety. Oil will be one of the greatest weapons in this war. It portrayed the battle for oil from early times and its use in the machines of war. The next reel showed the vast wheat fields of our Canadian West and told the story, tragic at times of the development of the wheat. During the drought years the land of the West was almost given up for lost until the Government stepped in and by means of irrigation and strip farming made it into the productive land we now know.

The third reel told the story of the Co-operative Farmers' movement through the country where the farmers by working together were able to cut down on production costs of all kinds such as seed cleaning, chick hatcheries, etc. A reel entitled "Heritage" was about our Canadian West.

Call To Vote Yes

TORONTO, April 1 —(CP). — Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, National Conservative party leader, urged all Canadians to vote "Yes" in the forthcoming plebiscite in a statement issued today.

"Certainly I shall vote 'Yes' on the plebiscite," stated Mr. Meighen. I said so long ago, and I urge Canadians everywhere to vote Yes."

"True the device of a plebiscite is evasive, dilatory and unBritish. It is a disgraceful thing that we should be fussing with a plebiscite at this time.

"But this disgraceful thing is upon us, and we, therefore, have to consider the consequence of a 'Yes' or a No' vote."

Cobourg Boy Is Missing

COBOURG, April 1.—(ENS)—Mrs. Leo Flesch of Cobourg has received word that her son, Leo, aged 26, is missing after air operations from England. Whether he has been taken prisoner or was lost in combat will be of course unknown until further news is received. He is a graduate of St. Michael's Separate School and Cobourg Collegiate Institute and was a popular young man in town. His mother resides in Cobourg and his father is a member of the Veterans' Guard. Flesch is the second Cobourg airman listed as missing, the other one being Harry Leetham.

HONORS—FEET FIRST

LONDON—(CP).—Usual honors due a flag officer when he boards a warship were absent when an admiral commanding a convoy was rescued after his ship was torpedoed. Two able seamen dragged him feet first from the water.

Regarding Clothing Restrictions

So What!

Well it's true that the new clothing restrictions are in force. Cuffless and peatless trousers, buttonless sleeves, shorter coats, no double breated suits . . . still, SO WHAT! . . . we'll soon realize that all of these frills were but a passing phase in the styling of men' clothes . . . and the new Victory models, will, in a much sheter time than we think, be THE style, and we'll all feel that it's a good job well done.

Yes sir, everytime you feel like making a complaint to us, and human nature bing what it is, we will get some complaints, think it over and cool off and go and buy yourself some War Certificates or a Victory Bnd . . . instead of bellyaching, you should thank your lucky star you're living in Canada, and can still speak your piece without being thrown into a concentration camp.

We're all for these new Victory models, let's start the Victory parade right now. Come in and look at our new samples.

Radio Doings

Peterborough now has its own radio station, dedicated to the service of this city and its surrounding area and officially launched last night by the Examiner's General Manager. The first evening's program, we venture to suggest, spoke of the new station's intentions in deeds, always more convincing than words. It included not only excellent talent imported from beyond the confines of the station's own district, but also a considerable measure of first-rate local talent, and in this we see an earnest of the intention of CHEX to serve as a cultural centre for Peterborough. Talent is handicapped and stultified unless it has an outlet, and CHEX will serve as an outlet for talent of a suitably high order in this community. It is not necessary to stress the benefit inherent in this; man does not live by bread alone and the community which has no art and cares for none cannot be said to live; it merely exists.

While on the subject of radio it is interesting to notice that a portion of Johann Sebastian Bach's Passion of Our Lord According to St. Matthew was broadcast from CBY last night. This marks a notable advance in Canadian radio. The Toronto performance of this work of sublime genius is considered by competent critics to be one of the finest musical events to take place on this continent during the year, and certainly one of the finest performances of this particular work to be heard anywhere in the world. Performed annually for almost a score of years, it has a maturity which no great work can be given in a few rehearsals; over this period of time Sir Ernest Macmillan has had opportunity to reflect deeply upon the work and enlarge his command of it. The annual performance of the Passion is undoubtedly Canada's finest musical event.

Honor, then, to the C.B.C. which has made it possible for listeners outside Toronto to hear a part of this work. This is, we believe, the first time that it has been broadcast. Some readers may recollect that the Examiner's columnist, Mr. Samuel Marchbanks, discussed the Passion after its performance last Easter and urged strongly that it be broadcast. Now that end has been achieved and we sincerely hope that a broadcast of the Passion will become an annual Easter feature for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Elliott On Woodlands

Mr. Alex. Elliott, K.C., M.P.P., in the course of his able and interesting survey of agricultural matters in the Provincial House yesterday, made some pertinent remarks about Ontario's woodlands. The enormous growth of forest industries in this Province in late years has done everything to take trees off the land, but we would be glad of assurance that a corresponding scheme of afforestation was in hand. Trees are cut in many thousands, and it is necessary that they be replaced if the forest industries are to be continued and if this Province is not bent on doing itself irreparable damage. Our ancestors who cleared this country were careless of trees; they had to cut many of their farms out of dense forest; and often they cut recklessly. We have retained some of their attitude toward trees, and it is high time that we realized the importance of forests to us. There are already parts of Ontario that are little better than wastes, because those districts have been too thoroughly cut over.

Mr. Elliott outlined the Province's responsibility to (1) attend to afforestation of suitable large tracts of land, (2) to improve those existing woodlands which have become depleted, (2) to reclaim wastes which will support forest growth, and (4) to put plantings on slopes and hills which are subject to erosion because they are insufficiently protected. It is understood, of course, that afforestation means a careful planting of deciduous trees, which are slow-growing, as well as conifers, which grow rapidly. We must think not twenty years ahead, when we may cut the forests, but a century ahead, when our grandchildren will cut it. Let us not do all our planting with evergreens because they are cheap and easy to grow.

We strongly endorse Mr. Elliott's opinion on this very important matter, and we hope that his suggestion will beget a plan of afforestation which is in correct ratio to our too-eager cutting.

Would-Be King-Makers

Two gentlemen, Mr. Elmore Philpott of Victoria, B.C., and Monsieur Hertel LaRoque of Montreal, are at present travelling about this Dominion, holding meetings to show the public, in their own words, "Why Canada needs a Non-Party National Government headed by Lieutenant-General McNaughton." We do not attach any deep importance to their goings-on, but we do strongly deplore the intrusion of such ephemeral and visionary schemes upon the public attention at this particular time. The Philpott and LaRoque entertainment will have no lasting consequences, but it adds to the already excessive amount of foolish talk which has sprung from the plebiscite issue. These gentlemen assure us that we are "threatened with national disruption"; that is humbug. But we will be threatened with national disruption or something very like it in the future if people of complex and concealed political motives do not cease advancing their disingenuous causes under the flag of national unity.

It is a pity that General McNaughton's name has been dragged into the political field. That brilliantly able commander has wisely refrained from comment upon the Canadian political situation and has given no smallest hint that he aspires to be other than a military leader. Now that he is once more with our troops in England the use of his name will carry less weight. But just why do the two would-be king-makers who have used his name think that he would make a good political head for this country? It is not axiomatic that a fine soldier will make a fine statesman, though some have done so. Could McNaughton be both head of the state and head of the armed forces? Such a thing is unthinkable unless Philpott and LaRoque wish to establish a dictatorship here. And precisely how would General McNaughton become head of a non-party national government? It is extremely unlikely that the Canadian people would elect him to such an office, greatly though they admire him, and there is no other legal way in which he could gain such a position. And if anything would be calculated to split Quebec from the rest of Canada it would be the adoption of a government headed by a soldier, so the national unity proposal simply will not hold water.

More lies behind this proposal than meets the eye, and in time we shall doubtless learn what it is. But at present we need no hysterical additions to the national hubbub. Canadian unity will not be preserved by schemes which are clearly designed to foment trouble, and the Philpott-LaRoque scheme is nothing more.

India's Hour Of Decision

The choice which Sir Stafford Cripps, speaking for the British Government, has given to India's leaders is a simple one; either they may accept Britain's scheme for Indian self-government after the war in toto, or they may continue as they are. It is a simple choice, but so is the choice between life and death.

After decades of agitation for Indian freedom, will the leaders be able to make up their minds? A decision must be made within a few days. There is a limit set upon the time for deliberation, and all the rigors of Occidental efficiency are imposed upon a group of Orientals, living in a land where time means little. Nine thousand years of history has slowed Indian thought; unfortunately for them another Oriental nation, the Japanese, has long been familiar with that most tyrannous of Western inventions, the clock.

From a Western point of view, the scheme proposed by Britain through its spokesman seems a generous and fair one. It is hard to see what more could be done to ensure a fair treatment of religious and racial minorities. Inevitably the scheme will present many practical difficulties in execution and the Indian leaders who undertake to make it work will have their hands full. But they asked for it, and now they have a chance to get it. If India, after thousands of years of a high degree of civilization, is not ready for self-government on the Western plan now, she will never be ready for it.

Undoubtedly India could govern herself more or less to her own satisfaction, but it is necessary also that she govern herself to the satisfaction of the Western world. Britain cannot relinquish India, only in order to have her fall into the hands of a great imperial power in twenty years or so. Nor does Britain want India to express her new freedom by foolishly throwing herself into an alliance with an anti-British power. India may become a British Dominion if she wishes, with power to leave the Empire, but that power may not be used merely to spite her former ruler. The decision is at hand and the time is short. Let us hope that India's leaders, clearly realizing their immense responsibilities, decide to take the plunge.

Counting Chickens

Hardly a day passes which does not bring news of some scheme which is to play its part in the construction of the world after the war. This idea of planning for the peace while a war is actually in progress is a new one and, in reason, it is a good one, but we think that it is being carried a little too far at present. We have got to win this war first; that is our main job, and nothing should be allowed to interfere with it.

Of course, planning future Utopias is a pleasant occupation, and it gives many well-meaning men and women a thrill of doing something constructive while the rest of the world is bent on destruction. But a line must be drawn between practicable plans for the peace, made by authorized persons who will have a chance to make the plans work, and mere happy day-dreaming and wishful thinking by persons who want to give themselves airs of importance. Declarations by luncheon speakers, pulpiteers and industrialists as to what must be done after the war carry little weight, for these people have neither the power to translate their predictions into facts, nor have they any valid idea of what kind of world the peace will bring.

Planning for the post-war world is best left to the Government. Too much windy talk about it by self-appointed reformers is liable to create serious indifference to the war itself. We have not won it yet, and we will not win it unless we all unite toward that end. To speak from the common store of proverbial wisdom, we would be better employed making two blades of grass grow where but one grew before than in the foolishly optimistic pastime of counting our chickens before they are hatched.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A Swiss invention cleans and regenerates old movies and restores dulled sound tracks. Can't we let bygones be bygones?

Some years ago Mussolini advised his people to "live like lions." Quite overlooking the fact, apparently, that a lot of lions live in cages.

Tailors have been asked to report on men who have had more than three suits of clothes since the beginning of the year. Are the butterflies to be broken on the wheel?

We have grown heartily sick of that palsied jest about March coming in like a lamb and going out like a lion. Fortunately the season for it is nearing an end.

The Brantford Expositor, learned in Biblical lore, draws attention to these grim words in the third chapter of the book of Isaiah: "In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments...and their round tires...the chains...and the mufflers...the changeable suits of apparel..."Who dares to say that Isaiah wasn't a prophet?

BIS DAT, QUI CITO DAT

You who awake each morn
'Neath peaceful skies,
Who know not of the siren's warning sound;
You! Who from early dawn
To dusk, and starlit night,
May go your way
In quiet peace—
For you no fears arise.
Not yours the ears
To hear the wailing note!
To know the menace
Of the drone of planes—
Or hurry to a shelter
Underground;
Clasping your children close
Against your anxious heart,
Hushing their frightened cries,
Praying for day to come,
The while you wonder,
When the "All Clear," sounds,
What will there be
To greet your tired eyes?
Perhaps a falling bomb
Has wrecked your little home!
Perhaps a loved one
Whom you hoped to see
Is gone—To come no more!
Never again will eager, hurrying
Steps be heard
Outside your door!—
You then,
Who are so blessed—
Whose hearths are yet secure;
What can you,
Nay! What will you give?
For Victory,
For Peace that will endure.
What is your gift
That Freedom Live!

Hitler Has Made Huge Profits From Publishing

London Times

ADOLF HITLER, violent critic of the "plutocrats," draws the greatest private income in the world. Hitler is sole owner of Zentral Verlag, the great German publishing concern which has an annual turnover of about $280,000,000, employs more than 100,000 workers and shows a net profit of between $28,000,000 and $40,000,000.

No balance sheets are ever published; no auditor is ever allowed to examine the books. By terms of a contract arranged between Hitler and the director of the whole structure, Hitler has complete and absolute control over the company's income.

What he does with the money is a mystery. It comes to him, not as the Fuehrer, but as the head of a private concern. It is said in Germany that the Berchtesgaden house and estate are kept up out of this income, but even the whole paraphernalia of electric lifts and brightly lit tunnels cannot account for more than a small fraction of the great sum.

Hitler's control began in 1921 when the Zentral Verlag der NSDAP (National Socialist Party) was registered as a company in the name of Hitler.

At first its development was slow, but after Hitler took power, it grew quickly by the simple process of confiscating almost all competitors. In 1939 it took over the Jewish concerns of Mosse and Ullstein, two of the largest publishing houses.

About the same time, it took over, again by confiscation, the famous Wulf News Agency. Now known as the German News Agency, this service has a complete monopoly in the German news field.

Zentral Verlag owns practically all of the advertising agencies. All the party books and periodicals have also to be published through Zentral Verlag—which means that it gets all the profits, not merely from compulsory sales of Mein Kempf, but from the innumerable and lengthy books by Rosenberg, Goebbels and other Nazi leaders.

In addition, almost all technical and professional periodicals in Germany are printed through the same channel—Hitler's Zentral Verlag.

Its greatest business is in the publication of newspapers. It now owns two-thirds of all German newspapers outright in addition to drawing advertising revenue from eleven of the others. Each day more than 16,000,000 newspapers out of the total German circulation of 25,000,000 come from the Zentral Verlag. Income from their sale alone reaches $96,000,000 yearly.

Last week in Berlin, Hitler put in his usual word against "Jewish and democratic plutocrats" and it brought the usual cheerful hisses.

But his audience was listening to a man who owns a financial structure far beyond the highest dreams of any publishing magnate in the state of society which he so vehemently condemned.

A Bit of Nonsense

Heady Economy

After much thought, an Aberdeen couple decided to adopt an orphan boy.

"I wonder, Mrs. McFie," remarked a neighbor, "that ye didna choose a lassie. Now you're up in years she would have been helpful tae ye."

"Maybe," replied Mrs. McFie; "but, ye see, we had a guid glengary bonnet in the hoose."

All Square

A Scottish commercial traveller called at a village to do business. Needing a shave, he went to the local barber.

The barber, noticing that the Scot seemed fairly well-to-do, charged him 2s., which he paid reluctantly. Then, not to be outdone, the customer commented on the enormous number of flies which were buzzing round, and the barber said he had tried every possible means to get rid of the pests.

"Give me half a crown," said the Scot, "and I guarantee to tell you a remedy that will clear your shop in less than a minute."

The barber argued about the price for a second or two, but eventually he paid.

"Now," said the Scott, opening the door, "catch one of those flies, shave him, charge him two shillings, and you'll never see another fly or anything else in your shop again."

He closed the door behind him as the barber collapsed.

BRITAIN MENACED

SIR GWILYM GIBBON, sixty-eight-year-old authority on local government, warns Britain that she is endangered by the prospect of gerontocracy, government by old men.

In the London magazine Public Administration he says of the Labor party:

"There has been little encouragement of young men but rather of the cult of seniority. The very youth of the party itself may account for this, though there are more obvious reasons.

"This respect for seniority is no monopoly of the Labor party. It prevails among people generally.

"Looking ahead, there is real danger in the cult of seniority. The British are becoming older people. The proportion of elderly persons is becoming larger and larger. There is some risk of gerntocracy, even government by the elderly for the elderly. If matured, the prospect would be dismal. It would spell doom if continued, for a country survives only if it lives for the future no less than for the present."—Sydney Post-Record.

"CHURCHILL: 'THAT'S THE MAN YOU MUST RELY ON!'"

• Monsoon, Burma's Hope ?

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 1 (AP)—Seasonal winds bred in the Indian Ocean are beginning to interpose as serious weather obstacles as a Russian winter did to Hitler's still immobilized "crusade."

Coupled with at least temporary Anzac-American air mastery over the New Guinea bridgehead for invasion of Australia, the first wet breath of the monsoon is blowing ill portents for foe. Torrential deluges in Eastern New Guinea have already drowned out an attempted Japanese land advance against Port Moresby.

Those heavy rains in New Guinea are a sure harbinger of the "wet monsoon" that blows southwesterly from the Indian Ocean to the Himalayas from April to October. That natural phenomenon bids fair to dominate the Japanese war pattern for the next several weeks, compelling all-out concentration against British-Chinese defense lines in Burma.

Within a few weeks the Irrawaddy Delta battleground in Burma will be a quagmire. successions of tremendous thunderstorms will sweep the country from south to north, making major military action impossible for two or three months at least. Moreover, the air odds against the Allies must cease to be a factor. Planes on both sides will be largely grounded.

PRIME MILITARY ELEMENT

It follows, then, that such predictable weather conditions are a prime military element to be reckoned with not alone in Burma, but also in New Guinea and Australia and even in the Philippines. Although not directly in the Indian Ocean monsoon belt, Central Luzon, New Guinea and Northern Australia are greatly affected by that annual shift of the winds.

The rainy season comes on Luzon in May. It has already opened in New Guinea and touched the north coast of Australia and Torres Strait. And that coast is not only Australia's invasion coast, but its wettest area in the rainy season.

It is in Burma, however, that both the military and climatic situations are most critical, the wet monsoon portents greatest . Given the ability to hold out in defense of the Burma oil fields another month or six weeks, and the Sino-British forces could hope to hold out indefinitely, even to counter-attack when dry weather returns, they would have months to build up their armies and equipment.

By the same token, if the Japanese cannot crash through in Burma to seize the great oil fields before the monsoon bursts, their chance of taking it at all to hamper the Allied war effort would be slim. Tokyo, for all the stunningly swift conquest of British China Sea bastions and of Dutch India, would find itself in much the same position as Hitler in Russia, six weeks too late.

Had Japan struck in the Pacific in October or even November instead of December Burma's oil fields might now be lost ot the United Nations.

Letters To The Editor

EXEMPTING DISCHARGED MEN

Editor Examiner:

Sir.—As a ratepayer and an ex-serviceman I am opposed to exemption of discharged men from the poll tax. They are no more entitled to exemption than the men who fought and was wounded in the last war. Some of these old veterans are now in bad shape but they have been paying poll taxes ever since their return and are still called upon to pay in their old age.

The officers of the Legion do not protest this injustice and they should resign and let some others take over who will look after the interest of the forgotten veterans of the last war.

VETERAN.

A LETTER TO REEVE MANN

Reeve Allan B. Mann,
Smith Township.

Dear Sir,—I was more or less hurt by the statement attributed to you in the press last night regarding Mr. Coyle and myself, in which it said that Mr. Coyle and Kilbon seemed to be making a pretty good thing out of the Nepheline. The only object that I could see was to create an antagonistic attitude which was wholly unjustified.

In a certain way I feel that it is partly my fault, for not explaining to the council that we had been fighting a losing battle ever since we started until 1941 when we showed a slight profit and paid our first income tax, which amounted to less than $200.00. This should indicate how small our margin of profit was. What I assumed was that the council would realize that I would not ask for anything unless it was urgently needed. Practically every cent we take in goes back out into Peterborough County. The payroll of between $7,000 and $8,000 a month is going to men throughout this section of the county.

I am not a politician, but I know a little about politics, and no person in public office should make a statement judging by appearances. You leave yourself wide open. However, I am not vindictive and am hardened to take blows below the belt, and keep fighting.

Your statement made me realize that there are council members that don't realize what we are up against and I would be pleased to take you and any other members on a trip to our operations so that you can see what somebody elses headaches look like.

R. G. KILBON,
Manager American Nepheline Co.
Lakefield, March 28.

INFILTRATION METHODS

COMMANDER: From headquarters at Mandalay, in the country of pagoda-crowned hills, the commander of British forces in Burma, Lieut. Gen. Harold Rupert Leofric George Alexander, spoke last week of tactics. He attributed the Japanese conquest of Lower Burma, including Rangoon, to clever use of infiltration methods. The British, he said, had wrongly stuck to the few roads through the rough jungle terrain, but "steps" were being taken to remedy the situation and hold the enemy from further gains.

Since he was put in charge of the Crown Colony's defense early this month General Alexander has urged his troops to "attack, attack and re-attack even when you are on the defensive." The fourth son of an earl, a product of Harrow and Sandhurst, the 51-year-old commander has been a firm advocate of the offensive, of individual initiative by junior officers and men, of commando-type warfare. He went over the top in World War I thirty times before being wounded. He supervised the evacuation from Dunkirk, and when Allied fortune was at its lowest ebb there he put on his best breeches and shiniest boots and breakfasted on tea and Dundee marmalade in a shell-torn house. He was the last man to leave the beaches for England.—New York Times.

Hard To Believe How Time Flies

APRIL 1

1912 C. A. Spence has been appointed as sanitary inspector for the city of Peterborough.

Legal committee of the city council is asked to report on the annexation of a portion of North Monaghan to the city.

The advance agent of the Ringling Bros. circus was here today making arrangements for the appearance of the circus here in June.

The council has agreed to trade Edison lane for another portion of C.G.E. property.

The Duke of Connaught has notified local authorities that he will not be able to visit Peterborough this year.

1922 As a result of heavy snowfalls yesterday sleighs and cutters re-appeared on city streets today and the few cars that had been out were sent back to the garage.

Stanley Harrison is appointed a member of the city police. Commission raises the salaries of the department.

It is announced that the filtration plant will be completed at $25,000 less than the original estimate.

Building permits so far this year total $21,810 which is $4,000 more than for the same period a year ago.

President E. W. Beatty of the C.P.R. has accepted an invitation from the Chamber of Commerce for a trip over the Trent Waterway.

1932 Gordon Curle, five-year-old Seymour township boy is badly scalded by falling into a kettle of boiling sap.

A. E. Chalmers takes over his duties as county road superintendent today.

Finance committee of the city council has ruled that members of the Peterborough Relief Association shall no longer sit on the Central Charity Board.

Ray Harding receives the bronze medal of the Royal Humane Society for life-saving and a posthumous award is made to Sidney Neiman. Three girls, Dorothy Self, Lavada Crouter and Lila York are given parchment certificates.

Building permits in March this year totalled $12,475 as against $145 in the same month last year.

IN WAR TIME

1917 Mayor Duffus, it is stated, is to aid Lieut. Col. Duncan Walker in raising the 57th Battalion, Canadian Defence Force.

Walter Peters, weather observer, reports the weather during March much warmer than usual, with 64 degrees the highest mark reached.

T. P. Lancaster of Havelock is elected president of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association.

Corp. Grant Potter, former Peterborough boy who lost a leg at Ypres, is visiting friends here.

A Bible Message For Today . . .

And a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die. And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant. And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this: for he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.

Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself: for I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof: wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed. For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. And they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.—Luke vii, 2-10.

Salvage Drive Plans Complete

HAVELOCK, April 1 — (ENS).—T. P. Lancaster advised the local Red Cross on Monday afternoon that suitable arrangements had been completed for the salvage campaign, which will commence on Saturday, April 11. Posters and hand bills giving detailed instructions to all the housekeepers will be distributed with the assistance of the High School boys.

Mr. Lancaster told of the co-operation he had received from the County Council last week in regard to the Red Cross campaign, which must be completed by the end of May. The Council agreed to allocate a half-mill in the tax rate this year which will provide $5,168, part of which goes to the Ontario Division in Toronto, and the remainder will be distributed among the branches of the county at a later date.

Mrs. H. Roche, vice-president, presided. The treasurer reported a bank balance of $115.58.

During the afternoon two quilts were completed and a good deal of material given out by the cutting committee, and many knitted articles were turned in. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Rochet and Mrs. Couch.

The meeting will be held on Tuesday next week as the Women's Institute meets on Monday.

Serving Overseas

Pte. Dick Hill of Buckhorn, who has been serving overseas since December. Prior to going overseas he was for 15 months at the Peterborough Training Centre. Dick saw service in the last war.

Plainville Group Aids Red Cross

PLAINVILLE, April 1—(ENS).—The ladies of the west end group of Plainville Red Cross, under the leadership of Mrs. Wilbur Cole, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilson to quilt on Friday. In the evening the gentlemen and a few other guests arrived, and had a very enjoyable pot-luck supper with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson. Tickets had previously been sold on a Dresden plate quilt made by Miss Ida Morton; the draw was made by little Joyce Buttar, drawing a ticket held by Mrs. Box of Port Hope. The tickets sold amounted to over $24, and with an offering taken at the supper the total amount was over $26.

Mrs. Jeff Morton moved a vote of thanks to the host and hostess for their kindness in opening their lovely home for the occasion. This was seconded by Mrs. Frank Halligan. Present were Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Buttar, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Butters, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Will Benson, Miss Ida Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Halligan, Shirley and Barbara, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Buttar and Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Manley, Mrs. H. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Cole and Edwin, Mrs. Elmer West and Joan, Mrs. Alvin Cole, Mrs. L. Gibson, Miss Marion Wilson, Miss Audrey Wilson and Harold Beatty.

By CECIL CARNES

THE STORY: Allan Steele posing as magazine photographer, seeks Dr. Sargent and daughter, on U.S. mission in Mexico's Peninsula, who have disappeared; also news of Harry Bishop, maddened by mysterious injection while on same mission. Bishop, found, repeated only "The yellow devils!" Allan learns from Sun Su, Chinese proprietor of isolated inn, who is working with U. S., that there is Japanese cannery on nearby island; that "beautiful and evil" Eurasian girl, Asia Minor, who hates the English, is connected with it. He meets her, sees Col. Escobar, enigmatic officer of Rural Guard, give her an envelop. Steele decides Jap cannery might be front for plane and bomber supply base.

CHAPTER VII

COOL, clean and comfortable, Allan wandered out into the patio, feigned surprise at seeing the seated couple, and threw them a friendly wave of his hand. As he had hoped they might, the guilty pair acclaimed him with one accord and invited him to join them in a drink. The enchantress explained how she had already met Senor Steele; her cavalier, without going into details, confessed to having had the same distinguished honor.

Allan thought Escobar appeared a trifle moody, which he put down to a reasonable resentment on the officer's part to being interrupted in his intrigues and amours. But when the lady excused herself presently to go to her room—and to hide that precious envelope, surmised the American—Escobar seized the opportunity quickly.

"I've been dying to tell you something strange and dramatic, senor, but I did not wish to mention it in the presence of Senorita Mindr. You recall the doctor with whom we left Pepe this afternoon?"

"Perfectly. Sounded like a good man."

"He has sounded like one for 12 years in Ensenada. He came to San Saba only recently, when the old doctor died. Well, two minutes after we left, Pepe recovered consciousness, recognized the doctor by a scar on his left wrist—and knifed him seven times."

"Good Lord! Recognized him? You mean—?"

"Dr. Machado, 15 years ago, was leader of the bandits who tortured Pepe. He made a nice stake in crime, then retired to civil life, practiced medicine, and was in all respects a reputable citizen. He told the story to the police before he died."

"Good grief! And poor Pepe? Murder is murder, I know, but considering the life he has led as a cripple since that scoundrel injured him—well, I hope the law will be lenient with him."

"The law will," said Escobar, smiling faintly as he made wet circles on the table top with his glass. "Naturally, I have quite a little influence with the law in San Saba, and my sympathies are wholly with Pepe. Very wrong, is it not? However, the incident is interesting in the way it bears out what I told you this noon, that it is no longer possible to judge men by their outward appearance. Imagine a man like Dr. Machado having a history like that—! And here is our lady!"

Allan watched her as she came across the patio. Every motion of her limbs and body was instinct with almost feline grace. A heady breath of her perfume stirred him oddly as she brushed by him and resumed her seat. What a woman! he thought, and hurriedly reminded himself of Sun Su's tacit warning. Even the most graceful feline has claws!

THE three of them dined together, and Allan discovered an excellent chef was one of the hotel's numerous delights. He would have been perfectly content, when coffee and brandy arrived in the dusk, but for the memory of Harry Bishop, tossing and muttering in a hospital bed. The Indian boy placed a pink-shaded lamp on the table that made Asia still more a vision of soft loveliness.

The boy also brought a summons for Escobar. A messenger from San Saba awaited el senor colonel in the lobby. His orderly with the day's routine report, explained Escobar for Allan's benefit, and begged them to excuse him for 10 minutes while he initialed it.

The two left at the table sat in silence for several moments. Asia, regarding him pensively, was smoking and plainly enjoying one of Allan's cigarets. And Alan was enjoying her till he suddenly shook off the Circean spell which was creeping over his senses.

He had no time to waste, he rebuked himself sharply, on even the most fascinating of sirens. He had a mission here in Mexico. He must get on with it. Abruptly, he elected to bring one point to a head.

While she followed the movement, idly at first, he wet the tip of one forefinger in the moisture from a glass and drew a bold V on the table before her. At the same instant, a fingernail on his other hand began to tap a quick rhythm on the metal. Dot-dot-dot-dash. Dot-dot-dot-dash. The Morse code for the letter V. Dot-dot-dot-dash!

Had he reached across and slapped her face, her reaction could not have been more swift and spontaneous. The lithe figure drew back sharply, stiffened tensely; anger flamed in the eyes fixed on his. Her lips parted, but he managed to speak first.

"FORGIVE me, dear lady!" he pleaded; he dropped a hand on one of hers and pressed it tight. "I played that trick on you because I hoped it might show me how you feel about some things. In this Mexico, one can never be sure of his neighbor. But now I know one thing about you—Asia. You hate the English even—er—even more than I do!"

Slowly, her eyes calmed as she considered him. The color came back to cheeks which had been white with anger. She nodded.

"This country is neutral, Senor Steele. There is no reason why I should conceal my sentiments. Yes, I hate the English, and with cause!" Once more her eyes were sultry. "I'm a Eurasian, and—"

"I know," he said, and made it sound sympathetic. "I'm American by birth, but I come from a family that has suffered much from the English—er—tyranny. Many of us have not forgotten past wrongs."

"Ah. Now I understand!" She scrutinized him shrewdly. "But—you do nothing about it, you and your great stupid country! Oh, if I were a man, I would strike hard for vengeance! A woman can do so little."

"The hell you say!" thought Allan, and grinned to himself. Aloud, he replied: "Indeed, Senorita, you don't do me justice. I am only watching for an opportunity—a chance to strike! Tell me anything I can do and—and I'll show you something!"

"You mean it " The whispered query was eager.

"With you by my side—to inspire me with your beauty—I could perform prodigies—miracles!"

"Perhaps—later, we will talk again! Here is Escobar." She greeted him with a warm smile. "Alfredo, I am just suggesting to Senor Steele that he ride with me early tomorrow morning, before the sun is too high. I have promised to show him some objects for his camera."

"Why not?" said the colonel cheerfully. "I must be away, myself, or I would be delighted to help you."

"It's mighty nice of you, senorita, and I'll accept your offer with pleasure. Nine o'clock early enough? Okay, it's a date." He stood up. "And now, I'm off to bed, after a long hard day."

Thus tactfully he withdrew, feeling he had played gooseberry long enough even if they were a pair of crooks!

He entered the hotel by the lobby, which was deserted. He half-turned to go to his room, then changed his mind and elected to stretch his legs in a five-minute walk up the road and back. There was a three-quarter moon to give him light . . .

He had his stroll, and returned. He was wearing tennis shoes, utterly noiseless in the white dust of the road, which was why he came unnoticed upon a man standing by the gate of the inn and watching the building. Allan noticed he was dressed in a dark-colored shirt and trousers, wore a spreading straw sombrero and was smoking a cigaret.

"Hola!" said Allan companionably. Then he blinked, for the figure melted into the shadows and was gone as suddenly as if it had been a startled ghost. "All right, my snooty friend; high-hat me as much as you please and see if I care!"

Scattering Plague

CHUNGKING, China, April 1.—(AP). — A Chinese government spokesman at a press conference today accused Japan of starting germ warfare and said full information on the charges would be formally transmited to United Nations Government.

An investigation by noted foreign and Chinese medical experts had established that a Japanese plane on November 3 dropped infected material at Changteh in Honan Province which caused the death of six persons by bubonic plague, the spokesman said.

The findings of the experts had been unanimous, he declared.

Suspended Sentence

WINDSOR, Ont.; April 1 — (CP)—Mrs. Carrie Spry, who confessed to taking $1,051 from the office of the country treasurer while employed by her father as cashier in the office, was given one year's suspended sentence by Judge Uriah McFadden today. Restitution of the full amount stolen has been made by John E. Miller, the woman's father who was treasurer at the time.

The suspended sentence was imposed after Crown Attorney James S. Allan pointed out that the penalty for the charge under law is five years in jail.

Costly Spot

BERNE, April 1 — (AP). — The high cost of living within Croatia, Axis puppet state is evidently the highest on the continent.

The Zagreb correspondent of the Zuerich Die Tat said prices of food and other necessities had increased 150 to 200 per cent and luxuries from 300 to 1,000 per cent in Croatia, which was formed from part of Yugoslavia.

Poor quality shoes were quoted at $15.00 a pair.

Be-Furred Mermaid

... impresarios wait until mid-summer to display the fur fashions for the following winter—this to the great annoyance of the models. Attractive Irmgard Dawson is doing her fur modelling in comfort at Miami Beach. Over her bath suit she wears a gray-blue monkey fur coat with flawless sleeves and no collar. It is valued at $1,000.

A Help to Those Who Are Past Middle Age

When men and women get past middle age their energy and activity, in many instances, begin to decline, and their general vitality is on the wane.

Little ailments and sicknesses seem harder to shake off than formerly, and, here and there, evidences of a breakdown begin to appear.

Now is the time those wishing to help maintain their health and vigour should take a course of Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills.

They help tone up and invigorate the patient by their tonic action on the system.

'Y' GYM CAPTURES LADIES INTERMEDIATE BASKETBALL PLAYOFF

Bettina Beats Dorazio In 10; Guns For Louis

PHILADELPHIA, April 1—(AP)—Melio Bettina, former light-heavyweight champion, has started a campaign he hopes will earn him a crack at Joe Louis' heavyweight crown sometime this Summer.

The Beacon, N.Y., southpaw, who fights Booker Beckwith in Chicago on April 10, took a big stride in the right direction last night by gaining a unanimous 10-round decision over Philadelphia's Gus Dorazio in a savage give-and-take scrap before 7,000 paying customers at the Arena.

Bettina's whirlwind finish in the final round, during which he cuffed Dorazio groggy, won him the decision. Until the 10th Dorazio, a 3 to 1 underdog, virtually was on even terms and had a splendid opportunity to score a major upset. In the sixth Dorazio, who at 190 held a five-pound weight advantage, had Bettina on the verge of a knockout after landing a terrific right hand punch to the head. But Bettina saved himself by staggering into a clinch. At the end it was Gus who was in trouble, not Melio.

It was Bettina's 10th straight victory as a heavyweight since he lost his light-heavy crown. If he beats Beckwith, Promoter Herman Taylor said he plans to match him with eith Max Baer or Lou Nova in an out-doors bout here in May.

The fight, one of the best of the local indoor season, drew a gross gate of $10,927.

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Among the 3,000 soldiers from Camp Shelby who watched the New York Giants suffer their fourth defeat in five starts against the Cleveland Indians yesterday was Zeke Bonura, erstwhile first baseman. Bonura sat on the bench with his former teammates and received a collection of bats and balls for his camp nine.

EL CENTRO, Calif. — Manager Frankie Frisch, whose Pittsburg Pirates have won 15 of 17 games, says Bob Elliott, the former outfielder, will start at third for his club, and that Johnny Barrett and John Wyrostek will flank Vince DiMaggio in the outer gardens.

TRAINING GOSSIP

ALEXANDRIA La., April 1—(AP)—Cleveland Indians picked veterans Al Milnar and Mel Harder to continue the club's mastery over New York Giants to-day but much of the team's interest was centred on Outfielder Jeff Heath. He clouted home runs in the sixth and ninth innings yesterday to keep abreast the National Leaguers single-handed until Manager Lou Boudreau and Pitcher Clint Brown combined for a 10th-inning run and a 3-2 victory.

LOS ANGELES. — Connie Mack's spring crop of grief, the veteran manager's recent harvest, was augmented to-day when Mike Kreevich reported he would be unable to throw a ball for at least two weeks. A torn shoulder tendon which has troubled him since the start of the training season, may keep the stubby defensive ace out of the Philadelphia A's opening league game.

ORLANDO, Fla. — Bruce Campbell, Washington Senator right fielder, has replaced Mickey Vernon in the clean-up spot on the team's batting order. During his debut in the place of honor, however, he got only one for four yesterday against Cincinnati.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — You can't convince Phil Rizzuto, midget shortstop of New York Yankees, that 13 isn't an unlucky number. He participated in four double killings against Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday and had eight assists and five putouts for the day. He erred in his 13th chance.

SANFORD, Fla.—Boston Braves' game today with the Brooklyn "B" team was cancelled by "mutual consent," officials of the Boston club announced. They said that Larry MacPhail, president of the Dodgers, had patched up the Brooklyn "B" lineup with players from the Montreal club in a similar engagement several days ago and they did not want a second helping of that today.

LAKELAND, Fla. — Release of four players to Beaumont of the Texas League brings the Detroit Tiger suad to within one mon of the number to be brought north next week. Manager Del Baker says that either Bob Patrick or Ned Harris, both outfielders, will be assigned to Buffalo.

Generals Sure Royals Their "Meat"

MONTREAL, April 1.—(CP).—A light workout was on tap to-day for Oshawa Generals as a means of warming up for the opening game to-night with Montreal Royals of a best of seven series for the Eastern Canadian junior hockey championship.

The Generals, guided by Charlie Conacher, arrived in Montreal late last night. And Conacher, the former National Hockey League star, went on record immediately with the prediction that the Generals would top the Montrealers in the sectional final.

"As I see it the Royals have played 19 games and they are undefeated," saiad Conacher. "That means they have a good club. But consider the Generals. We've played 41 games so that means that we're going to have better condition and more experience."

Conacher isn't worried about the fact that the Royals, conquerors of the Generals in last year's eastern final, are supposed to have even better-balanced club than last season. He still figures that Oshawa has the power to take the Montrealers into camp.

Buck May Yet Paw Dirt Of Ebbets Field

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sport Writer.

ORLANDO, Fla., April 1—(AP).—There still at least is an outside chance that Buck Newsom—all 222 pounds of him—will be pawing the dirt of Brooklyn's Ebbets' Field and "show-boatin'" as only he can for the fans of Flatbush this summer. That is where big Buck should have been all these years, instead of wasting his particular talents on the more sedate baseball parks of the American League.

If there is one thing the Washington Senators did not need it was another pitcher. But "Old Fox" Clark Griffith simply could not resist the opportunity to grab Newsom from Detroit virtually on his own terms.

And now, if things move along logically and no hitch develops then should come the next move—Newsom's trade to the St. Louis Browns for a couple of players, perhaps Third Baseman Harland Clift and a utility infielder. The Senators are in sore need of both.

When, and if, that deal goes through, the Browns presumably will be free to sell Big Buck to Brooklyn for $40,000 and a player. The Dodgers' offer, made originally to Detroit, is understood still to stand. Buck probably would be worth every cent of it, too. He would fit in beautifully on the staff of the National League champs, taking his turn between Whit Wyatt and Kirby Higbe. The only thing the experts have felt the Dodgers might need to stand off the St. Louis Cardinals, is a so-called "third pitcher" one capable of winning say. 15 games while Wyatt and Higbe bear the brunt.

Meanwhile, the Senators' prospects are not materially improved by Newsom's acquisition. They have a couple of the best in Dutch Leonard and Sidney Hudson, and they have come up with a brace of rookies named Hardin Cathey and Phil McCullough who look so good Manager Harris won't believe it. But they still haven't enough hitting to pull them out of the Second Division.

The only player who looks like he might provide a little power is Jim Vernon at first base.

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Basketball fans should swarm down to the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium tonight for the final game in the senior section of the Ladies' Basketball League between the C.G.E. Generals and the Quakers, getting under way at 7 o'clock sharp. At present the two teams are tied in the final series with a game each and the championship hinges on the result of tonight's battle. The winner will be the senior champs for the 1941-42 season and the losers will have the consolation cup as worthy runners-up. It has been a fine season and the playoff round has been in accordance with the splendid basketball played all season. Generals won the first game and Quakers came back with a rush to grab off the second fixture and sew up the series. Tonight's game should be the best of the season. Both teams are confident and both are keyed up and ready for the final test and the pace should be red-hot from the first whistle. Supporters of both clubs will likely be on hand to give vocal support and altogether it looks like a big night at the Y gym.

* * * * * *

Congratulations are in order to the members of the Y Gym team which came through in fine style last night to win the intermediate championship of the Ladies' Basketball League by defeating Westclox 27 to 20 in the rubber game of the series. The Y team won the first game but the Clockmakers came back to take the second tussle and square the round. However, the Y.W.C.A. quintet made a good job of defeating their opponents last night leading them 9 to 3 at half time and outscoring them by a single point in the 2nd half when both teams turned it on in a fine exhibition of quick scoring. The high-scorers of the two teams could not get going in the first half. Ruth Hewitt, Y ace was held off the score sheet until after half time. Then she tossed in four field baskets and four free throws to give her 12 points and high score for the night. Similarly Frances Bestard after being held to a single point in the first half shot four baskets from the field and tossed in a free throw in the second half for a ten point total.

Very little softball gossip is going the rounds as yet and if there has been any attempt to round up local material it is being done very quietly. The Military Training Centre is about the only spot to show any interest in the game at present. The Soldiers have a number of reinforcements at the camp including Bucky Fleming, pitcher of the Orphans and Ossie Anderson, Hastings' shortstop and as those boys are on the staff at the camp they will be available for the military softball team. The compulsory training scheme is likely to have a lot of other softball stars in the Military Training Centre before the season opens. In fact right now the Soldiers look to have the edge from the view point of material. However it is early to make predictions as to the softball situation. It is probable that in the next few weeks the position will be clarified to some extent and then we will be in a position to get a line on the probable setup.

* * * * * *

Leafs Or Red Wings?

It's Toronto Maple Leafs or Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings for the Stanley Cup. The Leafs eliminated Rangers with a photo-finish last night when Nick Metz scored the winning goal on a breakaway with six seconds left to play and the Wings qualified for the last round by beating Boston 3 to 1 and taking their series in two straight games. Thus the second place team has ousted the first-placers and the club finishing in the fifth slot has triumphed over the squad which wound up the season in third position. That is a habit in playoff games and possibly it may continue when the Wings meet the Leafs, a development that has often turned up in these end-of-the-season games to make the dope look silly and the hockey experts appear like rank amateurs. At that the Detroit team looms up as a distinct threat, especially on their own ice where no club has beaten them for more than two months. They have a mixture of veterans and rookies and apparently Jack Adams has them really hot for the final test. They have had little trouble in disposing of the Canadiens and Bruins in the playoffs and the Leafs, exulting over their win over Rangers had better not make the mistake of under-estimating the Red Wings.

* * * * * *

The closest game of the present Stanley Cup series was the 3-2 battle at Toronto last night when the Rangers, coming from behind a 2 to 0 deficit in the last period, tied up the score and looked mighty like winners until a breakaway play with the game only six seconds from completion allowed Metz to score the goal that not only won the game but tossed Rangers out of action for the season. It was a very close series between two good clubs, with Leafs leading the New Yorkers only 13 to 12 in the six contests. The game that won the series was the first game played at Madison Square Gardens which the Leafs after a victory at home the previous night took 4 to 2. Otherwise both teams won all their home games and if that particular result had been reversed the series would be now tied with three wins each and the deciding battle coming up at New York Thursday night. It was that one win away from home that settled the argument. Leafs got the jump and were strong enough to hold it against an outfit that battled all the way and went down fighting against odds. In the game that saw them eliminated the Rangers lost the services first of Lynn Patrick with an injured leg, then of Babe Pratt, who drew a misconduct penalty and finally of Grant Warwick who hurt his knee and all three were missing when Leafs finally grabbed off the verdict.

* * * * * *

Unsung Heroes

Unsung heroes stole most of the glory in the final game. The Leafs' three goals were fired by Johnny McCreedy, Pete Langelle and Nick Metz, none of whom ranks as an ace while one of the two Ranger counters was scored by Alfie Pike, not one of the Rangers' first-stringers. In fact, Phil Watson of the Rangers was the only outstanding star of either team to get himself a goal last night. Incidentally it was only the third in six games for the New Yorkers' rough-neck line and the failure of the Watson-Hextall-Patrick trio to get rolling in regular season form must have been a heart-breaker to the Rangers. It is true that the Leafs first line of Apps, Drillon and Metz did not dominate the play either but at least they came up with six goals which was exactly double the contribution made by their Ranger opposite numbers. Toronto got better hockey than was expected from Wally Stanowski while Bucko McDonald has been one of the real Leaf stars all the way through. New York, too, got a lot more from Bill Juzda than the critics predicted. He was one of the pepperpots of the series. As for Jim Henry, the rookie goalie stood up well under fire even if he did fan badly on a long shot from McCreedy last night and as it turned out that drive from centre ice represented the margin of victory.

* * * * * *

Detroit Red Wings hanging up their tenth consecutive win on their own ice last night defeated the shattered Boston Bruins 3 goals to 1 and took the semi-final series in two straight games. Boston, with Brimsek playing sensationally in the nets made a stubborn fight to avoid elimination. Each club scored a goal in the first period and there was no score in the second. The third period was half over when Joe Carveth scored his second marker of the night, this time the winning one. The Bruins fought until the last ditch and finally pulled Frankie Brimsek from the cage and sent out six forwards. They did not have as much luck as the Petes did here recently with similar strategy against the Merritton Redmen for Don Grosso broke out over his own blue line and fired a long shot into the empty net to give the Red Wings a two-goal margin. Frankie Brimsek had 41 saves against 16 for Mowers and one of the two goals he allowed bounced in off Johnny Crawford's leg and Brimsek hadn't a chance to do anything about that.

Manager Walter Fitzgerald of the Halifax Canadians is hot under the collar and rightly so at the treatment his club has received from the hands of the C.A.H.A. He vows that he will never take another team back to Montreal and no one can blame him for that decision. The interest of hockey means nothing to the C.A.H.A. The Halifax team was beaten 12 to 3 in the first game of its

Changes Loom In Ontario Softball Code

GUELPH, April 1. — Many proposed amendments to rules governing play under the Ontario Amateur Softball Association will receive attention at the annual meeting of the Provincial body to be held in Simcoe on Good Friday.

A list of suggested changes announced by Secretary Verne McIlwraith yesterday include three pertaining to pitching and baseline distances. The secretary recommends that reversion be made to a 39-foot pitching distance and 50-foot baseline.

Toronto and Kingston associations favor the 40-foot pitching distance and 55-foot baseline which were tried out last season, while Hamilton proposes that the pitching distance for senior and intermediate series be forty feet and the baseline fifty-five feet, but that it be modified for the junior and juvenile series. Other suggested amendments follow:

Cork Centre "Waived."

Executive—official softball— That specifications as to the ball centre being of a spherical-shaped cork not more than two and a half inches in diameter, are temporarily waived. A softball "with or without" a cork centre, may be used, providing it bears the stamp of approval of the O.A.S.A. It is to be understood this change is to be only a temporary war measure.

O. H. King (executive)— Runners leaving base—change to read—After the pitcher assumes position on the pitcher's plate with ball in his possession, a base runner shall hold "or return" to base until the ball has passed home plate or resulted in a hit.

Sarnia—change to read —Runner is permitted to lead off any base, but shall not score on a passed ball.

H. K. Champion and H. D. Ovenden, executive — Honorariums — Change to read: The secretary shall receive an honorarium not to exceed $250; the treasurer a suitable honorarium not to exceed $200.

Secretary — Voting Delegates — Change to read, Each dictrict association shall be entitled to one vote for each classification affiliated in during the year preceding, but no district association shall be entitled to more than three voting delegates.

Age-Limit Change.

Secretary — District associations which operated only single team, in the year preceding, shall be entitled to only one vote at annual or general meetings.

Secretary — Minor age limit: Change to read: January first, playing year, instead of May first.

Hamilton — Third games: Amend to read: That a third game shall not be played on a neutral field if this evolves excessive and unnecessary travelling, but in such an event, in view of the gasoline and rubber restrictions a toss of the coin shall determine place of third game.

Secretary: Replayed tie game: Replayed tie games shall be governed by the same financial arrangements as third game played on home grounds of one of the competing teams.

LAST YEAR'S LAMBS

The U.S. lamb crop of 1941 was the largest on record.

Abe Squawks

Nobody could hear what Abe Simon was trying to say when this photo was made after the sixth round knockout by that well-known philanthropist, Joe Louis, at Madison Square Garden. Abe looks as if he were calling hogs, but it was learned later that he was protesting what he believed was a short count.

Westclox Girls Beaten 27-20 In Final Game

Y Gym captured the intermediate championship of the Ladies' Basketball League at the Y.W.C.A. last night by defeating Westclox 27-20 in the third and deciding game of the finals.

Each team had previously won one game, the Y team taking the first 26-21, Westclox winning the second in overtime 17-14, and the new champions naving just about the same edge as in the series opener to earn the title, although Westclox weren't through until the last whistle of the third game.

The Y team actually won the championship in the first half of last night's game, as it was in that period that they set up their margin. Westclox finally got their scoring punch under way in the last half to hold the winners to a one-point edge, but Y Gym had gone ahead by the margin of three field goals in the first period which was all theirs. Westclox had a fair share of the play in the first twenty minutes, but failed to take advantage of their scoring chances. Y Gym on the other hand also missed a lot of opportunities, but cashed in often enough to lead 9-3 at the rest period. Westclox tried valiantly to get back in the ball game in the last chapter, opening up a scoring drive that nettted them 17 points, but Y Gym also began to throw in baskets and more than matched the losers with 18 to add another point to their final margin.

It was a satisfying and conclusive final to the intermediate finals, with Y Gym having enough strength in all departments to earn the title and the losers battling with all they had to the finish.

Y Gym counted five points with their nine free throws and Westclox got two points from their 10 foul shots.

R. Hewitt was top point-getter for both teams with 12 points, all of them coming conveniently in the last half with I. Young and B. Flynn also starring. F. Bestard with 10 points and A. Flynn and M. Hawthorne also turned in a good effort for the losers. The teams:

Westclox 20 — M. Hawthorne 4, I. Bullock, A. Flynn 6, F. Bestard 10 M. Goldie, J. Hair, M. McFadden, S. Mortimer.

Y Gym 27 — R. Hewitt 12, I. Young 4, N. Smith 4, I. Stewart 2, D. Bestard, R. Sullivan 1, B. Flynn 4.

Referees—L. Grose and H. Macdonald.

$50,000 METZ GOAL PUTS LEAFS IN WORLD SERIES BY 3-2 SCORE

Wings Polish Off Bruins 3-1 In 2 Straight

DETROIT, April 1 (CP)—Jolly Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings who have been as hot as firecrackers this past month and twice as effective, today figured if they can maintain their torrid pace, then mark them down right now as Stanley Cup champions for 1941-42.

While this prediction is a little premature, the Detroiters convinced some of the die hards that they're going to be tough to eliminate from the title trail, when they polished off Boston Bruins last night by 3-1 to win the best-of-three series in straight games.

The Wings, however, have carved out a mighty opponent in the Toronto Maple Leafs, who qualified for the other final bracket with a 3-2 triumph against New York Rangers last night. The world series is scheduled to get under way in Toronto Saturday night. The second game of the best-of-seven affair will also be held in Toronto next Tuesday with the third and fourth games at Detroit the following Thursday and Sunday.

Date for remaining games, if necessary, have not yet been set.

Fighting from the opening second, Detroit whose most effective performances down the stretch have been on home ice, scored its 10th straight win on its own bailiwick in sidetracking the Bruins.

Boston Evens It

Winners of the first game 6-4, Detroit took an early lead against Boston only to have it tied, and then came roaring back after a scoreless second period to bang home two goals for the margin of victory.

To Joe Carveth, product of Regina, Sask., amateur ranks, goes the hero's mantle in last night's win. The fleet right-winger playing his first year in the big time, rapped home two goals, his second proving the clincher.

It was his first goal, a neat solo effort at 3:50 of the first period that sent Detroit ahead. Herbie Cain got this one back for Boston midway through the period. Harvey and Art Jackson set up the play and Cain deftly slipped the puck between a small opening in goaler Johnny Mowers' pads.

Detroit took up from there and swarmed around the Boston cage repeatedly, but goaler Frankie Brimsek was unbeatable on 41 shots. However at 9:46 of the last frame, Carveth let go a whistling shot which gave Wings the edge. With seconds of playing time left, Don Grosso made the verdict more decisive when he tallied on a long shot after Brimsek had been hauled from the ice for an extra forward.

Aces Whitewash Bay Miners By 8 to 0 Score

MONTREAL, April 1 — (CP). — Quebec Aces needed to capture only one more game today from Glace Bay Miners to win the right to enter the Eastern Canadian Senior hockey final, and the opinion hereabouts is that this will happen when the teams meet Thursday night in Quebec in the fourth game of their best-of-five series.

The Aces, champions of Quebec province, gave the Maritime champions an 8-0 beating last night in the third game of the series. The triumph was so convincing that there was immediate talk of the Aces opening the final series against Ottawa R.C.A.F. here Saturday night.

To do so, naturally, the Aces would have to win on Thursday night. But just about every one of the 7,000 fans who watched the game last night were willing to concede that Aces would hurdle the barrier. The Quebec club is likely to be at top strength for the fourth game against the Miners as it is believed possible that Defenceman Les Brennan, out for more than a week with an injured ankle, will return to action.

But even without Brennan, the Aces found little trouble in winning last night once the first ten minutes of the opening period had been completed. It was only during that time that the Miners showed any indication of holding the Quebec team.

In the first half of the opening period, good goal-tending by Earl Boates and stout work by the Glace Bay defencemen, along with poor shooting by the Aces, left the score a blank. But the Aces found the range shortly after the half-way mark of the period through a goal by Jo-Jo Grabowski and the rout was on.

Bobby Lee made it 2-0 shortly before the end of the first period and in the second session, the Aces added markers by Walt Nicholson, Butch Stahan and Eddie Bruneteau. Nicholson added another goal in the third period while Theo Hamel scored a pair only 11 seconds apart on breakaways.

Grabowski Shines

Grabowski's goal was a sensational effort. He lifted the puck between the Glace Bay defence and then crashed through to catch up with the disc just about 15 feet from the net. He snapped the puck into a corner of the net behind Boates.

Only one of the markers was scored while a team was shorthanded. Bruneteau's tally, the fifth of the game, came while Rozzy Rozzini of Aces was in the penalty box for tripping Pat Desbiens. Bruneteau raced up the ice to beat a Glace Bay defencman to an iced puck and then swept in on Boates to score easily.

Rozzini was taken to the hospital after the game for treatment for a chest injury. The injury was suffered while the teams were in Glace Bay for the first two games of the series and was aggravated in last night's contest. It is expected he will see action in the fourth contest. The Miners won the opener 3-0, but dropped the second game 4-1.

Last night their most effective man was Moe White, a former Montrealer. White, a dogged type of player, never gave up. One time he fired the puck four times in less than three minutes at Goalie Lionel Bouvrette, but the Quebec netminder was right on his toes to save.

Hershey Shades Caps 5-4 In Overtime

INDIANAPOLIS, April 1.—(CP)—No matter what the outcome of the American Hockey League playoff final between Indianapolis Capitals and Hershey Bears, the wiseacres were of the opinion that the ultimate winner will be able to lay claim to taking one of the toughest series in the history of the circuit.

If last night's second game of the best-of-five affair is any indication of what to expect then maybe they're right, for Hershey had to come through in overtime to gain a 5-4 win to square the series at one win apiece.

It was the veteran Phil Hergesheimer, former member of Chicago Black Hawks in the National League who pulled the game out of the fire for Hershey when he converted Gordie Pettinger's relay past Goaler Joe Turner in the Cap cage.

Before that the teams had waged a fast, wide open struggle with Hershey forced to come through with two late goals in the third period to get back on even terms with Indianpaolis.

After the clubs had picked up a goal apiece in the first period, Caps moved ahead early in the middle frame on a tally by Doug McCaig. Bill Jennings made it 3-1 for Caps early in the third period, but Hergsheimer got his first goal of the night to leave Bears only a goal in arrears. Shortly after the midway mark, however, Joe Douglas increased Caps edge to 4-2 on a play with Norm Sawyer and Jack Keating.

It looked as though that was enough for victory, but Hershey never stopped coming at the Indianapolis goal and first Wally Kilrea and then Wally Wilson banged home goals which put the game back on an even keel.

Although Hergesheimer's goal came at 2:54 of the extra frame, Caps were unable to do much against the stout goaling of Nick Damore in the Hershey net in the remaining minutes.

The teams are scheduled to renew the series in Hershey tomorrow.

Edmonton Leafs Whip Regina In 5-4 Tangle

By The Canadian Press

Two evenly-matched teams were marking time today until they meet tomorrow night in what may prove to be the final game of the Western Junior hockey semi-final. The series, originally scheduled as a best-of-five, was changed to a best-of-three.

Edmonton Maple Leafs, husky aggregation from the Alberta capital, scored an exciting 5-4 victory over Regina Abbotts last night after the teams had battled to a 2-2 tie last Saturday. A win for Edmonton tomorrow night will send them into the Western final against Portage la Prairie Terriers.

Terriers battle their way into the honor bracket by whipping Fort William Hurricane-Rangers three straight in their semi-final playoff.

On the Senior hockey front in the West, Port Arthur Bear Cats, 1939 Allan Cup winners, are two up on Lethbridge Maple Leafs in the semi-final playoff. The Lakehead sextet defeated Lethbridge in their last two engagements after they battled to a 4-4 tie in the first game. A win for Port Arthur tonight at Lethbridge will give them a final berth.

Kimberley Dynamiters from British Columbia are leading the highly-touted Saskatoon Quakers, 2-1, in the other Senior semi-final bracket. The Dynamiters hung a 6-1 defeat onto Quakers in the third game Monday night. They meet again in the fourth game at Saskatoon tomorrow night.

Rangers Ousted By Tally 6 Seconds To Go

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 1.—(CP).—A $50,000 last-minute goal scored by a Saskatchewan farm boy today placed Toronto Maple Leafs in hockey's world series and shuttled New York Rangers to honor seats on the sidelines reserved for those who fight gallantly but fail.

There was but six seconds of play remaining when Nick Metz broke away from a New York attack here last night to fire the goal that gave the Leafs a 3-2 decision in the sixth game of a hectic best-of-seven series. The Leafs counted four victories to two for the National League champions.

The game stand made by the Rangers may be their last for the duration of the war but they left a fine impression with 13,875 fans who threw hats and programs to the ice as Metz score the payoff goal.

The Leafs, second to Rangers in the N.H.L. standing, will face the fifth-place Detroit Red Wings in the opener of a best-of-seven game Stanley Cup series here Saturday night. Assured of at least two games in Toronto, the goal fired by Metz meant about $50,000 in gate receipts for the Leafs and much more if the series is extended.

A Real Game

Proud of his team which rallied in the third period to wipe out a two-goal deficit and finish the game piled up in the Toronto goalmouth, Manager Lester Patrick consoled the Rangers by telling them "the breaks were against you boys but you played a hell of a fine game."

Unasisted goals by Rookie Johnny McCreedy in the first period and his linemate, Pete Langelle, in the second, gave the Leafs a 2-0 lead which they held till past the halfway mark in the final session. A New York rally brought two goals in less than two minutes by Phil Watson and Alfie Pike.

Not content to carry the game in overtime, the Rangers kept pressing and four men were down the ice when Syl Apps passed to Metz to send him on his climatic dash. Defenceman Bill Juzda was unable to get near the fleet Toronto left winger who gave Henry no chance as he fired just after crossing the red penalty-shot line.

Henry was downcast, for earlier in the contest a fluke shot slipped by him for Toronto's first goal and he blamed himself for the downfall of his mates. In the 12th minute of the first period McCreedy shot from 70 feet out, the puck striking the ice just in front of the goal crease and then bouncing off Henry's toe into the net.

Determined to even the count the Rangers sent all five men up as the second period opened and the plan backfired. Langelle speared a loose puck in centre ice, broke from the pack with Babe Pratt chasing him, and blasted a waist-high shot past Henry.

They Finally Score

Outplayed at times the Rangers kept coming and finally found a flaw in the armor of Goalie Turk Broda. Bryan Hextall laced a long pass across the Toronto goal mouth as the Rangers ganged behind the blueline and Watson scored.

Bob Goldham, Toronto defenceman, was penalized for high sticking shortly after the goal and the Rangers staged a power attack that could not be denied. With New Yorkers swarming about the Toronto zone, Pike drilled a shot from well out that placed the teams on an even footing.

The Rangers lost both Lynn Patrick, the league's top goal-getter, and Grant Warwick, voted the league's outstanding rookie, during the exchanges. Both suffered knee injuries, Patrick being hurt late in the first period and Warwick near the close of the game, Lorne Carr was the Leafs' only casualty, suffering a sprained right wrist but he will probably be ready for Saturday's game with the Wings.

8 Gases, Liquids In Vital Race To Make Rubber

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

NEW YORK, April 1—(AP). — Invisible gases and water-clear liquids are the main stuff for making synthetic rubber. Seven of these are in race to produce tires, and an eighth looms as the dark horse in the hearings of the United States Senate Defence Investigating committee.

Butyl rubber is No. 8. An invention of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, announced in April two years ago, Butyl is made of butadiene and butylene—both oil refinery products.

Butyl has not been reported as a tire rubber by Standard Oil In United States chemistry circles it is notable for a remarkable property, it resist oxygen, which deteriorates virtually all known kinds of rubber.

Germany is short of petroleum to make butadiene and butylene. But butadiene can be made also from alcohol, molasses, grains, potatoes, straw, wood and coal tars. Butylene presumably can also be made from these.

Bunas is a German rubber whose American patents were acquired by Standard Oil. It is made of buadiene and stryene, the latter a liquid from coal tar. It has been called the least expensive of all the tire synthetics and it is the rubber which American chemists are informed has been Germanys main product since the war started.

Buna S is like, and may be identical with, the stryene rubber planned by the government last sumn • when money was allotted to build four synthetic rubber plants in the United States.

Buna N (also named Perbunan) is a German rubber, with Standard Oil holding the American patents. Instead of styrene, it uses acronytriles with butadiene. Acronytriles are liquids, compounded of nitrogen. This is the rubber Germany used for tires before Buna S.

Neoprene is the oldest of the rubber which makes good tires. Coke ovens furnish the gas, acetylene, which with hydrogen choride makes this rubber.

Ameripol is the Goodrich tire rubber. Butadiene is the base, plus other ingredients not identified except that they come from natural gas and air, and include use of some soap.

Chemigum is the Goodyear synthetic for tires. It comes from petroleum, with side mixtures unannounced.

The other two announced tire rubbers are made by Firestone and U.S. Rubber. Both are described as buna types.

East Emily Couple Is Given Shower

EAST EMILY, April 1—(ENS).— A large crowd of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Bailey on Friday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Endicott (nee Thelma Bailey) who were married recently.

The evening was spent in dancing and playing cards, until nearly midnight when Mr. and Mrs. Endicott were asked to come forward and take chairs of honor and Mrs. Robert McAdam read a very appropriate address, and the presentation of a miscellaneous shower of beautiful gifts was made on behalf of the community by Robert McAdam and Russel Fiffe.

Both the bride and groom in their pleasing manner made a very suitably reply, and invited everyone to come and visit them in their new home in Peterborough after which all joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows."

Refreshments were served and dancing resumed until the wee small hours of the morning.

More than a hundred varieties of sausages are made in the United States.

Qualified informants in London said Hitler is moving 100 fresh divisions into Russia to bolster about 180 struggling in snow and mud in an effort to hold key salients against Russian pressure generated throughout the winter.

Renewed German efforts to take over all the Crimea and crack Russian defence lines before the oil-rich Caucasus on the 400 mile southern mainland front between Orel and Taganrog were forecast.

Listening post advices suggested to one responsible foreign source that the Germans are preparing for a series of southern drives "to clear the railroads and bases they need if they are ever to shake hands with the Japanese in Persia or the Indian Ocean."

"Hitler has been forced to use prematurely 40 of the 140 divisions he had been resting and conditioning in the Warsaw area especially for the spring attack." he said.

Finns Out of Scene.

Exhaustion of the Finns "and their subjection to so many seditious influences" were declared to have forced Germany to take over all Karelian Isthmus operations against Russia.

Russian losses, however, were pictured as "horrible and unique in history" in a despatch broadcast from Berlin.

Baron von Wangenheim, Frankfurther Zeitung correspondent, asserted that now and then in the winter campaign German troops "had to blow up heaps of bodies lying in a field to free the field for our arms."

Stockholm dispatches reported 13,000 German troop trains had moved eastward in the last three months.

Closely following reported pledges of fresh Balkan manpower for Hitler's war effort, Russians said prisoners captured in the Crimea included "many conscripts of non-German origin" who complained of their treatment in the German army.

Tass said these were taken in a rout of the 22nd Tank Division, which the Russian news agency identified as a unit hastily transferred from France after Soviet forces had destroyed the 18th Tank Division. It asserted that more than 50 tanks of the 22nd Division were knocked out of action in a day's fighting.

The Soviet Information Bureau reported "our ships in the Barents Sea sank one U-boat and one enemy transport."

New M-4 Tank Is Ready To Fight

The American M-4 medium tank, now complete with armament—a 75mm cannon and an imposing array of machine-guns—is shown in action at Fort Knox in the first picture released of the new juggernaut. The M-4 is completely streamlined, has the cannon in centre instead of at the right side as in the M-3, is lower in silhouette, has an all-cast, instead of riveted, body and weighs about 30 tons. The turret with the cannon turns 360 degrees. The M-4 is being tested by the armored force board at Fort Knox.

R.C.A.F. Unit To Visit City

A mobile unit of the Royal Canadian Air Force will spend four days in Peterborough during Easter week to enlist recruits, especially prospective pilots and observers, Flight Lieutenant J. O. Plummer of the R.C.A.F. receiving centre, 200 Bay street, Toronto, informed the Examiner to-day.

"We expect to be here from Tuesday, April 7 until Friday the 10th," Lieut. Plummer said, "and we will be located in the city hall in the committee room upstairs which the council has placed at our disposal.

Applicants need junior matriculation standing or its equivalent for direct entry. However, if an applicant has had two years' High school training we can put him on a pre-enlistment course lasting for a maximum of eighteen weeks. This course is operated by the War Emergency Training plant at Central Technical School, Toronto, and it is a daytime course. There are also evening classes in a separate course conducted by the Legion War Services of Toronto, also for eighteen weeks.

Any young man passing that course can be enlisted for the R.C.A.F.

The War Emergency Training Course provides a subsistence allowance of $7 a week if the man is living at home and $10 if he is boarding."

The mobile unit will also receive recruits for the women's division of the R.C.A.F.

Lieut. Plummer said the unit's hours at the city hall daily would be 10 a.m. to 12 a.m.; 8 p.m. to 5 p.m.; and 7 p.m. to 9.30 p.m.

Peterborough young men who want to get out and fight for their country have a greater chance than ever to enlist in the R.C.A.F., and the emphasis is being placed on the opportunity to become pilots and observers.

The call for recruits is just as urgent now as it has ever been, and young men joining up in this Eastertide call may have a full and satisfying sense of doing their duty as young citizens of this country. They don't have to be told that they owe this duty. They know it.

OBITUARIES

ALBERT EDWARD GRAHAM.

Death claimed a member of one of Smith Township's pioneer families on Monday, March 30, with the passing of Albert Edward Graham in Toronto. He was 64 years of age.

The late Mr. Graham was the youngest son of the late Henry Graham ond Sarah McConkey, and only two of the family of nine now survive. They are Silas Graham and Robert Graham, both of Lakefield. He was born in Smith Township near Buckhorn, and after living for quite a number of years in the township, moved to Lakefield, where he operated a livery stable for a considerable time. For the past two years he has resided in Toronto.

Death was quite sudden, and came while he was living at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Bill Moore in Toronto. He is survived by his widow, formerly Jennie Nicholls, three daughters and three sons, Mrs. William Moore and Mrs. Milford Cummings, Toronto, Miss Fern Graham of Peterborough, Roland of Toronto, Stewart and Donald both on active service with the Canadian Army.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday April 1, at 2 o'clock, from the Webster Funeral Home, and interment will be in Lakefield Cemetery.

MRS. JAMES DUNLOP

Resident of Peterborough for thirty-five years, Mrs. James Dunlop died on Tuesday at her home, 270 Dalhousie street. She was born fifty-six years ago, daughter of the late Samuel Harper and his wife, Margaret Jones, of Manvers township, and was educated at the school on the fourth line of Smith. Her death followed an illness of one month.

Mrs. Dunlop is survived by her husband, their daughter, Mrs. Walter McIlmoyle and son Roy Dunlop of Peterborough; also two sisters, Mrs. W. McBrien, Oshawa, and Mrs. J. Sullivan, Peterborough, and two brothers, Fred Harper of Hope township and Norman Harper of this city.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 270 Dalhousie street, Thursday at 2.30 p.m. to the Little Lake cemetery. The service will be conducted by Rev. F. W. Craik of St. James United church, of which Mrs. Dunlop was a member.

Weaving was one of the earliest crafts practised by primitive mankind.

Institute Holds Baking Sale

MILLBROOK, April 1 — (ENS). —A pleasant event of Saturday afternoon was the sale of home baking, and the afternoon tea held in the waiting-room, under the auspices of the Women's Institute, from which approximately $12 was realized for war work of the organization. The idea of purchasing a new flag for the pole in front of the Town Hall was also in view, and probably some further effort will have to be made before this project can be carried out.

Hostesses for the afternoon tea tables were Mrs. T. G. Harkness, Mrs. Melville Ball, and Mrs. Edmund Ball, and in charge of the baking table were Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, the president, Mrs. E. C. Richards, Mrs. Percy Handley and others. Mrs. G. Freelove made the tea, Mrs. J. Sloan and other members looking after the filling of the plates, and various details of the service.

Federation Meeting.

Considerable prominence is being given the annual meeting of the Durham Federation of Agriculture, which is to be held in the Newcastle Community Hall on Thursday, April 2, at 8 p.m., with M. M. Robinson, of Burlington, a director of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, as the guest speaker. Mr. Robinson is also a director of the Canadian Food Distribution Council, and an official of the War-Time Prices and Trades Board. A practical farmer, he will bring a message of interest to fellow farmers, whether young or old, and the ladies, as well as the young farm folk, are specially invited. The president of the Durham Federation is Forbes Hoyland, and the secretary, W. B. Reynolds, and these officers, with E. A. Summers, agricultural representative, are actively promoting the meeting.

Honor Mother's Memory.

The basket of lovely calla lillies, and maidenhair fern, placed in the chancel of St. Andrew's Church on Sunday, was given by the family in loving memory of their parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis Simpson Clarry, life-long worshippers in the former Methodist, and later in the United Church. Mrs. Clarry, whose death occurred just one year ago, on March 31, 1941, was the senior member on the church roll, and held in high esteem and affection; she was a life member of the W.M.S., interested in the Women's Association, and though advancing years prevented attendance at the church services, or those of the organizations, she never lost either contact or interest, and was active in her prayers and support, up until the time of her decease. The lovely blossoms brought to mind the fragrance of a life well spent, and devoted to the interests of the kingdom.

Miss Mabel Clarry, organist of Trinity Church, Peterborough, at present is the daughter living nearest to the homestead here.

Wellingtons assisted by two Indian frontier force battalions from the north, opened the road late March 30 after hard fighting under intense enemy air action throughout the day.

"The enemy suffered heavy losses during these engagements, and our casualties were moderate.

"The situation on March 31 is that our troops are now back in their original defended areas.

"The enemy are in force holding Shwedaung, and on the western bank of the Irrawaddy, while other columns are operating to the east astride the railway north of Paungde, still having complete control of the air.

"Our river patrols have fought extremely successful actions and now have withdrawn north, protecting our right flank from infiltration.

"Yesterday the enemy bombed a landing ground in central Burma and another in northern Burma. Damage was negligible."

A message from Chungking said today that Toungoo, eastern anchor of the Allied line in Burma, had been evacuated by Chinese troops but that they still were reported fighting on the outskirts of the town.

Claims Quebec Told Lot Of Lies

TORONTO, April 1 (CP).—Hertel La Roque of Montreal, a former secretary to ex-Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal, said in an address to a Toronto audience last night that "we won't win the war fighting as we have been up until now," and asked that Canadians demand a non-partisan national government with Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton as its head.

On the platform with Mr. La Roque was Elmore Philpott of Victoria, B.C., who has been associated with Mr. La Roque in a lecture tour of major Canadian cities during the last two weeks.

Mr. La Roque said the people in Quebec had been misinformed about conscription and had been told "a bunch of lies" regarding the plebiscite April 27 in which the government will seek release from anti-conscription promises.

"I have been all through Canada and I go back with the absolute certitude that the rest of Canada does not want to jump on Quebec, that the rest of Canada has been misinformed on Quebec as Quebec has been misinformed."

He said "we have fought up until now a negative war," and that "all we are convinced of is that the system the Japanese or Germans would install would be worse than the politicians."

Mr. Philpott said one of the purposes of the tour was to enlist the support of a section of the people of Quebec which would deal with "the irresponsible minority which is threatening to drive this country to the verge of disruption." Another object was to show the people of Quebec that destruction of the present Canadian constitution would entail its replacement by one "very displeasing to that minority which now threatens to make trouble."

AT THE OPENING OF RADIO STATION CHEX IN PETERBOROUGH

More than 200 people from Peterborough, Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal and other cities, including many notables, in the publishing, radio and transportation fields, attended a reception and buffet dinner at the Empress Hotel on Tuesday evening. They were guests of the management of Peterborough's first radio station, CHEX, which had its inaugural broadcast earlier in the evening. In the UPPER LEFT the cameraman caught a trio as they enjoyed the buffet dinner, from LEFT to RIGHT, Robertson Davies, editor of the Examiner; W. Rupert Davies, president Canadian Press, and Mrs. Robertson Davies. At TOP CENTRE, H. L. Garner, general manager of the Examiner, is pictured leaving the dining room where the reception was held. Mrs. Garner is at the right, and Mrs. Jack Davidson On the left. At TOP RIGHT, four young ladies are sipping coffee: Mrs. Ken McCannan, Mrs. Ronald Howe, Mrs. Keith McDonald, and Mrs. David Price. At LOWER LEFT, a quartet of C.P.R. men are enjoying a smoke in the hotel lounge, from Left to Right: J. E. Coulter, C.P.R. Express, Toronto; W. D. Neil, general manager communications, Montreal; H. S. Ingram, superintendent communications, Toronto; and H. A. Greeniaus, general superintendent, Toronto. Two top-ranking officers of the Canadian Active Army are, BOTTOM CENTRE, with the Hon. Senator J. J. Duffus at letf and E. Bruce Fowler at right; the officers are Lt.-Col. Eric K. Keeler, M.C., E.D., officer commanding Military Training Centre (Basic) No. 32, Peterborongh, at left, and Brig. Logie Armstrong, O.B.E., officer commanding Military District 3, Kingston, is on the right. At LOWER RIGHT, two local men, His Honor Judge Sheldon Smoke and Clare H. Collins, manager of Neill's Shoe Store, are listening intently to a discourse on the Red Cross blood donor system from Russell T. Kelley, veteran advertising man from Hamilton.

Capacity Crowd In Attendance At Grand Opening Of CHEX

Acclaimed with enthusiasm in telephonic messages from scores of listeners in its far flung audience of the air, radio station CHEX of the Peterborough Broadcasting Company last night presented to a capacity crowd at the Collegiate Institute the highly interesting routine of a studio's inaugural program.

It is no news to thousands of readers of the Examiner that CHEX made a graceful, entertaining and altogether successful debut in sounding to Peterborough and its district this new radio voice which is associated in its headquarters with the Peterborough Examiner. Actually some hundreds of persons from the city and a wide sweep of the neighboring counties telephoned their congratulations. They had heard the entertainment detail of that inceptive program and the complimentary addresses of visiting and local guest speakers, together with a declaration of ideals and purpose in dedicatory statements by officials of the company, but they could not be aware of the atmosphere of the broadcast as it pervaded the Collegiate auditorium.

Thrill of Premiere

Every seat in the house was occupied at 7.25 o'clock, five minutes prior to the scheduled opening of the shining new microphones set on the Collegiate stage. Many months of work in setting up all the mechanics of a broadcasting company were only a few minutes from their expectant climax, and it was only natural that for the directing staff the sounding of the opening note had keyed the young men in charge of the first hour's broadcast with a sense of tension which reached out with vicarious thrill to everyone who was both auditor and spectator.

The stage setting and arrangement was quite informal. Martin Kenney and "His Western Gentlemen," accomplished Canadian orchestra were ready for the opening cue. Judy Richards, vocalist with the band, sat at one side and at the other were the members of the Northrop string ensemble.

Suave Direction

Don Insley, program director, who performed his duties with an appealing smoothness and modest assurance, explained a signalling motion of his hands which was to be an indication to cut off applause, and then in complete silence precisely at 7.30 o'clock, Mr. Insley with the entire script before him, nodded to Mart Kenney and the orchestral drum rolled into the microphone of CHEX.

Mr. Insley's greeting "CHEX is on the air" brought a fanfare from the brass... Well, you perhaps know the rest of it, including the initial music "Captains of the Clouds" by the orchestra, singing their own chorus.

For Unseen Audience

The first impression of the audience must have been a sudden awareness that this entertainment, in its usual concert surroundings was only incidentally being provided for and directed to them. The microphone had thrust them into a secondary position for the first time in the experience of all but those to whom a radio studio was not a novelty.

The members of the orchestra who were heard over the air in choral numbers, and Miss Judy Richards in solo and group singing, simply gathered about the mike as unconcernedly as if the auditorium were empty. They seemed almost

WINDOW DOLLED UP

The large show window in the store on Charlotte street formerly occupied by the Wine Store has an interesting display of military dress equipment. The clothing is of fine quality and the display shows the many articles which a soldier has in his kit.

DO IT RIGHT.

Quite a number of the trainees who have just been in uniform for three weeks or a month, were noticed slouching as the Rangers marched past Tuesday night, while others stepped to the edge of the crowd and stood smartly to attention. It is perhaps the first time many of these young Canadians have stood in uniform while another unit marched past, but they must remember that many civilians would notice this little breach of military etiquette and criticize them for it.

A CERTAIN SOMETHING.

Many people who watched the reserve and active units of the Prince of Wales rangers in the downtown route march on Tuesday night, said the active service groups could be picked out easily from the others. Talk among the boys, and their smart appearance indicates the new soldiers are determined to make the regiment one of the smartest in Canada, and already an esprit de corps is developing that augurs well for the success of this fine old regiment, with its illustrious background.

TWO CARS DAMAGED

Two cars were damaged in a collision on Park Hill Road, a short distance west of Armour Road. Donald Anderson, McKellar street, was travelling west on Park Hill Road when his car was struck by an eastbound automobile driven by Joseph Hogan, Indian River.

NO MORE RETREADS

Announcement was made at Ottawa Wednesday that orders restricting the retreading to tires used on essential vehicles will be announced next week. The story intimated that driver of passenger cars used solely for pleasure will not be allowed to have tires retreaded. "Retreading of tires must be confined to commercial vehicles and buses for transportation of workers means of transporation can be devised," Munitions Minister Howe said recently.

TAKE SERIAL NUMBERS.

Car owners, if they are wise, will make a note of all tire serial numbers at once, and file the information with the engine number and ignition key numbers for future use. There is bound to be a wave of tire thefts, and the owner has some chance at least of recovering the tires if he can supply the serial numbers to police. Oh, yes, bar the garage doors on the inside, and put a stout lock on the other door of the building, and, better still, if you have a dog, let him sleep in the garage.

SIXTH COLUMNISTS

"I'll take care of myself, let the war and regulations go to pot" seems to be the motto of a great many people. On Wednesday many with cans of every description sought to purchase extra quantities of gasoline, but service station owners refused to co-operate. The stations were busy right up till seven o'clock, but even with this rush, there were hundreds of motorists who took a sane view of the whole thing, and didn't even drive into a gasoline station on Tuesday.

KITBAG IS FOUND

A soldier's kitbag picked up on Highway 7 east of Peterborough last night was brought into the police station and awaits an owner there.

RATION BOOK STOLEN

A new kind of theft bobbed up here last night when a sneak thief stole a gasoline ration book from the automobile of A. E. Thompson, real estate dealer. The book is of no use to the thief because only the automobile whose license number appears on the cover of the book can be supplied with gasoline.

GOOD FRIDAY AT POST OFFICE.

The service to be given at the Post Office on Good Friday is as follows: There will be no letter carrier or rural route delivery. The money order, registration, stamp and general delivery wickets will be open from 8.00 a.m. to 10.00 a.m. The public lobby will be open from 6.30 a.m. to 6.00 p.m. Special delivery service will be as usual. All mails will be despatched as usual.

NINE BLACK SQUIRRELS

There were nine black squirrels romping through the branches of trees on Carlisle avenue this morning, and residents were at a loss to understand the sudden increase in the numbers. Occasionally one or two squirrels were seen, but the small army that gathered today have the people guessing, and is an indication that these animals are becoming very numerous within the city limits.

GAS FOR STOVES

It is understood that people who use gasoline for cooking may obtain the amount required from regular service stations, and they will probably have to sign for the gasoline. A special type of gasoline is being provided, and it is a serious offence to use this gasoline in motor vehicles. Similarly farmers may obtain gasoline for tractors, and mechanics may obtain fuel for blow-torches on the same plan without a ration card.

ARRIVES IN ENGLAND

Word has been received by local friends that Rev. Father J. J. O'-Leary, formerly of Peterborough has arrived safely in England. He is chaplain of a Northern Ontario regiment.

NEW BIRTH RECORD

Births in Peterborough reached a new high mark with 101 for March, according to the records at the city hall. There were also 35 deaths and 20 marriages. Corresponding figures for March last year were 72 births, 32 deaths and 29 marriages.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

A fifteen-year-old boy pleaded guilty in juvenile court this morning to attempting to steal an automobile from a used-car parking lot and was allowed to go on suspended sentence. It was the first time the youngster had been in any kind of trouble.

IN THE NEWS.

B. D. Hall, local lawyer, received a copy of the London Times, weekly edition of February 25, from a friend in England recently, and in it was a picture of his son, Lt. Jim Hall, now serving with the Fort Garry Horse in Britain. This famous cavalry unit of World War 1 is now mechanized and equipped with American built "General Lee" tanks.

CHEX Receives Many Good Wishes From Folk Of Surrounding Districts

Of all the telephone messages congratulating CHEX last night was a hook-up from Millbrook and Cavan telephone operators.

"The program is fine," they said, "and it is coming in strong and free from interference. Best wishes and a special word to our local boy, Carl Monk of CHEX staff."

Mr. Monk's home is at Bethany, and he is well known in that section of Durham county.

Some of the complimentary greetings were from Belleville, Picton, Douro, Lakefield, Bridgenorth, Bewdley, Bethany, Warkworth, Hastings, Millbrook, Otonabee, Cavanville, Fraserville, North Monaghan, Lakehurst, Ida, Dummer Newtonville, Mount Pleasant and so on.

From reports this morning it was apparently unanimous that the first hour of CHEX set a shining standard of quality. Everybody was delighted with Mart Kenney and his band. You like them when they turn down the light for adagio stuff and a soft muting, and you marvel at their harmony when they go into a jam session.

The comedy feature carried by Woodhouse and Hawkins of Canadian radio fame provided the spice of humor to the program. Peterborough's fine concert ensemble, the Northrop musicians, delighted the largest Peterborough audience they ever played to in the sparkling melody of "Two Guitars."

Mrs. James Goldie, former soprano soloist of George Street United Church, won new and farther laurels in her selection for her first radio assignment in "O Lovely Night."

Judy Richards, songstress with the Kenney band, impressed the Collegiate audience with the ease and fluency of her singing, and in fact every detail of the program fitted together into a delightful hour of entertainment.

STATION CHEX IS DEDICATED AS ENTERPRIZE OF THE COMMUNITY

Radio station CHEX was informally dedicated as an enterprise of the community of Peterborough and district by H. L. Garner, Managing Director, first speaker over the local air from a Peterborough source, at its inaugural last night from the stage of the Collegiate Institute.

"It has long been recognized that Peterborough, a progressive, modern and ever-growing centre of trade and commerce has been greatly neglected in regard to a voice on the air lanes." Mr. Garner said.

"As long as three and one half years ago, steps were taken to obtain a license to establish a broadcasting station in this city. The difficulties to be overcome were many and varied. Our plans were hampered by the shortage of broadcast equipment in a Canada at war. But in this case, we sincerely believed that the end fully justified the expense and difficulty involved. I will be frank. We of the Peterborough Broadcasting Company are proud of the gift we make to our community of Peterborough. And gift it is, in that CHEX will be a community enterprise, catering to the varied tastes of the men and women of our city and the area surrounding it. We want you to feel that this is your station, for we feel that from its studios and through the medium of its special events department will come to you, the listeners, a true picture of our community life. If this might be said to be a dedication time—we would seek no better phrase than this:—'CHEX, we give you to the people of Peterborough and all the surrounding counties into which you penetrate. Be yours to amuse and entertain, to hearten in time of stress when men's hearts quail before the stern realities of war—to educate, should that be necessary, in pride in community and in country.' To you, the public, we pledge ourselves to see that CHEX Peterborough will not fail."

Harold L. Garner

"If this might be said to be a dedication time, we would seek no better phrase than this: CHEX, we give you to the people of Peterborough and all the surrounding counties into which you penetrate. Be yours to amuse and entertain, to hearten in time of stress when men's hearts quail before the stern realities of war, to educate, should that be necessary, in price, in community and in country."

Alderman Glover

"I appreciate the enterprise of CHEX. They have my best wishes for the immediate and future success of the undertaking which should be of great benefit to this locality."

Association's Greetings

Glenn Bannerman, President and General Manager of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, extended a felicitous welcome to CHEX as follows:

"I am honored and privileged to have the opportunity of celebrating with our friends of the Peterborough Examiner the introduction of a new service to the citizens of Peterborough and the community.

Two weeks ago, I might have come to Peterborough and visited with a small number of its citizens. Tonight, through the new facilities of CHEX, my voice is enabled, if they so desire it, to be a guest in thousands of homes in this community.

While it has been possible during the past few years to tune in on your radio set to programs broadcast from other communities, there is something mighty fine in having a broadcasting station that is a part of the community life of a city such as Peterborough.

On behalf of the Canadian Association of Broadcasting Stations, I congratulate not only the owners and operators of CHEX but also the citizens of Peterborough on this new service.

If I might make a wish for the future, it would be that CHEX may always prove worthy of the citizens of Peterborough and the community and that the citizens of Peterborough may always prove worthy of their community broadcasting station."

G. K. Fraser, M.P.

"The city of Peterborough long since shook off its swaddling clothes and stood forth as a vigorous adult among the towns and cities of Canada. And, as a further sign that we are moving rapidly toward bigger and better things, we are gathered here tonight to mark another milestone in Peterborough's community life—the establishment of Radio Station CHEX. Peterborough, Kawartha Lakes and good fishing have been synonomous with tourists and fishermen for years. And what springs to mind at the moment is that no better medium could be found over which to tell some of those unusual fish stories which come to light around Peterborough every year than Radio Station CHEX. We are not on a great harbor; no trans-Canada planes alight before our doors, but the establishment of Radio Station CHEX can and does give to us the freedom of the air lanes. It is my pleasure to bid it a most hearty welcome to our community and homes."

Mayor Hamilton.

"The opening, this evening, of this new radio broadcasting station CHEX, Peterborough's first radio station, in fact the first in the district, marks the reaching and passing of another milestone in the history, in the progress and in the community life of this city. It is truly a great community project, because of course much of the time and many of the programs of CHEX will be devoted to local topics and problems, so the operation of this station is going to be of vast importance and interest to all of us.

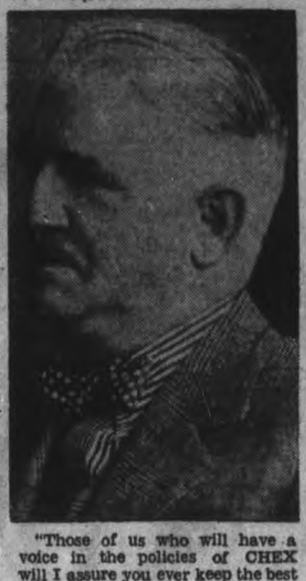
"The station is going to bind the people of the whole district together, into closer relationship of sympathy, understanding and friendship. It is going to make us more Peterborough conscious and increase our pride and faith in Peterborough. It will be another source to accentuate community ideals, and to distribute interesting and vital community information.

"Mr. Garner in his remarks dedicated the station to the wellbeing of this community. It is my privilege, on behalf of those I serve as Mayor, to accept this radio station into our daily life, and from our people I bring greetings, congratulations and good wishes to this station and its founders. Long may it flourish to bring us entertainment and information, and encourage us to co-operate and work together to make a greater and better Peterborough."

Alderman R. M. Glover.

"Ladies and Gentlemen: I wish to congratulate the management of the Peterborough Broadcasting Company, Limited, for their progressiveness in giving to this important city of Peterborough and the surrounding district, its own radio broadcasting station, in face of many difficulties and disappointments. Being aware of the fact that it is the desire of the management to give this area the best of broadcasting service, I feel that as time goes on, we will be more and more delighted with it. I appreciate their enterprise and they have my best wishes for the immediate and future success of the undertaking which should be of great benefit to this locality."

W. Rupert Davies



"Those of us who will have a voice in the policies of CHEX will I assure you ever keep the best interests of Peterborough in our minds. We shall endeavor to serve you faithfully and well, and to promote those fundamental principles of our democratic way of life that are being so gravely threatened at this time."

Planned For Peterborough.

W. Rupert Davies, president of the Peterborough Broadcasting Company, who has been chiefly instrumental in finally giving this city a place on the radio map, briefly enunciated the ideals animating CHEX.

"I am happy to be heard in Peterborough this evening taking part in a new development in this aggressive and wide-awake community I have been keenly interested in Peterborough for the past seven years through my association with your newspaper, the Examiner, and now Radio Station CHEX form another strong tie. Those of us who will have a voice in the policies of CHEX will, I assure you, ever keep the best interests of Peterborough in our minds. We shall endeavor to serve you faithfully and well through the medium of radio communication and to promote those fundamental principles of our democratic way of life that are being so gravely threatened at this time. I thank you for coming out and joining with us in christening CHEX tonight."

Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C.

"This radio station, thanks to the vision and business sense of the Examiner management, has been established in Peterborough. Unquestionably it will be of great value to all the people of this district in identifying itself with the life of the community, especially when it is conducted in co-operation with the press. Such a radio station can give active encouragement to local consciousness and pride of achievement besides reflecting the many opinions which influence people's conduct.

"This station should be a common ground for closer and better acquaintance between city and country and by all local neighborhoods with each other. It is an exceptionally efficient vehicle for the exchange of rapid communication between merchants and customers. It will let the public know the value of Peterborough's manufacturing and its importance as a distributing centre.

"The Examiner has set up another milestone in Peterborough's progressive movement toward a greater city and from a greater city is expected good leadership, upright citizenship, efficient direction, the prompt development of talent and of educational facilities.

"Today is a red-letter-day for this entire Peterborough district and for it, we owe much to the Examiner."

Capacity Crowd

entirely unaware of the crowd out in front of them, and even the speakers with one or two exceptions were caught up in the same spirit and attitude of address to the thousands of listeners in the homes of the city and district.

Assisting Mr. Insley in the direction of the program was Del Mott and at the back of the stage Jerry Kelly, radio engineer, was in charge of the remote control equipment.

The entertainment features of that first hour of CHEX were Mart Kenney and his musicians, Woodhouse and Hawkins, familiar comedians over Canadian air waves, in private life Art McGregor and Frank Deaville; the Northrop string ensemble of Peterborough, Mrs. Dorothy Goldie, Peterborough soprano, Miss Judy Richards, Art Hallman and several other members of the band who doubled splendidly in their singing.

The addresses which were interspersed in the program introduced to the audience, Harold L. Garner of Peterborough, Managing Director of CHEX; Glen Bannerman, President and General Manager of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters; Mayor Hamilton; Gordon K. Fraser, M.P.; W. Rupert Davies, President of the Peterborough Broadcasting Company and also of the Canadian Press Association; Alderman R. M. Glover and Alderman G. N. Gordon.

Adhere to Continuity

So much for the outline of that studio work, but that brief review does not convey adequate emphasis on the insistent time element, the demands of the continuity, as the radio programmers term their script which permits of virtually no variation. Continuity also includes the director's connecting comments between the main business, a sort of dignified patter. And all of it is typed in his script. You soon understand as you watch the routine that the radio takes no chances on pauses, and your further realize this continuity must be maintained.

After the orchestra played an introductory chorus from "Captains of the Clouds" Mr. Insley, who had returned to the mike as the penultimate bar was reached, began immediately:

"Good evening ladies and gentlemen. Tonight the air lanes of America welcome a newcomer. With fanfare and song...with laughter and melody, a new station,—a voice of freedom and of friendship makes it bow. As CHEX in Peterborough, Ontario, says hello to the thousands of persons whom it will be its pleasure to serve, Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen play the Royal Canadian Air Force official melody, "Captains of the Clouds."

When that number was ended, Mr. Insley was back at the mike, script in hand, reading: "Thank you, Mart Kenney. Yes, friends, CHEX, Peterborough, tonight sends its greetings to you—.etc...." That is standard, closely timed continuity, and the Collegiate crowd were introduced to its secret and comprehended its necessity in the art of radio programming.

G. K. Fraser

"It is my pleasure to bid CHEX a most hearty welcome to our community and homes."

Mayor Hamilton

"CHEX is going to bind the people of the whole district together into closer relationship of sympathy, understanding and friendship. From the people of Peterborough I bring good wishes and congratulations."

Alderman G. N. Gordon

"CHEX can give active encouragement to local consciousness and pride of achievement besides reflecting the many opinions which influence people's conduct. It should be a common ground for closer and better acquaintance between city and country and by all local neighborhoods with each other."

Here's news of importance to everyone who needs, or may need, money. Campbell Finance Corporation Limited (formerly Campbell Auto Finance Company Ltd.) announces a new Personal Loan Service—with loans of every type available to every eligible person.

In the past few years, more than 50,000 motorists have been pleased with Campbell's confidential, fuss-free methods of doing business. Today in all of Campbell's 27 offices throughout Canada, that same friendly financial service has been expanded to serve people in all walks of life, whether or not they offer personal property as security. There has been no change in management, but personnel has been increased to maintain Campbell's high standard of service. This is an all-Canadian Company, using Canadian Capital, with all-Canadian employees.

Loans for "Everyone"

Under this new plan almost anyone can get a loan on terms that suit him. We realize that circumstances differ and have provided a service to suit every eligible borrower.

There is no longer any need to shop around to find a loan plan to meet your requirements. Campbell's lend from $20 to $1000 on any authorized basis. You choose your own repayment schedule to suit your pay—you decide the amount you want and the amount you repay each month.

You decide what security (if any) you offer—(furniture, automobile, etc.)—or if you prefer, get a loan with no other security than two co-signers.

Confidential

A Campbell loan involves no embarrassment, no delay, no red tape. It is a simple, private transaction. You pay only for the actual time you have the money. The sooner the loan is repaid, the less it costs. You get fair, considerate treatment in case of sickness or unemployment.

Because rates on loans under $500 with all companies are authorized by the Dominion Small Loans Act, you pay no more for Campbell's friendly, confidential service. If you need money for any worthy purpose, phone or visit Campbell's today.

Motorists Open 1st Ration System Today

OTTAWA, April 1—(CP).—A new day dawned for Canadian motorists tod as service stations across the country opened for business prepared to sell gasoline only to drivers with ration coupons.

It was the first compulsory rationing of any commodity by the coupon system imposed in Canada during the Second Great War, though an honor-rationing system has been applied to all sugar purchases and many buying restrictions are in effect covering a wide range of products.

Munitions and Supply Department officials estimated shortly before the gasoline ration came into effect that only about half the country's motorists had obtained their ration coupons. The warning the Department issued last Monday—"No coupons, no gasoline"—still stood.

A last-minute rush to buy gasoline before rationing came into effect was reported in some Canadian cities yesterday. In Toronto one service station was so busy a policeman had to regulate traffic.

Drivers of commercial vehicles as well as owners of passenger cars require ration coupons from today to buy gasoline. But the rationing scheme as outlined at present does not limit the amount commercial vehicles may use.

Gasoline rationing is only one of the restrictions confronting motorists in the Dominion. Munitions Minister Howe has announced that new tires will not be available when the existing ones are worn out. It is reported also that retreading of tires will soon be banned for cars in non-essential categories.

It was announced in Washington some time ago that gasoline rationing would be imposed in the United States, starting today, but the plan has been postponed, pending printing and issuance of ation cards. There has been no indication just when it will go into effect. It is still uncertain whether rationing will be applied throughout the United States or will only affect those areas most distant from regions where oil is produced.

Using Poison Gas

New Delhi, April 1 (CP)

THE Chinese high command yesterday charged in a communique issued at Chungking that the Japanese used poison gas in their attack against Toungoo. The Chinese were not taken by surprise, however, the communique added.

Program Director And Aide

Sharing in the congratulations for the success of the CHEX opening broadcast at the Collegiate last night were the two young men who directed it. Don Insley (LEFT) moved through that first hour of gratifying test and demonstration with an unassuming confidence and with a sure touch in the continuity. Neither hem nor haw cropped up in his work and also that of his capable assistant, Del Mott. This program was entirely in the hands of a trained staff, but it is the intention of CHEX to hold out opportunity to young Peterborough men from time to time.

To Hold Meeting Easter Monday

CAMPBELLFORD, April 1 (ENS)—Though their next meeting will fall on Easter Monday the executive of St. John's Y.P.U. could see no reason why members should not meet as usual, so at a special meeting following the regular gathering on Monday they passed a motion to meet as usual despite the fact it will be a school holiday. They felt that with travel restricted by gas rationing and industries continuing to operate, there would be few who would go away over the week-end. As a result the committee in charge will probably arrange a special program in keeping with the Easter spirit. Missionary convener Marie Lisle was in charge at the opening of the meeting and she was assisted in the devotions by Ona Mitchell and Hazel Waters. Following a piano solo by Bobby Bennett the topic "Cities of Refugees in China" was capably given by four members, Marie Lisle, Pearl McComb, Leo Coveney, Lois Brunton. Mrs. Cecil Stephens then contributed a reading and Marie Lisle conducted a Biblical quiz. The president, Miss Pearl McComb, was in charge for the business period.

Obituary

CORNELIUS SULLIVAN.

HEAD LAKE, APRIL 1. — Consoled by the rites of his church and surrounded by his loved ones, death called Cornelius Sullivan, Head Lake, to his eternal home recently.

Deceased, who was one of the oldest and most widely respected residents of Digby township, was born in Smith township, Peterborough county, on September 6, 1856, but spent his early years in Ennismore, coming to Digby about sixty-eight years ago. He was the last surviving member of a pioneer family of nine.

His funeral, from his late residence to the Church of Our Lady, Help of Christians, Victoria Road, was largely attended by relatives and friends and was a final tribute of love and respect to the memory of deceased. Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. L. Cleary.

Left to mourn his loss are his wife, one son, Lee, at home, four daughters, Elizabeth, teacher at No 1, Digby; Gertrude at home; Anne, St. Anne's school,, Ennismore, and Mrs. Don Young (Mary), Burnt River. His first wife and three oldest children predeceased him several years ago.

R. E. Cutting Has Resigned

General regret is being expressed by citizens and businessmen at the announcement that R. E. Cutting, manager of the local plant of the Quaker Oats Company in this city, and Vice-President of the Company has resigned his position. Mr. Cutting has spent 30 years with the Quaker Oats, coming to this city in 1934.

R. E. CUTTING

As Vice President, Mr. Cutting had charge of the Canadian interests of the big milling company, and during the eight years he has lived in this city he has made a host of friends. He is a shrewd and competent business executive, and many local organizations benefitted from his good judgment and business ability.

Mr. Cutting is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Peterborough Club, and of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club, a Rotarian and a director of the Y.M.C.A. It is understood Mr. Cutting plans to move to the United States in the near future.

Announcement of Mr. Cutting's successor will be made shortly.

Theatre Blaze

MONTREAL, April 1 — (CP). — A fire broke out in the Palace Theatre in the suburban city of Verdun today shortly after the start of the afternoon bill. About 25 persons were reported to have been inside the theatre at the time, and all were cleared out without incident.

27 Quilts Shipped By Hastings Branch

HASTINGS, April 1.—(ENS)—Tuesday afternoon was one of the busiest in quite some time for the ladies in the packing and shipping department of the Hastings Red Cross Society.

By far the largest item on the list was the 27 quilts made up of quotas from the Asphodel ladies, Cobourg Road Red Cross, Fife's section and Hastings. The Mission Circle of Trinity United Church donated an entire baby's layette.

Following are the articles which completed the shipment: 35 babies' blankets, 35 babies' nighties, 35 women's nighties, 7 pair mitts, 2 scarves, 2 turtle-neck sweaters, 3 seamen's socks, 6 pair socks, 3 pair gloves, 3 sleeveless sweaters.

Y.P.S. Meeting

Rev. J. E. Glover delivered a talk on "Jesus' Way of Loving" at the regular meeting of the Trinity United Church Y.P.S. held Monday night.

Grant Sine was chief "quizzer" in the novel "Bible Baseball" contest. Two teams captained by Jack Warner and Leonard Metcalfe battled with a barrage of questions based on the Bible. The team led by Leonard Metcalfe emerged a winner.

Heaviest Of War

BERNE, April 1—(AP).—The Royal Air Force bombing raid on Germany's important Baltic seaport of Luebeck last Saturday night was "the heaviest attack of its kind yet undertaken in the present war," the Berlin correspondent of the Neue Zuercher, Zeitung, reported.

He said that while civilian casualties were severe they were modest compared with the material damage inflicted and that although the German high command acknowledged destruction of a large number of civilian buildings there could be no doubt that industrial establishments also suffered heavy damage.

New Kind Of Artillery Teamwork

A "grasshopper" plane is shown winging over a 155mm gun of the U.S. 36th Field Artillery Regiment at Fort Bragg. The plane is "spotting" for the artillery and securing information about the gunfire that enables gunners to correct range, elevations, etc. Planes used for this job are officially known as "short range observation planes." They are popularly known as "Grasshoppers." They can land almost anywhere, on roads, small fields, cow pastures, etc., and require a minimum of attention. They are flown by artillery personnel.

Actor Lew Ayres Off To Camp For U.S. Conchies

By ROBERT MYERS
Associated Press Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD, April 7 — (AP). —Lew Ayres as the boyish, war-hating German soldier who died while trying to catch a butterfly on no-man's land made screen history a dozen years ago in "All Quiet on the Western Front."

It was a poignant scene, the death on the battlefield—a dramatic summation of the hate that young soldier had for war.

To-day handsome, moody Lew Ayres was speeding by train to Wyeth, near Portland, Ore., to take his place in a camp for conscientious objectors to war.

Ayres, better known in recent years as the humanitarian young physician in the "Dr. Kildare" series, left quietly last night. Even his studio didn't know of his plans —or his plea for classification as a conscientious objector.

It was left for the chairman of his draft board, A. H. Peir, to confirm the fact. Ayres, 33, had been classified as 1-A. He asked for the other rating because of religious reasons—"a sort of religion of his own," Peir said.

"This plea is the hardest of all for a board to decide. We finally came to the conclusion that his objections to army service were sincere. That's about all there is to the matter."

He did add that Ayres' case had been reviewed by the Department of Justice and the United States Attorney General's office, usual in cases of this kind.

Started With a Band

So another chapter in the Ayres' career was written. Born in Minneapolis, where he attended High School, Ayres drifted into California with a small-time band. He played the banjo, piano and guitar.

The band prospered and so did young Ayres. Soon he was in pictures. He played the youthful lover in Greta Garbo's "The Kiss," around 1930, and he married Lola Lane, one of the Lane Sisters.

Came the role in "All Quiet—." It brought more fame, more wealth. He and Lola were divorced and he married Ginger Rogers. Presently Ginger's stock was high and Ayres' dipped.

Years went by and they separated, were divorced. Suddenly Ayres found himself again, as "Dr. Kildare."

He lived alone on Lookout Mountain.

At the Wyeth camp, Ayres will get up at 6 a.m. daily and swing an axe 40 hours a week—and pay $35 a month for the privilege. The $35 will defray his expenses. Along with 100 other objectors there, he'll be on call for forest fire fighting duty.

He'll have only short recreational periods evenings.

Millbrook News

Mr. D. H. Wilson of Tweed has been engaged by the school board as the third teacher on the Continuation School staff, taking the place of Mrs. O. Mellon, resigned. Mrs. Mellon's resignation takes effect at Easter.

Continuing the series of progressive euchres by which the Millbrook Lodge I.O.O.F., No. 308, has been raising money toward its war quota, another of these popular events was held in the Oddfellows' Hall on Thursday, with 17 tables in use for play. Prize winners, announced by G. T. McPherson, were Mrs. Fred Winslow for the ladies' high score, and T. H. Collins for the gentlemen. Patriotically, the prizes were war savings stamps, and after the presentaation of the booklet, lunch was served.

Community services during Holy Week have been arranged by the ministers of the three churches, again this year, beginning on Tuesday, March 31, in St. Andrew's Church, with "A Study of the Last Days of Our Lord's Life," as the general theme, Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson speaking on "Jesus' Day of Authority," Wednesday the service will be in St. Thomas Anglican Church, Rev. A. Raeburn-Gibson giving the address on "Jesus' Day of Questions"; and Thursday in Grace Presbyterian Church, Rev. A. L. Sisco will take the theme, "Jesus' Day of Preparation." On Good Friday there will be a three-hour service, from 12 noon to 3 p.m., in St. Andrew's United Church, commemorating the hours of darkness when Jesus hung upon the cross. This service is in 25-minute periods, with the "seven words from the cross" being taken by the three local clergymen; opportunity for worshippers to come, or leave, is planned for the five-minute interval between the periods mentioned, so there may be no interruption while the prayers and addressed are in progress.

The L.O.B.A. Daughters of Cavan, No. 1066, realized $28.40 from the sale of tickets on the rooster donated by Wilbert Fallis, the bird being won by Mrs. W. Johns of Port Hope, and the money going to the British War Victims' Fund. James Roddy was auctioneer for the many artistically trimmed baskets at the basket social the ladies' lodge recently sponsored, the sum of $15 remaining after all expenses in connection with the dance and social evening in the Town Hall had been paid; $1.25 was the highest bid, for an individual basket. Music was furnished by the Todd orchestra.

Lieutenant George Gray, who is an instructor in the Naval Training School at Windsor, has been home this week visiting his mother, Mrs. Wentworth Gray, and other relatives.

Of Interest to Women

"Half-past Five, War Time".

By PRUNELLA WOOD

FASHION being the graceful expression of the times in which people live... what's up now, in formal fashions, when daylight saving hours and the defence of democracy add up to "War Time?" Because... make no mistake... throwing formal fashions overboard would not be the patriotic gesture you might suppose. We ought to support the designers, seamstresses and sewing machines of a four-billion-dollar annual business as much as we can, in these times when the country needs us as financial partners.

Is it a four o'clock wedding? A vital committee reception? A restaurant dinner? A theatre date? The elegant silk suit will be appropriate.

Navy blue satin, soft and lustrous as fabric can be, makes this important suit dedicated to war time affairs which may begin in sunlight and end after midnight. Note the side swept softness, to flatter figure and fabric. Blouse is black chiffon, shawl, navy boucle with black fringe.

ENQUIRY COLUMN

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: You stated you had recipes for cottage pudding, gingerbread, brandy snaps, molasses cookies, etc., utilizing molasses in place of sugar. Would you kindly send me copies of those recipes? Thanking you.—A.H.D.

ANSWER: Will readers kindly clip these molasses recipes now—as we are receiving so many requests for them we do not want to have to repeat them.

Molasses Cottage Pudding.

One-half cup sugar, 1 cup flour, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup lukewarm milk, ½ cup shortening, ¾ teaspoon soda, 3 eggs, beaten. Mix sugar and flour and add molasses. Add the shortening to the milk, then the soda. Combine the two mixtures and beat for at least 3 minutes, then add the beaten eggs and mix well. Pour into greased baking dish and steam 1½ hours or bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes.

Hot Water Gingerbread.

One cup molasses, ½ cup boiling water, 2¼ cups flour, 4 tablespoons melted butter (or any other shortening), 1 teaspoon soda, 1½ teaspoons ginger, ½ teaspoon salt. Add water to molasses. Mix and sift dry ingredients, combine mixtures, add butter and beat well. Pour into greased shallow pans and bake 30 minutes in oven of 350 deg. Fahr.

Brandy Snaps (Ginger Snaps).

One-third cup molasses, 3 tablespoons shortening, 1 cup flour, 1-6 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon salt. Heat molasses to boiling point and pour over the shortening. Add the dry ingredients, mixed and sifted. Add 1 to 2 tablespoons flour if necessary. Chill, and slice or roll and bake 8 minutes at 350 deg. Fahr.

Choice Molasses Cookies.

Three-quarters cup melted shortening or cooking oil, 1 cup molasses, ½ cup brown sugar, 1 cup thick sour milk or buttermilk, 6 cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons ginger, 4 teaspoons soda, 1 tablespoon lemon extract. Mix the fat, molasses, and sugar until smooth. Add the sour milk, then the flour sifted with the salt, ginger and soda. Add the lemon extract. Mix to a smooth stiff dough and chill until firm. Roll out on floured board to 1-3-inch thickness. Cut into crescents or any desired shapes (good for dolls or stars, etc.) Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 8 minutes. These may be rolled very thin when they will be crisp.

QUESTION: I recently cut out and lost a recipe from your page for a cake made with molasses, and as I remember it, no sugar. If you can identify this cake by this scanty description will you please send it to me? Sorry I was so careless.—M. G.

ANSWER: Kindly see the four molasses recipes above to .

A molasses cake is very much like a gingerbread, the ginger only being omitted. Recipe above for hot water gingerbread may be used. I am giving you the following recipe because it is such a superior cake.

Students' Molasses Cake

One-third cup butter, 2-3 cup boiling water, 1 cup molasses, 1 egg, well beaten, 1½ teaspoons soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves. Melt butter in water, add molasses, egg and dry ingredients, mixed and sifted. Bake in buttered shallow pan 35 to 40 minutes; or greased muffin tins, for 20 minutes.

QUESTION: Congratulations on the splendid success of your page. On looking through my recipe files I find quite a number of recipes using molasses and honey instead of sugar. I've used some of these recipes and find they make as good cookies and cakes as if sugar was used. I thought some of your readers might like to help being patriotic by using less sugar, so I'm sending them along to you.

Do you have recipes for Dutch oven cookery. I've had one given me and don't know how to use it. How does one season iron pots? Mabe of Windsor.

ANSWER: First thanks for the recipes. I shall use them as space permits during the next few weeks. Yes, I do remember you from hearing from you in former years. Welcome back!

The purpose of the Dutch Oven is to cook the less tender cuts of meat and fowl (and vegetables) and give them a baked flavor and appearance, and yet the entire cooking is done on top of the stove.

Such well-known dishes as Braised short ribs of beef with tomatoes, Swiss steak, fricasseed chicken (using old fowl), Lamb or Veal stew, pork hocks with sauerkraut, are all appropriate for cooking in the Dutch Oven. As you use the oven you will find dozens of dishes that you like done in it.

Dutch Oven Dinner

One 2½ to 3-lb. slice of beef from round or chuck, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup water, 2 or 3 tablespoons molasses, 2 tablespoons flour, carrots, onions, potatoes, (and green peppers when in season). Rub the meat with the salt. Sprinkle with pepper. Brown on all sides in hot fat in Dutch oven removing the trivet, then pour over the water and molasses. Cover and simmer 2½ hours then add the vegetables (onions should be cut in quarters if they are large) and simmer until vegetables are tender. When ready lift meat and vegetables to hot platter, thicken liquid with flour by stirring flour into cold water. Strain liquid over the meat. Garnish with parsley.

I think the one rule you must remember in using your Dutch Oven is to use a minimum of water—the lid fits so well water does not evaporate off very fast, this gives the baked flavor that is so desirable.

To season your Dutch oven rub it well with grease, preferably lamb fat, then stand it over heat and let the fat burn off—that is,—let it heat through until it stops smoking. Repeat this. Your Dutch oven, if not allowed to rust, will last a lifetime.

FASHIONS

A vegetable print is clever and gay when used for Pattern 9928. You can stitch this frock up in no time, says Marian Martin, from very inexpensive material. you can wear it all day long and still look "vitamin-fresh." A front buttoning and capacious pockets are practical details. For a sport frock use the contrast version — yokes, sleeves, back bodice and pockets may all be made of a different fabric.

Pattern 9928 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards 35-inch fabric.

COMPANIONSHIP IS GREATEST MARRIAGE INSURANCE ASSET

Be Interesting, Learn to Talk and You Will Avoid Becoming Bores to Each Other.

If any youth or maiden should ask my advice in picking out a mate, I should unhesitatingly reply: Son, or daughter, as the case may be, choose one who is interesting. Be blind to looks. Pass up the virtues. Curb your fancies. Don't even listen to your heartthrobs.

All of these are transitory. In time beauty will fade. The fairest face will lose its bloom and grow old and wrinkled. The most willowy figure turn into a stringbean or a featherbed. No husbands and wives are so hard to live with as the good ones who always act noble. Our romantic fancies wear out before our wedding clothes do. And our pulses inevitably slow down with work and worry and age. But the thing that lasts is our desire for entertaining and amusing companionship. We never grow tired of those to whom we can talk endlessly without ever finishing all we have to say. We never get fed up with those who have always a new viewpoint to give us, funny story to make us laugh, a bit of spicy gossip to pique our interest. And that is why it is so important that before you commit yourself to the society of a girl or boy for a lifetime that you try to find out what sort of a conversational range he or she possesses.

Don't be misled by the blather of courtship into thinking that you could listen to John or Mary forever. Any man is a spellbinder to a girl as long as he tells her how beautiful and wonderful and how different from all other girls she is. As long as a girl chants a hymn of praise to a man he will lend his ears and marvel at her fascinting line.

When the Honeymoon Ends

But with marriage all the gooey stuff is out. Husbands and wives can't go on perpetually asking each other: "'Oose duckie is 'oo And do you really, truly love me? And would you commit suicide on my grave if I should die?" And when this happens only too many couples find out that they are stricken dumb. They have nothing to say to each other.

It is a cynical truth that you do not have to be a Sherlock Holmes to pick out the husbands and wives in any public place. They are the men and women who are sitting up side by side without making any effort to entertain each other, who spend the time between the acts of a play at the theatre in reading the program from cover to cover, and who at a restaurant are as conversational as the clams they devour.

It is also true that the average evening at home with the average family is about as depressing a function as one could go through. If the husband is too tired to step out, or his feet hurt him, he spends the evening barricaded behind his newspaper and only grunts when he is spoken to. The wife reads a novel or knits, while she reflects that she never thought marriage would be like this. And both beam with joy and welcome with effusive delight any stranger who will drop in an and start a conversation and save them from each other.

Getting on Each Other's Nerves

The great tragedy of marriage is boredom for it is the inability of husbands and wives to interest each other and make their enforced companionship pleasant and agreeable that is at the bottom of nine-tenths of the domestic misery that ends so often in divorce. It is boredom that causes husbands and wives to get on each other's nerves, until they fight just to break the awful monotony of living with one with whom they have nothing in common.

It is boredom that makes wives peevish and fretful and dissatisfied and makes them nag the husbands who can only give them money instead of the society they crave. It is boredom, oftener than anything else, that sends the husband, who can no longer endure the dull woman to whom he is married, out in search of some other woman who is bright and vivacious and stimulating and has something more interesting to talk about than

LOBLAW GROCETERIAS CO., LIMITED

Coder R. O. Parnell, R.C.N.V.R., has returned to his ship after spending his furlough with his wife and family.

Mrs. Michael Heffernan of Norwood has returned home, after spending the past week with friends and relatives in Norwood.

Miss Ruth Farr, Gordon avenue, was the lucky winner of the cushion raffled at the Rummage sale held by St. George's church last Saturday.

Joseph W. Byrnes, who is stationed with the navy at Kingston, spent a short leave recently with his mother, Mrs. Mary Byrnes, Erskine avenue.

Mrs. Agnes Buchanan and family, and Gerry O'Toole and Bill Smoothley, travelled to Fingal on Saturday to see Sgt. Obs. Mac Buchanan, son of Mrs. Buchanan, received his wings.

The Christian Culture meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Union, held Tuesday evening, took the form of a musical program. The life of Stephen Foster was reviewed and some of his songs were sung.

The engagement has been announced of Alice Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coles of Hastings, to Mr. Gordon Albert Hendren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hendren of Warsaw. The wedding is to take place in mid-April.

Among the many out-of-town guests who attended the Preston-Poolman wedding were Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Preston, Marvyn Preston, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Johnston and Darlene, Mrs. L. E. Stinson and son, Wallace Stinson, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Smith, all of Hastings; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jones of Newtonville; Mrs. V. Faux and Mrs. Harry Edwards of Hastings.

Mark Street Young People's Union held a very succesful War Savings Play Party on Monday evening. A short worship service was followed by a panel discussion entitled, "A Loan To My Country, a Gift to My Church." Games and contests, followed by refreshments, were then enjoyed by the members.

Miss Hilda Pearson of the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, is spending the Easter vacation with her mother, Mrs. S. R. Pearson, Weller street.

After April 1 the children's library will be open from 2 until 5 p.m. instead of from 3 until 6. The usual morning opening from 9 to 12 a.m. will prevail.

Mrs. Harry Rigby of Toronto, and D. H. "Bill" McEwen, R.C.A.F., Manning Depot, Toronto, has been called to Peterborough to attend the funeral of their uncle, Mr. E. J. McEwen.

Cpl. Jack W. Cooke, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, stationed at Halifax, Nova Scotia, is spending his Easter furlough with his wife and son, and his parent, Mr. and Mrs. Paddy Cooke, 164 Charlotte street.

Mr. and Mrs. George Worboy have announced the engagement of their youngest daughter, Marion, to Lieut. J. B. Raine, R.C.N.V.R., son of Mrs. Mary Raine and the late John Raine. The weding will take place in All Saints' Church on April 4.

Legion Auxiliary

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion held their March meeting on Tuesday with Mrs. E. Porter, president, in the chair. The meeting was very well-attended. Mrs. E. Houghton, past president, was presented with a jewel for her four years service as president, by Mrs. J. Mills.

The Auxiliary is very grateful to Mrs. E. Hurry, 804 George street, who has donated two large and four small quilts, two dresses, six pairs of boys' stockings, one scarf and one sweater, all made by herself, to be sent overseas for war victims. Three bales of articles, number 800, were sent over last year. After a country store sale, refreshments were served.

George Street Y.P.U.

The executive of George Street Young People's Union was responsible for the regular weekly meeting on Monday evening.

The program opened with recreation led by Miss Leola Northey after which the president took charge of a brief business period.

A very fine worship service, with the Easter story as the theme, was conducted by Misses Loretta McDougall, Elspeth Boorman and Jeanne Kerr. This service provided a suitable introduction for the set of 71 slides depicting the trial and crucifixion of Christ that were shown and explained by Rev. Roberts.

The meeting close with a brief prayer and the benediction by Rev. Roberts.

Jacobs—Harrington

CAMPBELLFORD, April 1 (ENS) —A quiet wedding took place at St. John's United Church Parsonage here at 1.30 Tuesday afternoon when Barbara Ellen, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Jacobs, Portage street, became the bride of William Harrington, only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Harrington, Morganstown. Rev. G. N. Maxwell officiated. The bride wore a heaven blue street length frock with flowered neck line and corsage of Briarcliff roses and fern. Miss Mabel Parker, who was her only attendant, wore a powder blue crepe with red hat and contrasting white accessories. Mr. Gordon Carr of Morganstown assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where members of the immediate families and- intimate friends were the guests and later Mr. and Mrs. Harrington left on a wedding trip to Toronto and Western Ontario. On their return they will reside at Morganston.

To Study Public Health

Peterborough is honored by being one of the cities selected by the Toronto School of Nursing for practical training in Public Health. The School has just sent to us, for a month of intensive study under the municipal department of health, Miss Margaret Smith. Miss Smith graduated from the Toronto General Hospital School of Nursing in 1930 and has had a wealth of experience in various types of nursing since that time. It is hoped that her stay in Peterborough will be both pleasant and profitable.

Many Out-of-Town Guests Opening of Station CHEX

Following the inaugural broadcast of Station CHEX a buffet dinner was held at the Empress Hotel where the guests were entertained. Supervised by Mrs. Chris Graham and Mrs. E. After the opening broadcast about 300 couples danced in the Collegiate gymnasium to the sweet-swinging strains of Mart Kenny and his Western Gentlemen. A spring time air of gaiety and goodwill pervaded the dance and put the guests into a dancing mood. Dress was optional, and fully half of the guests had taken advantage of this to wear the more comfortable informal dress.

One of the most striking evening dresses was a piquant creation involving a black velvet bodice with a peplum flounce worn over a full white net skirt; another was a graceful frock of navy crepe with a halter neckline which exposed the shoulders. Among the informal dresses there was one of light green wool jersey with a torso length bodice and pleated skirt. In fact, pleated skirts were very much in evidence.

a steady boy friend, while far less attractive girls are popular. I am 20, a successful business woman and popular with those with whom I work. I can easily get a first date, but never a second. I am so self-conscious I have begun to believe I have a mental quirk. I am in love with a boy who has never looked at me after our first date. I will not be an old maid. Better I should die than live alone without any pleasure. Do you have any suggestion to make to me? DESPERATE.

ANSWER—Yes, I have a very serious suggestion to make to you, and that is to urge you to try to get a sane outlook on your situation. Now you are seeing everything from a lopsided point of view and that makes you give false values to everything.

It is perfectly natural for a girl of 20 to want to have dates and be admired by boys and to go about and have good times, but neither boys nor parties comprise the whole of happiness in life, as you think they do. You have gotten morbid on this subject and in your desperate anxiety to have attention from boys you are defeating yourself.

For men are kittle cattle and there is no surer way for a girl to drive them away from her than to run after them. They are afraid of the girl who shows that she is so anxious to marry that she treats every invitation to the movies as a proposal of marriage, and they pass up the girl whose gratitude for every date shows that all the other boys steer clear of her. So don't be too anxious. Show that you can take 'em or leave 'em. Then the boys won't be afraid to date you.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, April 2.

THE LUNAR and mutual aspects bearing on the affairs of this day give emphasis to social, romantic, artistic and domestic engagements and those occupations and business establishments concerned with these. All such should forge on with expansive and gratifying purposes, with high goals to be attained with confidence and gratification. But with all the joy and satisfaction there may be opposition from elders or old friends, with sharp words or deep wounds to be guarded against. Business relations with young folks should enjoy stability and sound growth.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year devoted to social, domestic, romantic, and cultural activities, with much progress, happiness and stability given to all such engagements or business enterprises. These should be executec with much confidence and enthusiasm, despite the opposition or lack of co-operation of elders or old friends. It is admonished that harsh, caustic or impulsive words be averted lest regrets follow.

A child born on this day should be exceptionally versatile and talented in artistic, musical, literary or other professional pursuits in which it should attain standing and good fortune.

Shower Is Given Fairmount Girl

FAIRMOUNT, April 1—(ENS). — The regular meeting of the Fairmount Y.P.U. was held on Friday evening with the meeting in charge of Christian Culture conveners Roger Hanbidge and Allan Downes, and the Fellowship convener Charles Knight. A report of the membership campaign was given by Betty Turner, Allan Downes, and Roger Hanbidge. It was decided to dispense with the annual banquet.

Charles Knight had charge of the program. Poems were read by Joseph Gerr and Jean Hanbidge. Miss Scott gave a piano solo and Clark Armstrong read a poem.

Honor Bride-to-Be.

A very enjoyable evening was held at the home of Mr and Mrs. R. C. Hanbidge, when the girls of the community presented Miss Mildred Ballantyne with a shower. Miss E. Scott and Mary Hooton were in charge. The parlor had daintily decorated streamers waving from the ceiling to a chair decorated as the seat of honor, over which a sprinkling can full of confetti was working freely. Miss Ballantyne was called in to take the chair, and while the gifts were brought in, she opened them and read a verse of humorous poetry contained in each. She thanked them for all their kindness, after which they retired to the dining-room which was also beautifully decorated, and enjoyed a dainty supper.

G. C. McBain, who has spent the winter with his daughter Mrs. G. Hamilton of Palmerston, returned last week.

Corpl. W. Loomis of Peterborough spent Sunday with Roger Hanbidge.

Range Pals Show Fine Record Of War Work in 1942

The second annual meeting of the Range Pals was held at the home of Miss May and Mr. Gordon Thompson, Otonabee. The president, Miss Daisy Bell was in the chair for the short business session, during which it was decided to send a gift to Gnr. Leo Meagher, who has gone overseas. A letter of thanks was read from Spr. Elwood Hendren, a member who is now serving overseas and a receipt from the B.W.V.F. for the proceeds of the recent raffle.

Mr. Art Sayer was elected chairman for the election of officers and expressed the club's appreciation for the work done throughout the past year by the present officers. The treasurer's report showed a very successful year. The Range Pals, during the year have made quilts and afghans, many articles of children's clothing, as well as socks, mittens and helmets for the soldiers. A quilt top was donated by Miss Mary Eason. Total receipts for the year amounted to $165.25. Proceeds from a carnival, two raffles, a home-cooking sale, totalling $134.41 were donated to the B.W.V.F. The proceeds of a bingo game, $11, was used to send parcels to soldiers on active service.

All the officers were unanimously re-elected for the coming year, as follows: President, Daisy Bell; vice-president, Audrey Timlin; secretary-treasurer, Betty Sayer; publicity secretary, Reta Butler.

The rest of the evening the members played peanut euchre, at which Mrs. William Bell and Mr. F. Timline won prizes. The next meeting will be held on April 10.

And so I would say to the boys and girls who are thinking of committing matrimony: Before you pick out a husband or a wife find out whether he or she can entertain and amuse you by talking about matters of current interest. Is he or she the kind of conversationalist you will be willing to listen to for the next 30 or 40 years? It is the most vital decision you will ever be called upon to make, and if you begin to yawn when he or she gets off the topic of YOU, watch your step and don't let it lead you to the altar.

Lakefield Boy Married In Kaslo, B.C.

LAKEFIELD, April 1 (ENS) — A pretty spring wedding took place at St. Mark's Anglican church, Kaslo, British Columbia, on March 11, when Rev. M. C. T. Percival united in marriage Isabel Emily, youngest daughter of Alderman A. L. Grayling of Kaslo and John Alexander Hendren of Kaslo, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hendren of Lakefield, Ontario.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin. She wore a lovely floor-length gown of white sheer, a veil of white net caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and fern. She was attended by Mrs. William Hendren, her sister, who wore a gown of pale pink sheer with matching chapel veil, and carried pink and white carnations. Mr. William Hendren, brother of the groom, was best man. During the signing of the register Mrs. John Keene played "The Sweetest Story Ever Told."

A reception was held at the home of the bride's father, where a large, two-tier wedding cake stood on a table in a nest of tulle and lily of the valley. Afterwards the young couple left on a honeymoon trip to Nelson, British Columbia, the bride travelling in a blue ensemble with matching accessories.

Pork Liver Spotlighted

Pork Liver Is An Excellent Source of Most of the B Vitamins.

(By MARY MOORE.)

If you are a manufacturer the "price ceiling" is probably causing you many a sleepless night.

But since you are probably a housewife the price ceiling is going to help keep the price of pork liver down, since the recently launched nutrition campaign has revealed its value. Pork liver is an excellent source of most of the B vitamins.

I had the opportunity of attending a series of lectures on nutrition subjects and one of them was by Dr. McHenry, head of the Department of Nutrition of the University of Toronto. He and his assistants have been working most recently on the B group of vitamins and he told some lucky listeners his findings.

To you earnest folks who have been doling out $2.75 or $3.50 for your A or B-complex vitamins capsules, it will be welcome news to know that you can get your entire vitamin requirements from food.

Whole Wheat Bread.

Since whole wheat bread is a good source (not an excellent source) of vitamins it is impossible to understand the attitude of consumers (you and me) and the millers (who get the profit) and the Government (who get the healthy citizens), when it comes to voluntary versus compulsory consumption of 100 per cent whole wheat flour in bakers' bread and home baking. The flavor's better and from a nutritional standpoint it has the vitamins and valuable minerals, plus its major energy producing properties.

Up to the Housewives to Get It.

It seems that we housewives have to demand whole wheat bread and I don't mean brown bread. Brown bread may be made so with molasses, (and while molasses is an excellent food we want whole wheat bread when we ask for it— not refined-flour bread colored brown).

I mentioned this controversial subject of whole wheat bread versus fortified white because it is the most common food we eat. Everybody eats bread and should be getting the best he can from every slice he eats of it.

Excellent Sources of B Vitamins

Sources of vitamins are classed as "excellent" and "good." Excellent sources of the B vitamins are: Milk, eggs, peanuts, peanut butter, yeast, tomatoes, and leafy vegetables, meat —with pork liver topping them all.

Before I delve into my pet topic of ways of serving pork liver so your family will like the steady diet they need—I want to warn you to bring the milk in as soon as it is delivered and put it in the refrigerator—for light destroys about 50 per cent of the riboflavin (B2) in about four or five hours of exposure to it. (Light and exposure to air destroys many other of the vitamins, too.)

Pork Liver.

The problem of making pork liver desirable gradually became simpler as I found several methods of cooking it. What could be nicer than to have pork liver recommended to us just when we're missing our breakfast bacon so much—many of our English friends used to eat it for breakfast—so can we. (Wouldn't they love to be able to get it now.)

Panfried Pork Liver

As panfrying is the well known method of serving liver you should be sure you are doing it the best way. Have the butcher slice your pork liver very thinly—not more than ¼ inch thick. Dip each slice in flour and fry in hot bacon fat or butter very quickly, turn it after the first minute, and after 2 minutes serve it immediately. Fried liver should never be prepared before it is time for serving.

If liver is to be served with onions panfry the onions in bacon fat (25 to 30 mins.), remove to hot platter and keep hot. Panfry liver brown on one side (about 1 to 2 min), turn, lay onions over top, finish cooking. If you have glassware for cooking, the liver and onions could be treated as suggested here and taken to table on glass dish in which they were prepared, garnished with parsley.

Liver With Cream Gravy

A favorite method. Panfry the liver as above. Have ready one cup hot top milk or cream (or ½ cup evaporated milk and ½ cup hot water). As soon as liver is done, place on hot platter, and stand it in oven. Sprinkle 2 tablespoons flour into fat in pan, stir well, add hot cream, stir until thick, season with salt and pepper and strain over liver on platter, sprinkle with paprika and serve immediately.

Casserole of Liver (Italian Method)

Eight ¼-inch slices of pork liver, and eight slices of side bacon, 3 sprigs of parsley, 1 medium onion, ½ cup small mushrooms or ½ cup thick tomato pulp, ½ cup cooking sherry or 1-3 cup water mixed with 2 tablespoons lemon juice. In casserole pour 1 tablespoon cooking oil, and ½ cup of whatever liquid is used. Spread over this the prepared vegetables, then lay on the liver and bacon in alternate layers, having bacon on top to finish. Cover. Bake 1 hour at 350.

Baked Liver Loaf

Pour boiling water over 1 pound pork liver, let stand 10 minutes, where it will keep hot, then drain and put liver through food chopper. Add 1 cup fine crumbs, ¼ lb. lean pork or ground bacon, 1½ teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 1 beaten egg, 1 cup milk or 1 cup tomato puree. Mix well and form into loaf and place on greased shallow pan, with three strips of bacon over it, and surrounded with whole small onions. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour, basting with a little water or tomato juice occasionally. Good with baked potatoes cooked in the pan with their skins on too. (Use stock used for parboiling in soup pot.)

Potted Liver

(Mock pate de fois gras)

This is a well-known epicurean dish, and may be sliced cold or used as a sandwich or canape spread.

Two lbs. pork liver, 1 medium onion minced or grated, 1-3 teaspoon pepper, 2-3 teaspoon salt, 3 cloves, ¾ cup stock, scant 2-3 cup bacon fat. Keep liver in one piece; wash well and cook slowly in covered dish with onion, pepper, salt, cloves and stock until tender—about 2 hours—if covered well enough you may not have to add any water. Remove liver, cut in thin slices, and put through finest knife of food grinder 3 times (or pound to a paste). Put in deep dish, strain liquid in saucepan over it and let cool over night. Break it up and add ½ cup of hot fat (not lard), and mix well, and rub through a sieve and pack in straight sided jar or bean pot or deep earthen bowl. Pour 2 tablespoons of the melted fat over top. Chill well. When serving slice with sharp knife or use mixed with mayonnaise as sandwich or canape spread.

If any of our readers would like recipes for Baked, Liver, Liver croquettes, Liver pudding, they should write to me in care of this paper enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope.

Warkworth Bride Is Given Shower

WARKWORTH, April 1.—(ENS) —Mrs. Philip Edwards and Yvonne assisted by Miss Orletta Gummer, Norham, entertained at a kitchen shower in honor of Mrs. Ralph Campbell, formerly Miss Beatrice Bragg on Friday. The bride opened the many beautiful gifts under a cluster of wedding bells which were arranged to shower her with confetti. The remainder of the evening was spent in an amusing game of peanut euchre, after which a delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

Guests were present from Trenton and Morganston, as well as from Norham and Warkworth.

Time cannot change them, it's true;
Years that may come cannot sever
My loving remembrance of you.

—Fondly remembered by his Son and Daughter-in-law.

STANGER.—In loving memory of Mrs. John Stanger, who passed away April 1, 1941.

Her dear bright eyes and cheerful face,
Are so pleasant to recall;
She had a loving word for each,
And died beloved by all.

—The Family.

CARDS OF THANKS

First 1942 Step

SAN FRANCISCO, April 1—(AP) Braving United States war-time restrictions, organized baseball takes its first step of the 1942 season tomorrow—the opening of the Pacific Coast season.

Military officials are standing pat on their 5,000 crowd limitation, but temporarily have approved night games. Games may be cancelled at any time without notice.

A Better Picture

WASHINGTON, April 1—(AP). — The Roosevelt administration plans to consolidate the major government publicity services soon into a single "war information administration," usually reliable sources said to-day, and the idea would be to give a more co-ordinate and intensive picture of the United States war effort.

series with the Montreal Royals and did not draw a big crowd. So the governing body promptly called the rest of the series off. No wonder Fitzgerald says "It's a money-making proposition and we're not big enough to interest them." What a travesty in the name of sport that the body governing "amateur" hockey throughout Canada should ignore the right of a club and throw out a series just because it is not drawing packed audiences. The whole management of hockey in the Dominion needs revision. A lot of the officials should be tossed out on their ear and replaced by a group to whom sport means something.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Nick Metz is the Toronto hero today. He might just as easily have been a tramp. Metz was flanked by Drillon and Apps with one man to beat when he tore down on top of Henry. He elected to make the play himself instead of passing and got away with it but he took a big chance. Sound hockey would have seen him set up either Drillon or Apps to beat Juzda and make it sure....It is funny what a difference a few hours make....Yesterday the Toronto press charged that some of the Leafs were stick-leaners and not carrying their share of the load....Today they are hailed as "the fightingest team of Toronto Leafs to appear in Stanley Cup competition since the palmy days of Red Horner, King Clancy, Conacher, Jackson and Primeau"....There will be no senior baseball in Hamilton this season and thus another stronghold of the diamond pastime has given up the ghost....Ab Barnes got quite a going over in the T.H.L. major battle the other night....Basketball fans are reminded that the game between Generals and Quakers gets under way at 7:00 o'clock sharp tonight....Both teams will be well supported....Lynn Patrick and Grant Warwick of the Rangers wound up the game on crutches.

Lovely Lily Pool Made With a Tub

Container Sunk in Ground

How a lovely lily pool adds to your garden! And it takes no more room—is no more trouble—than the average flower bed. Just sink a container in the earth, put dirt in the bottom and add water.

Your container may be a wooden tub. One that's only two feet in diameter will have room enough for a lovely pygmy lily and several graceful aquatic plants.

You can get pygmies of all kinds these days—hardy and tropical—in white and lovely colors. One plant will give dozens of blooms.

What to plant around the pool, to give it a natural, woodland look? Forget-me-not, marsh-marigold make a charming frame for the stone edge. Clumps of regal fern and marsh iris give height and variety—reflect themselves beautifully in the water.

How to make your pool? Our 32-page booklet gives easy directions for container, natural and cement pools. Tells how to grow water lilies, suggests what to plant around pool and also has directions [for r]ock gardens.

"The Authority on Authorities"

MAKING A FOOL OF HIM

SOME plays will work against a superlatively fine player, but would have no chance whatever against one of only fair ability. They depend upon the fact that the advanced expert makes deductions of some kind from everything he sees, whereas the general run of players base their actions upon what they take in at first glance, or upon first hearing. Consequently, it is possible sometimes to play in such a way as to cause the skillful card-reader to size up the situation in just the way you want him to.

No better example could be asked of a relatively inexperienced player, with fine natural ability, taking advantage of the skill of one of the world's greatest cardsmen. After keeping her clubs concealed in the bidding, Mrs. Olive Benward, in a social game in Hollis, L. I., was rewarded by seeing West lead his fourth-best card of the suit.

After East put on his J, she followed one of the few lessons she has had a chance to learn, and did some thinking, which showed it must be a singleton. If she took this with the K and led back the 9, West would surely think East had the Q-J doubleton originally. In this event, he must not put on his 10 and set up the whole suit for South, but must duck and let the singleton Q win. This would leave him the 10-7 to stop the run of South's remaining A-8-2. So, thinking he was thwarting an effort to lure two honors together onto a trick, he played his 6, and was flabbergasted when the 9 won, East discarding a spade.

Mrs. Benward then dropped the 10 with the A and Q, completed that suit and five diamonds, enabling her to take 11 tricks. If any other play had been made, hearts and the spade A would have set the contract.

LONG FARM TASK

CLINTON, Ont., April 1 (CP).—Twelve hundred farmers of Huron County have agreed to undertake one of the most complicated tasks possible on their farms. They will soon begin keeping adequate records for the purpose of determining the cost of producing certain farm products.

The records will be kept on hogs, poultry, soya beans, white beans and sugar beets and it is expected they will have to be maintained for a period of at least five years in order to strike a true figure.

Vessel's Cargo Known To Sub Say Survivors

MIAMI, Fla., April 1 — (AP). — Survivors declared yesterday that the commander of a German submarine knew the home port and destination of a United States freighter torpedoed and sunk in West Indian waters, while British sailors said they were waved to safety before a U-boat opened the shelling attack to sink their ship.

One man lost his life in the sinking of the American vessel. Three were lost after the British tanker was sent to the bottom.

The Americans said the submarine commander even knew what their ship was carrying.

They said he exhibited his knowledge in talking to crewmen taken aboard the undersea boat.

The third mate, Arthur Wilder of Weymouth, Mass., dived off of the stricken ship without a lifebelt. He was picked up by the submarine and transferred to a raft.

The steward, Wilfred J. Bruneau of Hollywood, Cal., was taken aboard the sub for questioning. He asked for cigarets, and was given a box of German make, and a box of German matches.

One man—Clark Xavier of Providence, R.I.—was lost, being swept from a raft after all hands were removed safely from the ship.

In Water Thirteen Hours

Six survivors who were in the water for thirteen hours were spotted from the air and picked up by surface craft.

"I saw the torpedo coming," related Thomas E. Sullivan of Boston, a seaman, "but it was so close that I didn't have time to say anything before it hit us and exploded.

"We were hit just after midnight, and the ship sank in about fifteen minutes . . .

"I had to swim hard to keep clear of the submarine. It kept manoeuvring. Why, that captain handled it like an automobile, running forward, then backing up.

"There was a heavy swell, and by the time the ship went down and the submarine had left, I couldn't find the lifeboat or a raft."

Sullivan said he, Captain W. D. Graham of Pulaski, Va., and an assistant engineer kept close together all night. Three other survivors swam to them after daybreak, and the six stayed together until they were picked up.

Sunk by Gunfire

The British vessel did not catch fire after being torpedoed and the men were more than a mile away in three lifeboats when the submarine surfaced and sank it with gunfire. Those aboard the submarine waved the crew of the ship out of range before opening fire. About fifty shells were fired.

Approaching a small West Indian island a few hours later, one of the boats struck a reef. Of the five men who tried to swim ashore, three were drowned in the surf. The other men in the boat managed to extricate it from the reef and reach land.

Taken to Nassau later, the men were greeted by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

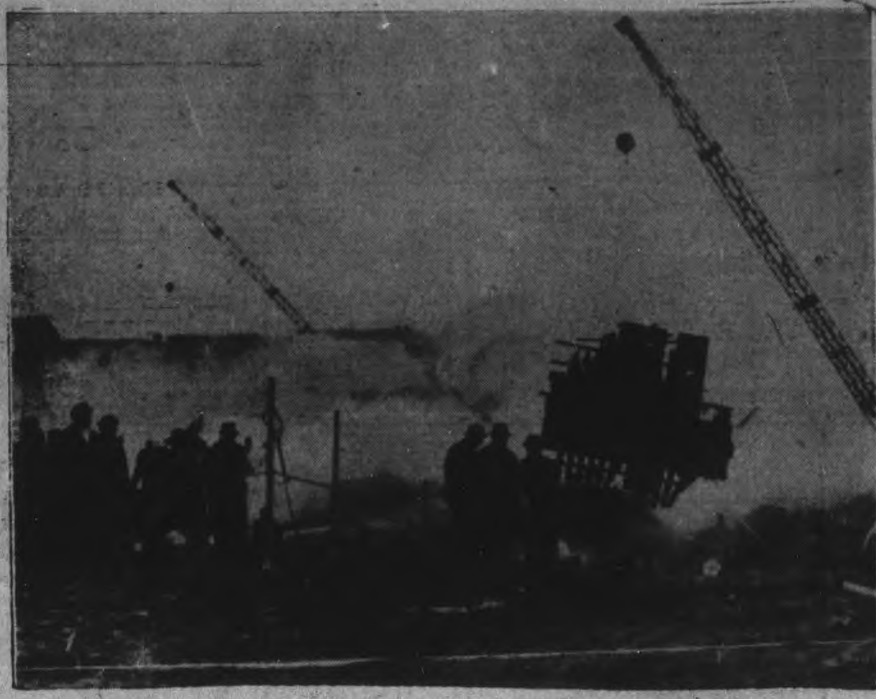
Fined $1,000

Windsor, Ont., April 1 (CP). MRS. Elizabeth J. Parton, 42, wife of a wealthy Parry Sound merchant yesterday was fined $1,000 including costs or six months on two charges of violations of the foreign exchange control board regulations when she pleaded guilty before Magistrate D. M. Brodie.

Mrs. Parton, who on Feb. 14 tried to smuggle $1,080 pinned to her slip across the river to Detroit in order to visit a sick son in Virginia, was unable to attend court because of illness, the magistrate was told.

She was fined $500 or three months on each charge. The fines were paid.

Searching For Bodies After Arms Plant Blast



A huge wrecker is pictured being used to lift portions of the Remington arms plant in an effort to find the bodies of six missing employees following a series of explosions at Bridgeport, Conn. A fire, of undetermined origin, set of a train of explosives with hundreds of boxes containing cartridges blowing up in rapid succession. The building affected was a one-storey brick building, which was used in packing cartridges in wooden boxes for shipment. Besides those that are missing, several employees were injured, many suffering from shock.

Major Returns $17 Cheque From Tobruk

Here is a little romance of a rejected advertisement which finally reaped unexpected value, at the same time revealing two attractive personalities.

Howard E. Vair is president of the Vair-E-Best Candy Shop, Hamilton avenue, Detroit. Reading the war news from Libya last fall, and the references to the intense heat of North Africa, he sent a cheque for $17 to the Tobruk garrison to buy beer for the men.

He read in a Toronto newspaper about the heat and thirst, and the story also said the soldiers published a daily paper called the "Tobruk Express."

"I thought it would be a good idea to send some money for an advertisement in the soldiers' paper. I figured out what I thought an "ad" would cost, and told the commanding officer to spend the rest of the money for beer for the men. I sent $17 because I had sold some glasses inscribed "There'll Always Be An England" in my shop, and I thought the proceeds ought to go to help the British."

So the letter was mailed from Detroit October 7 last, crossed the Pacific Ocean to Maila, Hong Hong, Calcutta, Bombay, Bagdad and Cairo, finally reaching the garrison at Tobruk.

Mr. Vair thought no more about his advertisement and various small beers for the British and Australian soldiers. One day last week the cheque was returned to him, all the way from Tobruk in an envelope marked "On His Majesty's Service." It was signed by the officer commanding the fortress, Major R. W. Hallam, and accompanied the much travelled cheque. The officer wrote that there was no newspaper in the place other than a small sheet.

"There are no inhabitants, nor even much of a town left. There is certainly no beer on which to spend the change.

So, as we can give you no value for your money, we are returning your cheque. If you have mentally said goodbye to it anyhow, help us by donating it to a Spitfire Fund or to any other branch of the British effort you may fancy."

Typical Of British

Only a British officer would think of returning the cheque because it could not be spent for the specified purpose, Vair said.

"He could have used the money for cigarettes, soft drinks or candy for his men or he could have sent it to the army hospitals in Cairo for the relief of the wounded," Mr. Vair said, "but no, he was a British officer and a gentleman. I sent the money for an ad and beer. He could not run the ad, and there is no beer in Tobruk—so back came the money.

He took the trouble to sit down in a bombed town, in the heat and the dust, and write me a polite letter of explanation. You have got to understand to British to understand that man."

This extraordinary correspondence touched upon a little note of humor from the beginning to the end. Eventually it seems the garrison sheet, however it was typed did carry a "Vair-E-Best Candy" ad to the effect that since Mr. Vair understood the Australians would sail for home direct from Genoa, Italy, and pass through the United States, en route, he solicited their candy business as they passed through Detroit.

At the bottom of the "ad" is a message to Vair from the garrison. In perfect American slang it says:

"O.K., Mr. Vair—we'll be seeing you."

Vair is going to send the $17 to a Toronto newspaper that sponsors a Spitfire fund. "I hope they cash it," he remarked.

This story with a facsimile of the letter from Major Hallam was published in the Detroit Times, the most valuable advertising Howard E. Vair's candy shop ever got. He could not have bought a line of it in that form and position for the $17.

Police Seize Still In Detlor

BANCROFT, April 1 — (ENS).— Constables W. Beattie and Short of the R.C.M.P. of Belleville and Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer seized a complete still on the premises of Robert Phillips of Detlor on Friday. Phillips was arrested and brought to Bancroft where he was later released on $500 bail, and will appear in Bancroft Police Court on April 21.

Provincial Officer S. W. Palmateer and Town Constable R. F. Delyea had a busy time on Saturday night and early on Sunday morning when Mac Fitzgerald of Combermere, Alec Carmichael of Bird's Creek, and Daniel Sutherland of Bancroft were arrested on charges of intoxication, with further charges pending against Carmichael as the result of a brawl in the Grand Cafe in Bancroft on Saturday night.

Wilfred Holbrook of Baptiste and Andrew Sears and William Redmond of Bancroft were picked up by police and sent home and charged with causing an unnecessary noise by screaming and hollering on the Main Street of Bancroft after midnight.

Harry Whitefoot of Bancroft and Oliver Kellar, Monk Road were arrested by S. W. Palmateer when the officer happened by at the Grand Cafe when the two accused men were in the midst of a fight. Both were arrested later being released charged with taking part in an affray.

Kenneth Barker of Bancroft was charged with parking his milk truck in the middle of the street at 2 a.m. on Sunday morning without any lights being displayed. All will appear in Bancroft Police Court on April 21.

The Imperial Oil truck driven by William Broad of Bancroft careened down a fifteen-foot embankment eight miles south of Bancroft on Monday morning with no injury to the driver and slight damages to the truck. Mr. Broad was on his way with a half load of gasoline to Coe Hill when the tie bolt on his steering mechanism gave way. The driver had no control of his steering and his only alternative was to apply the brakes and break the momentum of the truck. The vehicle headed for the ditch sheering off three guard rails posts and slid down the embankment. The driver and local mechanics were the better part of the afternoon extricating the truck.

Sergt. Earl Young, who has been stationed at Kingston, spent two daysb at his home in Bancroft prior to his transfer to Petawawa.

Captain D. Rouse of Kingston is spending a few days leave at his home in Bancroft.

Jack Anderson, a student of Albert College, of Belleville arrived home on Friday evening to spend over the Easter holidays with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. O. W. Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Mackinley Wilson, acompanied by their daughters Rhoda and Freeda, Mrs. P. J. Stringer and Mrs. William McAlpine motored to Belleville on Saturday. Miss Freeda Wilson remained in the city where she intends taking a course in hairdressing.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Blatherwick, acompanied by W. E. Wiggins and Miss Joan Wiggins motored to Belleville on Saturday.

Special services were held in St. John's Anglican Church, Bancroft, on Sunday commemorating the Day of Prayer. Special hymns and prayers for His Lordship Bishop Lyons of Kingston, who to-day celebrated his tenth anniversary as Bishop of this Diocese.

Rev. G. A. Gordier left on Monday on a business trip to Kingston.

Mrs. C. O. Fuller left on Monday morning for Toronto and on her return will be accompanied by her daughters Patricia and Avis, who are taking a commercial course in the city.

Charge Canucks Tied, Beaten By Jap Captors

LONDON, April 1 — (CP Cable).—A Daily Express despatch from Calcutta today quoted an unnamed Chinese banker as saying that Canadian soldiers captured when the Japanese took Hong Kong were tied and beaten.

O. D. Gallagher, the Express correspondent, said the banker, a resident of the Repulse Bay Hotel in Hong Kong for four days after the Japanese occupation, told him this story:

"The hotel guests went into the street and saw fifteen Canadian soldier ranged alongside the roadside. The soldiers were stripped to their waists and forced to their knees. Ropes were tied around their heads with knots in their mouths. Their hands were tied behind their backs.

"Each Canadian was roped thus and all fifteen were roped in line by a longer rope. Over them stood a Japanese soldier holding a long, thin rod. The backs of the kneeling Canadians bore blue weals.

"A car driven by a Canadian officer turned a corner and was stopped by the Japs. They pulled him from the car and hit him in the mouth. He, too, was stripped to the waist, roped and forced to kneel.

"Watching hotel residents were then moved away by the Japanee. We heard the sound of shots some minutes afterward."

Gallagher said he was unable to name the banker as the Japanese would "gestapo" his relatives at Hong Kong, but added he had passed the men's names on to the British Intelligence Corps.

Safer On Submarine Than Warship Crew Tells Writer On First Trip

By JOHN A. MOROSO
Associated Press Staff Writer.

ABOARD A U.S. SUBMARINE IN THE ATLANTIC, April 1—(APA). —The admiral told me that going down in a submarine is just like going down into your cellar at home.

I found it just as easy. The main difference is that the sub is a darn sight cleaner.

Sailing along 140 feet below the white-capped waters is almost like nothing at all. The fearful things I had heard about submarines evaporated rapidly as I watched the teamwork of an American crew send the depth gauge spinning slowly around.

There is no particular feeling of pressure or movement.

There is a tense feeling of excite[illegible] and a thrill in the scores of [illegible] manipulated by the 13 [illegible] room.

[illegible] I leaned ag[illegible] suddenly felt [illegible] sleeve. Lt.-Cmdr. [illegible], 33, laughed and exp[illegible] normal for a little water to [illegible] when the oil coagulated.

A group of war correspondents and I, realizing we may soon be exposed to the exterior [illegible] of a torpedo tube, decided it would be informative to go down in a friendly ship to see what it was like. There's nothing like knowing just how the enemy operates when he is trying to plug you with 2,500 pounds of metal and TNT.

Some Fast Work.

Cmdr. Davidson and his 49 associates put on an excellent demonstration of clockwork as they prepared to dive.

Orders, crisp and fast, crackled out as we huddled on a freezing, spray-swept deck.

Less than a minute after the order to submerge was given our craft was below the surface and ready for action.

It was a thrill to look through the periscope. We spotted a medium-sized freighter a short time after diving and at 4,000 yards she looked like mighty easy game. Her skipper saw our periscope, and although he knew he was in friendly water he put his stern to us and changed his course.

At 50 feet we had a half-pound of pressure inside the submarine and it wasn't noticeable. At 140 feet we had about 65 pounds of press outside the ship.

Among other things, we learned [illegible] Atlantic Ocean is saltier than [illegible] and that submarine men [illegible] in a sub than [illegible].

[illegible] hard for a plane [illegible] submarine, and operating one [illegible] driving your car if you exercise every-day common sense."

Hepburn Has Surplus Of $1,383,552, No New Taxation

TORONTO, April 2.—(CP).—Premier Hepburn announced a surplus of $1,383,552 to the Ontario Legislature in his budget address to-day, maintaining his unbroken list of surpluses since his Liberal government came to power eight years ago.

Mr. Hepburn, who also is provincial treasurer, said there would be no new taxes or changes on present levies, that present bonuses on cheese and hog production would be maintained and Ontario municipalities again would receive a one-mill subsidy.

He reviewed operations of each government department and emphasized their connection with the Dominion's war effort. He pledged anew the government's intention "to live within our income" and to continue a "pay as you go" policy and noted the increased "regimentation of a war economy" with the war "at our very gates."

"It is in the light of these conditions and this regimented economy that the government has been compelled to provide for the coming fiscal year," for which Mr. Hepburn budgeted for a surplus of $473,613.

The Premiers surplus figure of $1,383,552 was computed after lumping capital and ordinary expenditure against capital and ordinary revenue, the first time Mr. Hepburn had done so. Without including capital expenditure and revenue, the interim surplus in the budget was $13,329,023 and on this basis, Mr. Hepburn last year when reporting a record surplus of $12,600,363 for 1940-41 had estimated a surplus of $9,743,065 for the fiscal year which ended March 31.

The New System

Mr. Hepburn called attention to the new system and said of the old: "The result sometimes is to have a surplus on ordinary account and a deficit on capital account, the latter being greater than the former. This, to my way of thinking, resembles too much the system of bridge scoring above and below the line."

He reported ordinary revenue at $120,958,245 for the past fiscal year and capital revenue of $19,870,336 against ordinary expenditure of $107,629,222 and capital expenditure of $31,616,806. For the next fiscal

Yank Philippine Raiders Burn 22 Bases Packed With Jap Goods For Guinea Push

WASHINGTON, April 2—(AP).—The United States War Department reported sharp skirmishes on the Philippines Bataan Peninsula today in the wake of the latest large scale Japanese attack on the American-Philipino defenders there.

Enemy artillery and dive bombers shelled and bombed the defenders' positions, but no general action followed yesterday's battle, a communique said.

Meanwhile intermittent air attacks continued around the clock on the Manila Bay harbor defences, but the War Department said the Japanese bombers were forced to fly at such altitudes their bombing was ineffective. At the same time the big guns of Fort Mills on Corregidor Island engaged in a duel with Japanese batteries on the south shore of the bay.

The communique said neither bombing nor shelling inflicted damage on the forts.

(Japanese broadcasts in Tokyo quoted Imperial headquarters to-day as claiming that anti-aircraft batteries, an airfield, barracks and other military establishments on Corregidor had been damaged beyond repair by repeated Japanese naval air attacks between March 24 and 31.)

American-Filipino troops have raided two Japanese bases on the southern Philippine Islands of Mindanao, and military observers predicted that the invaders would be attacked frequently by the thousands of native fighters hidden in teak and ebony forests of the island.,

One raid was on the hamlet of Digos, 23 miles south of the main Japanese base at Davao. A small force of U.S. troops burned 22 warehouses of food, gasoline and ammunition, destroyed military equipment, and escaped to the forest of Cotobato, some 10 miles to the west, without losing a man.

The supplies were believed to be part of the stores the Japanese are accumulating for the drive against New Guinea and Australia, and such raiads may upset the enemy's timetable. Units engaged were identified in the army's communique yesterday as merely "our troops," with no indication of whether they were American or Pilipino.

Some 250 miles west of Digos, across the Motor gulf, a native Sulu unit fought to the heart of the important Japanese occupied city of Zamboanga in a surprise attack. The Sulus destroyed several machine-gun nests, inflicted heavy casualties, and withdrew unscathed, apparently to the forests just north of Zamboanga.

11 Norse Ships Make A Break

Only 2 Escape Nazi Guns In Skagerrak In Race For U.K.

STOCKHOLM, April 2.—(AP). — German warships blocking the Skagerrak were declared to-day t have battered or sunk two and possibly four of 11 Norwegian merchant ships which risked a daring dash to Britain from Goeborg, Sweden, and although several others were reported turned back the possibility was held that some might yet be at large and racing toward safety.

The merchantmen which slipped out of Goteborg in a snowstorm Tuesday ran into blockade of Nazi warcraft which had laid in wait for them since the Germans found themselves unable to seize control of the ships through action in the Swedish courts which released them March 17.

From the stories of fishermen and residents of the coastal towns which shook with cannonading Tuesday night and yesterday, Swedish newspapers compiled this record of the fate of the ship:

Two of the merchantmen, the 12,358 ton whale oil ship Skytteren and the 6,222 ton Buccaneer, were sunk by German gunfire almost as soon as they passed the three-mile territorial limit outside Goteborg.

One ship went aground; one was seen burning at sea and perhaps sank; two, cut off from hope of escape, turned back into a Swedish port yesterday afternoon. At least two more were said to be returning, perhaps damaged.

At least two large cargo vessels were given at least a fighting chance of breaking through. Fishermen said they were last seen yesterday, undamaged and racing for the open sea.

Norwegian official circles said that the Skytteren and Buccaneer had been sunk by a German destroyer and four armed trawlers.

Two Set Back to Harbor

The two ships which turned back and regained the safety of Goteberg harbor were identified as the 5,653-ton Lionel and the 5,263-ton Dicto.

Altogether the ships' tonnage amounted to more than 55,000.

Besides the Skytteren and Buccaneer, they were listed by Swedish

Highlights Of Ontario's Budget

By The Canadian Press.

Surplus of $1,383,552 announced for fiscal year ending March 31 (10 months actual and two months estimated). This figure computed after lumping capital and ordinary revenue, a new departure on the part of Premier Hepburn.

Without including capital expenditure and revenue the surplus is $13,329,023. It was this basis the record surplus of $12,600,363 was announced last year and a surplus of $9,743,063 estimated for this year.

Taxes remain unchanged.

Gross ordinary revenue for the next fiscal year estimated at $120,958,245, compared with $115,179,775 in the current fiscal year (10 months actual, two months estimated.)

Estimated gross ordinary expenditures of $107,629,222 in the next fiscal year compared with $105,436,711 for the year just ended.

A surplus of $473,613 estimated for the year ending March 31, 1943.

Gross provincial debt reduced by $4,159,958. Funded debt up $2,722,488 to $619,306,686.

Receipts from Liquor Control Board totalled $13,650,000 compared with an estimated $12,000,000.

Cheese and hog bonuses to be continued. The cheese bonus is two cents per pound; bonus on hogs is $1 for Grade A and 50 cents for Grade B1.

Mill subsidy to the municipalities remains in effect.

Murdered Three, Youth Gets Life

PONTIAC, Mich., April 2.—(AP)—Dominick Piccone, 20-year-old exconvict who killed three Michigan farmers in a wild 24-hour rampage, was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor and solitary confinement in circuit court here today.

Michigan law provides no more severe punishment.

Piccone, who was captured by state police on a country road near Otisville, Mich., early today, was brought before Circuit Judge H. Russel Holland shortly before noon.

He pleaded guilty to first degree murder in the cold-blooded shootings of Cassius E. Barber, 71, in Barber's farm home two miles east of Oxford, Mich., Tuesday night.

Piccone had threatened to kill Barber, after the two engaged in an

Dope For Height

Boston, April 2 (AP)

THE possibility the Japanese may be equipping their fliers with "air pills" made of benzedrine to enable them to withstand extremely high altitudes was advanced today at the meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology. The theory was expressed following coincidence of a report from the war zone that certain pills had been found on captured Japanese.

Rains Driving Japs To Sea

Guinea Floods To Stir Ship Raid On Moresby

MELBOURNE, April 2.—(CP). — The Japanese, halted in their attempted overland drive in New Guinea by torrential rains and robbed temporarily of air superiority by the rising Allied strength, soon may launch a sea-borne attack on Port Moresby, it was predicted today.

The likelihood of such a move against the key position on New Guinea's south coast, which lies within 300 miles of the Australian continent, is "suggested by recent movements of enemy ships, which are being constantly attacked at Lae and Salamaua by the Allied air forces," saiad the Sydney Sun.

At the same time, the newspaper reported, the Japanese are obtaining "aerial reinforcements which must be described as 'considerable'." Because of this, the Sun declared, "the air supremacy we have gained may not be permanent and at most will dislocate the Japanese plans only temporarily."

Stroke Threatens To Flank British Lines Guarding Central Burma Oil Fields

Hard Pressed Britons Badly Outnumbered
Assaults Increased On Chinese Line
Mandalay Hinted Bombed Twice Wednesday

LONDON, April 2—(CP).—A Chinese spokesman in Chungking said today that Japanese troops, covered by a force of cruisers and destroyers, had landed at the chief West Burma port of Akyab, bringing the war within 100 miles of the Indian frontier and posing a new flanking threat to the main British lines guarding the Central Burma oil fields.

There was no official confirmation of the statement in London. But British observers did not minimize the threat, and predicted that any Japanese flanking attack from such a base soon would make the present British positions, based on the town of Prome, 180 miles southeast of Akyab, untenable.

At the same time the Nazi-controlled Paris radio broadcast reports that powerful enemy forces sent up the Sitting River to land at Yedashe, some 18 miles north of Toungoo, were threatening anew the Chinese lines centred on Nangyun, 12 miles above Toungoo, along the Mandalay-Rangoon rail line.

Akyab, on the western coastal plain, is separated from the Irrawaddy River basin by the Arakan Yoma mountainside range. But observers pointed out that a trail leads from Akyab across the mountains to Minbu, on the Irrawaddy 100 miles north of Prome and 20 miles below Yenang-Yaung, centre of the Burma oil fields which are the chief goal of the Japanese drive.

Allies Badly Outnumbered

The British and Indian troops now holding Prome already are outnumbered by the Japanese and traitorous Burmese forces.

Akyab, which at the last census had a population of 38,094, lies 350 miles across the Bay of Bengal from Calcutta. It is one of the few serviceable ports between Japanese-held Rangoon, the former Burma capital, and Chittagong to the north.

British dispatches from Chungking said that as a result of recent conversations there, the Chinese forces in Burma would remain under the command of Lt.-Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, the British commander for Burma, and that Lt.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell, the United States officer commanding the Chinese, would be under Gen. Alexander's orders.

Communiques from both British and Chinese headquarters told of a raid on North Burma yesterday as the Japanese continued to press the advantage of their air superiority.

The British communique said the raid was directed at an airdrome. Chinese headquarters said the Japanese hurled 27 bombers and 15 fighters at a North Burma town not previously attacked (perhaps Mandalay itself) and then returned at dusk in a second assault.

Some casualties were reported but the Chinese said damage was negligible.

Slay 3,000, 2 Days At Leningrad

MOSCOW, April 2 (AP)—Russia said today that Leningrad front troops had effected a number of successful operations in the last two days, killing about 3,000 German officers and soldiers.

Twenty-four German planes were destroyed Tuesday against a loss of 13 Russian planes.

(Recent differences along Axis junior partners in the Balkans were apparently submerged again in the interest of Hitler's spring military operations.

(Although traditionally a friend of Russia, Bulgaria was reported by Berne sources to be purging her army of hundreds of officers with Soviet sympathies through transfers and arrests. Axis accounts say King Boris has pledged some 200,000 Bulgarian troops for the eastern front.

Edge On Air Toll

LONDON, April 2—(AP).—Germany lost 159 planes during March over the British Isles, the Mediterranean and the European continent exclusive of the Russian front, according to figures released today by British officials. Britain's losses came to 144.

They gave this sectional breakdown:

Over Britain—Germany 7, Britain 0.

Over Europe — Germany 59, Britain 102.

Over the Mediterranean area—Germany 93, including 59 brought down by Malta's defenders alone; Britain 42.

In addition the Admiralty reported six Axis planes shot down by warships.

Cripps Juggles With New Compromise

By H. R. STIMSON
Associated Press Staff Writer.

NEW DELHI, India, April 2 — (AP). — Both Sir Stafford Cripps special British envoy to India, and the All-India Congress Party indicated to-day a willingness to negotiate a compromise solution of the Indian independence problem.

The executive committee of the party, India's most powerful political organization, is expected to deliver to-night its detailed rejection of a British offer of post-war Dominion status.

But it is understood that the committee also is drafting counter-proposals to be submitted to Sir Stafford if the British War Cabinet member so desires.

By postponing his departure for home in the midst of the evident stalemate Sir Stafford seemed to have left the door ajar for negotiation on counter-proposals.

Before he did this and before it became known the Congress Party Committee was drafting a counter-plan, virtually all hope for the success of the mission had vanished.

Want Indians in Charge.

The party's reply, approved after five days of deliberation, was reported to be detailed in reasons for the rejection.

It was understood to criticize the British proposal that direction of Indian defence remain entirely in British hands rather than Indian military men and to question both the option which Britain would give certain provinces to remain outside the future Indian Union and the representation of the Indian principalities in the future constitution-making body.

Editorials in the Nationalist Indian press expressed resentment over what the editors understood to be the tone of the American press. They have received word of unfavorable reaction to the reluctance of India's leaders to strike a bargain with Britain.

Blast Target Apart From 500 Feet Making No Misses

LONDON, April 2 —(CP Cable)—Direct hits with heavy bombs on the big Matford Truck plant at Poissy, on the outskirts of Paris, were reported today by Canadian airmen who took part in far-ranging raids on occupied France last night.

The Air Ministry announced that the Royal Air Force struck also at west and northwest Germany. The Canadian squadrons concentrated on objectives in France — the Matford Works and docks at Le Havre.

From all operations 15 R.A.F. bombers are missing, the Air Ministr ysaid/ British fighter planes attacking objectives in Belgium and northern France destroyed one German bomber.

Back at their stations after the raids on Poissy and Le Havre, the Canadians reported their bombs blasted debris high into the air and started fires. They said the assault on the Matford plant was not as heavy as the early-March attack on the Renault plant, in suburban Paris.

Johnny Fauquier, Ottawa bush flier making his first flight since being promoted to wing commander and given charge of a Canadian Wellington bomber squadron, said he and his squadron scored direct hits on the Matford plant.

PO. F. E. Taylor of Gull Lake, Sask., captain of one of the Wellingtons, also reported a direct hit. PO. Tom Jones of Stratford, Ont., observer in a machine flown by PO. Bill Swetman of Kapuskasing, Ont., said he could feel the blast of his plane's bombs which hit one side of the factory.

3rd Fire, 15 Days Spurs Inquiry

HAMILTON, Ont., April 2 (CP)—Officials from the Ontario Fire Marshall's Department today began investigating Hamilton's third major fire in 15 days after damage estimated at more than $100,000 was caused last night to a building at John and Cannon streets, in downtown Hamilton, owned by the John Milne estate. It housed several manufacturing firms.

Fire Chief Kenneth Cassel was unable to suggest the cause of this fire or one which caused damage in the neighborhood of $150,000 to a building on nearby York street Monday.

The latest fire brings to more than $300,000 the fortnight's fire loss and as in the first two firemen were faced with fighting flames which had shot through the roof before the apparatus could reach the scene. The

Bengal Chief Sedition Spot Of India

Rebels In Province Over Bay From Burma Feared Likely To Abet Jan Invasion

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Some hope that India might still be persuaded to accept the offer of Dominion status was injected into the crisis today by British envoy Sir Stafford Cripps who announced in New Delhi that "with good will we may be able to solve the difficulties."

In view of the danger of failure to reach agreement many are asking what is likely to happen if that unhappy position is reached. Well, the answer to that is difficult, but there are some things which stand out starkly. For instance:

Since the Indian Nationalists have made co-operation with Britain in the war effort dependent on solution of their claim for independence, they presumably would return to passive resistance. This would create a grave weakness in one of the most important Allied bases.

Non-co-operation would cut down the number of native troops available to Britain to stand off invasion. Moreover, it might affect the war industries—and India is one of the great and strategically-situated arsenals of the United Nations.

All this naturally would encourage the Japanese to try invasion of India, and they need mightily little encouragement. Should they be successful it would create the possibility of a junction between them and Hitler in the Middle-East—a nasty situation for the Allies.

In short, it would represent a setback of unpredictable proportions to the Allies, and a corresponding victory for the Axis.

My observation is that the most troublesome spot is in Bengal province, of which the great metropolis of Calcutta is the capital. Here lies most of the sedition which is to be found in India. It is unfortunate that Bengal is just across the bay from Burma, where the Japs are continuing their successes, since it is likely that Bengal would be the place they would try to land if they should attempt invasion. They naturally would hope that they would encounter slight resistance from the natives, and might even get help.

Another danger would be along the northwest frontier, up by the Khyber Pass, from the wild tribesmen. The Nazis have been working on these warriors, who are all set to take advantage of any trouble in India for an attack on the frontier settlements.

A brighter side is presented by the native princes, whose peoples constitute close to a quarter of India's population, as they might be expected to stand solidly with Britain. One also would expect the Sikhs, the great warrior race, to stand by Britain. They total 4,335,000.

That Bowmanville Camp

Gets Canucks Hun Care, Hepburn Raps Critics

TORONTO, April 2 — (CP). — Use of the Boys' Training School at Bowmanville for German officer prisoners assures "decent and merciful" treatment for Canadian prisoners held by Germany, Premier Hepburn said in his budget speech in the Ontario Legislature today. The Premier said his Government had been severely criticized for permitting the Germans to occupy the buildings.

"It was done at the urgent request of Ottawa backed by the assurance of the Swiss Government mediator that the German Government would be entirely satisfied with Bowmanville and would reciprocate by according like treatment and accommodation for our fellow Canadians, who by the fortunes of war are now confined in German prison camps," said the Premier. The German Government, he said, had objected to the officers being maintained in "the wilds of Northern Ontario."

"I will leave it to the mothers of our soldier boys to find a name which will adequately describe those critics, who, while enjoying all the comforts of Canadian home life would retain those comforts at the expense of our gallant airmen now shut up as Hitler's prisoners," declared Mr. Hepburn.

300 U-BOATS TO BE LET LOOSE ON SHIPPING IN ATLANTIC OCEAN

28 Destroyed But Rate Said Too Low

Not Cutting Ship Toll; Salvage Shows Hun On Mass Output

By ROY G. BLACK
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 2 —(AP)— The United States anti-submarine campaign is being stepped up rapidly to meet an expected all-out summer drive by 300 to 400 U-boats, reliable sources said today.

The navy announced yesterday that 28 Axis submarines had been sunk or presumed sunk by U.S. forces thus far. Naval observers said, however, the rate of destruction is still too low to check the German drive. They gave this picture of the situation:—

"Germany had at least 120 ocean-going submarines before Dec. 7 and 180 more building for service by mid-summer. New evidence indicates this figure is ultra-conservative, and salvaged parts of destroyed submarines show the Germans have developed rapid methods of construction.

Although Germany has suffered heavy U-boat casualties thus far, the rate of sinking has not slowed the present U-boat campaign and would be dubious effectiveness against a more intense drive.

Even so, the Germans have failed to divert U.S. naval strength from more vital war-fronts to form convoys in American waters—the second line in the ocean battle. The number of merchant craft sunk off the Atlantic and Caribbean coasts is approaching the 80 mark, but this rate might prove far from crippling in view of the tremendous ship-building program and development of land transportation facilities to bear some of the load.

New Ideas Coming

The United States is making large increases in patrol forces, particularly in the air, and is developing new methods of locating and destroying U-boats. Placing army planes on the patrol under direct command of the navy has stimulated the submarine hunt. Further large increases in the patrol await only delivery of anti-submarine craft and the training of crews.

Naval observers emphasized that while the battle of the American coast is far from won, it is also far

Army Routine Is Outlined

By P.W.R.'s Reporter

Regimental Sergeant Major Andrew Jackson of the Prince of Wales Rangers interviewed the first in each of several ranks of N.C.O.'s to join the Rangers in a broadcast heard last night over CHEX. From a sergeant down to private were heard giving their opinions of the now active P.W.R.'s and a second highlight of the broadcast was the wit of the R.S.M.

Sergeant Harry Walsh told the air audience he was a member of the regimental reserve battalion for two years and that he likes being an N.C.O. much better in the active rather than the reserve army. He outlined the day's routine at the armoury now and stated there was soon to be softball organized in the regiment.

Corporal Geddes Harper described briefly a trip to the training centre for dental inspection; Lance-Corporal Barrett told of the "Y" classes and physical training; Pte. E. F. Francis told the air audience that the sergeant major was not aware of all the things being said behind his back. He was one of the first men of the Rangers' reserve battalion to answer his country's call.

Heavy damage was suffered by the M & Y Manufacturing Co., an electric plating industry, and other firms occupying the building. The Times Print Co., counted severe damage from smoke, fire and water. Other firms affected were: Clark and McMaster, Carbide Tool Company, Acme Calk and Tool Co., Canadian Composition Company and the John Milne estate.

Chief Cassel said the fire—like the one Monday—had made such headway by the time the equipment arrived that it was impossible to state the origin of the fires or the cause.

Trooper Jenkins said his youthful prisoner admitted he had shot Barber because "he had something against him" and then had killed Potter for fear the latter might identify him.

The confession went on to say that Roy Thorpe, 56, a neighbor, was then seized and his car commandeered, Perkins said. Thorpe was found with Piccone and released when police found the killer.

The third man to die, McKenzie, was shot on his farm yesterday afternoon because he had seen the licence number of the automobile, Perkins said the young man had told him.

Residents of shore towns said one ship went down yesterday morning west northwest of Maaseskjaer Lighthouse. Another was said to have sunk at noon.

Fishermen said a third ship was seen burning fiercely, surrounded by German warships and armed trawlers. She had a gaping hole aft of her engine room and flames were shooting from her hold.

The fishermen expressed the belief that she had been set afire by her crew to keep the ship out of German hands.

Lifeboats stocked with provisions but without occupants were seen drifting.

The Social Demokraten said that on the ships sent to the bottom there probably had been considerable loss of life.

(A Vichy report reaching London said gunfire off the Swedish coast began about 2 or 3 a.m. yesterday and lasted to about noon. It quoted Swedish fishermen as saying they saw lifeboats filled with survivors from sunken ships.)

A 500-Mile Race.

The nearest landfall across the North Sea would be Aberdeen, about 500 miles from Goteburg, and the fugitive ships would be in constant danger of discovery by patrolling German air and naval forces virtually until they were berthed in the Scottish port.

Even before reaching the open sea for the final 30-mile dash to join Britain's merchant marine, they would have to thread their way through the mined and closely-patrolled Skagerrak. It separates the German-held coasts of Norway and Denmark, a perilous passage of about 200 miles from Goteborg, across the top of the Kattegat from northernmost Denmark.

The 10 Norwegian ships were freed from an order of arrest by a Swedish Supreme Court decision on March 17.

The ships, laid up in Goteborg, were requisitioned by the Norwegian Government before its flight to England and later were chartered by British maritime interests. The court ruled that the charters were legal and the ships—valued at about $25,000,000—were entitled to clearance at any time.

Flt. Sgts. W. D. Scott of Yorkton, Sask., and D. H. Thompson, Toronto, shared the controls of a fifth bomber, the observer in which was Flt. Sgt. W. R. Bandeen, Winnipeg.

Communications in west and northwest Germany also were attacked by the R.A.F.

First reports of the night operations against Germany indicated the attack was on a large scale.

The raids were the first the R.A.F.'s big bomber squadrons were able to make in force since the German Baltic port of Luebeck was blasted last Saturday night.

British fighter-bombers also were active last night, attacked airfields, a factory and railway centres in France and Belgium, the air ministry said.

A Czech pilot shot down one Junkers 88 and damaged another as they were taking off from a German-occupied airdrome on the continent, it said.

Authoritative British sources saw these attacks as new blows in the Battle of Russia since they were directed primarily against railway lines which carry munitions from the Ruhr to the Eastern Front and against a truck-making factory, eight miles outside Paris.

The gross capital receipts for 1942-43 are forecast at $31,303,365 and the gross capital payments at $18,450,286.

Mr. Hepburn's report for the fiscal year just ended was based on 10 months actual and two months estimated.

A reduction of $4,159,968 in the gross provincial debt was reported along with an increase of $3,722,488 in the funded debt, now at $616,306,686, but the premier could give no details in the change of the net

ONTARIO BUDGETS EXTRA CA SH FOD EDUCATION

TORONTO, April 2—(CP).—Gross ordinary revenues of Ontario Government departments in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1942 (10 months actual, two months estimated) compared with estimates for the same year and with estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1943, as presented today in the Ontario Legislature by Premier Hepburn:

	1941-42 Revenues	1941-42 Estimates	1942-43 Estimates
Agriculture	$300,860	$291,153	$250,337
Attorney-General	1,021,070	1,021,070	1,021,070

Insurance	214,390	210,000	200,000
Labor	100,264	80,000	80,000
Lands and Forests	5,000,000	5,000,000	4,000,000
Legislation	12,872	10,000	9,700

debts until, he said, the public accounts are brought down in the legislature.

The $13,329,023 surplus Mr. Hepburn reported before taking in capital expenditure and revenue was obtained mainly through receipts of $13,650,000 from the Liquor Control Board and $37,533,000 from the Highways Department, for which $12,000,000 and $36,100,000 had been estimated, respectively.

Corporation taxes and income taxes, both of which have been turned over to the Federal Government for a basic subsidy of $28,960,000, brought in $26,598,742, and the Federal Government made an immediate payment to bring this figure up to the amount of what will be paid annually.

No New Money Demands.

Mr. Hepburn made no reference to this transfer of taxing powers, but in his concluding remarks said, "We shall not seek new money nor intrude upon the borrowing fields which should be reserved for the Dominion Government in wartime."

He praised "the patriotism and spirit of self-sacrifice" of the people of Ontario, expressed confidence that "unprecedented world events will arouse the people of Ontario to the appalling dangers which threaten their homes and their altars," and concluded:

"My earnest hope is that when the time of testing comes, even though the price may be in terms of human lives, Ontario citizens will not be found wanting but rather will prove themselves worthy of the rock from which they are hewn."

Announcing continuation of the cheese and hog bonuses, Mr. Hepburn said the former had cost the province $2,086,474, but he considered both bonus payments "a good investment on the part of Old Man Ontario in Canada's war effort."

The Premier did not break down the $14,210,252 estimated expenditure for the Department of Education, but he emphasized the importance of the appropriation for technical education. Men returned from overseas may have to be retrained and those whose training was interrupted by the war may have opportunities of completing it.

The Premier promised continued efforts to maintain the health of the citizens of the Province and control communicable diseases, and said provision was made for the assurance of medical services to old age pensions, relief recipients and those dependent on mothers' allowances.

Record From Mines

He announced an all-time record mineral production valued at $270,000,000, and forecast this would be surpassed this year. Particular emphasis was being placed on the examination of deposits of possible war materials, such as in the copper-bearing territory north of Massey on the north shore of Lake Huron and for manganese near Batchawana Bay on Lake Superior.

The Premier, noting further improvement in the financial position of Ontario municipalities, announced that municipalities' gross debenture debt was reduced by $12,001,000 to $353,575,000, compared with $483,952,000 at the end of 1934, when Mr. Hepburn's administration was first elected.

The estimated expenditure for the Department of Highways was set at $12,157,800, compared with $17,128,905 in the preceding years, but of the department's program Mr. Hepburn said, "One can look backwards with a much greater degree of accuracy than forwards." No new construction was announced.

He called for a halt to all pleasure driving that wasted gasoline. Oil and tires "in order to make possible the complete movement of basic productions and war materials."

The province turned over 77 more Ontario-owned buildings rent-free to the Department of National Defence for the duration in 1941, making a total of 133 buildinps loaned to the Federal Government, and the policy of making only obsolutely necessary repairs to provincial buildings will be continued, Mr. Hepburn said.

Ministers Protest

BRANTFORD, Ont., April 2 (CP) —Ministers of the Independent Baptist Churches of the Brantford, Hamilton and London districts, meeting at Guelph this week, passed a resolution protesting against what they termed the "unfair rationing of gasoline."

The resolution, which has been forwarded to the oil controller, read:

"We, the Hamilton, Brantford and London Districts' Ministers of the Independent Baptist Churches, do hereby protest the unfair rationing of gasoline which permits Christian Science practitioners to obtain a larger quota of units than regularly ordained ministers of the gospel."

BC Commanders Rallying With Ralston

VICTORIA, April 2 (CP)—Commanders of active service units of British Columbia's lower coastal area and Vancouver Island gather round the conference table today with Defence Minister Ralston to give their views and needs on Canada's Pacific defence as regards their various commands.

Col. Ralston arrived here last night after inspecting military establishments at Nanaimo, 80 miles north of here on Vancouver Island.

In an interview he said compulsory service would be instituted for reserve army units "when and if it is considered necessary."

He was replying to a question if he considered such compulsion necessary in view of slow response to recruiting appeals. He said:

"You say there is talk of invasion, and yet men here will not join the reserve units. What's the matter with them? Don't they want to help themselves? There will likely be compulsory service when and if it is considered necessary."

The commanders today meet the Dominion's defence chief, at his express invitation, "to take their hair down and to lay before us all their problems and otherwise to discuss the general needs of their respective commands."

Around the table will be officers, familiar with tactical problems peculiar to this coast, who will lead western Canada's defence forces into battle in case of attack on the Pacific.

Col. Ralston, who was preceded here from Nanaimo by Air Minister Power, said he had "only just begun" his inspection, and added it was his job "to see that things are in, or put in, the best shape possible."

Otherwise neither Col. Ralston nor Maj. Power had any comment on their tour of Pacific defences which started at Prince Rupert, B.C. Monday.

After inspecting establishments here, the two cabinet ministers plan to fly to Vancouver Friday.

POLITICS ARE OUT IN SECURING WAR INDUSTRY COBOURG TOLD

Earle Turner Home To Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, April 2. — (ENS). — Sergt. Earle Turner is the second local man to return to Canada from overseas and when he greeted his wife and members of his family here their surprise was somewhat lessened by the fact they had received a telephone call from him shortly after he landed. Sergt. Turner enlisted as a private in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and has been in England for more than two years. He returned with other personnel who have been on duty in England, and after a few weeks of well-deserved furlough he will be assigned to instructional duties in an advanced training centre. He was one of the contingent of Canadian troops to reach France before the armistice, but returned to England without actually coming into contact with the enemy there. In his opinion it would be next to impossible for the Germans to stage a successful invasion of England now, and his impression of the country left no doubt that the war effort over there was an all-out one.

Port Hope Lions Plan To Aid Minesweeper

PORT HOPE, April 2.—(ENS)—The weekly meeting of the Port Hope Safety Club, sponsored by the Lions Club, was held on Wednesday night at 7:30 with a very large attendance.

Bill Sneyd, the president, had charge of the meeting and introduced Mrs. G. V. Strong, convener of the supplies committee for the H.M.C.S., Port Hope minesweeper.

Mrs. Strong in her very able way explained to the club members all about the minesweeper, its equipment, crew and living quarters and how very essential these vessels are to the navy and the important part they play in clearing the ocean lanes so that troops and supplies can be safely transported to Great Britain.

Mrs. Strong also explained the adopting of a sailor and what it meant in keeping a ditty bag filled and it was decided by the club to adopt its own sailor and fill a ditty bag by the Safety Club of Port Hope.

At this time Bill Datsko thanked Mrs. Strong for coming to the club after which Bill Sneyd moved the meeting adjourn and that there would not be a meeting of the club next week on account of Easter holidays.

Cobourg Council Meets Federal Member

COBOURG, April 2—(ENS). — There was no political allocation of war industries, stated W. A. Fraser, M.P. for Northumberland County, at a meeting with the mayor and town council Wednesday afternoon The meeting had been called for the purpose of finding out why Cobourg didn't have any war industries. Mr. Fraser pointed out that what a town had to offer in the way of available buildings, management and technical workmen, combined to influence the government in establishing war industries. While Cobourg was without a war industry, it would be in a much better position when the war was over than the town which would have the bottom fall out of things when its war factories closed down. With steadily decreasing debentures, Cobourg was in good shape, he said.

Object of Meeting

Explaining the object of the meeting to Mr. Fraser, Reeve Roy Dodge said that for some time the council had felt that Cobourg should have more industries as a result of the war. A war industry or an air school located in the town or near the town, was very desirable, he said. He asked Mr. Fraser if he could place the town in contact with the proper war board which would result in Cobourg getting a war industry. Reeve Dodge said further, that two men from another town had told him that their own experience that the way to get a war industry was to contact the war boards through the local member.

Councillor Joe Delanty informed Mr. Fraser that he understood that politics had resulted in the government choosing Pickering as a factory site instead of Oshawa.

Mr. Fraser replied that to his knowledge no political pressure had been brought to bear in connection with the Pickering plant. It was located by a war location board for reasons of location, terrain and its proximity to both Oshawa and Toronto sources of labor. It was located solely for physical reasons, not political, Mr. Fraser declared.

"They tell us that Cobourg lacks the labor and the housing accommodation for a war industry, yet what about Pickering—they lacked the same things, but still got a factory," Councillor Joe Delanty pointed out.

"Mr. Moore got the factory for Pickering. He was the one who put the pressure on, and they got the factory. People come from Cobourg and Port Hope to work at Pickering," declared Councillor Bob Love.

"You have my answer as to that. It is obvious that there is no use continuing the discussion of that. You have my answer that politics had nothing to do with it," replied Mr. Fraser.

Councillor Delanty referred to the air school at Picton.

"The last time you were here you said that Cobourg was too close to Trenton to get an air field. How did Picton, which is close enough to Trenton, get it then?" asked Councillor Delanty.

"The R.C.A.F. surveyed around Brighton but Picton was chosen for physical reasons not because of politics. East of Cobourg was turned down because it was too close to the highway and railways," answered Mr. Fraser.

"The highway runs through at Trenton."—"Yes, but that is regarded as a drawback and the highway is going to be swung north.

"What is wrong with Cobourg?" asked Councillor Love.

"Nothing," replied Mr. Fraser.

"What have you done for Cobourg?"—"I have never relinquished my co-operation with Cobourg."

"We are in as good a position as any town along the line, yet we get nothing," observed Councillor Delanty.

Vacant Buildings

Reeve Dodge pointed out that Cobourg had some vacant buildings and Mayor Jack Burnet interjected with the information that Mr. Fraser had been given the list of buildings and dimensions at his request.

"The town of Cobourg has given me anxiety for some years over industries. So also have Brighton and Campbellford. We should eliminate any feeling of lack of co-operation between the town of Cobourg and myself. For some years I received adverse publicity from officials of the town indicating that some doubt was held as to the sincerity of my efforts. I assure you that I have done my utmost and we can't discuss this matter on a basis of facts and facts alone, while this feeling exists. Can anyone here say that I have failed to co-operate at any time that I have been asked?" said Mr. Fraser.

"The facts are," he continued, "that the government has been trying to take advantage of buildings already available in connection with its air training program. The availability of materials may change the situation but just what the future holds in that regard I cannot say. When your mayor phoned me about Cobourg's chances of getting a synthetic rubber plant in Cobourg, I was already in conference with one of the officials of a plant and, as you are now aware, we were told that such plants would have to be located near the oil refineries as their base of supply. There is nothing wrong with Cobourg but it must be realized that industries are procured in two ways. There is the kind which is developed internally such as that of the McLaughlin's in Oshawa and the industry which is located at a certain place because of advantages which the owners taks into consideration in choosing the site."

"As far as government industries are concerned," Mr Fraser went on, "the board decided on a location without any political pressure being brought to bear."

"Will I laugh now?" interjected Councillor Love.

"I am stating a fact," replied Mr. Fraser.

"Can you gain us contact with some board before which we can lay our cards on the table?" asked Reeve Dodge. "Anything you want in that regard I will do."

Harry McGuire, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, and a veteran councillor of past years, referred to the time when Cobourg was trying to get an aluminum factory. He declared that Mr. Fraser co-operated all the way.

"Mr. Fraser wasn't called in until the dying minutes of that factory deal," said Councillor Love

"I came into the matter as soon as I was called," observed Mr. Fraser.

"I agree with you there. But the fact remains that your co-operation wasn't asked until the dying minutes of the transaction. I am not saying that you didn't do all you could," replied Councillor Love.

Aluminum Factory.

Mr. Fraser went on to say that the aluminum factory located where its owners wanted to locate. He informed the council that he had repeatedly placed Cobourg's case before the government heads in his efforts to get the town a war industry. The attitude of the government was that if a town or a city could supply the government with a plant and the management, or the management alone, the government would put it to work. There were also cases where the government assisted in establishing industries in certain locations which were chosen only for the physical reasons found suitable. Every file on Cobourg was in the hands of the government but industries couldn't be grabbed. He said that he had tried to get the Bata Shoe Co. in Northumberland and had gone over the county carefully with Mr. Bata but the site which the company finally chose was one which best suited their requirements.

"I will tell you gentlemen that I would give a great deal to get a factory for Cobourg It would take a great load off my shoulders," declared Mr Fraser. "There will be hundreds of factories in Canada closed down within the next two years because of shortage of materials. All your factories in Cobourg are engaged in war work. If you had the money and the organization in Cobourg to expand your factories for war work, you would have something to sell to Ottawa."

"As I see it," stated Mayor Burnet, "there is no use of a delegation going to Ottawa and saying 'we want a factory' unless we had something to offer of a definite nature."

The government did not put up the money to finance industry. They have put government owned machinery in factories and where factory extensions were made by the owners, the government allowed them credit for depreciation.

"As a corporation, we have nothing to offer and our only hope is in the government supplying us with a plant and management," suggested Reeve Dodge.

"That is substantially true," replied Mr. Fraser. Mr. Fraser added in reply to a further question, that if a local industry wanted to take advantage of war work and were able to supply the technical skill and the men, the government would enable them to expand and write it off against their contract.

Cobourg was a well-balanced community, Mr. Fraser pointed out, and whereas everything would crash in the town which lived off its war industries, once the war was over, the town of Cobourg would not be so situated.

"Your industries are well-balanced, your debenture debt is steadily going down, and you have no unemployment problem. Cobourg from a business standpoint is a mighty stable proposition," he said.

Further discussion was limited to a rehash of some of the points which had been discussed before, and the meeting wound up with the mayor and council expressing complete accord with Mr. Fraser's explanations. Even Councillor Love expressed his satisfaction with Mr. Fraser's clarification of the situation.

In Search Of Sanctuary From Jap Bombers

An adult native shepherds a little flock of young Filipinos as they flee from the vicinity of Cavite, great U.S. naval base in the Philippines, after the Japs had bombed it on December 10. U.S. forces evacuated the base before the Japs took Manila, removing all portable equipment and supplies and destroying all installations that might be of use to the enemy. The material salvaged from Cavite has since been used to good purpose by the gallant men of Bataan and the fortress of Corregidor.

Mission Fields Hard Hit By March Of War

PORT HOPE, April 2—(ENS). — At a well-attended supper meeting, held on Wednesday night, April 1, in the United Church Sunday school room, Rev. Jesse Arnup, D.D., was the guest speaker.

At this meeting, which was attended by over fifty, were the members of the official board with their wives, the board of trustees and their wives, and all the heads of the church organizations, including the Bible Class teachers. The supper was provided by Group No. 4, in charge of Mrs. Dear, which realized over $20.00.

Rev. Gordon, after the banquet, made a short address, introducing the speaker, Dr. Arnup, from the United Church Mission Board headquarters in Toronto. Dr. Arnup, who is widely travelled in United Church circles around the world, gave a most interesting address on mission conditions in West China, Japan and India at the present time.

As late as the winter of 1939 Dr. Arnup was in West China, where at the present time there are still missionaries at work, with five United Church missionaries in South China. These missionaries even in Japan are holding to their posts but much of the mission work in the war torn territories is practically stopped for the present time.

Although the mission churches, schools, colleges and hospitals have suffered terrific bombings, none of the misisonaries have as yet been injured. Dr. Arnup thinks we have great cause for thanksgiving that our missionaries are still safe and that great opportunities have opened up to our missionaries due to the war.

In the 13 colleges in China there were six thousand students, while at the present time there are nine thousand, so thus is China in educating her population preparing for great days of reconstruction after the war.

Dr. C. B. Kelly, former classmate of Dr. Arnup, moved a vote of thanks on behalf of those present and mentioned the happy times they had spent together both in college and on the mission fields of China.

Mr. F. W. Galbraith brought the evening to a close with prayer.

Young's Point News

All three churches on Sunday at Young's Point held special National Day of Prayer, Rev. G. F. Kelly at the United Church, Father Masterson at St. Mary's, and Captain Bredin of the Church Army at St. Aidan's.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Brooks, Miss F. McDermid and Claire Brooks, all of Toronto, also Miss Helen Brooks of Peterborough spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Brooks.

Plea For Planes

CHUNGKING, China, April 2 — (AP).—With Chinese troops fiercely battling Japanese forces in the Toungoo area, the Chungking press appealed to the Allies today to send air reinforcements to Burma immediately to support Chiang Kai-Shek's armies.

The newspapers said lack of adequate plane strength had caused numerous Allied reverses since the Pacific war began.

Ease Restrictions In Club Fish Grounds

TORONTO, April 2 (CP).—Hunters and fishermen will be able to travel over restricted waters of private clubs to their destination without being liable to prosecution under an amendment to the Game and Fisheries Act which Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon is to introduce into the Ontario legislature shortly. Notice of motion appeared on the order paper today.

Mr. Nixon said that in Essex and Kent, particularly where private clubs have monopoly rights on certain creeks, there have been cases of respectable citizens of the district being prosecuted and fined for trespassing while enroute to the public hunting or fishing spots.

The person using the private waterways must keep his gun or rod covered while making the trip, the amendment says.

Another amendment prohibits a tourist from taking out of the Province more than the number of fish allowed to be caught per day.

The catch of black bass per day is limited to six; of maskinonge to two; yellow pickerel and pike eight; perch 25 and lake and rainbow trout five.

Break For Troops

BOSTON, April 2—(AP).—Four railroads operating in New England to-day began a policy of making a 10 per cent. reduction in the prices for meals served on trains to members of the United States, Canadian and British armed forces. The reduction will apply only to individual orders of food, and such beverages as coffee, tea, milk and chocolate, amounting to 50 cents or more. The reductions will not apply to cigarettes, cigars or bottled beverages.

Cobourg Utilities Commission Reports Surplus Of $9,157

COBOURG, April 2—(ENS).—Annual auditor's report for Cobourg Public Utilities system reveals a net working surplus of over $33,000 in the whole system. The electric profit for 1941 was $6,385.42 and the water profit was $2,772. Assets of the electric department totalled $32,110, made up of cash, $15,323; accounts receivable, $3,422; owed by water department, $4,529; stores inventory, $3,836, and investments in Victory Bonds, $5,000. In the current liabilities the total is $12,189, leaving a net surplus of $19,921. Active assets of the water department totalled $18,573, and current liabilities totalled $5,102, or a net surplus of $13,471.

The net operating profit in the electric department for 1941 was $2,698.16, and the "13th" power bill credit for last year of $3,687.26, brought the total up to $6,385.42, about $500 less than in the previous year. Net operating profit in the water department last year was $2,772.22, an increase over 1940.

The debenture debt has been reduced from $105,993 to $68,127 for the electrical department and the water department debentures has been reduced from $235,655 to $154,553. The total annual debenture payments are $17,125.93 for the water department and $7,285.49 for the electric.

Gas Shortage To Stimulate Golf

PORT HOPE, April 2—(ENS). — The annual meeting of the Port Hope Golf and Country Club was held Tuesday night in the Library Hall, with a good number present.

After thorough discussion on the part of the shareholders and club members it was decided to carry on the club again this year in the usual manner. All directors were returned and it is thought with the gas rationing coming into force that the members will not be leaving town as frequently and that the golf course will be used more than ever.

It was suggested that each member bring in one new member and that the course would shortly be ready for use.

Surprise Blackout

BOSTON, April 2— (AP).— A "surprise" blackout, backed by a law authorizing fines or even jail for violations, was scheduled for last night in Boston and 46 surrounding cities and towns—an area of 600 square miles populated by approximately 1,750,000 persons.

Let Us Lead Ourselves

Mr. Donald Gordon is that rarest of Canadian creatures, an official spokesman who can be serious without being lugubrious. By this time every citizen who is genuinely concerned with Canada's part in this war has read and pondered his address to the Canadian Club at the beginning of this week and from that finely organized and well-expressed utterance one message shines like a beacon; we must stop whining for leadership from the Government and we must accept the responsibility for leading ourselves.

Naturally we shall not accept blundering and inadequate Governmental action. But let us be sure, before we waste precious time in abusing the Government, that its action has, in truth, been blundering and inadequate. What the existing Government has done in an attempt to preserve Canadian unity—an attempt which appears to be on the road to success—has brought about a disproportionate amount of recrimination, and this recrimination has distracted public attention from the many instances of daring action by which the Government is meeting the threat to our country. Chief among these is the adoption of the price-ceiling, a bold stroke to prevent inflation and its attendant evils. The price-ceiling is working; it is not working easily or smoothy, but it is working. We must see that it continues to work, and our task in so doing will become harder with every month that passes.

In the conclusion of his speech Mr. Gordon put the responsibility for a great part of Canada's future war effort squarely upon the shoulders of Canadian business. The bearing of responsibility is one of the duties of citizens and organizations in democratic countries. It has been shown, time and time again, that in battle free men fighting for their freedom will be victorious over regimented nations who are fighting only for the right to regiment others. But can free men fight so well in the counting-houses and exchanges? That is what Mr. Gordon wants to know and that is the question which Canadian business will have to answer in deeds, and not in fulsome promises of co-operation.

Democracy and capitalism assure the individual of the highest return for his efforts, and we in this country, since our Confederation, have not failed to take every advantage of that promise. Democracy also demands that sacrifices for the public good must be voluntary. Despite the heavy taxes now prevailing here we have experienced only a slight measure of coercion. Our sacrifice must be made voluntarily, and that sacrifice will be a great one; it may be that we shall have to give up everything we have save freedom. Are we going to do it?

Of course we are! Have we not heard a thousand pledges to that effect? But have we seen action in accordance with those pledges? Yes; we have seen some, but not nearly enough. We have waited too long for someone to tell us what to do; we have cried for leadership. Now Mr. Gordon shows us where we must look for that leadership; we must look for it in ourselves. We have tasted the sweets of Democracy in the past, and now we must eat the bitter, but still wholesome fruit; we have explored Democracy's pleasant paths of self-indulgence; now we must tread the thornier way of self-discipline. No one is going to force us to make the sacrifices necessary for victory; we have been shown what we must do, and now it is up to us to do it.

"Maximum production, regardless of immediate or future advantage" is the watchword. Already a great many of those interests which are sometimes described as Big Business have set to work in accordance with that plan. But what about Middle-Sized Business? Is it doing its part? Is Middle-Sized Business really awake?

"Our war effort in Canada, to date, has been magnificent — we have every right to feel very proud of the tremendous job we have done and the splendid contribution we have made," says Mr. Gordon. But the going will be tougher from now, and when we want leadership, let us not strain our eyes toward Ottawa, let us look within. Only there will we find the sort of leadership which will save a Democracy; only there will we find the order, uncompromising and unsugared, to get on with the job.

War Work For Women

The Government's announcement that it will use women in war industries has brought a sudden flood of opinion from women themselves, overwhelmingly in favor of the plan. There are problems in this, connection, however, which have already been debated and it would probably be wiser to discontinue discussion of them until the Government says exactly what it is going to do.

For instance, one spokesman for a prominent women's organization has expressed the hope that women with small children will not be conscripted for labor. We think it unlikely that the Government contemplates any such action. For a time at least single women, widows and women whose families are grown up will supply an enormous field for selection. The disruption of home life is no part of the Government's plan and the conscription of women with small children would merely solve one problem by creating another.

We will be surprised if the Government is not forced to adopt strict measures to keep these very women from volunteering for industrial service. The current notion of woman as a homemaker and mother does not agree with the facts. Many women are homemakers and mothers now who would welcome the opportunity to escape that often drudging and ill-repaid work in order to share the activity and communal life of the munitions factory. Those who remember the situation in the last war will testify to the truth of this. The idea that all women are naturally homemakers and mothers is one which died with the dodo. But children must be cared for and their mothers are the proper people to care for them in most cases, and so the Government will have to repress the ardor of those among them who are eager for a change of occupation. One of the hardest forms of war work is that which consists of sticking to your peace-time job.

Many women whose families have grown up, however, will find a new interest and a new youth in industrial service. It is the tragedy of many women that, once their families have grown beyond their immediate care, they are on the shelf and suffer from a feeling of not being needed. They are under fifty, and yet they have little to do with their abundant and often youthful energies. It is commonly the case that a woman of this type can outwork a girl less than half her age. To be in the service of their country, engaged in a vital occupation, will bring new life to such women as these.

The conscription of women will probably have a marked effect upon the morale of this Dominion, for busy women make a busy world. Despite the appeals of the Government, both directly through official announcements and indirectly through the press, the radio and the screen, the greater part of Canada's population is in the grip of an inertia as deadly as that which bound the Sleeping Princess. We must awake, and we must realize now that it is ourselves, and not the Government nor any other power which must do the awakening. An army of women in the industrial service will do much to drive the torpor from our limbs and the sand from our eyes.

Consider The Possibilities

We have no special esteem for newspaper prophets who attempt to forecast the moves of our enemies. Quite simply, it is impossible for a journalist, however perspicacious and well-informed he may be, to say what the Germans or the Japanese are going to do next with certainty. He knows what Italy will do, of course; Italy will do as she is told, but there is no glory to be gained by publicising this discovery for everybody knows it already. Having admitted, therefore, that our guess is no better than Hans Kaltenborn's or Dorothy Thompson's, let us consider what Hitler may do in the near future. There are three main possibilities.

Hitler's expected offensive in Russia may not come off at all. He has shifted its advertised time from Spring to Summer, and it is quite likely that by Summer he will be so busy elsewhere that all but the elephants in the Berlin Zoo will have forgotten that he ever mentioned it. Where will he strike?

He has been worrying Sweden lately, and it is just possible that he might attempt a Blitzkrieg of that country in order to strengthen his Norwegian position. But Sweden, although she would be beaten in the end, could put up a strong fight, and Hitler is not looking for strong fights which will bring small gains. He can get most of what he wants from Sweden without fighting her.

He might make a dash for the Caucasus in an attempt to grab the oil there, but such a move would mean strengthening the rest of the 1,700-mile Russian line. Gains in the Caucasus would be of little advantage if meanwhile Russia made an end-run and forced a path into Germany.

The most likely thing is that he will make for the Near East, and here three paths are theoretically possible to him: (1) he might make a drive along the northern Libyan shore into Egypt, engaging the Imperial forces at Cairo and Suez; (2) he might try to break through Turkey toward Iran and India, hoping to meet the Japanese in that quarter; (3) he might jump from the island of Cyprus to Syria and thence through Iraq to India. Hitler has made great play with his intention of girdling the globe to meet his little yellow Aryan friends; if he attempted this and failed his position would be desperate.

The Near East looks like the next trouble-spot. The Axis has been quiet in Libya for some time, but Rommel's men have been strongly reinforced and Rommel himself was at a recent meeting of the German High Command, his first taste of this especial glory. A campaign in Turkey would be very costly, for the Turks have a fine army, though it is not as well-equipped in some respects as could be wished. The North African push seems more likely. But this opinion is formed merely from a consideration of possibilities as they appear from a distance, makes no claim to validity and is no better than anybody's guess. One thing is sure, however; Hitler will find his next campaign a bitter one, for his losses have been great and belief in his luck is on the wane. Should he fail in his next move, whatever it may be, his end will not be deferred for long.

Our Merchant Navy

Not long ago we wrote in these columns in praise of the Royal Canadian Navy, which has grown enormously since the outbreak of war and which has done magnificent work, chiefly in the sphere of convoy duty. Our Navy needs more men, and so does our Merchant Marine, the service which actually carries the goods. The merchant service is expanding rapidly and if we are to send Britain our ever-increasing supplies of munitions and necessary food, it must have more sailors.

The Merchant Service needs men of every kind; it needs navigating officers who have foreign-going certificates as masters, first and second mates, and it needs boatswains, carpenters, A.B.'s and ordinary seamen, donkeymen, oilers, greasers, firemen and cooks. The service is a good one, and men who join it are assured of pensions in case of disability, and care for their dependents if they should lose their lives at sea. They are paid if they are detained or captured by the enemy and they are compensated if they lose their kit as a result of enemy action.

We should not urge these facts upon the public at a time when a local unit is busily recruiting for the Army, if we were not sure that nothing could induce a sailor to join land fighting forces. But there may be seamen now engaged in civilian pursuits who will go to sea once again, now that they are so badly needed, in this service which provides so many attractions.

NOTE AND COMMENT

There are more species of animals extinct that there are in existence, says a scientist. This is true of ideas, too, but the dead ones simply won't go out of circulation.

Police officers in the Women's Auxiliary Air Force have to be moderate drinkers, as it is thought that they can carry out their duties more efficiently if they are able to mix with others who drink. It is a relief to know that there are some jobs for which total abstinence is not a requisite.

ABOUT FACE

This is no time to let age have its way,
To sit serene and idle in the sun
And watch the shadows of the afternoon
Draw to the twilight of the closing day.

We must renew the tasks we thought were done,
Set hand again to plow and wheel and lathe,
Force tired feet to climb the upward path,
Turn weary eyes to face the rising sun.

The past—it is a story that is told.
The future lies within our steadfast keeping;
Today belongs to toil, not sighs and weeping,
This is our day—we who are growing old.

The Fascination Of Maps

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

A GOOD many people find that present trends in war makes them brush up on their geography, yet others discover how little geography they really know. In both cases they have recourse to maps, which are certainly among the most fascinating pictures to be found anywhere. Serious minded people may object to calling maps 'pictures,' but that is what they are—pictures of the world, and even the best of them are lying and deceptive pictures too. Of course they are pictures, and works of art. No cartographer (which is the splendid name which map-makers have chosen for themselves) is indifferent to the appearance of his map, and the better he is at his job the more beautiful his map is likely to be. If you doubt this, get hold of some really good seamen's charts and prove it to yourself.

Perhaps you had trouble with maps at school? I certainly did. A good map-maker should combine accuracy and artistic temperament in equal proportions, but in me something which I took to be artistic temperament always had the upper hand. As a result my maps were always gay and were embellished with a vast amount of 'hatching,' showing mountains and other natural features, but they were never the best maps in the class, girls generally drew the best maps. Why this should have been I do not know. It must be a talent which they lose before they grow up for I have never heard of a female cartographer. At my school we sometimes made relief maps of the North American continent. These were elaborate affairs, made on cardboard with a paste formed of salt, water and flour. The paste was applied to the board in the shape of the continent, and mountains were pinched up in the proper places, rather as an edge is put on the crust of a pie. When the map was dry it was painted; Canada was red, the States was yellow, and Mexico a poisonous shade of green. The sea and all lakes were washed in with blue and the map was ready; it may be said that as the map neared completion the kitchen took on more and more the air of a mad pastry cook's habitation. These relief maps hung about the walls of the school room for months until the poorer ones mouldered and stank, when they were given back to us.

Our modern maps are made upon what is called Mercator's Projection, a system of picturing the world devised by a cartographer of that name who published a fine Atlas in 1595. But all projections involve a certain amount of distortion because they are flat, and the earth, unless we have been grossly deceived, is round. Globes must always be the best maps, but globes are expensive and bulky things and a globe big enough to show, let us say, the Province of Ontario in any detail would be much too large for easy use. And so we have to put up with projections, of which Mercator's are the best for ordinary use.

WE may wonder how our forbears got along without maps, or we may wonder how they ever managed to get anywhere with the maps which they had. Ptolemy, the Alexandrian astronomer and geographer, made a surprisingly accurate map of the known world for his day, which was about A.D. 127. It would be quite possible to travel with it today if one were not in too great a hurry. But after Ptolemy map-making suffered a serious decline. The early Christian Church did not encourage curiosity about this world, being more closely interested in the world to come. When the Church Fathers made maps they made them from such information as they could glean from Holy Writ, deeming this an infallible source of information on all things. The results were strange beyond belief.

In these early maps the city of Jerusalem was set in the exact centre of the globe. The map was bounded by a circle and Jerusalem was its focal point. One of the most famous of these maps is that of Isodor of Seville and it is a miracle of simplicity. Jerusalem is in the middle, and Europe and Africa occupy an exact quarter of the map each; a note on the map explains that these parts were settled respectively by Japhet and Ham. No more is said. East of Jerusalem is Asia, and east of Asia is Paradise. The whole is surrounded by an ocean. It was a simple world in those days.

Later maps were more complex, but little more practical use. A famous map called the Hereford Map originated about 1280 and it includes Paradise also, not far from Ceylon. Jerusalem is still dead in the middle, and is represented by something which looks like the modern symbol of the Rotary Club. Paris, Rome and the exact site of Noah's Ark are other points of interest on this map. The British Isles are on the uttermost outside edge. It is worth noticing that all during the Middle Ages educated people took it for granted that the world was round, but they had no clear notion of how large it was. Perfectly good globes were available to Columbus and the Renaissance explorers but they simply missed out the Americas. No wonder Columbus thought that he was in China when he completed his famous voyage; he simply believed his maps.

From the time of Mercator and the explorers maps became more and more as we now know them, though there was a tendency to be fanciful until about 100 years ago. The Mountains of the Moon, for instance, were quite likely to turn up in the middle of Africa and the Arctic and Antarctic regions were filled with every sort of wonder. Modern maps are much more sober and are reasonably accurate as well. The scale of old maps is always untrustworthy, as geographical expeditions were necessarily few and many parts of a map were drawn upon a basis of hearsay and traveller's tales. Still, maps are among the best and most fascinating pictures to be found in a library. The pity is that we have to consult them today with such grisly purpose.

• Caucasus Adolf's Goal

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Amid speculation as to just where and for what objectives Hitler will strike anew to retrieve his lost air initiative as the Russina winter ends, weather portents tend to single out the Caucasus and its oil as his first goal. Reports from London and closer continental observation points picture great Nazi reserves being rushed to the Southern Ukraine and the Crimea for that purpose.

Assuming that the German attack on Russia was a crusade for oil not against communism, there is every reason to credit these reports. A Nazi penetration of the Caucasus which cut off Russian oil supplies would cripple the Red armies, perhaps expose them to that "annihilation" Hitler has promised his people this year.

INTERNAL STRAIN GROWING

Yet some well informed observers on this side of the Atlantic view Hitler's promised annihilation campaign against Russia as an admission of a growing internal political strain in Germany itself, which might make Moscow rather than the Caucasus his main objective.

Moscow in Nazi hands would have political as well as military values. Its capture might not end Russian resistance. Stalin was fully prepared last fall to fight on beyond the Volga or the Urals.

To the German people, however, groaning under mounting casualty lists and faced with the possibility of another war winter, Goebbels could present a Nazi-held Moscow as a new symbol of ultimate triumph. And if Russian reports, otherwise unconfirmed, of near food riots and popular clamor to stop the war in German industrial centres like Essen have any foundation, Hitler might be more concerned over his home front than with strictly military considerations. His troops are much closer to Moscow than to Caucasian oil.

RISKED GRAVE DISASTER

Nazi front-line forces in Russia have risked grave military disasters to hold such junction keys for a renewed attack on Moscow as Rzev, Vyazama, Bryansk and other strategic points on the wide Smolensk-Moscow front. The holding of these advance points has been a cardinal principle in Hitler's winter strategy.

The bitter sea-air fight in the Arctic is a new Nazi effort to blockade Russia by sea for the coming attack. It marks a definite change in strategy, against which British preparation has been made with naval reinforcements.

It also suggests that Moscow, rather than the Caucasus, is the Hitler objective. To that Russian front British-American war supplies can be most easily delivered.

• Language of Diplomacy

CANADIANS, says The Ottawa Journal, and it might have added United Statesians, have often been troubled by the weightiness of British humor. It is true that slapstick and transparent humor is the rule on this side, and English humor is more subtle, but some of the very best of smart stuff comes all the way from English school boy howlers to the product of those who make humor their profession. Cartoons in British newspapers rate with the best in the world, in which respect Punch is always in the forefront. In the last war, and to a lesser extent in this, Bairnsfather's Ole Bill and Alf gave diversion to Canadian soldiers who certainly saw the point in every one of the drawings, because they were going through the same thing.

In The New York Times Magazine Mr. E. V. Knox, editor of Punch, has written a gay little piece on the way the British have turned the hardships of war into smiles. Britain is a strange land these days, he says. "There is something a little unpatriotic about the moon, about a star-lit night." And the commonest things are now uncommon, as the little girl pointed out when she said: "Mummy, do you remember bananas?" "Play you for an egg," says the golfer; and the woman writing her diary asks, "What else did we do yesterday besides having an egg for breakfast?"

What of the man looking at the one wall of a house still standing: "Just as I told you, any one sitting on the mantlepiece would have been perfectly safe." Or the old professor saying to his servant girl: "I left a device for destroying the night bomber on this table, and now the blessed thing's been swept away or something." Or the old lady: "I see the newspapers now confirm that it was bitterly cold down here six weeks ago, when our pipes burst."

The raids on London brought out scores of funny things, as for instance, the shop of the paperhanger whose front wall was all blown away, which carried the next morning the sign, "Jealous Adolph Schiklegruber" could never understand that. — St. Catharines Standard.

• Music for the Young

WHILE large cities invariably have their musical supervisors of schools few of the smaller places have felt financially strong enough to embark upon that enterprise. In some schools teachers with special certificates impart some instruction, and it is odd to find that there is more musical instruction in rural schools than there is in the cities.

Musical instruction is far more comprehensive today than it used to be. At one time public school pupils learned the tonic-sol-fa system and just sung a few songs. But no attempt was made to inculcate an understanding of music so that those who were indifferent to the beauty of sound would develop their latent appreciation. Modern teaching includes musical appreciation, which means that the teacher explains the story and plan of the pieces sung, or in some cases played. A few days ago a teacher explained to his school Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," and by way of illustration played the lovely first movement on the piano. So interested were the children that they demanded he play the whole piece through, which he did. And that was in a rural school in Yarmouth.

An incident of that kind is exceedingly encouraging, and shows what can be accomplished by musical appreciation. If the young people can develop an appreciation it will have a tremendously beneficial influence upon their whole lives. It is important, however, that the teachers be qualified men or women, and not merely amateur dabblers.

The crowd that filled the Legion Auditorium one night last week when a number of rural schools presented a comprehensive program of choruses and solos is evidence of the value of competent instruction in music and musical appreciation.

The love of music increases with the years and understanding. A high school in Indiana is planning to present a performance of Verdi's opera, "Aida."—Brantford Expositor.

AN END TO PLEBISCITE

If there is to be an impressive and decisive affirmative vote in the plebiscite it will be advisable for those who are supporting it with reluctance as a second-best policy to divest themselves, for the time being at any rate, of what might be called a grudging attitude of mind and give it whole-hearted support. If they find any solace in thinking that alternative courses which they favored would have better served the national interest they are entitled to their belief, but nothing is to be gained by continuing a controversy which has been decided and cannot fruitfully be reopened.—Winnipeg Free Press.

IN WAR TIME

1917 The Duke of Devonshire has announced that he will pay an official visit to Peterborough on May 24.

Lieut. Jesse Ketchum who left Peterborough with the 93rd Battalion is ill in hospital in London.

It is announced the 57th Regiment Home Defence Regiment is to be assisted in recruiting by the 3rd Dragoons and the 40th, 45th and 46th Regiments.

A Bible Message For Today . . .

Thus saith the Lord the King of Israel and his redeemer, the Lord of hosts; I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God ....They that make a graven image are all of them vanity; and their delectable things shall not profit; and they are their own witnesses, they see not nor know; that they may be ashamed. Who hath formed a god, or molten a graven image that is profitable for nothing?

I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside me: I girded thee, though thou hast not known me: that they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me. I am the Lord, and there is none else...

Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherds of the earth. Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? or thy work, He hath no hands?....They shall be ashamed, and also confounded, all of them: they shall go to confusion together that are makers of idols.

But Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation: ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end.—Isa. xliv, 6, 9, 10; xlv, 5, 6, 9, 16, 17.

Amendments To Municipal Act Remove "Disrupting Factor" In Development Of County Unit

TORONTO, April 2 — (Special to the Examiner). — A. L. Elliott, M. P.P. for Peterborough County, spoke in the Ontario Legislature in the debate on the Speech from the Throne in likely his last address before he joins the Prince of Wales Rangers, a unit which is being mobilized for active service.

Mr. Elliott believed the pending amendments to the Municipal and Assessment Act would perhaps equalize assessments in counties and remove "a disrupting factor" in the development of the county as a strong municipal unit.

"It is well known that the assessments in the various municipalities in the province vary from 25 to 100 per cent of the actual value," he said.

The young Peterborough lawyer contended the problem of agricultural production would disappear if the farmer received the proper return for his products.

"Many farmers who are producing what they can with the assistance of the members of their families find themselves not able to increase production further because they cannot afford to go into the competitive labor market as it stands today to secure needed help," he declared.

"It is difficult to concentrate our attentions on our domestic problems because of the ever increasing gravity of the World War. At the same time we are charged with the management of the affairs of this province and our responsibilities in this connection are no doubt greater in wartime than in peace times. This applies not only to our Federal and Provincial governments but also to our municipalities. Our municipal governments too, therefore, must realize the part they have to play in regimenting themselves in the matter of expenditures for the duration," Mr. Elliott said.

"It is with much satisfaction to all of us to have the agreement between the Dominion and this Province settled and confirmed by legislation. The guaranteed subsidies in lieu of the revenues we are losing more or less peg the income of the province for the balance of the war. The arrangement, however, is regarded as fair and we all hope that the province will be able to maintain the essentail social and other services it now provides."

Aid War Effort

"Mention was made in the speech from the throne of the various steps this province has taken in facilitating the war effort. Most people are familiar with the valuable provincial properties which have been transferred to the Dominion authorities, also of the subsidy on hogs and cheese. The subsidy on hogs came at a time when it was badly needed and it is not improbable that the Dominion quota might not have been reached except for this subsidy. The winning of the war should be the first and absolutely supreme objection of every government. In that respect no one can say that Ontario has not satisfied this obligation.

The Prime Minister has furnished excellent leadership in directing Ontario war effort by offering every facility at his disposal and by prompt action whenever a request is made.

"During the last war and in the 20's the agricultural industry in the province enjoyed comparative prosperity over a prolonged period. With the loss of foreign and domestic markets together with the decreased buying power during the depression the farmers in this province carried on under most difficult circumstances. The Farmers Creditors Arrangement Act while it saved many from bankruptcy injured farm credit. Following these lean years some improvement was shown before the commencement of this war. Since that time but in some cases only recently prices have reached a level that is fairly satisfactory.

"The price and wage stabilization policy has prevented the cost of living from spiralling upward. The general ceiling over the price of commodities, rents and services has helped to relieve anxiety on the part of people with fixed incomes. This Board is gradually embracing the prices of farm products.

It is difficult for some people in urban centres to appreciate that agriculture is our basic industry. Everyone, however, should realize that farmers constitute such a healthy proportion of the whole of this country that their welfare demands the consideration of all.

"I heard an authoritative source proclaim in January that other than in the case of wheat the Ontario farmer on the average was receiving a little more than he received in 1926 for what he sells. Also that despite the fact that farm machinery is 15% higher than in 1926 the essential things that the farmers buy on the average are slightly less than in 1926 for what he sells. Taking into consideration that the price of milk delivered for manufacturing purposes only recently has reached its present level and the fact that farmers generally are so far behind financially, it will be some time before the people in the agricultural industry will be in a position to enjoy the benefits of the present prices. There will be no trouble about the question of production of agricultural products if it is made reasonably worth while for the farmer. Many farmers who are producing what they can with the assistance of the members of their families find themselves not able to increase production further because they cannot afford to go into the competitive labor market as it stands today to secure needed help."

"One of the matters that this House may have to consider at this session is the proposed amendments to the Municipal and Assessment Act and other complimentary legislation. The proposals will have first to be dealt with by the Municipal Bills Committee. The proposed amendments affect the taxing and assessment machinery more in rural than in urban municipalities. The suggested changes are not at all new, but represent recommendations that have been made from time to time over a long period," declared Mr. Elliott.

"It is just about one hundred years since we first passed The Municipal Act in the Province of Ontario. The original municipal Government in this Province was established as a result of the desire for improved municipal services. There was an agitation for a system of government which the United Empire Loyalists enjoyed in New York State prior to their location in Upper Canada, and following this agitation the District Municipal Act was passed in 1841. The present system of assessment and the establishment of municipalities was developed from this basis. In the early days when our municipalities were laid out, the problems of agriculture were comparatively simple. Farmers produced practically all that they needed for domestic use and many of the things that we manufacture today. It was not necessary for farmers in the early days to watch the market quotations. Great changes have taken place since with the introduction of farm machinery, the motor car and truck, the tractor, Hydro and standardization of shipping and grading, agriculture has become industrialized, and farmers have had to adjust themselves to meet the changes from time to time.

"Likewise municipalities today will have to accustom themselves to further changes to meet these changing conditions.

"Municipalities have been in difficulties at various periods in the history of the Province. The most recent was during the depression years when municipalities involving a total indebtedness of $105,000,000 were in default. This represented a little more than one-fifth of the total indebtdness of all municipalities. By controlling municipal borrowings a recurrence of that situation can never happen. Furthermore it is the responsibility and duty of this government to see that such a situation never rises again.

"Looking ahead, we might well consider that after the conclusion of the present world conflict, there will be an influx of settlers from the British Isles and elsewhere to be located on the land. No one can forecast what our responsibilities will be in that connection. We know this, however, that if that does happen, municipalities will be required at substantial capital expense, to supply civic services, and they should be prepared to meet this situation. It might be considered desirable not to disturb the municipalities at a time when we are engaged in war, but the necessity for a post war development, more than offsets this inconvenience.

"Our system of assessment is the foundation of municipal government. The subsidies from the Province for both school and general purposes are based on the present assessments. Equalization of assessments in counties has long been a disrupting factor in the development of the county as a strong municipal unit. It is well known that the assessments in the various municipalities in the province vary from 25 to 100 per cent of the actual value.

"The boundary lines of municipalities have not been changed for well near 70 years. There are cases where metropolitan areas have developed where rural townships adjacent to cities have become largely urbanized. In these cases annexations or amalgamations are not possible or rather would result in such difficulties in reaching settlements that they could not be proceeded with. The reason for this is the different yard sticks used in assessing various municipalities necessitates arbitrations to adjust debenture indebtedness and as a basis for making other calculations. With one uniform system of assessment throughout the province, these difficulties would be obviated. Annexations and amalgamations could be carried out with little difficulty and equalization of assessments would be forever eliminated.

Townships As Spending Bodies

"In the proposed changes of the Assessment Act it is desired to keep the townships as spending bodies in the same manner as they are today. It will simply mean that the duties of assessing and collecting taxes will be transferred to the county. This will cause some inconvenience in having the facilities taken over but once established and once a system is set up after the first assessment is completed it should be relatively an easier matter on the whole to carry on and certainly a much more efficient one.

One great benefit that will be derived from the proposed changes is the fact that it will make the counties stronger as municipal units. At present time reeves remain largely township representatives while sitting as county councillors. They are primarily concerned with securing what they can for the township which they reperesent. They are also always conscious of the manner in which their respective municipalities might be prejudiced by the equalization of assessment. With this contentious problem out of the way and with the responsibility of assessment and the collection of taxes in the hands of the county then the members would become more county-minded and develop a greater interest in the county as a whole.

"While the assumption of the corporation and income taxes by the Federal Government interferes to some extent with the jurisdiction of the province it does not alter the responsibility of this government in the many matters with which it is now concerned as a legislative and administrative body. When one stops to realize the extent of the services furnished and controlled by the province we then appreciate the many ways in which the people and business interests are affected and controlled under provincial jurisdiction.

"The products of the forests except in the case of Indian lands are under provincial jurisdiction. When we consider what the development of this industry has meant in the development of this country and what it will continue to mean we realize that it is a giant enterprise. It has been responsible for transportation and power development in a large way. During the depression years of the early 30's the contribution of the forest products industry was outstanding in maintaining Canada's credit rating among nations of the world. During this period of world wide monetary disturbances, the industry's favorable balance of trade kept up the value of the Canadian dollar and helped Canada meet its international obligations in full. As pointed out in the speech from the throne the demands for the products of Canada's forests continue unabated. We are supplying pulp for munitions, lumber for war industries and hardwood veneer for aircraft, not only for domestic use but also for our allies.

"No one is a member of this House very long until he realizes how interwoven the affairs of municipalities are with the affairs of the province. We have accomplished much in relieving lands of taxation. We might do more and particularly in the matter of educational cost. We still have our welfare services including relief as responsibilities of the Government shared in part with the municipalities. Highway and forest development are also our care, and everyone shares directly or indirectly as a result of the monies that have been and will be expended in their promotion and maintenance. Then too we have the unusual services rendered by the Public Health department. This as has been explained in this House already has facilitated the country's war effort. The regulation and administration of our courts-at-law including the maintenance of the provincial police constitute other public services. We also have Hydro and the great mining industry largely controlled by us. These are just some of the things with which we are concerned. In any event, Mr. Speaker, this outline gives us some conception of our responsibilities. It also shows how highly important the many matters under our control and management are to the people of the Province and to the business and industrial interests of Ontario.

PT Boat Guard Now Watches Panama Waters

By CHANDLER DIEHL
Associated Press Staff Writer.

AT SEA OFF PANAMA, April 2. —(AP). — One of the mightiest forces serving in the joint air, sea and land defence of the Panama canal is the fleet of United States patrol torpedo boats—PT boats—now operating in the waters off Panama.

The mosquito fleet of the Panama sea frontier now is on daily battle manouevres.

The PT boats have speed, drive, swing, power and deception. They zig-zag deceptively, then drive in hard on their target.

One target for a simulated attack in the day's manoeuvres was a coastwise freighter.

The vessels of the mosquito fleet converged on the target ship, and it was easy to picture how these shifty little runners maintain the attacking edge in any combat. They can feint more cumbersome enemies into position for an attack, and then hpeed in—the tiniest sort of target—to loose their torpedoes.

The fleet is commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. Earl E. Caldwell of Washington, D.C., only 38 years old, but a veteran of service aboard aircraft carrier, battleship, heavy cruiser and destroyers, and, most important, one of the pioneers of PT boat service

Junior officers of the mosquito fleet, commanding the individual boats, are keen, quick-thinking lieutenants and ensigns— average age, about 25.

Crews are picked men — chosen from a waiting list according to Bureau of Navigation tests.

Every member of the small crew is trained to handle any of the assignments aboard, and any casualties suffered during an engagement need not destroy the boat's effectiveness.

Boats are on the alert always—day and night. A night take-off can be executed in a few minutes for the men asleep aboard no matter where the craft is anchored.

Brockville Unit Is Mobilizing

KINGSTON, April 2.—Announcement was made today by Headquarters, M.D. No. 3, of the immediate mobilization of the Brockville Rifles, Brockville, Ontario. The unit will be brought up to full war establishment for service with Lieut.-Colonel N. S. Macdowell as acting officer commanding during the period of organization.

Immediately following the announcement 35 officers volunteeered for service. The unit has already furnished 40 officers and 600 men to Canada's armed forces, and will be brought up to full strength as soon as it is possible by voluntary enlistment.

Recruiting is expected to start without delay. For the present, headquarters of the unit will be at the Brockville armouries.

It is understood that the 2nd Battalion, Brockville Rifles, will remain in existence as a unit of the Reserve Army. Admission to its ranks will be confined below and above the ages of 19 to 35 years or personnel below active service medical categories.

Earlier in the present conflict the Rifles supplied a full company to the 1st Battalion, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, now serving overseas. They have also supplied recruits for other active units as well as instructors for establishments throughout the country.

Curb On Rail Travel?

OTTAWA, April 1 — (CP). — Advisability of action to restrict pleasure travel by railroad is under consideration and action along that line may be taken soon it was understood yesterday at the Munitions and Supply Department.

However, any restrictions along this line still are definitely in the formative stage, one departmental source said, and no information is available on what steps may be taken, or when.

Because of the wartime shortage of steel and because peacetime factories have been turned over to war production, new railway rolling stock is becoming harder to get.

Girl Engineer Outshines Casey Jones

MOSCOW, April 2.—A "Mrs. Casey Jones," 25-year-old Polia Morgatskaya, pilots one of the Red Army's armored trains and has figured in exploits which would grey the hair of the redoubtable Casey himself, according to a Tass news agency report last night.

Polia attended the engine-driver's school before the war and for two years pulled the throttle on passenger trains.

"In the summer of 1941 she took up the dangerous and honorable job of armored train driver," Tass said. "Every-day fighting turned this peaceful woman into a fearless warrior."

"Once she had to drive her train over a burning bridge. The sleepers (ties) were on fire and the bridge might collapse at any moment, but there was no other way, and she drove on across."

On another occasion, Tass said, Polia was assigned to tow a train loaded with provisions from a station occupied by the enemy.

"Under a hurricane of enemy fire, the armored train broke into the station, fought its way toward the train, coupled it on and drove off with it," was Tass' graphic description of the exploit.

Amendments To Municipal Act Remove "Disrupting Factor" In Development Of County Unit

"In the proposed changes of the Assessment Act it is desired to keep the townships as spending bodies in the same manner as they are today. It will simply mean that the duties of assessing and collecting taxes will be transferred to the county. This will cause some inconvenience in having the facilities taken over but once established and once a system is set up after the first assessment is completed it should be relatively an easier matter on the whole to carry on and certainly a much more efficient one.

One great benefit that will be derived from the proposed changes is the fact that it will make the counties stronger as municipal units. At present time reeves remain largely township representatives while sitting as county councillors. They are primarily concerned with securing what they can for the township which they reperesent. They are also always conscious of the manner in which their respective municipalities might be prejudiced by the equalization of assessment. With this contentious problem out of the way and with the responsibility of assessment and the collection of taxes in the hands of the county then the members would become more county-minded and develop a greater interest in the county as a whole.

"While the assumption of the corporation and income taxes by the Federal Government interferes to some extent with the jurisdiction of the province it does not alter the responsibility of this government in the many matters with which it is now concerned as a legislative and administrative body. When one stops to realize the extent of the services furnished and controlled by the province we then appreciate the many ways in which the people and business interests are affected and controlled under provincial jurisdiction.

"The products of the forests except in the case of Indian lands are under provincial jurisdiction. When we consider what the development of this industry has meant in the development of this country and what it will continue to mean we realize that it is a giant enterprise. It has been responsible for transportation and power development in a large way. During the depression years of the early 30's the contribution of the forest products industry was outstanding in maintaining Canada's credit rating among nations of the world. During this period of world wide monetary disturbances, the industry's favorable balance of trade kept up the value of the Canadian dollar and helped Canada meet its international obligations in full. As pointed out in the speech from the throne the demands for the products of Canada's forests continue unabated. We are supplying pulp for munitions, lumber for war industries and hardwood veneer for aircraft, not only for domestic use but also for our allies.

"No one is a member of this House very long until he realizes how interwoven the affairs of municipalities are with the affairs of the province. We have accomplished much in relieving lands of taxation. We might do more and particularly in the matter of educational cost. We still have our welfare services including relief as responsibilities of the Government shared in part with the municipalities. Highway and forest development are also our care, and everyone shares directly or indirectly as a result of the monies that have been and will be expended in their promotion and maintenance. Then too we have the unusual services rendered by the Public Health department. This as has been explained in this House already has facilitated the country's war effort. The regulation and administration of our courts-at-law including the maintenance of the provincial police constitute other public services. We also have Hydro and the great mining industry largely controlled by us. These are just some of the things with which we are concerned. In any event, Mr. Speaker, this outline gives us some conception of our responsibilities. It also shows how highly important the many matters under our control and management are to the people of the Province and to the business and industrial interests of Ontario.

Speaks In Legislature

A. L. Elliott, K.C., M.P.P., who in his speech in the Ontario Legislature on Tuesday stressed the responsibility and duty of the Provincial Government through the exercise of certain measured control over the municipalities to see the default situation of the depression years should never occur again

PT Boat Guard Now Watches Panama Waters

By CHANDLER DIEHL
Associated Press Staff Writer.

AT SEA OFF PANAMA, April 2. —(AP). — One of the mightiest forces serving in the joint air, sea and land defence of the Panama canal is the fleet of United States patrol torpedo boats—PT boats—now operating in the waters off Panama.

The mosquito fleet of the Panama sea frontier now is on daily battle manouevres.

The PT boats have speed, drive, swing, power and deception. They zig-zag deceptively, then drive in hard on their target.

One target for a simulated attack in the day's manoeuvres was a coastwise freighter.

The vessels of the mosquito fleet converged on the target ship, and it was easy to picture how these shifty little runners maintain the attacking edge in any combat. They can feint more cumbersome enemies into position for an attack, and then hpeed in—the tiniest sort of target—to loose their torpedoes.

The fleet is commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. Earl E. Caldwell of Washington, D.C., only 38 years old, but a veteran of service aboard aircraft carrier, battleship, heavy cruiser and destroyers, and, most important, one of the pioneers of PT boat service

Junior officers of the mosquito fleet, commanding the individual boats, are keen, quick-thinking lieutenants and ensigns— average age, about 25.

Crews are picked men — chosen from a waiting list according to Bureau of Navigation tests.

Every member of the small crew is trained to handle any of the assignments aboard, and any casualties suffered during an engagement need not destroy the boat's effectiveness.

Boats are on the alert always—day and night. A night take-off can be executed in a few minutes for the men asleep aboard no matter where the craft is anchored.

Brockville Unit Is Mobilizing

KINGSTON, April 2.—Announcement was made today by Headquarters, M.D. No. 3, of the immediate mobilization of the Brockville Rifles, Brockville, Ontario. The unit will be brought up to full war establishment for service with Lieut.-Colonel N. S. Macdowell as acting officer commanding during the period of organization.

Immediately following the announcement 35 officers volunteeered for service. The unit has already furnished 40 officers and 600 men to Canada's armed forces, and will be brought up to full strength as soon as it is possible by voluntary enlistment.

Recruiting is expected to start without delay. For the present, headquarters of the unit will be at the Brockville armouries.

It is understood that the 2nd Battalion, Brockville Rifles, will remain in existence as a unit of the Reserve Army. Admission to its ranks will be confined below and above the ages of 19 to 35 years or personnel below active service medical categories.

Earlier in the present conflict the Rifles supplied a full company to the 1st Battalion, Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, now serving overseas. They have also supplied recruits for other active units as well as instructors for establishments throughout the country.

Curb On Rail Travel?

OTTAWA, April 1 — (CP). — Advisability of action to restrict pleasure travel by railroad is under consideration and action along that line may be taken soon it was understood yesterday at the Munitions and Supply Department.

However, any restrictions along this line still are definitely in the formative stage, one departmental source said, and no information is available on what steps may be taken, or when.

Because of the wartime shortage of steel and because peacetime factories have been turned over to war production, new railway rolling stock is becoming harder to get.

Girl Engineer Outshines Casey Jones

MOSCOW, April 2.—A "Mrs. Casey Jones," 25-year-old Polia Morgatskaya, pilots one of the Red Army's armored trains and has figured in exploits which would grey the hair of the redoubtable Casey himself, according to a Tass news agency report last night.

Polia attended the engine-driver's school before the war and for two years pulled the throttle on passenger trains.

"In the summer of 1941 she took up the dangerous and honorable job of armored train driver," Tass said. "Every-day fighting turned this peaceful woman into a fearless warrior."

"Once she had to drive her train over a burning bridge. The sleepers (ties) were on fire and the bridge might collapse at any moment, but there was no other way, and she drove on across."

On another occasion, Tass said, Polia was assigned to tow a train loaded with provisions from a station occupied by the enemy.

"Under a hurricane of enemy fire, the armored train broke into the station, fought its way toward the train, coupled it on and drove off with it," was Tass' graphic description of the exploit.

C.G.E. GENERALS CAPTURE THE LADIES' SENIOR BASKETBALL TITLE

Wings Scheme Against Taylor and McCreedy

TORONTO, April 2—(CP)—If Detroit Red Wings' vital statistics bureau had functioned this season as it should, Manager Jack Adams and his most dependable thinkers probably have spent the last few days figuring out a strong defence against Toronto Maple Leafs' most potent lightweights—Billy Taylor and Johnny McCreedy.

In eight games played between Toronto and Detroit this season, each of these players scored five goals, Taylor also getting five assists while McCreedy had one. An extension of that potency into the Stanley Cup best-of-five final series which will open here Saturday night could be ruinous to the Detroit cause.

Detroit won two and tied one of its eight games with Toronto, scoring 21 goals again 26 for the Leafs. Perusal of the statistics covering those games showed that while McCreedy and Taylor were the best individual Toronto performers, the Taylor-Schriner-Carr line was the most effective attacking unit.

This line, centred by Taylor, had 10 goals and 13 assists. The Leafs' "big" line—the Apps-Drillon-Metz combination—was not particularly prominent. Taylor and his linemates slumped during Toronto's victorious Stanley Cup semi-final campaign with New York Rangers but may come again in the final. Detroit's scatter-play type of hockey suits the speed and smooth-passing of the Taylor trio.

Mud Bruneteau was the best of the Detroiters against Leafs this season with five goals and one assist. Don Grosso had three goals and one assist againt Leafs but Carl Liscombe, one of the stars of Detroit's march through Montreal and Boston in the Stanley Cup quarter-finals and semi-finals, was scoreless.

Second game of the series will be played here next Tuesday, with the third at Detroit April 9 and the fourth at Detroit April 12. If fifth, sixth and seventh are necessary, they will be played in Toronto, April 14; Detroit, April 16; and Toronto,

Hero Of The Leafs

Nick Metz' goal in the dying seconds of the third period of the sixth game between New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs sent the Toronto team into the Stanley Cup finals against Detroit Red Wings. Battling to a 2-2 tie, Metz sank the puck behind "Sugar Jim" Henry in the last six seconds of play to give the Leafs a 3-2 victory.

Miners Meet Aces In Quebec City

MONTREAL, April 2 (CP)—Glace Bay Miners were scheduled to leave here today for Quebec City to engage Quebec Aces tonight in the fourth game of their best-of-five eastern Canadian senior semi-final hockey series.

A controversy over a switch in the locale for the contest was settled last night when Glace Bay executives were advised officially by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and by Norman Dawe, president of the Quebec association, that the game would be played in Quebec City and not in Montreal as originally scheduled.

Manager Art McDonald of the Miners declared yesterday that "he had not been advised officially of the change and he declared that he would not take his team out of town until such official advice was received. McDonald said that the only report on the change of locale had been made to Playing-Coach Walter Monson of the Miners. The manager added that the club executive should have been informed.

Aces rule top-heavy favorites to end the series in the fourth game as a result of their 8-0 victory in the third contest here Tuesday night. In the first two games in Glace Bay, the Miners took the opener 3-0 but dropped the second contest 4-1.

Monson himself was none too optimistic about Glace Bay chances of victory. He said that the Aces were by far the best club the Miners have met this season. Monson said that he didn't think that the Aces were eight goals better than his club and added that "even if we lose down in Quebec we'll give them a good fight."

SPORTS — DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The City Basketball League gets back into the picture tonight after weeks of inactivity when the first game in the semi-final series will be staged between Collegiate and the Dominions. The league program has been held up for a long time owing to the fact that Outboard Marines were engaged in provincial competition and Collegiate were in the running for the Cossa championship. That meant that the majority of the players on the three leading teams were tied up but now both outfits have been eliminated the way is clear for the final rounds for the City League title. Dominions and Coach Bamforth's Collegiate squad will play a two-game series, total points to count, to decide which outfit will have the right to meet Quakers in the finals for the title. The first game will be fought out tonight in the Y gymnasium at 8 o'clock and it should be a real battle all the way. The teams finished all square and each has had a victory over the other during the regular schedule so that on the year's record they look to be very evenly matched. Both will open the throttle wide in an effort to get the jump on the opposition so there should be plenty of action all the way.

Canadian General Electric Generals are senior champions of the Ladies' Basketball League. Most basketball experts called them to take the Quakers in the third and final game of the series last night and Coach Galley's powerful squad did the trick with plenty to spare. In fact they won further off than the critics predicted and made every post a winning one last night. Marg Wood and Audrey Craig who have been playing splendid basketball all season sparked a General offensive that carried too much punch for the Quakers to handle, although Lloyd Grose's team battled valiantly. Phyllis Ayres turned in a fine effort in a losing cause and her teammates gave all they had. But it wasn't enough to halt a team that played winning basketball from start to finish and surged through to take the championship handily. Both teams deserve credit for a fine season. And now the loop is through until next season with Generals crowned as senior champions, Quakers winners of the runners-up cup and Y.W.C.A. Gym intermediate title-holders.

About Tommy Burlington

Ken Colling has the following in his Belleville sport column about Tommy Burlington, the Owen Sound player who set a new scoring record in the United States Eastern League: "Statistics from the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League recently showed that Tommy Burlington, one-eyed sharpshooter from Owen Sound, led the league scorers with a total of 65 goals and 66 assists, totalling 131 scoring points. Taking into consideration the E.U.A.H.L. clubs play 60 games and sometimes travel all night and half a day in a bumpy old bus, Burlington's record is all the more creditable. Peterborough's Fred Craig points out that Burlington is one scoring menace the champion "Soldiers" did not have to face during their drive to a senior provincial hockey title. Burlington was in Belleville as well as a couple of other high-ranking seniors, but they failed to remain, which no doubt is one reason that Peterborough, not Belleville, won the senior "B" hockey title of the province. True enough Burlington established a record of 131 scoring points in what is recognized as a free-scoring loop. Of course the most impressive part of Burlington's scoring effort was the large margin he held over his closest competitor, 42 points, which should prove how Tommy rates in the league. Incidentally Mike Rodden, who saw Burlington play for two seasons, once informed us that Burlington was the best hockey player outside the realm of the National Hockey League. "And he's better than a lot of big leaguers also," added Mike."

The Peterborough Softball League will not be officially represented at the annual meeting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association to be held in Simcoe tomorrow but nevertheless this city will have a worthy envoy at the annual conclave in the person of Dave Leether, long a driving force in softball in this community and district. Dave has been nominated for three positions in the list of officers, for first vice-president, second vice-president and as a member of the executive and no matter which berth he may be voted into tomorrow there is no doubt of his ability to give good service. He has given freely of his time and money for years to further the interest of softball in this part of the province and has been a faithful worker in behalf of the Ontario body. It is unfortunate that in his campaign for election tomorrow he will have to get along without any votes from his own home town in view of the fact that the City League will not be represented but his qualities are well known to softball men everywhere and he will not lack support when the ballots are distributed.

Oshawa Take Lead

Oshawa Genreals handed Montreal Royals their first defeat of the season in the first game of the eastern Canada junior finals last night at Montreal. The final count was 3 to 2 and Oshawa thus gets the jump in the series which is a best-of-seven affair, with the second game in Toronto tomorrow night. However the battle was close enough to make the series anybody's. Generals won out on the strength of a long shot by Floyd Curry half way through the last period after the Royals had come from behind a 2 to 0 deficit to sew up the argument. There was no scoring in the first period, the Generals found the net twice in the second to pick up a two-goal lead and then the Quebec champions fought back with two goals by Eddie Emberg to pull the Royals up on even terms. Then came Curry's long drive to break up the ball game. Renaud, the Montreal goalie failed to glimpse the puck until it hit his stick and twisted into the net. The second game should be a corker.

The Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer says: "It was just twenty years ago today the Central Ontario Baseball League announced its schedule for 1922. A new entry had been accepted into the loop when Leaside entered the fold to round out an eight teamed loop. The clubs composing the C.O.B.L. that season included Peterborough, Lindsay, Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Leaside. That was the year Freddie Goyer left for Guelph, while Jack "Chief" Williams came to Belleville and Al Heckman made his first appearance in Peterborough. Belleville won the bunting, but lost the senior championship to the Galt Terriers, after having eliminated the great Toronto Hillcrests, boasting such players as Lionel Conacher, Duke Hennessy, Harry Batstone, Cannonball Scott and others."

Quakers Beaten In Final Game By A 33-16 Score

C.G.E. Generals are the new senior champions of the Ladies' Basketball League. The Generals won the title by winning the third and deciding game of the finals from the game Quakers, 33-16 at the Y.W.C.A. last night.

It was a fitting climax for the new champions, who, re-entering the league this season climbed to the top of the standings early in the campaign and finished in first place by a slim margin over the Quakers.

In the championship series, C.G.E. got the jump by winning the first game but Quakers tied it up by winning the second tussle by a single point and it remained for last night's game to settle the issue.

Generals clearly demonstrated their worthiness as champions by outplaying the battling Cereal maidens in last night's game by a slim margin in all departments. They held an edge both on the attack and from a defensive standpoint. The new champions took better advantage of the scoring chances they were given than did Quakers, who missed a lot of fairly easy chances, passed more effectively and gained the lion's share of the rebounds at both back boards. They built up a 12-5 margin at half time and despite the Quakers' untiring efforts in the last twenty minutes, continued to press their advantage. It was a hard-fought, fast battle all the way, a typical climax to the gruelling battle both finalists have waged all season for top hand in the standings.

Marg. Wood and Audrey Craig were the scoring stars for the winners and Quakers found it hard to keep them under control. Phyllis Ayres topped the Quaker scoring, despite the fact that two players checked her all night.

The teams:

C.G.E. Generals (33)—M. Snowden 6, M Hodson, A Craig 10, M. Wood 17, C. Stalter, E Harte-Maxwell, A. De Carlo.

Quakers (16))—P. Lawless 1, G. Allen, H White, P. Ayres 18, M. Duncan, D Weese 2, D. Smith, M. Youdell

Referees—Vic Coleman and Whitty Thirnbeck.

Call Game 7-7 Out Of Balls

TUCSON, Ariz., April 2—(AP).—April Fool or not, Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Athletics battled through 17 innings to a 7-7 tie yesterday and then had to call the exhibition game because, said Umpire Ernie Stewart, "we are out of baseballs."

Conversion of the usual nine-inning game into a four-hour chore began in the seventh inning when with the Cubs leading 6-3, two A's out and none on base. Pitcher Henry Wyse walked Bob Johnson. He also walked Hal Wagner and then Felix Mackiewicz homered to tie the score.

The tie prevailed until the thirteenth inning. The Cubs forged ahead momentarily when Len Merullo, running for Lou Novikoff who had singled, stole second and scored when Crash Davis took Bill Nicholson's grounder and threw wild to Pitcher Roger Wolff, covering first.

The A's came right back against Bob Bowman, who replaced Johnny Schmitz. The first three Athletics—Elmer Valo, Pete Suder and Lou Blair—singled, and the score again was tied. A walk loaded the bases, but Wagner hit into a double play, Babe Dahlgren to Catcher McCullough to Dahlgren. Another walk again loaded the bases. However, Al Reubeling forced Mackiewicz at second to retire the side.

After four more scoreless innings, Umpire Stewart found the shortage of baseballs so acute, he called the game.

Regina Abbotts Facing Windup Tonight

By The Canadian Press

Two teams face elimination on the Western hockey front as play resumes tonight in the respective divisions. On the Junior battlefront, Regina Abbotts will fade out of the Western semi-final should they lose to Edmonton Maple Leafs, while Kimberley Dynamiters can enter the Western final in the Allan Cup playdowns by defeating Saskatoon Quakers.

Portage La Prairie Terriers, Manitoba challengers in the Junior playdowns, are awaiting the winners of the Abbott-Maple Leaf series to decide the Western Canada challenger who will play the winner of the Montreal Royals-Oshawa Generals for the Canadian title. Terriers eliminated Fort William Hurricane-Rangers in the semi-final bracket.

Port Arthur Bearcats and Lethbridge are staging a bitter struggle in their Senior semi-final. After battling to a tie in the first game Bearcats took two in a row, only to have Leafs come through last night at Lethbridge to prolong the series with a 2-1 victory. The teams play again at Lethbridge Saturday.

Regina Abbotts and Edmonton Maple Leafs will battle in the third game of the best-of-three playoff, with Leafs having a one-game lead. The teams tied 2-2 in their first encounter but Leafs came back in the second to score a close 5-4 decision.

The Kimberley-Saskatoon Senior tilt can end tonight if the Dynamiters from the coast beat Quakers, Saskatchewan representatives. The teams have played three times in a best-of-five series with Kimberley holding a 2-1 edge in games.

Cornwall Squad Fades To Quebec

CORNWALL, Ont., April 2—(CP) —Quebec Morton Engineering, shifting into high gear for a third-period drive worth six goals, defeated Cornwall Colts, 8-3, last night, to advance into the Eastern Canada Intermediate hockey finals.

The Engineers won the two-game series, 19-7, on the round. They took the first game at Quebec Sunday, 11-4.

After idling along for two periods, the heavier Quebec team entered the closing twenty minutes with a slender 2-1 margin. Then they suddenly found their stride, racing in for six goals, chiefly on breakaways.

Louis Tremblay and Emile Fortin of Quebec topped the scorers with two goals apiece. Ulric Tondreau, Fred Valenti, Gerald Brodeur and Roy Malenfant scored the other Quebec tallies. Jimmy Dennenny, Roy Dupuis and Floyd Moore counted for Cornwall.

CHARLESTON, S.C.— Before he hurt his shoulder two years ago, Ival Goodman of Cincinnati Reds could throw a ball from deep right field into a tin can at the home plate. His shoulder must be all right now, for he threw three like that in yesterday's game at Daytona Beach.

2 New Catchers Fill Gaps In Leaf Lineup

CAMDEN, April 2. — Toronto Maple Leafs' catching problems for the 1942 campaign were virtually settled yesterday when General Manager Lee MacPhail announced the acquisition of Eddie Ferandes on option from Pittsburg Pirates. Just to make sure of plugging the gap, the Leafs also purchased Backstop Bob Jackson from Nashville of the Southern Association.

Sprinting Backstop

Ferandes, who weighs 185 pounds, is 5 feet 9 inches tall, and 24 years of age. Last season in 102 games with St. Paul of the American Association he batted .268. The previous season, acting as lead-off batter for Portland in the Pacific Coast League, he batted .333. He is exceptionally fast for a catcher, and is a switch hitter. Ferandes will join the Leafs in a few days.

Joe Vance, who made a delayed appearance in camp, has agreed to terms. The veteran right-hander insisted it wasn't contract trouble that delayed him. He was kept waiting some time before he was given leave of absence from his job for the baseball season.

Eddie Morgan, finally contacted by MacPhail, is in Cleveland and shows no inclination to report. Morgan apparently has no desire to play in Toronto again, and has informed MacPhail that he would like to play for a team in the United States. He also didn't like the idea of receiving a pay cut, dished out because of his poor record last season.

Haslin Hurts Knee

Mickey Haslin's injured knee caused some trepidation in camp, but a local chiropractor, who has been working on him, says he will have the veteran third-sacker back on the job in five or six days. In the meantime Jimmy Bucher will take care of the Hot Corner.

MacPhail is currently jockeying around with Seattle, which club owes the Leafs a player from the Carl Fischer deal. Inasmuch as Lloyd Brown didn't report, George Windsor is in the army, and MacPhail doesn't want Fischer back, a new pitcher should be on the way soon.

Bill Brandt and Harry Shuman have been delegated for mound duty today when the Leafs tackle Augusta of the Sally League at Augusta. The teams play a repeat performance here Friday. Toronto then tackles Wilmington in home-and-home games over the week-end.

News From Training Camps

ALEXANDRIA, La., April 2 (AP) —Manager Mel Ott of New York Giants is worried about the lost poundage of Pitcher Bill McGee, who had yielded only two runs in 16 innings before he was blasted for eight hits and six runs in three frames yesterday by Cleveland. McGee is 25 pounds lighter than last season and is so serious about keeping in shape that Ott has to order him to eat more.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Frank Crespi was one of the last to arrive in St. Louis Cardinals' training camp, but the second sacker is setting a fast pace now. He handled 13 chances flawlessly and lashed out a homer and a double as the Cards whipped Detroit 5-3, yesterday.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Several Detroit Tiger rookies have found out —to their chagrin as well as wear and tear on their bank-rolls—that it doesn't pay to violate the be-in-by-midnight rule. They were fined $100 for not getting in on time and so far there have been no second offenders.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Charlie Keller of New York Yankees feels better, now that he has clouted his first home run of the year. The slugging outfielder poled one over the centrefield wall, more than 400 feet from home plate, against the Jacksonville Tars yesterday.

TUCSON, Ariz.—First it was Pitcher Eddie Hanysewski from the South Bend, Ind., sandlots who proved to be a pleasant surprise to Manager Jimmy Wilson of Chicago Cubs. Now Wilson has another — Jess Flores, Mexican right-hander, who has allowed only two runs in 18 innings.

DE LAND, Fla.—St. Louis Browns, owning a grapefruit league record of 10 victories in 14 games, will attempt to fatten their winning average to-day against Montreal of the International League. Bill Cox and rookie southpaw Clarence Iott will draw the pitching assignment.

NEW YORK, April 2—(AP). — Green Light Day: Pacific Coast League season opens today, and maybe we'll see what effect the war will have on baseball crowds instead of just guessing....Anticipating a shortage of ball, as well as players and customers, the San Diego club will give two 25-cent defence stamps and a grandstand pass to each person who returns a ball knocked into the stands.

When Troy Gordon of Coffeyville, Kas., finished scoring and playing basketball games this season, he added up his own score and found the total was 123 games. He was official scorer of the local Y.M.C.A. league, refereed high school and "Y" games, coached a Sunday school team, played with an independent quintet and covered school and junior college games for the Coffeyville Journal. Sound Trounces Markham 7-4

OWEN SOUND, April 2.—Markham dropped a 7-4 decision to Owen Sound Orphans last night. Owen Sound's superior attacking strength gave them a one-game lead in the best of three games in the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate "B" finals.

Owen Sound started off strongly in the first period. Shears opened the scoring with Proctor following. Smith then came home with a lovely effort starting from behind his own net. Shears then collected his second goal on a pass from Dolson.

Markham started the second frame in earnest, holding the Orphans in their own end for minutes on end. They were finally rewarded when Rowe took a pass from Armstrong and beat Lumley. Playing every man up, Harper found himself alone at his citadel as big Andy Blair got a break and beat him. Fliers came right back with two quick goals by N. Bangay and B. Lowrie to give Owen Sound something to worry about. Proctor and Tennant capitalized for Owen Sound before the end of the middle frame.

Markham put on the power in the final period and were only beaten by 15 year old Harry Lumley, who knocked out shot at all angles.

The Lowrie and Scott brothers played heads up hockey for the losers, while Lumley and Dolson were very effective for Owen Sound.

The second game will be played in Owen Sound Friday night.

Markham—Goal, J. Harper; defence, G. Scott, F. Scott; centre, Bob Bangay; wings, B Lowrie, A. Baker; alternates, E. Lowrie, Rowe, N. Bangay, B. Harper, Parkinson, Armstrong.

Owen Sound—Goal, Lumley; defence, Smith, McConnachie; centre, Dolson; wings, Foster, Shears; alternates, Blair, Yeo, Proctor, Mason, Tennant, Bloomfield.

Referee—Kenny Holmshaw, Toronto.

Arena Sold Out For Bear-Cap Tilt

HERSHEY, Pa., April 2 —(AP)— The American Hockey League championship battle moves into the Hershey's sports arena tonight with a capacity crowd assured for the third game in the best-in-five series between Hershey Bears and Indianapolis Caps.

Prospects of a wide open offensive contest resulted in a sell-out of the 7,200 seats several days ago, and officials said another 3,500 fans probably would crowd into the aisles.

The series is a standoff now with each team winning once.

Coach Cooney Weiland brought his Bears home with expressions of satisfaction over Tuesday's 5-4 overtime triumph on the Hoosier ice. Indianapolis claimed the opening encounter by the same score. The fourth game will be played here Saturday night with a fifth Sunday at Indianapolis if necessary.

Alberta—Edmonton Maple Leafs.

Goalie Waddell Winger Curry Feature

MONTREAL, April 2 — (CP). — Montreal Royals had their first taste of defeat today and by the same token Oshawa Generals held a one-game edge as a result of their 3-2 victory here in the opening game of a best-of-seven series for the Eastern Canadian Junior hockey championship.

When the Generals topped the Royals last night before close to 3,700 fans it marked the first time this season that the Montrealers have ended up on the short end of through 19 games without a loss, tying one and winning all the rest.

The two most prominent figures in the Oshawa victory were Goalie Ross Waddell and Winger Floyd Curry. Waddell played brilliantly to hold the Royals to a pair of third period goals by Eddie Emberg. Curry picked up two goals, one of them the winner, while the other Oshawa score went to Ken Smith.

Almost on a par with the top-notch performance turned in by Waddell was the work of Goalie Jean Paul Renaud of Royals. Renaud made only one slip, fanning on a 50-footer fired by Curry shortly after the half-way mark of the third period. The shot, only moderately hard, bounced into the net of Renaud's stick.

Long Chance Ties It

Curry's long-shot goal came after the Royals had battled from behind to tie the score at 2-2 and it seemed to take most of the heart out of the Royals. Prior to Renaud's lapse they had been forcing the play, and it seemed that they might batter down the Oshawa defences to go into the lead.

Smith got the first goal early in the second period on a passing play with Red Tilson, and Curry made it 2-0 a little more than three minutes later. Emberg's two goals were nifty efforts, one coming while Defenceman Jim Galbraith of Generals was off for tripping, and the other while the Royals themselves were shorthanded due to a tripping penalty to Defenceman Bob Macfarlane.

It was a speedy game most of the way with both clubs presenting well-balanced lines and close-checking defences. The second game of the series will be played in Toronto on Friday with the third game likely to be played in Montreal on Monday or Tuesday.

Jap Road Crews Holding No Grievances

WINNIPEG, April 2 — (CP). — Bound for Ontario, a party of Japanese from the Pacific Coast went through Winnipeg last night. They will be placed in camps at Schreiber, 15 miles east of Port Arthur.

Camps have been prepared for their arrival and it is expected the men, most of them in their twenties, will be placed at road work.

A spokesman for the party, which numbered 132 men, said the Japanese being moved from vital defence zones in British Columbia had "no grievance" with the Dominion Government.

"We realize that circumstances over which neither the Government nor we had any control forced the move," said T. Nishajima of New Westminster, the spokesman.

"You must remember that we are Canadians. We were all born in Canada, and we feel that our loyalties belong to this country," he added.

Most of the men were mill hands and fishermen at the coast, and Nishijima said: "We will do whatever is assigned to us."

They were under guard of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachment.

"We like the Mounties," said Norman Watanabe, of Vancouver. "They have been very nice to us."

Many more Japanese will follow this advance party from British Columbia, but the men bound for Schreiber did not know how many or whether wives and children would be sent later.

(Premier Hepburn of Ontario recently announced possibly 3,000 Japanese would be brought to Ontario. They would be put to work on road projects and in timber camps.)

Council Undecided About Parking Lot

Members of the city council looked over the much discussed parking lot on King street this morning. Mayor Hamilton, Alderman Dutton and Glover and City Engineer Parsons considered the extent of work required to level off the property at the rear of the Charlotte street stores which have been marked for demolition.

Entrances to this projected lot are possible from Charlotte street, and in the meantime the Board of Works will probably decide Thursday night on the suggestion to recommend to the Department of Public Works indefinite suspension of the razing of the old stores which the federal authorities agreed to remove.

Need of a parking lot has greatly diminished during the last six months as a result of the restrictions on the automobile industry, and it is believed that use of the lot would be substantially less than the council contemplated when it was first proposed to clear off the property.

No Extra Ration

Ottawa, April 2 (CP).

THE Munitions and Supply Department ruled today that no special consideration will be given to a car owner who seeks additional gasoline because he wishes to drive between his summer cottage and his place of business.

"This regulation will apply whether or not the vehicle owner is employed by a war industry, or is in any other preferred category," said Oil Controller G. R. Cottrelle in the departmental statement.

Under gasoline rationing which went into effect today non-essential driving is limited to about 5,000 miles a year.

Japs Hit Hard On New Guinea

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 2 (AP)—Australian and United States fliers, smashing virtually non-stop at Japan's invasion fringe in the islands above Australia, hammered again today at Salamaua, New Guinea.

A communique said the airdrome was the raiders' target and that hits were scored on the runway.

This continuation of the aerial offensive by Australia's defenders followed two days of blows in which, Prime Minister John Curtin announced, three enemy planes were destroyed, 10 probably destroyed and five—including four flying boats machine-gunned at Kupang, Netherlands Timor—were damaged — a total of 18 aircraft put out of action.

All these attacks were made without loss to the United Nations' Air forces.

There was growing optimism among Australian observers that the Japanese now can be held off in New Guinea although they were cautious not to over-emphasize the enemy's recent withdrawal from the inundated Markham valley.

Red Cross Asks 400 Articles

CAMPBELLFORD, April 2 (ENS) —A new quota of more than four hundred articles was laid before members of the Campbellford and Seymour Branch of the Red Cross, which met for their regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon. In announcing this large assignment of work the secretary pointed out that the coming of spring and longer periods of daylight meant the probability of more bombing raids on the people of Britain and she added "It is just such an emergency as this that necessitates the small sacrifice of a few hours work from such individuals as we in Campbellford. We must not fail to meet this requirement of clothing, which is so necessary—but to accomplish it we must have the loyal support of every member." The quota presented at the meeting was 25 men's shirts, 50 infants' nighties, 50 women's nighties, 50 towels, 20 sheets, 60 pillow cases, 25 pneumonia jackets, 10 wool skirts, 10 wool coats, 10 blouses, 10 pullovers, 10 knickers, 25 skirts, 50 blouses.

The society expressed thanks to all those who donated quilts, knitted garments, buttons, money, etc., and to Mrs. F. F. Long who so kindly loaned her home for the "Spring Tea."

Whole Pacific Strategy In 7 Men's Hands

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 2—(AP).—Upon seven men organized as the Pacific War Council, devolved today the gigantic task of working out the strategy of the United Nations for victory over Japan.

Their efforts are expected to produce the first complete unity of war planning since Japan cracked the ring of Allied defences in the Southwestern Pacific by overwhelming Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies.

President Roosevelt, who announced formation of the council Monday, called the other members to meet with him at the White House today in their initial session. While official word was lacking as to the first work to be undertaken, Mr. Roosevelt has described it as imperative that the United Nations in the Western Pacific "consider together" high policy for the war's successful prosecution.

Summoned to the meeting were Hume Wrong, Canadian Legation Counsellor, representing Canada in the absence of Minister Leighton McCarthy, who is on a short vacation; Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador; Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, Australian Minister of External Affairs; Waler Nash, New Zealand Minister to the United States; T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, and Alexander Loudon, Minister from The Netherlands.

Continue in Washington.

It is authoritatively predicted the Council here will virtually assume supreme direction of the Pacific War policy, whereas a somewhat kindred body in London with only British Commonwealth representatives, will gradually cease to function.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday offered no details on the Council's immediate agenda, except to say it had been formed to permit consultations on the general progress of defending the United Nations against the powers of darkness.

Amplifying his reference to the powers of darkness, Mr. Roosevelt noted that this was Holy Week, and read an excerpt from a personal letter he had received.

"No matter what may be the religious faith of individuals," the letter said, "most Americans see in Calvary's Cross the eternal symbol that light will conquer darkness, truth prove stronger than error, and life greater than death. It is the only sign by which we can conquer the power of black paganism that now threatens every thing which we hold dear."

The Council makes its appearance on the world scene at a critical period in the Pacific conflict when Japan's next major move is still uncertain and preparations for an eventual Allied offensive are only beginning to take shape.

This poses for the Council the all-important strategical question of deciding in what places men and material will count for the most in the long run.

It poses also the question of whether, under enemy pressure, places of dubious strategical importance should be yielded to avoid dividing and therefore weakening available forces.

5 good reasons why YOU should CHANGE to Super Suds

1. Super SUDS—gives you far more suds than you ever expected from any soap—even in hardest water.
2. Super SPEED—soaks out dirt in 10 minutes without hard rubbing. Cuts dishwashing time in half.
3. Super WHITENESS—gets out deep down dirt. Gives you dazzling white washes, without bleaching.
4. Super SAFETY—"RAYON-SAFE". Makes coloured garments sparkle. Grand for woollens too. It won't make you sneeze.
5. Super SAVING—costs you less and goes further.

from lost. The real fight is just beginning.

Of the total of 28 Axis submarines announced sunk or presumed sunk, seven were in the Pacific. Donald Francis Mason, a 28-year-old Rochester, Minn., naval flier emerged as one of the heroes of the preliminary campaign.

Mason is the Atlantic pilot who recently reported "sighted sub, sank same."

On a later patrol Mason blew up another submarine with depth charges. He has been awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross, a silver star to the cross and a commission as an ensign.

Another recent sinking in the Atlantic was accomplished chiefly by Ensign William Tepuni of San Francisco. Tepuni bombed a U-boat until it lay helpless on the surface and was finished off the next day by destroyers. He was awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM J. BRANDON

OMEMEE, April 2 (ENS) — The residents of Omemee district were shocked to hear of the sudden death of William James Brandon at his residence, King street, Omemee, on Sunday night.

Mr. Brandon had been in poor health for some time. He had been alone for the past week, his daughter, Lillian, having gone to visit friends at Newcastle. He did not complain of being sick on Sunday night, but Monday morning, the neighbors, not seeing him, became alarmed, and on entering his home found him dead in bed.

Mr. Brandon was born at Port Hope. He was in his 68th year. As a young boy he came to Reaboro, where he lived for some time, finally moving to Omemee, where he resided until his death.

Left to mourn his loss are one daughter, Lillian, at home, and one son, Milton, of Red Deer, Alberta. His wife predeceased him one year and five months ago; and a sister predeceased him about four years ago.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from Trinity United church, service at 2 o'clock, with Rev. R. M. Patterson, pastor of the church, conducting. Mr. and Mrs. William Weir sang a duet entitled "Life's Railroad to Heaven."

The pallbearers were Messrs. Burton Pogue, Wilfred Rea, Charles Graham and Thomas Little.

Interment was in Emily cemetery. Many floral tributes were received.

Friends from Reaboro, Peterborough and Toronto attended the funeral.

DAVID LITTLE.

WARSAW, April 2 — (ENS). — An active life, full of cheer and kindness for other, ended on Saturday evening at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ray Healey, Peterborough, when David Little died suddenly.

Although suffering from a heart ailment he had been in usual health and the end came as he was reading the evening paper.

Born in Dummer 68 years ago, a son of James Little and Jane Darling he had spent his entire life in this community.

For a number of years he was rural mail courier from Lakefield to North Dummer, later going to Stony Lake, where he became a familiar figure at McCracken's Landing. A popular guide, he soon made many friends among the tourists who frequent this resort, and many were the messages of sympathy received by his family, together with beautiful floral tributes to testify to the esteem in which he was held.

The funeral was held on Tuesday from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. John Morgan, Warsaw, to St. Mark's Cemetery for burial. Rev. E. D. Snelgrove officiated at the service at the house and graveside.

His wife, Christina Alcumbrack, predeceased him fourteen years to the day on which he died.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. John Morgan, Warsaw, and Mrs. Ray Healey, Peterborough, and three sons, Milford of Rosetown, Sask., Garfield and Walter, Detroit, Mich., and two sisters, Mrs. Luther Payne and Mrs. Mary Thompson of Warsaw.

The pall-bearers were six nephews Rufus Payne, Elias Thompson, Norman Payne, Wilfred Murduff, Ernest Payne, and Russell Little.

The flower bearers were Howard Darling, Harold Clifford, Keith Clysdale, David Barr, Elmer Bell, Lloyd Payne, Roy Patterson, Clarence Payne, Hector Thompson and Russell Greystock.

MRS. FREDERICK PENDRIE.

MILLBROOK, April 2—(ENS). — A large number of representative citizens, as well as friends and relatives of the family, gathered at the home of the late Mrs. Frederick F. Pendrie on Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. for the funeral service, which was in charge of Rev. A. L. Sisco, B.D., minister of St. Andrew's United Church.

Mrs. Pendrie's death occurred on Saturday at the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, following a major operation, and was entirely unexpected, progress toward recovery being apparently satisfactory. She was in her 65th year.

The minister's address brought an Easter message of hope and gladness assuring life after death, and stressed also the long period of exacting and faithful nursing made necessary by Mr. Pendrie's ill-health, his wife's death coming just two months to the day after her husband's decease.

The pall-bearers were four nephews A. R. Payne, F. W. McIndoo, Charles E. Dawson of Batavia, N.Y., and Jack Pitman of Frankford, W. H. Coombe, a lifelong friend of Mr. Pendrie, and D. R. Fowler, a business partner. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, the bearers being three friends from Campbellford, Morley Dunk G. Millan, and Eric Ingram. Interment was at Gardiner's Cemetery, Millbrook.

Propose Army School For North Bay

OTTAWA, April 2 — (CP). — An experiment aimed at simplifying army studies for men who lack the benefits of adequate education will go into effect at North Bay, Ont., shortly with establishment there of a new "educational basic training centre," it was learned yesterday at National Defence headquarters.

The camp will be located at the existing Basic Training Centre No. 22, and a new basic centre will be established to replace No. 22 somewhere else in military District No. 2 (Toronto), it was said.

"The object of the new school will be to teach military subjects in such a way that fellows who haven't the benefit of education when they enter the service can absorb their courses more easily," a spokesman said.

He added it is anticipated that if the project is successful the plan will be extended to other parts of Canada.

Staff of the North Bay school will be comprised of army instructors who have civilian experience as teachers. Aside from army subjects, English will be taught for the benefit of army men who do not speak the language well. This provision was made for such people as Ukrainians, rather than French Canadians.

Commanding officer at the camp has not been selected yet. The intention is to open the educational centre as soon as possible.

Special Services For Good Friday

Good Friday is a day of sacred memory in the christian church. It is the English name for the Friday before Easter, kept as the anniversary of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. The term is probably a corruption of the words "God's Friday." It was called long Friday by the Anglo-Saxons and Danes, possibly in allusion to the length of the services which marked the day.

The origin of the celebration of this day is somewhat obscure. Amongst early Jewish christians it gradually grew out of the habit of observing the Passover on the 14th day of Nisan. In the Gentile churches it seems to be well established that originally no yearly cycle of festivals was known at all. In modern times there is a growing tendency for christians of all denominations to regard the day as a holy day.

The importance of the cross of Christ can scarcely be over estimated. The death and resurrection of Jesus formed the substance of apostolic preaching. God has woven a cross into the very fabric of human life. It is borne in upon us as life advances that nothing great can come to us without suffering. It was at Calvary that the world's redemption was wrought. Without Calvaries human experience remains superficial and poor.

Good Friday services will be held in Trinity and Park street churches at 10.30 a.m. under the supervision of the Ministerial Association. Dr. J. D. Smart will preach in the former church, Rev. H. J. Mahoney in the latter. The offerings will be in aid of the daily vacation Bible school.

The usual services will be held in the Catholic and Anglican churches also.

Just Sit Tight

OTTAWA, April 2—(CP). —Here is the advice given today by Elliott M. Little, director of National Selective Service, to people uncertain what action they should take to make a greater contribution to the war effort on the home front:

"Sit tight and carry on the job you are doing.

"Keep on the job you are trained to do until you are told you are needed in another job."

Farmers Urged To Retain Ewes

TORONTO, April 2.—(CP).—Hon. P. M. Dewan, speaking before the Agriculture committee of the Ontario Legislature yesterday, warned that Canada faced a possibility of a wool shortage and he urged that farmers retain their ewes for breeding purposes rather than have them slaughtered for meat.

The Agriculture Minister said he had been advised there is only seven months' supply of raw wool on hand on the North American continent.

Canada, he said, produced only 18,000,000 pounds of wool—just one-fifth of her requirements. Tests have shown Canadian wool, while not as fine as that from the Antipodes, has more strength and durability than any other in the world.

W. J. Gardhouse, (Lib. York West) said a campaign should be inaugurated to encourage sheep-raising but steps should be taken to see that the "farmer was not left holding the bag" when the demand for wool eased off.

John Freeborn (Lib. Middlesex North), chairman of the committee, also warned that if sheep raising was proceeded with indiscriminately there was a danger the farmer would be subject to considerable loss.

Diphtheria Break

WILD GEESE ARRIVE

Just at dusk on Wednesday evening 45 wild geese landed on the R. A. Dobbin pond in North Monaghan, four miles west of the city on Highway 28. These geese come annually and usually feed for several days on grain supplied by Mr. Dobbin, before continuing their flight further north.

JUST A COMMENT

"If the Postal Department can't fly a newer flag than that one, they shouldn't fly any flag at all." This was the comment heard by a reporter from a stranger who had stopped to read the Examiner bulletins. The flag is decidedly the worse for wear, and is not only tattered but dirty looking.

TEMPLE SERVICES

Major Joseph Galway, Hamilton, will be the special speaker at the Easter week-end services at the Salvation Army Temple. He will preach Saturday night and Sunday morning and evening. The Songsters are arranging a Sunday afternoon service of praise, featuring Wycliffe Smith, Toronto, solo cornetist.

SOLDIERS' NAMES

A subscriber to the Examiner has pointed out that a great many families in the district have three sons serving in the armed forces, and she wonders if a list of these could be published. All families with three or more members serving is asked to mail the names, with rank and name of unit to the City Editor at the Examiner. The information will not be taken over the telephone.

SERGT. DUIGNAN MOVED

Women of Peterborough Canadian Women's Volunteer Services have expressed their appreciation of the assistance given them by Sergeant Jack Duignan of Peterborough recruiting office. Sergt. Duignan has been transferred from Peterborough indefinitely. Since the Prince of Wales Regiment was ordered to mobilize, the extra work resulted in an offer from the C.W.V.S. to aid in filling out the many forms required for each recruit. In this work, Sergt. Duignan gave a valuable aid from his knowledge of the work which he received over a period of many months as a recruiting sergeant.

Rev. Father Fitzgerald of Trout Creek, here for the Diocesan celebration of Holy Thursday at St. Peter's Cathedral, came to Peterborough by train instead of the usual travel by automobile.

CUSTOMS INCREASE.

For the fiscal year ending March 31, the customs receipts here showed an increase of $1,827,333.25. The total for the twelve months was $5,190,269.80 as compared with $3,370,936.55 for the corresponding year 1940-41.

TRAPPERS BUSY

Irven J. Lyons, game overseer reported today that there is open water along the north shore of Rice Lake, and the river is open to the lake. Muskrat trappers are able to use canoes inshore and some fair rat catches have been reported. There is little activity along Lake Chemong, or the northern lakes.

GAS RATIONING BEGINS

I. R. Rattenbury of Cities Service said today that gasoline rationing began yesterday without a flutter of unusual circumstance. "All our dealers report business going smoothly. Inventory slips were turned by the noon hour, and I have not heard of anybody without ration books looking for gasoline."

MANY BICYCLES IN USE.

Although close to 1900 bicycles have been licensed in Peterborough so far this year there does not seem to be any end to the number of applications and the number in commission here now is believed to be well over the 2,000 mark. More adults are riding wheels than has been the case for many year.

TO PURCHASE RINK

The Village of Fenelon Falls has been given authority by a private bill in the Ontario Legislature today to purchase the skating rink owned by the Fenelon Athletic Association Ltd. The purchase price is not to exceed $5,200, for which debentures may be issued.

CUT TRUCK MILEAGE

Utilities Commission is cutting down truck mileage 25 per cent, R. L. Dobbin, manager reports. They are operating gas rationing for their motor fleet, beginning with full tanks of 200 gallons, checking mileage every day, and adopting the plan of turning in ration coupons against the quantities used. In fact that is the only way they can obtain fresh supply of gasoline.

HOLIDAYS START

Children in the Separate Schools started their Easter holidays this morning with observance of Holy Thursday and public schools in the city close their doors for the Easter holiday period this evening. Many of the pupils will obtain jobs as delivery boys, and part time workers in stores, during the ten day period, and their services will be welcomed by many merchants.

HIGHWAYS IMPROVE

De Nure bus drivers report improvement in the condition of No. 7 highway between Peterborough and Tweed. Ten days ago the outgoing of frost was heaving the road in some places, and motor traffic was impeded, but wind and sun this week have dried up the surface. "It is a lot better than last spring, and we have not been losing much time from our schedule," the Examiner was told. "On the whole driving conditions are better than fair."

ANOTHER MAIN STREET.

Here's the way Winchell writes: "Without the shimmering gown of night and the makeup of lights, the Main Stem seems tawdry....People sit next to each other in cafeterias and make an art of ignoring each other....Subways are sprinkled (toward dawn with yawn-filled chorines and night-shift workers, looking at each other as if they weren't there....Gals drowning in silks and satins get home after a round of the joynts, looking like they've been through a wringer, not places where you're supposed to enjoy yourself."

HAIL, OLD DOBBIN

Harold Lancaster, Otonabee township farmer has an advertisement on the classified page today that shows the trend of the times. He is offering a Whippet car with good tires for sale and will take a good horse in part payment. Mr. Lancaster who lives three miles out No. 7 highway figures it will be much cheaper to drive Dobbin to and from the city, than to use the car, and the distance is just right for the horse. He has other horses for farm work, and with rationing of gas and rubber, this is a smart move if it can be carried out.

Air Raid Precautions— Basic Course

The third lecture of the new basic course will be held on Sunday, April 5th at 2.15 p.m., and Monday, April 6th at 8.00 p.m. at the Lyceum (opposite City Hall.)

Lecture will be "High Explosive and Incendiary Bombs" by Fire Chief George Gimblett and Ass't Fire Chief George Smith, illustrated by actual bombs.

Gordon K. Fraser, M.P. will also speak for a few minutes on the official Ottawa attitude towards Air Raid Precautions.

Both lectures will be similar.

Local Gun Shots Speed Help For War Victims

Ordinarily speaking, a gun shot usually spells disaster for some one, and while the main objective of the employees of Genelco Limited is to provide the very tools with which to do that to all the enemy forces, their weekly organ known as "Gun Shots., under the leadership of Arthur Kittson, is doing the opposite in providing help and comfort to those who are suffering through the disasters which war has inflicted upon them.

The Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund was the first to benefit from the sales of this effort, and ever since then in rotation has been receiving a full measure of support of quite sizable proportions.

Starting six months ago with initial receipts of $3.25, which were credited early last October each donation has increased in typical style until the fifth donation which is acknowledged to-day, amounts to $77.47, bringing the total to date up to $258.56, an average of over $50.00 a time, which demonstrates the progress of this particular project, when one considers the first issue only yielded $3.25.

Two of the fund's regular contributors are listed to-day, Mrs. William Shannon and E.M.F., while one splendid personal donation of $22.30 is given by one who prefers to be anonymous.

Readers are reminded of the Pet Dog Show to be held in the Peterborough Armouries on Wednesday next by kind permission of Lieut.-Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., E.D., all proceeds of which will come to the fund. There will be special classes for juvenile entries, and special prizes have been donated with a view to assisting the youngsters in the care of their pets. Boys and girls who enter dogs will be admitted to the hall for 10 cents entry fees for dogs are placed at the low figure of 25 cents, giving all an opportunity to enter, there being no restrictions as to breed, color, age or size, and even a class for pure mutts is being arranged for. Every admission ticket to the hall carries a chance on a draw for a registered Boston terrier donated by Mrs. W. J. Welch, and in conjunction with the show itself, tickets are now on sale for a draw to be made for a registered cocker spaniel donated by A. C. Wolfe to further swell the receipts for the fund, as an effort on the part of the dog fanciers of the city to do their bit to help the people of Britain.

500 Pass It Up

OMAHA, April 2 (AP)—Approximately 500 persons passed by an old plug hat on a downtown sidewalk yesterday without giving it a kick. It was April Fool's Day and they wouldn't bite on an old gag. Then J. M. Roncka lifted the hat and found $1 in defence stamps, planted by a reporter seeking a story.

The Biggest Fools

ANGOLA, La., April 2 (AP)—The Angola Argus, published by inmates of the Louisiana State Penitentiary here, yesterday commented editorially: "April Fool's Day should be, we believe, set aside and dedicated wholly to the biggest fools in the world—the penal inmates of America."

APRIL 3, 1917—Dallon, Griffecourt and Arezy captured by French on the Western Front. British airmen shot down eight German planes over the Western Front; six British planes lost. Germans defeated Russian force on the Stokhod River.

Bar Every Jap Is Duckworth Stand On Issue

TORONTO, April 2 — (CP). — Premier Hepburn will deliver his eighth budget speech to-day following which the Ontario Legislature will adjourn for Easter. The recess will extend until next Tuesday.

The Throne Speech debate, in which only nine members participated, closed out yesterday without a division being called, the members giving unanimous consent to adoption of the Speech. It was the first time the Throne Speech debate had been concluded without a division since Premier Hepburn entered the House in 1934.

J. M. Cooper (Lib. Sudbury) and William Duckworth (Con. Toronto Dovercourt) wound up the debate by differing over the entry of Pacific Coast Japanese into Ontario.

Mr. Cooper, claiming Japanese labor could well be utilized in Northern Ontario's mines and lumber industry, declared it was quite right and proper "that we should assist our sister province in this regard." He congraulated the Government for the "open-minded attitude" it had adopted.

Mr. Duckworth recalling the Hong Kong atrocities, declared he was "absolutely opposed to one Jap coming into Ontario."

Welfare Minister Oliver announcing appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate charges of Toronto reliefees dying of malnutrition, threatened at the same time to relieve the city of administration of welfare within its confines.

Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner of the Province, will act as commissioner in probing the charge made by Controller Lewis Duncan that persons on relief in Toronto had died of malnutrition because of the inadequacy of the relief schedule.

Urges Public Probe

Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Conservative Leader, agreed with the procedure to be followed, but urged that the inquiry be held in public.

"There is too great a tendency in Canada to place limits on speech under the guise of preventing the enemy from gaining information of value," said Col. Drew.

In his statement on Toronto relief, Welfare Minister Oliver said that in December 43½ per cent of the total relief costs of the province went to Toronto which had a population comprising 17 per cent of Ontario as a whole.

He said Toronto received 19.6 per cent of the total cost of old age pensions and 22 per cent of the total cost of mothers' allowances.

An amendment to the Liquor Control Act, making it an offence for a minor to purchase or attempt to purchase alcoholic beverages, was given first reading. The act at present makes it an offence to sell to minors.

A bill amending the Evidence Act provides that certificates of certain specified officers shall be accepted as proof of the death of a man on active service. It was given first reading.

Three Youths Face Consuming Count

Provincial Constable Archie Grayling happened to drive along a road near Havelock at the wrong time last night and as a result three Havelock youths, one of them a member of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps at Barriefield, found themselves charged in police court this morning with illegal consumption of liquor.

The two civilian members of the thirsty trio were 19 and 17 years respectively.

Giving evidence this morning Constable Grayling said that the three had had been in a car which had been driven off the road into a field.

"They were just using the car as a place to sit and drink the beer," asked Magistrate Langley and the officer replied in the affirmative.

The three youths were each fined $10 and $2.50 costs.

Biting Reversed

First Of Their Ranks To Join Rangers

These five members of the Prince of Wales Regiment (A.F.) are first in their ranks as N.C.O.'s. Each was first to join in his particular rank and they are pictured here as they were interviewed over the air Tuesday night by R.S.M. Andy Jackson. They are, LEFT to RIGHT: Sergeant Harry Walsh, Corporal Geddes Harper, Private E. F. Francis, Lance-Corporal Barrett and the Regimental Sergeant-Major, Andy Jackson. (Parks' Studio Photo.)

Frank Pammett Returns To The P. of W. Rangers

(By P.W.R.'s Reporter)

Among the scores of Peterborough men who have applied for transfer from units of the Canadian Army with which they are now serving, Corporal Frank R. Pammett, is the first NCO to have returned to Peterborough's Own Regiment.

In Wednesday's orders, Corpl. Pammett was shown as taken on strength on transfer from CA (B) TC No. 32, where he has served in various capacities since leaving the Prince of Wales Rangers last April.

Frank who is also well-known in Scouting activities in the city, commenced his military service on the Administratve and Training Staff of the Regiment in October, 1940, being transferred to the Training Centre a year ago.

On mobilization of the Rangers he was one of the first NCO's to apply for a transfer and is now employed as a Corporal in the Battalion Orderly Room.

In today's orders, two popular acting sergeant of the regiment have been appointed acting company sergeant majors. They are Sergeant George Weir of Peterborough and Sergeant Harry Walsh, also of this city.

A/CSM Weir has been a member of the Prince of Wales Rangers 14 years, twelve of which were continuous and he is wearer of the Canadian Efficiency decoration. He was formerly employed as a decorator at Coleman Brothers and is married and has one child.

A-CSM Harry Walsh, a former softball player in the city loop has been with the Rangers for a period of about two years but he served about three years before that with the 4th Machine Gun company. A former patrolman at the C.G.E., Harry is also married. He made his first broadcast last night over CHEX.

Yesterday's orders were as follows:

Appointments and Promotions

Lieut.-Colonel John Alexander Dewart, M.C., E.D., relinquishes his appointment as Acting O.C.

Major Robert Judson Bolton assumes temporary command, pending appointment of a successor to Lieut.-Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., E.D.

Appointments and Promotions

A/Sergt. Weir, H. George is to be A/CSM.

A/Sergt. Walsh, Harry, is to be A/CSM.

Pte. Burkholder, H. A. is to be A/Cpl.

Seventeen Are Rejected As Unfit by Medical Board

(By P.W.R.'s Reporter).

With the publishing again today of another list of men who applied for enlistment with the Prince of Wales Rangers but were turned down due to stiff medical requirements, Captain H. A. Craig ,acting adjutant of the regiment, declared that these men deserve much credit for having offered their services even though they were not successful in getting into the unit.

"When a man signs the first forms before he is medically boarded, he has passed through the primary stages of enlistment. Such a man is prepared to go into the unit should he pass the medical tests," said Captain Craig. "On behalf of the Prince of Wales Rangers, I say that this type of man is to be just as much congratulated as those men who did get into the unit."

Many former members of the Rangers have been rejected through no fault of their own—men who almost grew up with the unit—yet they are unable to continue any longer now that the regiment has reached the early stage of mobilization as an active unit, he stated. There were many others from the city and district from the general public prepared to make the same sacrifice, but the story was the same.

"And so to these men who must remain behind, we say that the Prince of Wales Rangers is ever mindful of the sacrifice they were ready and willing to make," stated Captain Craig. "Many of these men will no doubt avail themselves of the opportunity to join the 2nd Battalion."

The list follows:

New recruits and not former members of the Prince of Wales Rangers:

Mitchell Edgar Herron, 575 Stewart street, Peterborough.

Hedley Rex Glen, 197 Dublin street, Peterborough.

Walter John Sanderson, 240 Murray street, Peterborough.

Edward Vincent O'Toole, 476 Rogers street, Peterborough.

Edwin Oliver Dorrington, 262 Westcott street, Peterborough.

Thomas Edward Dixon, 376 Burnham street, Peterborough.

Harold Dillon Berry, R.R. 9, Peterborough.

Ernest G. Walsh, 712 Ross street, Peterborough.

Ralph J. Cole, Bowmanville, Ont.

William V. Archer, Burketon, Ont.

Gordon P. Paterson, Toronto, Ont.

Ronald A. Bennewith, 438 Driscoll Terrace, Peterborough.

Leo J. Pearson, 158 Charlotte street, Peterborough.

Frederick W. Holden, 482 Driscoll Terrace, Peterborough.

Former members of the Prince of Wales Rangers who were rejected are:

Cpl. Jack E. Bennett, 87 London street, Peterborough.

Sergt. Norman H. Hewitt, 552 Homewood Avenue, Peterborough.

John Russel Boyd, 210 London street, Peterborough.

Ten Volunteers For Constaulary

The Peterborough branch of the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary is steadily increasing in strength.

Ten more members, introduced by Provincial Constable Price Morris have been sworn in as special constables by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.:

The list is as follows:

Jack E Bennett, 87 London street.
Arthur Millen, 175 London street.
Gordon M. Butler, 593 Division street.
John K. Innes, 576 Harvey street.
Bert Lockheed, Norwood.
Raymond J. Gauthier, 183 Stewart street.
Eldon McDonald, 188 Reid street.
Ray Horne, Norwood.
Clifford Curtis, 637 George street.
Harry L. Corner, 310 Boswell avenue.

Police Are Seeking To Purchase Spitfire

The dance committee of the Peterborough police department has completed arrangements for the Spitfire Fund dance and draw which is to be held in the armouries a week from tomorrow night, April 10.

The band of Jimmy Duffus, eleven strong, has been secured to furnish music for the occasion and the police are looking for a record crowd.

All the proceeds will be devoted to the Canadian Police Second Spitfire Fund drive. The first campaign was a triumphant success. The money raised was turned over, a Spitfire was purchased and presented and will be flown by a former member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Peterborough contributed $2,000 to the cost of the first Spitfire and local police hope that the sum raised in the second drive will be substantial.

In addition to the dance there will be a draw for which the prizes will include $200 in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates, donated by the members of the police department, all of whom have subscribed from their own pockets to raise the $200 in prizes. In addition manufacturers and merchants have offered other prizes and they too will go to holders of the lucky tickets. April 10 will be a big night in aid of a real cause.

Survey Reveals Increase In Livestock

Encourging increases in the number of livestock from horses to hens are shown in the complete summary of the recent farm survey which was conducted by the Peterborough Agricultural War Council, F. G. Paterson informed the Examiner to-day.

The report will be considered by the Council at a meeting Thursday evening, April 9. Mr. Paterson mentioned only several of the facts which the survey has assembled, keeping the main body of information for the council which will review it for the first time.

While there is improvement in the livestock figures, even including sheep, the acreage of grains, present as in winter wheat, and prospective as with Spring sowing is not so favorable, Mr. Paterson said, and possibly the council might consider the advisability of holding a few meetings to stress the need of a greater effort in that grain department. However, this is a matter that rests with the council.

The number of reported tractors is 198 of which 62 are available for some custom work on farms.

Mr Paterson said he had heard something of the facts reflected from the Durham survey, indicating decreases in livestock but also substantial increase in the outlook for grain production in Peterborough's neighboring county.

Poultry Fancier Dies Thursday

A poultry fancier and breeder of outstanding ability, and one of the best known poultry men in the district, Harry T. Lush, 182 Dublin street, died early Thursday morning at his home.

The late Mr. Rush was in his 64th year and had been ill for three weeks. For many years he conducted a bakery business in Peterborough, but in recent years his hobby of poultry raising dominated his life, and he devoted practically all of his time to it.

He was a son of the late Thomas Lush and Ann Coward and has spent his entire life in this city. Surviving is one step-son, Harry J. Allen, and two nephews, Conway and Marland Burns of this city.

The funeral will take place on Saturday, April 4, at 3 in the afternoon from the family residence, 182 Dublin street, to Little Lake cemetery. The Rev. H. L. Roberts of George Street United church will conduct the funeral services.

THE HAT designers have been particularly kind this year, taking note of every type and every taste, with the result that there is a hat for everyone, even for the girl who finds it so difficult to discover something that suits her type. Josephi has come through with several very clever and most becoming hats, one of which is pictured here. He calls it a "milkmaid hat" and it fashioned of navy felt with a high crown section and a cuff of pleated white pique that forms a flattering frame for the face.

Jeanette Scott Chapter

The regular monthly meeting of the Jeanette Scott Chapter I.O.D.E. was held at the home of Mrs. Noel Rishor, London street, with the Regent, Mrs. W. Preston, in the chair.

It was voted to send a contribution of $50 to National Headquarters for the Bomber Fund. An interesting letter was read from Nursing Sister Clara Morris, in which she thanked the I.O.D.E. chapters for her Christmas box. It was decided that the chapter would no longer save tinfoil. Instead it would be turned over to the Salvage Committee for disposal. Plans were discussed for a rummage sale to be held on April 25.

The sum of $44 was realized from the sale of tickets on a quilt and afghan generously donated by Miss Large.

Social events for this month will be a Spring tea, to be held at the home of Mrs. A. E. Edmonds, 191 Sherbrooke street, April 22.

The guest of the afternoon, Dr. Lorna Cotton Thomas, was introduced by Mrs. K. S. Wightman and gave an interesting and enlightening talk on the essentials of democracy: political, social and economic.

This Is Everybody's War

By MOLLY BROWN

We hear much talk about our Democratic rights and privileges just now. We are told that women must work and men must die to maintain these privileges. Would it not be a good idea if, once in a while, some thought were given to the responsibilities that are inseparable from privilege. The fact that we are free to think and speak freely imposes on us the stern responsibility of speaking honestly and intelligently; and it is well to remember that when people lose their priveleges it is usually because they have failed in their responsibilities. ...Salvage workers on the truck were pleasantly surprised the other day when they drove up to a house to find, not only the salvage tied up neatly on the verandah, but the lady of the house at the door door with tea-biscuits, hot from the oven. Aren't some people nice? Seriously, though, there has been an improvement in the tying up of salvage and the collectors find it helps a lot....The organ formerly in use for church parades at the Training Centre has died after a long and useful career, and the camp is left without any means of providing music for the Easter Church parade. The Peter Robinson chapter has undertaken to find another. Some time ago, when instruments were being collected for the Highlanders, a lady offered an organ, if it could be used. The instrument could not be used at the time, and now nobody can remembers the lady's name. tI is believed that she loved on Prince or Princess street. If she still has the organ and wishes to give it away, Mrs. J. K. Hughes will be glad to hear from her; phone 6270...Don't forget the Art Association tea on April 10; proceeds to raise funds for war work. Lovely and unsual prizes are being offered in a raffle, tickets available from any member. ...The North End Workers are raffling a velvet patchwork quilt to aid their war work...The War-time Prices and Trade Board has issued an order placing restriction on the manufacture of woollen clothes for women and girls. Among other rules and regulations laid down in the order it says that special permission will be granted the manufacturer to exceed the approved dimensions when the physical proportions of the individual demand it. Imagine having to get a new suit by Act of Parliament!....If every home in Canada saved one newspaper a week for a year those newspapers would provide enough fibre board for packing five million two-pounder shells for tanks. ....A group of seven of the city's most enthusiastic salvage workers were seen in solemn conclave on the sunny side of Hunter street on Tuesday afternoon. Have they no place to meet, or were they contemplating salvaging the cars parked along the curb?

Mary E. Weir Wed To William Steen

MARMORA, April 2—(ENS).—A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mrs. Donald Rutledge, 160 William street east, Oshawa, when her sister, Marg Evelyn, daughter of Mr. George Weir of Patricia avenue, Oshawa, and William Irwin Steen of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. G. Steen of Galt, were united in marriage by Rev. George Telford. Wedding music was played by Mr. Dave Jenkins, and Mrs. A. Patterson rendered a solo during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was becomingly gowned in a white triple sheer dress with a fingertip veil, and carried a bouquet of calla lillies and pink carnations. Mrs. Rutledge, as her sister's attendant, wore a frock of salmon pink taffeta with matching hat. Mr. A. M. Patterson of Toronto was groomsman.

Following a reception at the home of Mrs. Rutledge, Mr. and Mrs. Steen left on a wedding trip. On their return they will live in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. F. Barnard, Toronto; Miss J. Woodman, Galt; Mr. John Aiken, Peterborough; and Mrs. F. Dixon, Peterborough. The bride is a niece of Mrs. George Hazlitt of Marmora.

Marjorie I. Reed Bride Of Douglas Barringer

The marriage took place in George Street Church of Marjorie Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Reid, to Douglas Charles Barringer. Rev. H. L. Roberts officiated and wedding music was played by C. H. Renaud.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was lovely in a gown of embossed bengaline cut on Grecian lines with a long flowing veil of English net caught with apple blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Bettertime roses. The attendants were Mrs. James Rogers, twin sister of the bride, and Miss Thelma Doud. They were frocked in chiffon gowns with high necklines and bishop sleeves and girdle waistlines. Mrs. Rogers wore pink and Miss Doud turquoise blue, with contrasting veils of English net. They carried bouquets of Talisman and Briarcliffe roses. Mr. Donald Clarke was best man and the ushers were Mr. Wilson Henry and Mr. Gratton Dundas.

After the ceremony a reception was held at Hooper's Palm Rooms, where the bride's mother received, wearing a black silk crepe dress with hat to match and a corsage of roses. The groom's mother also received, wearing a dress of navy blue and white with a navy felt hat and a corsage of roses.

Later the couple left for Toronto, where they stayed at the Royal York Hotel. For travelling the bride wore a dress of light blue silk crepe with a seal coat and accessories to match. On their return they will live at 516 Glengarry avenue.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

Friday, April 3

PERHAPS this day will include to definite, decisive and drastic action in all the affairs, business as well as personal. The sharp change may concern the interest or furthering of public relations or the welfare of collective, community or fraternal groups. Young and sentimental persons may have particular influence in current matters. All, however are subject to duplicity, misrepresentatiin or trickery, and call for particular caution and discretion to avoid major dangers and attain the most ambitious ends.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of sudden, drastic and decisive change or activities in which public welfare or community or social advancement are involved. Young and emotional people may be the subject of much high purpose and ambition. But all matters may be under a menace of fraud, deception treachery or misconstruction, unless much discretion and vigilance be exercised. With precaution, gain, progress and happiness may loom in the personal and domestic or social life. Shun extravagance and show.

A child born on this day should be highly talented in artistic or other creative lines, in which it will be enterprising and ambitious, with intuition and imagination. It may be quite self-indulgent.

For Saturday, April 4

An unusually lively and eventful day is read from the predominant astral configurations, with much of a business, professional and literary nature engaging the attention. It should be a splendid aspect for writers, publishers, advertising and press agents or others in promotional enterprises. But these as well as other activities may develop strange or surprising angles, possibly with romance, adventure or the unpredictable materializing. This may incite nervous tension or other physical as wel las psychological effects.

If If Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year in which the romantic or adventurous and strange may upset all steady and systematic calculations. With calmness, restraint and poise under such challenging circumstances, there may be surprising benefits and thrilling experiences.

A child born on this day should be financially favored, with many promises of success and independence, but this may be negated by either ill health, nervous tension or ungoverned romantic impulses.

St. Paul's Choir Renders Sacred Cantata

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church choir, under the conductorship of Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., gave a rendition, on Wednesday evening, of Maunder's sacred cantata, "Olivet to Calvary."

Before a fair-sized audience, the choir gave a finished performance of this Easter composition, which deals with events of Christ during the closing days of His earthly life, just before His death on the cross.

The music is masterly and appealing, and was given fine interpretation in the chorus parts by the choristers. Solos were well taken by Mrs. Bruce Munro, George Coleman, Jr., George East, Charles Clark, and John Anderson.

Hymns of the cantata were sung by the congregation, and at the intermission Rev. James D. Smart, the minister, delivered an explanatory address on the Bible story of the Saviour's last week before Calvary and the crucifixion.

Baby Band Holds Easter Meeting

The Easter meeting of the Trinity Church Baby Band, held Wednesday afternoon, opened with prayer and the hymn, "Christ the Lord is Risen To-day." During the business session is was decided to hold a tea to display the finished layettes. It was also decided to continue to hold regular meetings throughout the summer months.

Mrs. Alex Haddow, a missionary, who is home on furlough from Bolivia, South America, gave an informal but interesting talk on her work. Although she is not a graduate nurse, Mrs. Haddow has been able, through years of practical experience and faith in prayer, to help many, from the upper classes to the lowly Indians, who are usually treated no better than animals.

The Easter offering was received as a birthday offering, each member giving a cent for each birthday.

Refreshments, including a birthday cake, were served by the committee. Because of the rapid growth of attendance at the meetings, it was decided to hold the next one in the church parlours.

All-Purpose Coat

By PRUNELLA WOOD

FINE finish and expert cutting make this utterly simple wool flannel frock a find for the women of affairs these days. She who has a few hours a day for defence projects wants to look efficient when she joins her uniformed friends on the job. Whether she comes from office or commuters' train for the purpose, this dress will serve her for both personal and defence duties.

Gores in the skirt of this flannel dress insure comfort; handy pockets are used also as a tailored decoration detail.

WELL TAILORED SLACKS

By ALICE ALDEN

SLACKS will be worn by almost every daughter of Eve this spring. They will be the costume for leisure hours about the house, for country or resort wear. Here is a decidedly attractive outfit with a blouse of colorful celanese rayon crepe in a bright vitamin print. The blouse tops slacks of celanese tropical cloth in dark green, tailored in the approved mannish style.

FLANNEL TOWN COAT

By PRUNELLA WOOD

SYNTHETIC fabrics are marvelous, but there is nothing like wool to take the place of wool. The slick and easy reefer sketched here is 100 per cent. wool flannel, suitable for wear with sports frocks, or with soft crepes, as the corn print shirtmaker peeping over the lapels shows you.

Broad shoulders slightly padded for contour; a welted inverted pleat from nape to hem, and released down the skirt at centre back; large patch pockets placed high to the fitted waistline distinguish this flannel wool reefer.

"Mexican Masquerade" ....

By CECIL CARNES

THE STORY: Allan Steele posing as magazine photographer, seeks Dr. Sargent and daughter, on U. S. mission in Mexico's Peninsula, who have disappeared; also news of Harry Bishop, maddened by mysterious injection while on same mission. Bishop, found, repeated only "The yellow devils!" Allan gets leads from Sun Su, Chinese proprietor of isolated inn, who is working with U. S. He learns there is Jap cannery on nearby island that might be front for plane and bomber supply base; that "beautiful and evil" Asia Minor, Eurasian girl who hates the English, is connected with it. He makes play for Asia, is suspicious of her friendliness with Col. Escobar, enigmatic officer of Rural Guard.

CHEESE CATCHES MOUSE
CHAPTER VIII

The lobby was still empty; Asia and Escobar were still chatting in the patio; the rest of the hotel was silent as the night itself. Allan went to bed, reflecting as he undressed that he had not done so badly for the first afternoon. Tomorrow he would have a look at those islands, he promised himself, and if those yellow devils—

Then his head hit the soft cool pillow and he proceeded to sleep like the seven Ephesians. It was broad daylight when the Indian boy, sweeping the central court, awakened him.

He bathed, breakfasted in his room, got into the riding kit he had brought, guessing he would need it, and was waiting for Asia at 9 sharp in the lobby. She appeared promptly with the news that she had ordered a horse for him as well as for herself from a rancher down the road. She looked amazingly lovely, her slim body nicely set off by the white breeches and white silk blouse she was wearing. A hat one size smaller than a circus tent was her homage to the Mexican sun.

She rode well. So did Allan Steele, winning her praise when he subdued a lively rebellion staged by his mount. They settled to an easy single-step. Allan tried to direct their route down the gulf, but she insisted firmly there was nothing worth picturing in that direction, and led the way west.

In response to her fairly direct questions, he obligingly invented a mythical family which had suffered mythical outrages at the hands of the hated English. She expressed womanly sympathy, and frankly aired some of the grievances she had brought from India. They cursed the British Empire in language hotter than the July heat. Allan also gave birth to an older brother who, he said, was an army officer running an important bureau in the War Department at Washington — a brother who kept him informed of much that went on behind the scenes. Allan was quick enough to note the glance she darted at him when he brought out that item of family history. He had her interested, he decided.

She accounted for herself quite readily. She owned a big share in a Japanese fish cannery operating in the gulf, and was here to keep an eye on her investment. Very plausible yarn, approved Allan mentally, for it seemed to cover a lot of territory.

They got back to the hotel at noon. Allan saw a saddle horse tethered in the shade by the front door, and Escobar standing by and watching them keenly as they rode up. He saw something else, too, and checked an exclamation; chancing to look up the road toward San Saba, he spied his elusive friend of overnight just disappearing behind some bushes. Allan whistled softly at a sudden notion; he beckoned to the officer as Asia dismounted and went into the lobby.

"Senor Colonel, I observed a man last night watching this inn while you were inside. I have just seen the same fellow lurking up the road. Thought I'd tell you. It occurs to me that possibly you are being followed—perhaps by one of those 'friends' you met yesterday!"

"Ah!" Colonel Escobar reached up to touch his mustache, staring thoughtfully at the American. "Yes," he admitted slowly, "it is quite possible I am being watched. Could you see if the fellow had on dark blue clothes? And a quite large sombrero?"

"That describes him perfectly." Allan could not condone assassination even for traitors, so he added: "Better keep your eyes open for trouble, eh?"

"Indeed, I will be most careful," promised the colonel of rurales. "And meanwhile, senor, permit me to thank you once again for a kindness. I shan't forget it."

They went into the hotel together, chatting casually. Escobar continued on his way to the patio and Allan halted at a gesture from Sun Su behind the desk. The Chinese was holding out a telegram, which Allan took and ripped open in some mystification. He wasn't expecting a wire from anybody.

The message was signed with the name of the magazine editor in San Francisco, and the text was brief. It said: "When are you going to send us some pictures?"

Allan grinned to himself. He recognized the fine Italian hand of his chief in this. It was he who had sent it, not the editor, and it was merely designed to bear out his avowed reason for being in Lower California. It could also be construed as a delicate hint to get busy on his real job! That reflection wiped the grin from his thoughts. He stuck the envelope in his pocket, glanced cautiously about as usual to make sure there were no eavesdroppers, then spoke quickly to Sun Su.

"I'm going for a spin in the car directly after lunch — looking for photographs, you know. Thought I'd drive about ten miles south along the shore road and see what I find."

"Be careful, senor," murmured the fat man, fanning himself. "If I might suggest something—?"

"Please do. I'll welcome any tip you give me."

"Inland about half a mile there is a second road, not too rough, which takes the same direction as the first. It is much more private. When you are abreast of the islands I mentioned, you'll find a steep little hill with a clump of pines at the top. Lying in them, with that excellent pair of glasses I noticed you carrying, you can see much without being seen yourself."

"Right! Thanks a lot, Sun Su." Allan held the other's eye a moment. "If I don't come back, you'll know where I went last!"

"I understand, senor. I quite understand."

Allan went into the corridor leading to his room. Some yards beyond it the door of another room was slightly ajar; a shadow passing to and fro across it told of movement within. That would be Asia, he surmised, powdering her nose before joining her constant escort in the patio; he dropped the telegram smack in the center of the hall, went into his room, shut the door and fell to powdering his own.

A moment later he smiled at himself in the glass above his washstand. A light footstep had come along the hall, paused just an instant, then went along toward the lobby. The cheese had caught the mouse. Asia had picked up the envelope, but she was going to have a look at its contents before returning it to its owner.

Half an hour later, cooly clothed in a fresh linen suit and feeling pleased with himself, he selected a table in the patio and ordered lunch. The boy had no sooner gone than Colonel Escobar came sauntering across the court and laid a familiar missive on the table.

"Senorita Milnor asked me to hand you this; she picked it up in the corridor, where she thinks you must have dropped it."

"A thousand thanks. Just a word from my editor asking why I haven't been sending him pictures."

"Yes. And apparently the impatient gentleman has been traveling a bit himself." Escobar's hand was at his mouth, either to shape his small mustache or to hide a twitch of his lips. "You said his office was in San Francisco, did you not? Yet I observed the wire is dated from San Diego."

"The devil!" said Steele sorely. It was disconcerting to have the chief's well-meant gesture turn into a boomerang, but Allan forgot that in a temporary irritation. "Do you always read lost correspondence before returning it to its owner, Colonel?"

CONVOYED MACARONI
A New "Get-Together" Dish

THE addition of the right sauce means the difference between the family asking for more or turning up their noses at your efforts.

To make "Convoyed" Macaroni, cook 1 cup of macaroni in boiling, salted water and then drain. Pour 1¼ cups of scalded milk over 1 cup of soft bread crumbs. Add ¼ cup of melted butter and 1 tablespoon of chopped pimento, 1 tablespoon of chopped onion, 1 tablespoon of parsley, 1½ cups of grated cheese, ½ teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon of pepper and 1 tablespoon of H. P. Sauce. Then add 2 well-beaten eggs and mix thoroughly. Add drained macaroni and mix again. Pour into a well-buttered casserole and bake in a slow oven for about 50 minutes.

Also use H. P. Sauce for a richer flavour in stews, meat dishes, gravies, soups, fish and salads.

Look "fair and younger" in this exciting frock Pattern 9017, a Marian Martin original. First fashion detail is the slim waistline..the waist seam dips in front and a panel effect is created by the bodice darts. Result: extra inches disappear. Second fashion detail—the sharp V neck and tie ends outlined with lace or self-ruffling. Try a "camouflage print"; try the clever Sew Chart; try sewing-your-own to save.

Pattern 9017 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 35-inch fabric.

MARITAL SUCCESS DEPENDS ON ABILITY TO COMPROMISE

Husbands and Wives Could Be Happier with Give-and-Take Attitude

Dear Dorothy Dix: We are a young married couple with one child and up until the last few months have been happily married. Now, for some reason I cannot explain, our marriage is being wrecked by the useless and senseless quarrels and arguments my wife and I have been having lately. These leave me so upset that I am miserable for days. To be honest, I will admit that I am headstrong and do not like to be bossed. I don't want to be henpecked as the man next door to us is by his wife who runs the family and wears the pants and tells him where he get on and off. I believe my wife gets ideas from this woman and I have asked her not to associate with this feminine Hitler, because I won't be changed into the type of man he is. I am good to my wife and love her and my baby very much, but I will not continue to live with her if she keeps on starting these useless arguments. Can you help us to straighten things out and return once more to the days when we were happy together? —JIM.

ANSWER—Perhaps you are right and your trouble is the result of your wife falling under the baneful influence of the bossy lady. So why don't you move and get her into better environment?

It is undoubtedly true that the women who henpeck their husbands are proud of their achievement and boast of it to other women. They tell you how they "don't let" their husbands do this, or that, and how they "make" their husbands do as they say about everything until they often cause young and inexperienced wives to think they themselves are showing a lack of independence, and that they should flout their husbands' wishes and emulate Mrs. Fuehrer's tactics. Which naturally brings about arguments that don't tend to make peace in the family unless a man happens to have the disposition of a worm.

But, on the other hand, inasmuch as you admit to being set in your ways and determined to do as you please, perhaps the reason you and your wife do not get along better together is because you are a wifepecker and tyrannize over her, and she may not like that any better than you like being bossed. Undoubtedly most family quarrels start in the struggle between the husband and wife to be the autocrat of the household. Each is determined to rule or ruin, and the end is generally ruin.

Value of Compromise

Since you and your wife are both intelligent human beings, why don't you sit down quietly together and discuss your differences and try to arrange a compromise of them? You make out a list of what you consider your rights and privileges and another list of the things she does to which you object. Also make out a list of the topics over which you always fight. I am sure if you do, you will find that they are so silly that you will laugh over them instead of going into hysterics about them. And, too, that you will agree on the terms on which you can arrange a truce.

Quarreling is a bad habit that you can break yourself of if you will use a little self-control. And you might do that for the baby's sake if not for you own.

Don't Be A Martyr

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl of 17. My father is a doctor, the finest man who ever lived, and he has been a perfect angel to his children and my mother. We have a beautiful home, plenty of money and every comfort, and we should be the happiest people in the world if it were not for my mother. She has such a terrible temper that we all live in fear of her. When she is crossed she curses and calls everyone names. We cannot keep servants because of the way she treats them. She never says a pleasant word to my father and makes fun of him before other people. One of my older sisters is a nervous wreck because of Mother's awful temper. One of my brothers drinks almost continually and quit college, where he was a brilliant student, because of Mother's nagging ways. We are all miserable. What can we do?

UNHAPPY DAUGHTER.

ANSWER—Your father, being a doctor, should be able to solve your problems by being able to determine whether your mother ins mentally responsible for her conduct or not. If she is insane, as her behavior seems to indicate, she should be put into some sort of an institution. If she is sane, the whole family should withdraw from her and leave her to live alone. There is no reason why eight good people should be martyrs to the temper of one bad one.

In many families there is one mean, selfish, sadistic individual who gets his or her pleasure in life by tormenting everyone else in the household. They get away with it because family pride and pity for poor Mary or John makes the father and mother and sisters and brothers endure them under the belief that John or Mary can't help their dispositions.

But these same family devils can control themselves, and do so with strangers, and they would make themselves agreeable at home if they knew that they would be put out of doors if they didn't.

DOROTHY DIX.

A LITTLE frock of navy blue brightened with a touch of frothy white is as sure a sign of spring as a daffodil or blossom branch. Priscilla Lane is addicted to this perennial favorite and models a smart but simply styled dress of navy blue triple sheer. The high-necked collar and yoke are of embroidered white organdy with frilled ruching edged with lace. A navy blue straw beret with the new squared-off front completes the costume.

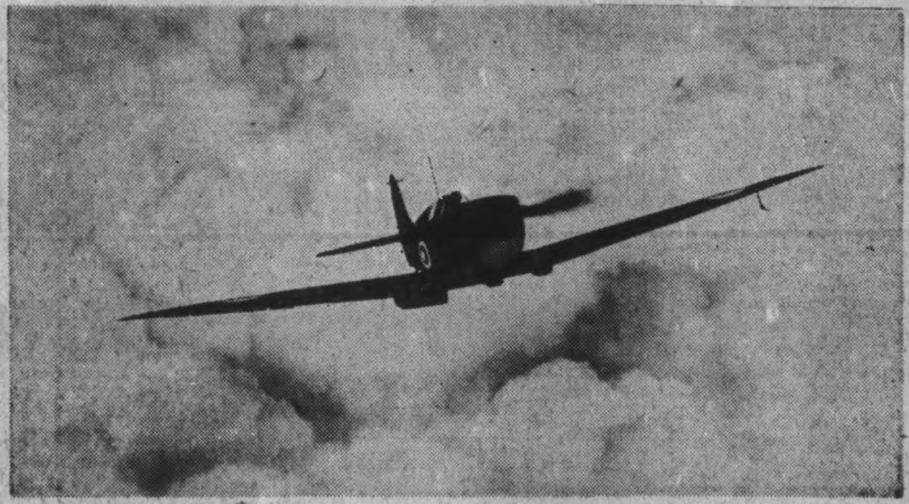
The R.C.A.F. Flashes Over The Channel To Challenge The Luftwaffe

Pilots and observers of an R.C.A.F. bomber squadron overseas study their "target for tonight" under the guidance of the Wing Commander at the extreme left. Soon they will take off once more to pound the Hun. The big, long-range bombers strike far into Germany while swift "Hurry-bombers" hit at occupied France.

Ground crews play a vital role. Here, two corporals give this Hurricane its final tune-up before a raid. Proclaimed a "Fighting Falcon" by its insignia, the swift aircraft carries bombs as well as guns. Corp. H. Robertson, Verdun, Que., checks the oil gauge as Corp. L. Lang, Toronto, assures engine performance.

Astride the nose of a "Hurry-bomber" — a Hurricane fighter equipped for low level bombing — Corporal T. Ryland, of Winnipeg, adjusts the propellor pitch.



Above the clouds the vigilant Spitfire maintains constant watch over his flock of "Hurry-bombers," protecting them from the marauding Messerschmitts as they streak a few feet above the English Channel to blast targets in occupied France.

Ready to take off, a Canadian airman climbs into the cockpit of his "Hurry Bomber." Under the protection of Spitfires these aircraft sweep in at low level to drop their bomb loads, then revert, with guns blazing, to their role as fighter craft.

Sgt. L. C. Bray, D.F.M., Bronte, Ont., pilots a huge Wellington bomber. He and his co-pilot won the D.F.M when they brought their flaming aircraft safely home

'Bundle of grief" being prepared for the Nazis. These two armourers have fused this bomb and are securing the tail fin in its proper position. Then they will load the sensitive "egg" under the wing of the vicious "Hurry-bomber" behind

As this big Wellington bomber reaches its target area Flight Sgt. George Fowler, of Victoria, N.B., inserts a flare into the flare-chute so that the observer up in the nose of the aircraft may set his sights and send the heavy load of destruction hurtling true into the heart of a German factory, dockyard or other target.

All down but one. This group of "Hurry-bomber" pilots anxiously scan the horizon far over the airfield. Then there was a distant throb from the aircraft and the last man swept in to a landing. Afterwards there went to headquarters the welcome report — "None of our aircraft is missing." (Official R.C.A.F. photos)

Red Cross Holds Successful Tea

BENSFORT, April 2 — (ENS). — The local Red Cross Society realized $25.00 from a very successful tea held in the basement of Bensfort Church. The decoration scheme was in green and white, with the occasional red candle brightening the tables.

After about sixty people had done justice to beef, mashed potatoes, hot gravy, peas and carrots, rolls, and pickles, with pie and steaming hot cups of tea a short program was enjoyed. Mrs. Edgar Wood, president, welcomed the guest and then called on Dr. Avison of Peterborough as one of the guest speakers, who spoke very eloquently on Korea, Japan and China.

Miss Winnifred Gainor of Bailieboro gave two pleasing solos, accompanied by Miss Ferne Gainor on the piano.

Rev. R. M. Patterson, Omemee, who is always received with great applause from his Bensfort friends, as he was pastor here fifteen years ago, spoke about Russia.

Mrs. Joe Edgerton played a piano solo. At the close Rev. M. Rowland moved his deep appreciation to the guest speakers and all those who had co-operated to make the evening a success. This was seconded by Mrs. H. Moncrief.

Personals.

Miss Lila McElroy spent the week-end at Port Hope.

Mrs. George McKnight and daughter spent a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Dawson last week.

Some of the farmers are very busy making maple syrup. All report a splendid run.

The ice on Rice Lake is going fast and is not safe even to walk on. A few have started to trap, but as the water has been lowered in the lake it doesn't promise a good season.

Good Grooming by Short-Cut Way

Well-Turned Out Girl Gets Job

"Where does she get the time to look so glamorous?" unsuccessful job-seekers grumble. "I don't stand a chance."

Yet, in all likelihood, the beautifully groomed girl doesn't "get the time." No one does today!

But if you know short-cut methods, in about 35 minutes a day you can not only care for grooming essentials—like bathing—but can care for the little extras that make all the difference.

For instance, you brush your hair of course, but dust will collect, giving a dingy look. To keep your hair clean and shining between shampoos, just rub off the dust with a towel—every few brush strokes.

Then, if you apply face cream with both hands instead of one, you can cream face and neck in the time it may take now to cream just the face.

With the well-groomed girl, you know, a lovely complexion doesn't stop at the chin line!

To schedule your time for grooming, see our new 32-page booklet. It tells quick, efficient ways to care for skin, hair, nails, hands and feet. Also suggests time-saving grooming routines for business girls, home women.

For your copy of "The Quick Way To Smart Grooming" send 15c in coins or stamps to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

PUTTING ON A SHOW

YOUR JOB as declarer is usually to play the hand in the safest, surest, sanest, simplest way that will attain your objective. But if you had been playing all evening with opponents who considered you a wizard and had not found a single opportunity to impress them with something intricate, wouldn't you go out of your way a bit to make an unusually fancy play if you saw a chance to do it? You certainly would. And you also would hope that they would not realize you could have obtained the same result by a much simpler method.

West led his heart K and followed with the Q. A bit of study showed South that his sound way to make the contract was to ruff that trick with the club 10, cash two top clubs and then lead his three top diamonds until one of them was ruffed—a plan which would work if the defenders' trump J was singly guarded. After that he could use the club 8 to the 9 as an entry to the dummy to use the diamonds for two spade discards, giving up a spade at the end.

This declarer, however, saw a way to be fancy. Instead of ruffing the second heart, he discarded the diamond A on it. Next he won the spade switch with the A, took two high clubs, followed by the diamond K and Q, then led the club 8 to the 9. The diamonds then furnished three spade discards. When this worked, his opponents thought he was wonderful. But where would he have been if the club J had been held by the defender who had three trumps? However, even then the sounder plan could have been thwarted if that defender failed to ruff the third high diamond.

Red Fleet Active

LONDON, April 2—(CP). — Russian submarines in the Black Sea were reported by an authoritative source today to be effectively attacking German Sea communications between Constanta, Rumania, and the German-held Russian port of Odessa.

Declaring that the Russian Black Sea Fleet is making a "very powerful contribution toward a final Russian victory," he said that while the fleet remained in being there is little chance of a successful German attempt to land forces on the east of southeast shores of the Black Sea.

Exercises For "Touch" System

If you don't know touch typing, your chances may be limited in office work, for typing is expected in all sorts of jobs.

Yes, there are typing jobs—if you know the quick, accurate touch system. Bosses aren't hiring slow-as-molasses, one-finger typists!

Why not learn touch typing at home with our instruction booklet? A keyboard chart shows how to place your fingers on the eight "guide keys"—j, a, k, s, l, d, f and semi-colon.

Then, as in the exercise pictured, you practice striking these keys. By moving only one finger at a time, striking sharply and lightly, you can work smoothly, evenly and tirelessly—as professional typists do.

Other exercises get you used to the other keys; each finger has its own section on the keyboard. But —no matter what key you type the finger must immediately return to its guide key.

This keeps you from popping all over the keyboard, willy-nilly, making mistakes.

Start learning with the aid of our 32-page typing booklet. Teaches touch typing with charts, exercises, speed drills. Gives rules for typing English; business, social and official letters. Can serve as a foundation for a business college course.

For your copy of "Teach Yourself Touch Typewriting" send 15c in coins or stamps to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE FIRST REQUIREMENT

PLEASE DON'T ever get so good in the playing of hands, that you find it no longer necessary to count up your number of winning tricks in a No Trump cont[illegible]t or apparent losing tricks in a suit contract. Doing that is the first requirement to sound play. If you skip it, nothing else you can do will make up in the long run for that negligence.

North: ♠ 2 ♥ A Q 10 4 ♦ 7 3 ♣ A Q 10 7 4 3

West: ♠ 10 8 5 ♥ 8 6 5 2 ♦ J 10 8 6 2 ♣ 8

East: ♠ Q J 9 4 ♥ K 7 3 ♦ 9 5 ♣ K J 9 2

South: ♠ A K 7 6 3 ♥ J 9 ♦ A K Q 4 ♣ 6 5

After South was set in this contract, he called it hard luck and considered that he had played soundly because, after winning the lead of diamond J with the Q, he had gone to work on the six-card club suit. When his partner later said he could have made the contract by going after hearts instead of clubs, he asked: "Who would ever try a four-card suit before a six-card suit?

For answer, North specified: "Anybody who counted up his tricks."

Had South, upon winning his first trick, done this, he would have seen three certainties in diamonds, two in spades and one in clubs, a total of six, so that three in hearts would make the nine he needed, and he could not help getting three there even if the finesse lost to the K? His bungling play, however, was in this order—the diamond J to the Q, club 6 to the 10 and J, diamond 5 to the A, club 5 to the A, when West discarded, then a change of plan and an effort to win the heart finesse. After the spade A, he led the heart J, which won, but East won the heart Q with the K, and returned the spade Q to the K. Now the spade 7 gave East tricks with the 9 and J, and the club K was the setting trick.

Tomorrow's Problem

North: ♥ 10 8 7 5 ♠ 9 ♦ K J 8 ♣ A 9 6 4 2

West: ♠ 2 ♥ K 10 3 2 ♦ 10 5 2 ♣ J 10 7 5 3

East: ♠ K [illegible] ♥ 8 [illegible] 4 ♦ Q [illegible] ♣ K Q 8

South: ♠ A Q 9 4 3 ♥ A Q J 7 ♦ A 9 7 6 ♣ None

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

If North and South are using the Blackwood convention, what bid should South make on this deal after his partner has jumped his 1-Spade to 3-Spades? Why is that bid better than some other one?

Donald Duck Called

LONDON, Ont., April 2—(CP).—Donald Duck of the Kent County Ducks was called for compulsory military training in the army, but after explaining he is needed on the farm he was granted a postponement here today.

Duck, who is 22, said with a smile he has "name priority" of several years on his Hollywood namesake. As soon as he can leave the family farm near Morpeth he intends to join the Air Force.

Tot, Mother Safe After Birth In Torpedoing

NEW YORK, April 2—(AP). — A mother and her prematurely born baby have been rescued by the United States Navy — presumably after surviving nearly three days in an open lifeboat on the cold North Atlantic.

The story began last Sunday in the office of Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commander of the Eastern Sea Frontier.

The Admiral was preparing to go home for lunch when a confidential message was handed him, announcing that another merchant ship had been torpedoed off the Atlantic coast.

Admiral Andrews made certain that pre-arranged rescue plans had been carried out and then again started to leave.

A second message arrived. This was not a routine rescue job, he informed his staff.

An expectant mother aboard the torpedoed vessel had given birth to her baby, apparently prematurely when the Axis explosives crashed into the merchantman.

The Admiral ordered out rescue craft and planes of all kinds. Vessels not scheduled for duty for days were dispatched with orders to effect a rescue with the greatest possible speed.

Throughout the day the Admiral and his staff awaited word of a rescue. Monday passed without word.

At 4 a.m. (E.D.T.) today, however a navy Lieutenant telephoned Andrews, got him out of bed and reported:

"Sir, one of our warships has picked up a lifeboat with that mother and baby."

The rescue vessel is expected to arrive at an Atlantic port some time tonight.

War On Hoarders

Brockville, Ont., April 2 (CP).

AN announcement issued from the Eastern Ontario regional office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board said today "war on the hoarder has been declared" by the regional office.

The announcement stressed that the board "possesses broad powers to deal with any instance of excessive purchasing of commodities" and added "this applies as much to articles which remain unrationed as to those which now are so treated."

The board does not intend "to deal leniently with any additional instances of which it learns," the regional office said.

Tribute Paid Col. Dewart

"Announcement Tuesday of the removal of Colonel J. A. Dewart, E.D., M.C., from command of the Prince of Wales Rangers for active service, by a new regulation of the Department of Defense, lowering the age limit of senior officers will be regretted by all his friends," Senator Duffus said to the Examiner to-day

"Colonel Dewart was one of the comparatively few officers who served in the last war and then continued his military activity all during the years of peace, especially when the democratic nations were lulled by victory to the extent of substantial disarmament By maintaining the local regiment during that time many young officers and non-commissioned officers received a training which accounted for many enlistments here since the beginning of the war. It is regrettable that after spending so much time and effort in keeping up the spirit and personnel of the Rangers Colonel Dewart should be deprived now of the responsibility of recruiting and leading the regiment. Citizens should appreciate the military service which Colonel Dewart gave to this community as a realist during a long time of democratic idealism regarding a future of peace."

In a time when experienced officers are regarded as indispensable, it seemed actually tragic that an officer of Colonel Dewart's experience and knowlege should be left out, Senator Duffus said.

Euchre Party Held By Hastings L.O.B.A.

HASTINGS, April 2 — (ENS).— Under the leadership of the worthy mistress, Mrs. William Post, Hastings L.O.B.A. No. 408 held another in its present series of euchre parties Friday night.

Thirteen tables were played and prizewinners were: Ladies' first, Mrs. Virgil Oliver; second, Rita West; gents' first, Virgil Olver; second, Kenneth Wellman. A consolation prize was won by Mrs. George Ash.

Following a short period of dancing, refreshments were served by the ladies of the Association.

Red Cross Raffle

In a combined euchre and mat raffle, the local Red Cross Society realized additional and badly needed funds to carry on playing its vital party in the war effort.

Proceeds from the euchre amounted to $20 and prizewinners were: Ladies' first, Mrs. John Oliver; second, Margaret Braithwaite; gents' first, Gus Faux; second, Mrs. R. Stevenson.

Mrs. D. C. Hay won one of the most popular and novel prizes ever offered at these affairs. Being the holder of a lucky ticket she has the privilege to name any Hastings' soldier overseas and the Red Cross will send to him 300 cigarettes. Incidentally the winner's husband, Dr. Doug. Hay, former Hastings dentist is a captain with the R.C.A.M.C. in England.

Prizes were donated by Miss K. German, Mrs. J. A. MacDonald, W. H. Kumpf and Mrs. H. Wilkins.

Joseph Mulholland won the beautiful mat, made and donated by Mrs. Wesley Dainard.

Parity In Prices For Farmers Asked By Dewan

LINDSAY, April 2. — Under a regulated economy farm prices should be high enough to "permit our farmers to pay wages in competition with the present industrial wage scales," Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, said here last night in an address before the Kiwanis Club 'Farmers' Night" meeting.

The Minister revealed findings of the Province's county surveys covering the war production program and in it stressed that approximately 25 per cent of the farmers stated they could co-operate more in the exchange of work.

He revealed also that hog growers now believe that they should have a Province-wide organization and that he agreed with them. In this connection, Mr. Dewan said: "Why should all the recent changes be made in payment of hog carcasses, reducing and increasing penalties for certain weights without producer representatives having a voice in the matter?"

The Minister took price index figures of 1926 as showing a fair relation between the values of farm products and wholly or partially manufactured goods. Field products, by November's figures, were about 15 per cent below 1926 levels and animal products were about 3 per cent below. Both figures were exclusive of bonuses which brought them up to parity with the 1926 index.

"I emphasize," said Mr. Dewan, "that all things being considered, the live stock farmer is in somewhat a preferred position and that the Ontario position is better than that in many sections of the country.

"Now that we have a regulated economy, it seems to me that this is the time to place farm prices on a parity with other goods," he said. "Farm ceilings should be set with the idea of giving fair returns to farmers who have yet to overcome the economic setbacks of the difficult years of the past."

The Minister praised the Wartime Prices and Trade Board for not bringing fruits and vegetables under the ceiling until they reached "fair values." He maintained it is "ridiculous and, at the same time, unjust to producers to leave butter prices frozen at those of the basic period when it happened they were extremely low and out of line with the values of other dairy products."

If prices were good enough, the obtaining of farm help would not be such a serious problem he maintained. In discussing findings of the County Agricultural War Committees, set up by the Department, Mr. Dewan reported from a partial compilation of results:

With some exceptions, the survey indicates a substantial increase in dairy cows, in sows and bacon hogs and a decided increase in hens in 1942 as compared with 1941.

Farmers Plans Federation Meets

CAMPBELLFORD, April 2 (ENS). —The first in the series of four meetings planned by the County Federation of Agriculture will be held here on April 14, according to an announcement made before the directors of the Seymour Agriculture Society on Tuesday evening. Garnet Curle told the gathering, arrangements for the meeting had been completed and that Miss Agnes Macphail and James Gifford would be the guest speakers. President William Hume presided at the directors' meeting, which was called to deal with several questions concerning the Fair Board and to hear the reports of delegates to annual conventions.

Main interest centred in the report given by Robert McCulloch, who was one of the delegates at the annual convention of Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies. He brought back some sound information regarding judging and the general conduct of fairs, which the directors heard with interest. He told them that more interest was being taken in field crop competitions this year, and that delegates appeared whole heartedly behind this project which they felt was an important part of the war effort. That grain grown in competition should be advertised and sold by the local society, was one suggestion he made. Proof of the fact that greater production is needed is seen from the heavy shipments of grain from Western Canada, and there may be no surplus in the West in 1942. "The only real surplus in 1941 was in wheat and we know of no other method of increasing the yield of grain at less cost than by the use of weed free seed of suitable strains. The agriculture society can render no greater service than by purchasing and distributing registered seed when required."

According to Mr. McCulloch there was a feeling among some of the delegates that too much money was spent on outside attractions and not enough on prizes for live stock. There was also a tendency to fall down in the appointment of judges. "Keep away from the judge who favors one particular breed of horses," he warned. The choice of superintendents was also important according to the speaker, who said the feeling was that they should be changed when any fault was found. Nor should the superintendent show in the class he heads. "In picking judges for sheep and swine, be sure they are not too young," since a man might be a good judge of a market lamb but would not necessarily be able to judge it for breeding purposes. In field competitions both a sheaf and threshed grain should be shown, he thought. Other suggestions were: Treat the exhibitor kindly and speak well of his exhibits, "since on satisfied exhibitor is worth ten dissatisfied ones"—the travelling exhibitor should be in a separate class, not competing with local exhibitors; a parade of prize winning animals in front of the grand stand; a note of thanks enclosed with the cheques to the winners.

Secretary G. G. Stephens told the meeting that an application to enter the Ontario Field Crop competition had already been submitted and after some discussion on the quality of oats to be selected it was decided to leave the matter entirely with the contestant who could order his registered seed through the society. On motion, President William Hume was named as their delegate to the annual meeting of the County Federation of Agriculture, and when Mr. McCulloch pointed out that other farm groups such as the cheese producers, egg circle, and neighboring agriculture societies were making contributions to the Federation, it was decided to make a grant of $10.

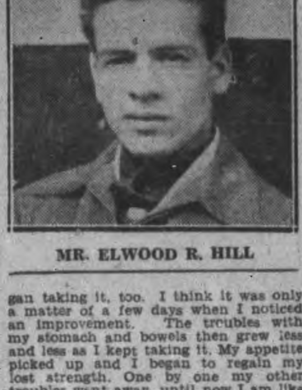
To replace the board fence on the east side of the fair grounds which was destroyed by a wind storm several weeks ago the directors authorized the property chairman, John Locke to advertise for tenders. They decided to install a 9-wire fence with barbs on the top to deter any too enthusiastic boys who might miss the main gate. President William Hume and John Locke gave their report as delegates to the annual meeting of the Central Ontario Fairs Association, held in Belleville on January 29. Pointing out that the date of the Campbellford fair was unchanged, Mr. Locke observed there had been a very good representation from this district at the meeting.

Campbellford Hopes To Form Tennis Club

CAMPBELLFORD, April 2. — (ENS).—The appointment of committees for their Easter dance and discussion of a summer sports program were main features of the weekly meeting of Christ Church Men's Club on Monday evening. Following a review of their recent undertakings, President Sidney Hopping voiced enthusiasm for the club's further plans and urged that some effort to push outdoor activities during the coming months should be made. One suggestion, which received hearty endorsation, was to rehabilitate the tennis courts on the commons west of the church. This, members felt, could be done mainly by their own efforts and at comparatively little expense. Horse shoes and darts were cited as other activities that could be sponsored by the club during the coming months. J. Gillibrand asked members if they would agree to co-operate with the Parish Guild which is planning a card party in the near future, and on motion the club agreed not only to give every assistance but to cancel their regular meeting of April 13th so that the parish hall would be available to the ladies. For their Easter Monday dance they named Adam Yearwood and Harry Bennett as the refreshment committee, and F. Chapman, S. Hopping, A. Yearwood, V. Cubitt to the recreation committee V. Cubitt will be in charge of special prizes.

Always Felt "Dead Tired" Weak, Listless, Rundown!

Lost Time From Work, Suffered Stomach Troubles and Constipation, But Is Like New Person Since Taking Syntona.



MR. ELWOOD R. HILL

There is scarcely a person who at one time or another has not suffered from functional stomach kidney, liver or bowel disorders and the long train of symptoms that often follow. Such people suffer from gas, bloat, indigestion, nervous irritability, dizzy feelings backache, rheumatic pains, get tired easily and feel rundown.

For example, here is a recent experience of Mr. Elwood R. Hill, 66 King William Street, Hamilton, Ontario, who is 23 years of age:

"I was badly rundown and felt so miserable I had to lay off work. I seemed to have lost all my energy and, although I felt dead tired at night, my nerves were so upset I couldn't sleep. There were aching pains all through my back, limbs and joints. My appetite was very poor, yet what little food I ate caused gas and heartburn followed by belching up of hot, sour liquids. In fact, I always had a bloated, nauseated sensation in my stomach. I often had dizzy feelings and was badly constipated. Being only a young man, I knew I should be enjoying good health and couldn't figure cut what was wrong.

"Finally I read in the paper how other people who were in the same condition were being helped by Syntona, so I began taking it, too. I think it was only a matter of a few days when I noticed an improvement. The troubles with my stomach and bowels then grew less and less as I kept taking it. My appetite picked up and I began to regain my lost strength. One by one my other troubles went away, until now I am like an entirely different person. I work steadily without feeling tired or nervous and am surprised how good I feel when I am through for the day. I think more people should know about this fine medicine."

Local men and women can get Syntona in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store. Find out how it can help you, too.—(Advt.)

Double Slaying Seen Grudge, 3rd Man Missing

PONTIAC, Mich., April 2 (AP)—Two elderly farmers, neighbors near the town of Oxford, north of here, were killed by a ruthless killer in their homes last night—one while he was alone and the other in the company of his aged mother-in-law.

The victims, each shot through the heart, were Cassius E. Barber, 71, and Romaine C. Potter, 75, who lived two doors apart on Coach Road, two miles west of Oxford. Barber also was shot twice more in the chest.

Sheriff Spencer C. Howarth, of Oakland county, investigating the killing of Barber when he was notified that Potter also had been slain, said today a young man who once worked as a hired hand for Barber is being sought. A grudge may have motivated the shootings, he said.

Adding to the mystery today was the disappearance of Roy Thorpe, a neighbor of the slain men. Sheriff Howarth said he feared Thorpe, who was missing last night and failed to report for work this morning at his factory job, might have been the killer's third victim.

About 8 p.m. Barber opened his door to a visitor and was shot dead. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, 91, was helpless. But she believed she recognized the killer.

The killer went down the road, entered Potter's home, and shot him.

Havelock Girl Is Given Shower

HAVELOCK, April 2 — (ENS).— Misses Lucy and Laurabella Wing entertained thirty-five intimate friends of Miss Edna Haig at a miscellaneous shower on Friday evening. The decorative scheme was carried out in Easter colors of mauve and yellow fluted streamers and an Easter bunny suspended in the centre of the room. For entertainment, three romantic contests were held, which caused much merriment.

The spotlight of the event was the arrival of the "late Mrs. Santa Claus," with a hamper of attractively wrapped gifts which she presented to the bride-elect, and for which the recipient made acknowledgment in very appreciative terms. At the close delicious refreshments were served in buffet style, from the dining-room table, which was artistically decorated with varied Easter motifs, with Mrs. C. Roberts pouring tea, and Miss Haig serving bride's cake, assisted by Mrs. Wing, Mrs. Ray Moir and Mrs. Lynn Anderson.

The Circe Given Up

London, April 2 (CP)

THE British Empire flying boat Circe, carrying a crew of four and 16 passengers escaping from Java, was lost somewhere in East Indies waters late in February, the Netherlands Indies News Agency Aneta reported today on the basis of information from Australia. There has been no word of any survivors, Aneta said.

The plane's last radio message gave its position as 200 miles from Tjilatjap, on Java's south coast.

Cheese Gradings Soar Heavily

OTTAWA, April 2— (CP).— Ontario and Quebec cheese gradings at March 28 totalled 199,470 boxes for the present year against 49,636 boxes for the same period in 1941, Agriculture Department officials said today.

For the week ending March 28, gradings were 10,317 boxes against 1,532 in the corresponding week last year.

Officials saw the increased production as a good augury for coming months when Canada will be engaged in filling a new cheese contract for the United Kingdom.

In the year ending April 1, Canada supplied 112,000,000 pounds of cheese to the United Kingdom and it has been estimated the contract to be signed for the coming year will total at least 125,000,000 pounds, although no details of arrangements being discussed with the United Kingdom have been announced.

Coast Air Bases Unfolded For Ralston

VICTORIA, April 2 —(CP). — From an air base several hundred miles north of here on the northern end of Vancouver Island, Defence Minister Ralston and Air Minister Power to-day are scheduled to resume their tour of Canada's Pacific defences.

The two Cabinet ministers arrived at the unnamed air base late yesterday in two Royal Caandian Air Force Amphibians which on Monday took them to Prince Rupert for the start of their inspection trip.

To-day the ministers, accompanied by high ranking Army and Air Force officers are to visit Nanaimo and later come here before proceeding to Vancouver where they will complete their Pacific inspection.

Both ministers remained noncommittal on their flight over British Columbia's long, inlet-indented coastline with its air bases and its coast defence works.

But they saw at first hand the Dominion's defences against attack from the Pacific.

When they arrived here, Col. Ralston and Major Power will confer with Premier John Hart and Lieut.-Governor W. C. Woodward, probably returning to Vancouver on Friday.

Cripps' Offer Rejected By Moslems

Fear Results To See Party Tied To Hindu Chariot

NEW DELHI, April 4—(CP)—Declaring that Britain's plan for post-war Indian dominion status would "keep Moslems tied to the chariot wheels of Hindudom," Mohammed Ali Jinnah indicated today that the autonomy proposal already rejected by the powerful All-India Congress party also was unsatisfactory to his Moslem League.

Jinnah, leader of India's second largest party, expressed disappointment that the "entity and integrity of the Moslem nation was not expressly recognized" in the offer outlined by Sir Stafford Cripps in an effort to bring the Indians wholeheartedly into the war effort.

The All-India Congress working committee met for about two hours today.

Dr. Maulana Abdul Kalan Azad, Congress president, said the meeting considered the situation in Begal and Assam in view of the warfare nearing from Burma, and discussed what lead the organization should give the country.

He added that Mohandas K. Gandhi, Nationalist leader, had relayed his departure from the capital for a day to give the committee the benefit of his advice.

Sir Stafford called at noon upon Louis Johnson personal representative of President Roosevelt in India.

Mohammed Ali Jinnah, leader of the Moslem minority, declared in Allahabad that the Moslems would never accept any proposals that would prevent their achievement of a separate state.

Addressing the Moslem League, he referred to the current plan as "a bare skeleton of proposals which would obviously require a lot of filling in and adjusting before it can be made acceptable."

"It is obviously one of those cases," he said, "where details are and will become more vital than a bare statement of certain principles."

Corregidor Guns Down Two More

WASHINGTON, April 4.—(AP)—The United States War Department reported today that the anti-aircraft gunners of the Philippine's Corregidor fortress shot down two more heavy Japanese bombers, increasing their bag to 17 destroyed in less than two weeks.

Two other enemy raiders probably were damaged, a communique said.

A new type of bomb was dropped by the foes over Corregidor yesterday afternoon, the department said, explaining that they burst in the air with huge flames. No damage resulted from the attacks.

One the Bataan Peninsula, the Japanese laid down a heavy artillery fire for three hours, but the expected ground attack failed to develop.

Wounded Prisoner Swap On

British And Turks Arranging Trade At Turkish Port

LONDON, April 4 (CP). — The Foreign Office announced that an exchange of sick and wounded British and Italian prisoners of war—on an "all-or-none" basis—started today at Izmar, also known as Smyrna, a port in Western Turkey.

Negotiations conducted through a third country—identified only as "a protecting power"—have set in motion the machinery for the exchange, the foreign office said.

"In view of the nature of the operation, further details cannot be given at this stage but a full statement including the names of those repatriated will be issued when it is completed," the announcement declared.

A spokesman said the Italians to be repatriated "will be far more numerous" than British prisoners from the inevitable fact that the British Empire holds far more prisoners than Italy."

The ratio of Italian to British prisoners is believed to be not less than five to one, it was said.

The exchange will be made from hospital ships and it has been suggested that each side send one ship to Izmir to make the swap.

He said the British side of the nations are being conducted on the lines of the Geneva and International Red Cross conventions on prisoners of war that the "obligation to repatriate is absolute and takes no account of the relative numbers on either side."

Independent medical commissions ae reviewing cases on both sides, he added.

Hitler Desperate, Grim 6 Mos. Due

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

There appears to be a considerable degree of optimism running through the Allied countries, due largely to two things—the amazing successes of the Russians and the appointment of Gen. MacArthur to supreme command in the western Pacific.

It is right that we should take encouragement from these events. Indeed, a certain amount of prideful optimism is a good thing, for it breeds confidence. At the same time many obeservers have the uneasy feeling that our wings of hope have carried us too high.

A war analyst would fail in his trust if he shirked the uncomfortable task of giving the other side of the picture. Therefore less we become over-confident, or too much given to wishful thinking, we shall be wise to check up to see just how matters stand.

First off while it is true the Russians have given Hitler a terrific lacing this past winter, and undoubtedly have hurt him badly, it is equally true that he seems a long way from being knocked out. He is still powerful—still the master of one of the most perfect fighting machines ever created.

Because of that, and because the holocaust of the next six months or so in Eastern Europe and the Middle East is likely to determine the course of the whole war, the Nazi chief is going to strike some mighty blows. It will be strange if some of those blows don't hurt the Allies badly. When a man is desperate he is the most dangerous, and Hitler is desperate.

The Russo-German conflict isn't the only place where the Allies can get hurt. For instance, we are winning the battle of production but at the moment are having a hard struggle in the battle of transportation, because of the U-boat depredations. War material which ought to be in Russia or other theatres is delayed because of lack of ships. And we appear to be on the verge of a great Nazi submarine offensive which may make anything thus far seem like kindergarten stuff.

While we are looking at the dark side, let's take a good look. It's possible Hitler may last out at Sweden, and if he does he may be expected

Trapped On Anti-Trust Law Oil Firm's Patents Seen Free During The War

U.S. To Set Royalties When Conflict Over; Negotiations Under Way In Toronto With Chiefs Ottawa's New Rubber Program

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 4—(CP).—The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, owner of some of the basic patents in the manufacture of synthetic rubber, has made an offer to the Canadian Government concerning their use in wartime, it was stated here today by Frank A. Howard, Standard vice-president.

Caught in the meshes of the United States anti-trust laws, Standard a few days ago agreed to a consent decree in the American courts by which its patents on synthetic rubber, airplane gasoline and other wartime necessities were freed for the duration of the war.

This decree, however, only applied to the United States but it was intimated today by the Standard vice-president that concessions along the same general line are being offered to Canada.

Howard said he had conferences here this week with Col. Arthur L. Bishop, Toronto industrialist, who is president of the new government-owned company know as Polymer Corporation, Limited, which is in charge of Canada's synthetic rubber program and J. R. N'cholson, deputy controller of supplies in the Canadian Munitions and Supply Department. He said "they seemed to be quite satisfied with our offer."

The question of royalties on the Standard synthetic rubber patents is important to Canada because, like the United States, it is starting a big production program to take the place of natural rubber which used to be imported from Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies.

Checking Past Week.

The legal position of the standard patents has been under review here all wek. It started when Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney-general in charge of anti-trust prosecutions, vharged before the Truman committee of the Senate that Standard, through its cartel arrangements with the German Chemical Trust, had stifled and retarded synthetic rubber production in the United States and had refused to divulge its processes to the British and United States governments while turning it over to Germany and Italy through the I G. Farbenindutsrie, the chemical trust.

This was denied by two Standard officials, Howard and William S. Farrish president, who insisted their cartel arrangements with the German company had reacted to the benefit of the United States and, in fact, had expedited and accelerated the synthetic rubber program.

The background of the story is this: In 1929, Standard and I. G. Farben entered a cartel arrangement, dividing the world between them pooling patents and agreeing to share research work. Thurman, in his testimony before the Truman committee, said he believed the arrangement between the two companies, probably the bigest chemical and oil organizations in the world, was purely commercial and monopolistic in its original form but when the National Socialists gained power in Germany, I. G. Farben gradually came under Nazi control and was used in their general war-preparedness plans.

Blocked In States.

Arnold told the committee that I. G. Farben, acting under instruction from the Nazis, went ahead with synthetic rubber production in Germany, as part of the self-sufficiency program of the Nazis, while effectively blocking it in the United States by withholding vital processing information from Standard.

This part of his testimony was denied by Standard officials but, in any event, a subsequent agreement was made by Sta. dard and I. G. Farben in October, 1939, after the outbreak of war.

This agreement, negotiated in The Hague with the approval—so the Standard oil officials testified—of the British Foreign Office, redistributed patents and markets between the two companies.

Glass Goes Through

ALBANY, N.Y., April 4 — (AP). — Two torpedoings failed to bar blue glass from Britain from reaching St. Paul's Episcopal Church for a memorial window. The first ship carrying the glass was torpedoed in the Atlantic, but was beached and the cargo was saved. The glass was reloaded on a second vessel, which was torpedoed. The process was repeated with a third, and the glass delivered—the packing case still wet and labelled "Great Britain delivers the goods."

FamedMandalay Takes Heavy Jap Air Bombing

LONDON, April 4—(CP).—Mandalay, storied city in Eastern Burma toward which the Japanese have pointed an invasion army, was heavily bombed yesterday by the Japanese Air Force but no military damage was done, it was announced today.

A communique said a hospital caught fire and the patients had to be moved to safety during the bombing. It also reported two other towns in Central Burma were bombed yesterday, but said damage was slight.

The communique said British troops had completed their withdrawal from Prome, in Western Burma, despite "hard" infantry attacks by the Japanese and "severe air attacks."

Jap Fleet Takes a Rap

NEW DELHI, April 4—(CP). — Japanese ships moored in their newly-won lair in the Bay of Bengal, from which Japan presumably hopes to prey on the United Nations supply route to India and China, have taken a heavy pounding from United States flying fortress bombers operating for the first time from bases in India.

The first communique issued by the New Delhi headquarters of the U.S. air forces in India announced that the hugh bombers, flown under the personal direction of the United States Air Commander in India, Maj.-Gen. Lewis H. Brerton, set fire to one Japanese cruiser and a troopship and probably damaged two other ships.

Gen. Brerton, who flew with the American Expeditionary Force in France during the First Great War and was Commander of the Army Air Force in the Philippines before going to India, was said to have led his bombers into action at Port Blair in the Andaman Islands. The Japanese occupied the islands last week.

Guerillas Play Hob Behind Hun Lines Capture 250 Tons Food

LONDON, April 4—(CP).—The Germans again are making "very hard" counter-attacks on various parts of the Russian front, a military comertator said today.

Claim Soviet Losses High.

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), April 4—(AP). The German high command claimed today that the Russians during the first three months of this year suffered "very heavy losses in men and material in an unsuccessful attempt to shatter the German eastern front and during German offensive operations."

Aside from the high losses in men killed, the Germans claimed the Russians had suffered these losses from January 1 and March 31; 104,128 prisoners, 2,167 tanks, 2,519 guns, 1,765 planes lost in air combats, 250 planes destroyed by anti-aircraft fire, 595 planes destroyed on the ground, and 110 planes shot down by army formations.

The high command said the Nazi air force raided military installations in Murmansk, far-north Russian port, and damaged a merchant ship in the harbor.

The command reported today that activity had increased on the northern area of the long front and that the Russians had carried out isolated attacks in the Donets region and the central sector.

Red Guerillas Hit Hard.

MOSCOW, April 4—(AP).—Delivery to the Red army of 250 tons of foodstuffs assembled by collective farmers working in German-occupied territory was announced here today among dramatic guerilla contributions to the Soviet war effort.

Organized patriots, working behind and within the invasion lines, have killed 800 Germans and hampered road and railway communications in two sectors, Russian authorities said.

Guerillas operating about Smolensk, Dnieper River stronghold 230 miles west of Moscow, were declared officially to have killed 500 Germans, captured 22 and destroyed 36 bridges, three tanks and 300 Nazi munitions carts.

"Exerting their control on a number of roads," the announcement said, "the guerillas have compelled the Germans to move over these roads only in big detachments."

Find Lad In Barn He Hated School

OTTAWA, April 4 — (CP). — Nine-year-old Art. Paquette, missing from his home since last Wednesday, was found early to-day in the hayloft of a barn at the rear of a hotel, but search continued for two other missing persons—a small boy and a 76-year-old man.

Arthur was located by an Ottawa reporter (Journal). He said he left home because "I hated going to school."

Donald Taylor, 2½-year-old son of Pte. and Mrs. Donald Taylor of Ottawa has not been seen since he disappeared on Wednesday afternoon, and fears mounted for his safety when another cold night passed and he was still missing.

The third person whom police were seeking was Arthur Powney, 76. His daughter, Mrs. William Touhey, said he had been in poor health and expressed fear he might have suffered a lapse of memory.

News Flashes

NEW YORK — (AP)—The long-heralded sugar rationing program in the United States may be scrapped, the Herald Tribune said today in a dispatch from Washington. The paper said the setup, now tentatively set to get under way with a country-side registration May 4-7, might be dropped if estimates of current sugar supplies compiled by the war production board prevail over the insistence of the office of price administration.

Allied Aces Crimping Japs In Far East

One Bright Spot Whole War Front—Red Time For Relief Or Leningrad Gets Short

(Written For The Canadian Press By Major.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn)

LONDON, April 4.—(CP Cable.)—Successes of Australian and American airmen in the sky battle against the Japanese in New Guinea provide an encouarging feature in the Far-East situation.

Now rains have brought floods and discomfiture to the enemy and the danger of Port Moresby falling into his hand has almost passed.

It is easy to see why Port Moresby is so important. A strong Japanese air force there would have greatly facilitated the capture of an airbase on the northern coast of Australia itself. With the Torres Straits closed the sea communications of an enemy force landed in northern or western Australia would be practically immune from naval attacks and Port Darwin would lost its strategic importance as a potential base for Allied warships.

The Torres Straits also would give the Japanese a valuable alternate sea route to the Timor Sea.

Australian Reorganization.

Re-organization of the Australian military force is rapidly taking shape under Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey's experienced direction. The return of the Australian Imperial force divisions should provide a valuable element of experience in the home army and there are no troops quicker than the Australians to take advice.

Chinese at Toungoo

The situation in Burma is still confused and anxious. Reinforcement presents many difficulties and there are reports of a deficiency in air support, although such air forces as are available have done admirable work. Our Chinese allies have evidently put up a gallant and skillful fight at Toungoo and there appear to be good prospects that the Japanese soon will have to face stronger Chinese forces. The manner in which the threatening situation on the Irrawaddy front was dealt with by the endangered troops themselves also is encouraging.

At Sea

In Libya there has been no change in the ground situation, but the Axis attempts to obtain air supremacy so far have definitely failed.

Following Rear-Admiral Philip Vian's successful action in safely delivering the Malta convoy and the St. Nazaire exploits came the failue of the heavy German attack on the Murmansk convoy. Immense as is its task and as widely as it is dispersed, the navy clearly has not lost its power of protecting sea communications.

Malta continues to add to its fame. Nothing, however, in its defence has impressed me more than the alertness and coolness shown when an attack on a harbor by an Italian "secret weapon"—a one-man submarine—was dealt with. Lack of those qualities in the German defence of the St. Nazaire approaches is in strong contrast.

Russia: Race With Thaw

The thaw has begun in Russia, but only in the south does it appear to have produced mud conditions. Fighting in all sectors from Kharkov northward is as fierce as ever.

The time is getting short, however, to accomplish the reopening of communications with Leningrad before the ice route over Lake Ladoga is interrupted.

The Russians clearly are making great efforts to attain that object, but the German resistance is stubborn. The German attempts to relieve their isolated army at Staraya Russa have increased in intensity. These are the two points where the issue has been in the balance.

A Canadian Army Overseas

Announcement of Formation Expected In Few Days

By ROSS MUNRO
C.P. War Correspondent

LONDON, April 3—(CP Cable)—Announcement of the formation of the Canadian Army Overseas was believed imminent today and many expected it to be made within a few days.

Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian Corps, probably brought complete plans for the army when he returned to England after his inspection tour of Canada and the United States, it was said.

It is expected an army headquarters will be set up in England, distinct from the present corps headquarters. Staff organization will be built up gradually and a number of staff officers will be moved from the corps and divisions to the army staff, according to reports.

Japs Demand Reds Shift

China Sees Flat Refusal To Move In Siberia

CHUNGKING, April 4.—(AP)—The Chinese press displayed today so-called British reports that Japan had demanded withdrawal of the Red Army from Siberia's Manchoukuo frontier and evacuation of certain airdromes and other strategic points considered by the Japanese vital to their security.

The newspaper Ta Kung Pao said that if such demands actually were presented Russia's reply would be a flat rejection.

"With the Nazis sharpening their swords for a spring offensive against Moscow," this newspaper went on, "the time is becoming ripe for a Japanese attack on Siberia... War between Russia and Japan is unavoidable. When the time comes Chinese troops will move swiftly Russia's support."

UNITED STATES SHIPYARDS ARE OFFSETTING LOSSES IN PACIFIC

Air Tender, Warship, Tanker Battle Of Java Victims As Japs Bomb Unopposed

Heavy Air Reinforcements Sent Australia Now Reversing Far East Picture; Sea Losses Episodes Full Of Heroism

WASHINGTON, April 4—(AP)—The United States Navy has announced that virtually unopposed Japanese bombers sank the aircraft tender Langley and two other warships in the Battle of Java, but the southwest Pacific air tide was believed today to be turning, and navy shipbuilding is far ahead of losses.

About 700 officers and men were lost when the Langley was sunk off Java February 27 and the naval tanker Pecos was sunk nearby March 1. The Pecos had been carrying the Langley survivors, and only about one-third of the crews of the two ships were saved, the navy announced last night.

The destroyer Peary was bombed and sunk about February 19 at Darwin, Australia, going down with her guns firing. Loss of life was believed light.

Meanwhile, fuller details of an earlier engagement came to light. It was announced that destroyer division 59 of the U.S. Asiatic fleet steamed back and forth through a Japanese convoy in a Macassar Strait night attack late in January, sank a number of enemy ships with torpedoes and point-blank gunfire, and escaped with only minor damage to one ship.

Naval observers said that when the Battle of Java was fought U.S. vessels were handicapped by lack of air support. Now, ...ow..., the growing strength of American land-based units in Northern Australia may reverse the picture.

The new sinkings brought to 25 the number of U.S. naval losses in the air. Thus far 10 destroyers, one battleship, three submarines, one cruiser, one aircraft tender, two coast guard vessels, two tankers, one target ship, one cargo ship, one gunboat, and two miscellaneous type vessels have been listed as sunk.

New Ships Rolling Out.

But the launching of 16 destroyers, a battleship, two cruisers, two aircraft tenders and a number of other naval craft since Pearl Harbor dwarfs these losses.

The Japanese, on the other hand, have lost at least 30 warships including a battleship, six cruiser, and two airplane carriers. Their rate of new building is believed to be only a fraction of that of the U.S.

The Langley, converted from a collier to become the United States' first aircraft carrier and later turned into a tender to serve both seaplanes and airplanes, had been claimed sunk by the Japanese at least three times durirng the first month of the war. During this time the vessel had gone undamaged.

Cmdr. Robert P. McConnell, who commanded the Langley, and Lt.-Cmdr. Elmer P. Abernethy of the Pecos gave details of the Java battles at San Francisco last night. Lt.-Cmdr. John M. Bermingham of the Peary was killed in action.

The story of the convoy attack by Destroyer Division 59 was told by Cmdr. Paul Talbot who led the division.

Early on the morning of February 27 a Japanese observation plane sighted the Langley and her escorting destroyers in the combat zone of the Indian Ocean north of Australia and south of Java. The Langley was carrying supplies.

About noon, Japanese bombers appeared. The bombers made a series of approaches, then flew twice over the Langley in formations of nine planes each, dropping their bombs in clusters.

The planes were level bombers and flew at a height of about 15,000 feet.

Second Salvo Scores.

The first salvo came close. The second exploded with terrific red and yellow blast that battered the vessel so her crew was forced to abandon ship.

Soon the destroyers had picked up the survivors, all but 14 of the crew. The U.S. destroyers then blasted at the Langley, hastening her sinking so she would not fall into Japanese hands.

In her role as aircraft tender the Langley still carried sections of the flight deck she had as a carrier, but it was no longer usable as such for combat purposes.

The Pecos was about 30 miles distant when the battle began. As soon as it as over, the destroyer

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, April 5

Sundays' horoscope is a very interesting and prosperous one, with the promise of recognition, preferment, promotion or other testimonies of favoritism from superiors, employers or those in high places and influence. There may be some measure of public esteem and approbation as well. The intellectual faculties may be particularly under imaginative or intuitive stimulus.

Those whose birthdy it is should have a year in which their intellectual faculties and energies may react to some strange, unique or psychological urges which will result in fine creative expression or give spur and vision to unusual creative talents.

A child born on this day should have much talent of an unusual, profound or distinctive quality, which may enlist public acclaim and reward, as well as promotion, favors or preferment from superiors or those in authority.

For Monday, April 6

Monday's astrological forecast is a complicated, intriguing and difficult one to delineate, since it has most peculiar and conflicting situations which may stampede the energies, initiative and high ambitions. At the same time there is an aspect in the social, affectional and domestic scene which may have the solution to illusive and vague circumstances demanding alertness and straightforward dealings. Shun extravagances.

Those whose birthday it is may be one the eve of a year of complication and intrigue, which may call for astute, vigilant and sagacious handling. Intrigue and duplicity menace, while at the same time there may be benefits from hidden sources, perhaps of a social, domestic or sentimental nature. Shun extravagance, keep poise and watchful.

A child born on this day should be genial, gracious and hospitable, impulsive and headstrong. It may suffer loss and defeat through imposition, extravagance, fraud and theft.

Customs Totals Show Increase

COBOURG, April 4 — (ENS) Customs collections for the fiscal year just ended hit a new high with a large increase over the totals for the year before. CUTS BURNS WOUNDS ARE SOOTHED AT A TOUCH with Germolene ASEPTIC OINTMENT

Says Suburban Roads Get All The Money

Seeking release from their own resolution, a deputation from the county council told the finance committee of the city council Thursday night that if the suburban area financing goes through on the proposed $10,000 basis, to which complete assent has been given, the county road system will be impoverished for this year.

Reeve M. H. Johnston, Deputy-reeve McIlmoyle, M. H. Gainey of the Suburban Area Commission and D. A. MacIver, county road engineer, informed the council that the provincial government's retrenchment in road grants this year, announced during the last week in March when the county council was in session, was going to interfere seriously with the road program.

The county decided by resolution, not by bylaw, in January to allot $10,000 of its funds to the Suburban Area Commission. According to the statute, the city was notified of this action and passed a similar amount, and included it in the budget which is now working into the 1942 tax rate.

That made a total of $20,000, and the province grants contribute a like amount of $20,000, totalling $40,000 to be spent on the Suburban Area system of roads.

But, the province told the county that the usual subsidy would be paid on a total expenditure of not more $44,000. That meant the province would pay up to $22,000 this year on roads, and bridges, county and suburban. And that was just around half of what they contributed last year.

Deputy-reeve Johnston said that "If we have to go through with the $10,000 basis for Suburban roads we'll have practically nothing left for our county roads."

The county realized this prospect in March and decided to spend an additional $15,000 on which they would not get any subsidy from the government. That sum plus the $2,000, all that would be left from the government grant after $40,000 was allotted to the suburban area roads, would make $15,000 for the county roads, and the spent something like twice that amount last year.

The deputation said they were wondering whether the city would be agreeable to leaving their $10,000 in the road treasury and agreeing to a reduction by the county to $7,000 for suburban area roads. That meant no subsidy on $3,000 of the city's contribution. In the laymen's opinion that seemed fair, since the county was spending $15,000 without subsidy, and all the road systems in the county were a benefit to the city.

Alderman Gordon said the city council had no authority to depart from the regulations relating to the financing of sububan roads. "We could be held personally liable, if we did," he said.

In other words, if the city agreed to grant $10,000 to the suburban system, as has already been done, but was willing that the county's share be reduced to $7,000, there would be $3,000 of the city's contribution on which there would be no provincial subsidy, then the aldermen could be held liable for that amount by any taxpayer.

It was said that if the county gave $7,000, and the city $7,000, the province would pay $14,000, or approximately that amount, thereby dividing the $22,000 provincial subsidy this year equally between county and suburban roads.

Alderman Bradburn said the council, acting on the county's notice, had put through the $10,000 suburban contribution, and they could not retreat from it.

At the end of the conference Alderman Dutton moved, seconded by Alderman Sullivan, that Mayor Hamilton name a small committee to join a similar committee from the county council in consulting Hon. Mr. McQuesten in Toronto in regard to some adjustment for the benefit of the county and its own roads.

Veteran Taximan Is Buried Today

COBOURG, April 4 — (ENS). — James Markle, one of Cobourg's best known citizens died suddenly on Thursday. While his health had not been very good of late his death came quite unexpectedly. For many years he operated a bus transfer from the railway stations of the town to the local hotels, first using horses and then a motor bus. Of late years he operated a taxi business.

The late Mr. Markle was born in York Township, was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Markle, but came to Cobourg to reside while a boy. During his life in Cobourg he built a large circle of friends and was known by Jim to the commercial men of past and present who lodged at the British Hotel. His voice calling out the train times at the British Hotel was a familiar sound in past years.

He is survived by his widow Annabelle White, and two sons Maurice and Leo on active service in England. The late Mr. Markle is survived by five brothers, Isaac of Toronto, Frank of Belleville, Austen of Woodstock, Wilfred of Rochester, and Fred of Cobourg. There are also our sisters, Mrs. W. Smith, Mrs. O. McDonnough, and Mrs. G. Markle of Toronto, and Matilda Markle, also of Toronto. He was buried on Saturday after a funeral service held at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church.

The pall-bearers were: Lester Caughey Walter Mackie, Frank Markle, Ed. Bulger, Tom Smith and John Fitzsimmons.

Special War Classes Are Well Attended

PORT HOPE, April 4.—(ENS)—The second of the series of "For Emergencies in War Classes" was held in the Library Hall on Thursday with almost seventy-five in attendance.

Mrs. E. G. Britton, convener of these classes, welcomed the new members and especially a group from the Morrish unit who were in attendance.

Dr. R. P. Vivian was then introduced by Mrs. Britton and in opening Dr. Vivian paid high tribute to the magnificent manual in which the Red Cross had published covering this emergencies in war work. Dr. Vivian stressed that it was most important to know what not to do as well as to know what to do in the case of all emergencies.

Dr. Vivian covered two important chapter at this class, "Air Raid Precautions," including the several different kinds of explosives and gases in use and the treatment of each and "Surgical Shock," its symptoms and emergency treatment.

The class next Thursday night in the library hall, will be again taken by Dr. R. P. Vivian and will deal with resuscitation from drownings, electric shock and gas poisoning.

16 Recruits For The Rangers Tell Why They Joined Unit

(By P.W.R.'s Reporter)

Sixteen privates of the Prince of Wales Rangers (AF) were interviewed Friday with a view to learning the reason they joined and any other little matters they wished to mention. The results were suprising. Some of the boys had hitch-hiked several miles to Peterborough—one slept in a car over night. Another came in from Lindsay "on the thumb" after trying to get in at Lindsay. Probably the most interesting story of the group came from Pte. John Kapralik, a Slovak of Czecho-Slovakia who has been in Canada four and a half years.

Almost in every case, there was something definitely appealing to each man about the Prince of Wales Rangers. "They are a fine bunch of officers and men," was the comment in most cases but most appealing was the fact it was the local regiment of Peterborough and district. Here is a brief history and some comment from each of those interviewed:

PTE. JOHN KAPRALIK, 32, of 183 Stewart street, Peterborough. John originally came from Hrustin, Slovakia, about 4½ years ago, is married, has two daughters in Canada and worked at farm labor and Peterborough Lock Works before enlisting here. His mother still lives in Slovakia with his nine-year-old son. He has not heard from either for 2½ years. John is quite anxious for their safety as they are in German occupied territory.

Pte. Kapralik said: "The reason I joined the army was because I want to help Canada from becoming like German-occupied Slovakia. I feel that our way of living here is such that everyone who enjoys it should volunteer to defend it. I never want my two girls here in Peterborough to have to suffer the brutality and man-handling that the girls in my homeland are suffering at the hands of the German invaders."

PTE. ALLAN TAYLOR, 43, of Curve Lake, was the first Indian to join the regiment. "It has always been my ambition to join the army," said Allan. Pte. Taylor is married, has four girls and a boy, was a farm-hand, likes fishing and guided for many seasons for U.S. fishermen. He likes football and was one of the many to express his thoughts on the R.S.M. "I like him a lot — he's a good sport and all round likeable fellow.

PTE. DORLAND ROGERS, 19, of Belleville hitch-hiked from Belleville, slept in a car on the way overnight and got to Peterborough the next morning. He was employed in the canning industry and later at Corbin Lock Co., Belleville. Dorland was in the Argyle Light Infantry Reserve Battalion. He likes playing hockey and "practically everything about the army." He is single.

PTE. LYLE POWERS, 19, of 823 George street, Peterborough. A member of the Prince of Wales Rangers for one year, prior to mobilization, Lyle spent some months as a carpenter with his father and later at the C.G.E. as a fitter. Asked why he joined the Rangers, the soldier said: "I'd like to get a h—— of a good crack at the Germans. I have one brother who was turned down and I felt that since I was the only son able to join, it was my duty if I could get in." Lyle was a proficient player of softball, hockey and soccer in school leagues.

PTE. BOB SMALLWOOD, 19, of Baldwin, Ont., was a young farm hand until he decided to try Lindsay where he understood they were recruiting. On arrival at that town, he learned otherwise and so he hitch-hiked on to Peterborough where he was accepted. "I'd like to be an N.C.O.," said the new recruit. As much as he has seen of the army, he likes it. "The officers are a swell bunch of men and I like our R.S.M., too." Bob played junior hockey.

PTE. B. G. MEAGHER, 24, of 176 Albertus street joined the Rangers because he "got tired of working 12 hours a day in industry," and figured he might as well devote that time to better advantage in the army. He was a sheet metal worker at the De Laval and is single. Pte. Meagher was in the Rangers reserve unit about one year.

PTE. ED CLANCY, 27, of 686 Armour Road, Peterborough, was employed at the Westclox as a caster for five years. "All my pals are in various branches of the service and I thought it was my duty to do the same," he said. "I like marching, regular pay and free medical service of the army." He is the only son in his family, likes skating and skiing.

PTE. H. B. CORRIGAN, 25, of R. R. 6, Peterborough, was a shipper at York Trading Company for two years and with the Reserve Rangers for two years, is single, and felt it was his duty to join the Army. He played City League softball, several kinds of sports in the church leagues, and is anxiously awaiting opening of the regimental sports of all kinds. The feature he likes best about the Army is that it keeps one in good physical trim and the condition he is in is a good point because he knows that there is nothings wrong with him, he said. His brother Edward, 22, applied for enlistment on Thursday. "There is a good group of men in the regiment from the officers down," he said.

PTE. WILLIAM TORRANCE, 19, of 866 George Street Peterborough, is one of the few men in the regiment whose father is a veteran of the last War. He is Garfield Torrance of this city. Bill was employed at the C.G.E. for six weeks following a course in machine shop practice at the Vocational School. "One brother is overseas, and I thought I might as well be in it too. I like Army life—it is very healthful."

PTE. ERVIN TWOMEY, R.R. 1, Peterborough, was employed at the Quaker Oats for five months and served as a trainee in this city for one month. "I joined because I think I'll like it. I have played on hockey and softball teams," he said. "The Army provides good training. He is the only one of a family of four brothers in the Army, but the other three are too young.

PTE. LEO HERR, 34, of 223 Princess Street, Peterborough, worked for the Allin Ice Company for five years and originally came from Norwood, where he was prominent in baseball and hockey circles. He is one of the biggest men in the regiment standing 6 feet 1½ inches and weighs 185 pounds, and none of it is fat. He is married with one child, and says the assigned pay and dependent's allowances will enable his family to carry on very nicely while he is out to "put Hitler on the run." He is now in the N.C.O.'s class, and points out he likes the comradeship of Army life. He now knows most of the men in the Rangers Regiment.

PTE. WILFRED GRISDALE, 152 Dufferin Street, Peterborough, is 26 and single. He said he enlisted "because all my friends were joining the regiment and I didn't want to feel that they were doing my fighting for me." He enjoys Army life and stated that he feels much more ease of mind now that he is a part of Canada's fighting army. He was one of the first to enlist.

PTE. DAVID WARNER, 18, who lived with his grandmother in Toronto, is an orphan and has been supporting himself since he was 15. Lately, he had been working on a farm near Port Hope. David said when he read of the danger threatening Australia, he thought it was time to do what he could to keep Canada from being overrun by the Japs. He said he joined the Rangers because many of his friends were in the unit and that opportunities for advancement were better in the Rangers now compared to other units which have been organized for some time and in which good positions are taken.

PTE. GERRY HICKEY, 23, of 468 Park street, worked in the C.G.E. for 4½ years. He was born in Peterborough and has put on five pounds in the last two weeks spent with the Rangers. Hickey declared that to his mind the present situation is so serious that every young man should volunteer, and holding this view, he felt that he could never do better than join the Peterborough regiment and he with his friends and have chance for promotion. "I hear a lot of fellows saying how vital they are to industry," said Hickey, "but I wonder if they are being honest with themselves..where will their jobs be if Hitler comes to Canada and why can't the older men and medically unfit carry on in industry?"

PTE. WILLIAM CURTIS, 19, of 531 Parnell street, Peterborough, was doing work in civil life as an inspector at the Raybestos plant. He was born in Peterborough. Bill was serving with the reserve unit before mobilization with the intention of going active when the regiment was called up. He enlisted March 14. Although only 19, he is the oldest of a family of seven children. His father is on duty at the camp at Bowmanville. Pte. Curtis said he felt that he and other young men of military age had a personal responsibility to volunteer for active service and that it could not be avoided by waiting to see what someone else was going to do.

PTE. STANLEY BEBEE, 34, of 122 Hillier street, Peterborough, was employed at the Quaker Oats. He is a widower with two chidren but the army pay and allowances are sufficient to enable him to leave the children with his mother and know they will be properly maintained. Pte. Bebee, being a married man with two children, knew he would not be called up for service. His motive for enlisting was that he wants his children to be able to grow up in a free, democratic Canada safe from Nazi violence. Bebee said that he asks no favors and is willing to do any job that is detailed to him and that he is confident promotion will follow in due course. He has a younger brother in the army and, when he heard the local regiment was being mobilized, he lost no time in signing up for active service to do his share to send the Nazis and Japs back where they belong.

British authorities said, the Germans declined to release entire prisoner groups, irrespective of their numbers.

(The Germans asked for a "prisoner for prisoner" exchange which Britain refused. War Secretary David Margesson told the House of Commons Britain had intended to release about 150 Germans for 1,200 Britons held in German territory.)

Jolliffe Heads C.C.F. Party, Out For Control

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 4 (CP) — Ontario's Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party planned to put on record today the broad outline of the platform it hopes will gain the party support in the next provincial election.

For the first time in the 10-year history of the C.C.F. in the province it has a political leader, Edward B. Jolliffe, Toronto lawyer, and the party's convention which elected him yesterday began the policy program by approving the agricultural plank and an outline of its labor views.

To these will be added pledges of public ownership of essential utilities, demands for an all-out war effort and, it was believed, a proposal that the national council call an emergency convention to warn the Canadian people of the dangers they face.

The convention, winding up its two-day session, also will elect a president whose function under the new regime will be to supervise administration while the political leader will act, as President Sam Lawrence of Hamilton explained yesterday, "in the nature of an organizer."

Jolliffe, chosen by a large majority over Murray Cotterill of Toronto after 15 other candidates for the leadership retired, lost no time in making known his views on the Ontario political situation.

"We want to see the winning of social security by all our people" the 33-year-old leader said in his acceptance speech. "The present government and their leader, Mr. Hepburn, are not going to do this for the people. We believe the C.C.F. has the policy and the C.C.F. is the only hope in this province."

Later he told reporters he wanted to enter the legislature because he didn't think "there is any opposition" in the legislature now. Re-to take that country over. Militarily he is set for this adventure, the purpose of which would be (1) to put him up against his Finnish ally and thus improve his strategic positions, and (2) to obtain the food and other supplies in Sweden.

Another possibility — and I am merely naming possibilities and not making predictions—is that the Japs may attack Siberia and thus weaken the Russians by making them fight on two front at once. Certainly we may expect more bad news from the Orient.

Take Burma. The advancing Japs are threatening the great oil field from which China draws its supplies. The petroleum is the Nipponese objective, and if they are successful it will be a terrible blow to Chinese arms. War cannot be waged without oil, and China has been depending on this one field.

Service Is Held On Good Friday

A Good Friday service was held in Trinity church at 10.30 a.m. There was a large attendance from all the congregations in the northern end of the city. Dr. George Easton conducted the service, assisted by Dr. E. W Young and Rev J. H. Sutcliffe Miss Mabel Clarry presided at the organ. Mrs. Eric Stevenson sang the solo.

Dr. J. A. Smart gave the address and took as his text, St. Luke xxiii:33.

Many Christians he said have never looked at the cross in all its horror. They have seen pictures of it but it was like something from another world. What does it mean that this cross should be there in our world? People want a sermon that will cheer them up, they do not like to face the harsh realties of life Most of the tragedies that have come to us within the last few years have come from the evasion of difficult situations. Death and sin are part of the world. Life has its sunsets by the lake, it has also its grim horrors. It is a broken and distorted world. Except we look straight at the cross we do not know our world. Artists have painted the cross with ivy around it; people have used it for ornaments in books, a pleasant decoration. It was like the scaffold and the rope. One cannot make a lovely artistic design out of a scaffold.

Who is it that hangs on the cross? A youth who preached the gospel of the kingdom of God. He did not try to get money, nor use his popularity to build up his own power. But he never retreated when he had taken a stand. He spoke out against empty shams. Why was be persecuted and crucified? It was not an accident. It was the considered judgment of the society of His day. It was the religious men of His day that put Him to death.

Truths lie hidden here, it opens our eyes to the real nature of the world. It is a place with some good people, and some bad, some kind, others cruel. We sometimes say that if you play your part you will not be treated too badly. These facile explanations do not fit in our world. The innocent one sufficed the whole punishment was laid upon Him. In this world things do not come out equal and fair.

As Christians we must face a cross. In a book to teachers of children it was written to instruct the young people that they live in a friendly world. How tragic that children should be taught this falsehood. We must not teach children that which is wrong. The world hated Christ; He did not find it a friendly world. It is easy for us to say nice things about Him. It is not so nice when he blocks our ways of life, and comes down upon our prejudice and selfishness. The world still hates Jesus Christ.

We do not know our own souls until we look at the cross. There is no way that we deceive ourselves more frequently than in our judgments upon ourselves. We are blind in our selfish disuses, and often a source of pain and loss to others. We compare ourselves with our neighbors and say I'm a better man than he is. We are easy going but no one can look at the cross and be easy going. It was the religious people that did Him to death. Even Judas is not so much different from some of us. We crucify Christ afresh to-day by our blind folly and sin. We must pray to be delivered from ourselves.

Court Dismisses Appeal By Chief Draper

TORONTO, April 4—The appeal of Chief Constable D. C. Draper against his conviction on a dangerous driving charge was dismissed Wednesday in a unanimous judgment of Court of Appeal at Osgoode Hall.

In a judgment written by Chief Justice Robertson and concurred in by Justices Middleton and Gillanders, Court of Appeal upheld a conviction registered in Cobourg on Feb. 9. Chief Draper was fined $300 by Judge L. V. O'Connor after his conviction. The accident occurred Sept. 28 when the west-bound Draper car come into collision on No. 2 Highway with an automobile driven east by Burton Miller, Peterborough. Five persons, including the chief, were injured.

Chief Justice Robertson rejected the chief constable's explanation of how the accident occurred, and declared: "It was hardly possible, in my opinion, for the trial judge to reach any other conclusion that he did. There can be little question that there was dangerous driving, and that the dangerous driving was the appellant's," stated the Chief Justice.

The Chief Justice, in his review of the case, mentioned the circumstances of the accident which occurred near Port Hope when Chief Draper was driving from Montreal to Toronto. He outlined how the Draper automobile turned to the south side of the road to pass a motor car travelling in the same direction and came into collision with the Miller car "notwithstanding Miller's effort to avoid a collision by turning toward the ditch."

Should Have Seen Other Car

"Appellant disobeyed the rule of the road established by the Highway Traffic Act, S. 39 (15) which requires that he should not attempt to pass another vehicle going in the same direction unless and until the travelled portion of the highway in front of and to the left of the vehicle to be passed was safely free from approaching traffic. He knew the rule and undoubtedly knew, as an experienced motorist, the importance of observing it in the interests of driving.

"His explanation is that he looked before he turned to the left side of the road, and did not see the motor car coming from the west. By way of further explanation he says that there was a curve in the highway a short distance ahead of him and he did not observe this and therefore did not see the Miller car, if it was even visible at the time.

"The trial judge did not accept this explanation as relieving appellant from the charge. The occupants of the Miller care saw appellant's car as it was 'nosing out' into their path, and their car should have been visible to him. There was a line of cars travelling west, of which appellant's car was the last, and Miller passed the leading cars of the line on the curve. It should have been evident to a careful observer that the cars ahead were travelling on a curve and not on a straight road."

"If the appellant did not see the Miller car approaching and did not see that the cars travelling ahead of him were on a curve because he did not look that way, thinking the road was straight, then he did not see the road ahead of him at all," continued His Lordship.

May Become Before Board.

Mayor Fred Conboy declined to make any observation last night after learning Chief Draper had lost the appeal. His Worship said he would give the matter "careful consideration," but would not comment further pending a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners either Wednesday or Thursday of next week.

"I don't see any necessity for any further action," declared Colonel A. E. Kirkpatrick, another member of the board. "We have a good police chief who had an accident that might happen to anybody. I don't see any evidence which would lead me to believe his ability has deteriorated. That will be my attitude unless there is other evidence to change my mind. You or I might have exactly the same type of accident. The matter is finished as far as I'm concerned."

Judge Frank Denton, third member of the board, could not be reached for comment.

The reasons given by Court of Appeal in dismissing the appeal "imply that a motorist should be convicted for an error in judgment," stated T. N. Phelan, counsel for Chief Draper.

According to Mr. Phelan, Ontario Court of Appeal's decision is final on a dangerous driving conviction and there is no higher court to which the case can be carried.

Compassion Of Our Lord Told In Easter Story

By RÉV. E. R. JAMES

Mary stood at the sepulchre weeping. Jesus saith unto her: Mary.—St. John 20: 11, 16.

Rivers of tears in these terrible days are flowing. Who can comfort? "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father," says Our Lord. "Lord show us the Father" is the immeditate exclamation. In this story Our Lord reveals the character of the Father as He comforts the weeping Mary. She is the woman out of whom the Christ had cast seven devils. He had broken the bonds of her evil habits. Above all she was not left alone. She was received into the fellowship of that band of women 'who minister unto Him of their substance." They received her into their company. She received no scornful look or patronage. They took her into their hearts. Truly they were holy women.

But now her Master is dead. That band of women would soon return to their homes. She would be alone. That was the horror that gripped her mind all that Sabbath. Would the seven devils return? Therefore she wails. Do you blame her? A shadow falls. Looking through tear-dimmed eyes she sees a man in working dress. Of course it is the gardener. Surely he would know where they have laid Him. No explanation on her part. Her mind is so full of her loss. He must know why she is weeping. Then there falls upon her ears the word "Mary." "He calls His own sheep by name and they know His voice." It is the old story of perfect intimacy and friendship. Immediately she cries: "Rabboni; my Master," and seeks to grasp His feet in her humble devotion. It is the Lord full of compassion. "He is the same yesterday, to-day and for ever." Death has no power to take from Him the heart of compassion.

How naturally she accepts the fact of His resurrection. Her woman's instinct tells her that it must be so. Her Lord had broken her bonds of evil habits. Surely He could break the bonds of death. "It was not possible that He should be holden of death." "I lay down my life of Myself. I have power to lay it down and I have power to take it again" is His own claim. "He trusted in God." With dying breath He cries: "Father, into Thy hands I commend My spirit." The Father did not forsake Him. On the third day the Spirit of the Father entered into that cold, dead Body and filled it with divine life and energy. God's Spirit entered into that Body and transfigured it and it passed through the tomb into a new life of activity and strength. "I am He that liveth and was dead, and, behold, I am alive for evermore."

Our Lord deals with the individual. "Mary." Later in the day with Simon Peter. Personal toucn with the individual. That is always God's way and principle. He values human liberty and personality. One by one He calls us. It is the fundamental principle of Christianity that God deals with the individual personally. "Behold I stand at the door and knock. If any man will open unto Me I will come in and sup with him."

Yet we must not forget the other side of the truth. The same Lord that evening revealed Himself to the assembled Apostles who were gathered together in the Upper Room. The individual is important. The family is important also. The individual cannot live by himself. He needs the family life and fellowship. The family needs him. He has a contribution to make to the family and the family to him. If he stays out of the family both are poorer. "No man liveth unto himself."

What is the value of the story today Have you discovered the Divine energy giving you power to overcome sin and that evil habit? That evil habit or desire is losing its fascination. This is the proof to your soul of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. With Saint Paul you can certify: "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

There is more in this story. The day of sorrow will come to you. You will look upon the face of one who has passed beyond the veil. You will weep. It is good for you. Yet you must not sorrow as those without hope. In that hour of sorrow He will stand at your side. He will call you by your Christian name. Your mind will be enlightened by some word of His. "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you," He may whisper. Then you will cry, not only "Rabboni' My Master, but also "My Lord and My God."

CHRIST IS RISEN INDEED.

The Golden Text

"Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—I. Cor. 15:37.

Death and Resurrection As Told By St. Paul

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for April 5 is Mark 12:24-27; I Corinthians 15: 50-58, the Golden Text being I Corinthians 15:57, "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ..")

THIS IS Easter Sunday, the day set aside to celebrate the Risen Lord. Our lesson does not at this time deal with the story of that Easter morning, when the women came to the tomb to embalm the body of their Master and found it empty and an angel guarding it. Rather it deals with Jesus' and St. Paul's words concerning death and resurrection.

St. Mark tells us that Jesus, walking in the temple in Jerusalem, was accosted by certain men of the priesthood and elders of the church, who questioned Him on various matters and tried to trap Him into some admission whereby they might hold Him. After a number of others had asked questions and been given answers which left them baffled, certain Sadducees came to Him. They were the so-called intellectuals of the day, the skeptics. They posed a question concerning resurrection, in which they did not believe. If, said they, a man died without having children, the law said his brother might marry his widow. Suppose there were seven brother. The oldest died leaving a widow but no children, and the next brother married the woman and also died, leaving no children, and so it continued until each of the seven brothers had married the woman, and passed on without leaving children, and the widow finally also died. In the after life, whose wife would she be? Which of the brothers would have the right to claim her?

Jesus Says They Err

Jesus answered them in a way which must have been galling to those men who thought they were so clever and sophisticated. He said, "Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the scriptures, neither the power of God?

"For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are as the angels which are in heaven?"

Further He asked if they had not read the book of Moses, how when God was speaking to Moses from the bush He said to him, "I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living; ye do therefore greatly err." Imagine how they must have felt to be accused—and justly, of course—of not knowing their scriptures, nor yet the power of their God. They had nothing more to say. This incident took place on Tuesday of Passion Week, April 4 A. D. 30.

In the 15th chapter of I Corinthians, St. Paul, writing to his friends from Ephesus, explains to them the meaning of the resurrection.

"Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

"Behold, I show you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed . . . for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

"For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

When this shall come about, "then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

Not our mortal bodies, but our "changed" bodies will dwell in glory.

"The sting of death is sin," he admonishes them. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Side by side with faith must go works, Paul reminds us. Even if we are "weary of well doing" and feel our efforts to live good, honest, kindly, upright lives are in vain, we should not be discouraged, for although we ourselves feel we are not doing all we should, and the world may not appreciate us, God knows of our efforts and will reward us.

Honor Larmer Family

FRASERVILLE, April 4—(ENS). —A large gathering of friends met on Monday night in the Orange hall to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. K. Larmer and Janet, who left on Thursday for their new home in Oshawa. An address was read by Kenneth Moncrief, expressing the community's regret in losing such a fine young couple, and a handsome purse was presented by R. Darling.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Darling, whose marriage ttook place on Saturday, were also called to the front, where a gift of money was presented to them on behalf of the community. Both gentlemen made fitting replies. Dancing was enjoyed to music supplied by Patton and Ouelette of Millbrook.

Salvation Army Active

CAMPBELLFORD, April 4. —(ENS).—A summary of the work done by the local branch of the Salvation Army Red Shield Women's Auxiliary shows that over 200 articles were collected and made during the month of March by this busy group of thirty ladies who meet once each week. Realizing that the need of the day is very great the Army is carrying on in the tradition it established in the First Great War under the energetic leadership of Mrs. John Duck the local branch like others across Canada is carrying on enthusiastically. The work done this month included knitted goods, sewing quilts, etc., and this week a shipment is being made to Red Shield Headquarters in Toronto from where it will be despatched to Britain.

Lieut. Alex Turnbull, local Army head, has pointed out that donations are gladly received to carry on this work and they may be left with the president, Mrs. Duck, or with himself. He emphasizes that all clothing to be sent overseas must be new as they are not allowed to include old or second hand clothing in their shipments under government ruling. In the near future the R.S.W.A. is planning to arrange a representative display of the Auxiliary work at F. F. Long's store on Front street. The group expressed their thanks to the following for donations during the past months: Mrs. P. Beattie, Miss E. Innes, Miss D. Reynolds, Hoard's Ladies' Aid, Mrs. J. W. Brown, Hastings, and the Stanwood Sewing Circle.

Gift To Recruit.

In tribute to his excellent work as Sunday school superintendent for the past three years, teachers and officers of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church gathered to honour Wilsie Phillips, who was recently accepted as a recruit in the R.C.A.F. Highlight of the occasion was the presentation of a pen and pencil set to Mr. Phillips by Clerk of the Session and a former superintendent, W. J. Harold Dunk, who warmly thanked him for his sincere efforts on behalf of the Sunday school during his term of office.

Christ and Life After Death (Easter) ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 12:24-27; I Corinthians 15:50-58.

The Sadducees asked Jesus whose wife after death would be a woman who had married seven brothers one after the other as each died? Jesus answered that in heaven there is no marriage.

Further Jesus reminded them that God spake to Moses from the burning bush, saying, I am the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. He is not the god of the dead, but of the living.

"Behold, I show you a mystery," wrote Paul to the Corinthians, We shall all be changed . . . for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed.

Then shall be brought to pass the saying, Death is swallowed up in victory O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

Empty Hearts And Minds

The Montereal Star, a newspaper which has for many years taken an enlightened interest in the health of this Dominion, has published an editorial about the incidence of physical unfitness which has been revealed in the course of army entrance examinations. In the United States, 50 per cent. of the men called by the draft have been found physically unfit; in Canada the percentage is very nearly as high. The Star wants to know why this should be; we have established health programs in our schools, we have spread knowledge of proper nutrition, we have hymned the benefits of fresh air and we have extolled exercise. Why, then, are so many of our young men in poor health?

The Star suggests that the "tempo and habits of our living, with its external rush of cares and worries, are too much for the nervous systems of human beings—that speed has becomes our master, not our servant"; it quotes a British physician who says that we have forgotton how to relax. These things may be true enough, but we do not think that they are complete and satisfactory explanations. The nervous system is wonderfully adaptable, and it could reconcile itself to speed and worry if these were all its troubles. We are inclined to think that the explanation is somewhat more complex.

The forty years or so in which national health has been given systematic attention in Canada have been years of spiritual famine. Man cannot live by bread alone, even when the bread is made with pasteurized milk and reinforced with all the alphabet of vitamins. The human animal demands something to believe in and to work for which is greater than himself, and a suitable object of devotion has been lacking. Religion has not supplied what modern man wants, for this is not an age of burning religious faith, and many parts of the church have been too eager to compromise with the modern world for their own good. Science is too abstruse in its nature to supply the need in more than a few cases. Art has been in a curious state of upheaval and great leaders in the arts have been few and unwilling to bear their burden. We have had one war and now we have another, but wars will not supply the want, for wars are destructive and punitive in nature and the spiritual stimulus which they supply lasts only as long as the fighting. Men's hearts and minds are empty, and their bodies, though clothed and fed and housed better than before, reflect the emptiness of their hearts and minds not so much in actual sickness as in poor coordination and unsatisfactory functioning. Put hope and purpose in the hearts and the bodies will soon respond.

What are we to put in the empty hearts? We cannot say. But the matter must be approached with humility and caution, for we see in Nazi Germany what happens when something base and false is foisted upon a nation, filling the empty hearts with arrogance and building a faith upon lies.

Perhaps we have finished a period of mankind's development and, as the Middle Ages melted into the Renaissance, we are melting into a new era. Since 1750 the population of the earth has tripled; new ages and new peoples need new faiths. When, and from whence the new faith or philosophy will come we cannot tell, but it will come though not, perhaps, in our time. Meanwhile are we to be surprised that men who are only half alive mentally and spiritually should show signs of poor health, despite every well-meant material effort to bolster that health?

Christ And Germany

The persecution of the Jews in Germany and the lands which she has seized is one of the obviously vicious results of Nazism; less clearly apparent, but even more evil in its effect, is the perversion of Christianity to Nazi purposes.

Until it was virtually suppressed, the Vatican newspaper, L'Observatore Romano provided news about the state of Christianity in Axis countries. It was outspoken in its condemnation of abuses and so its circulation was confined to the Vatican City itself; only occasionally do we hear what it has said. Recently, however, it published extracts from a book called "God and the People—A Profession of the Soldier's Faith," which has sold more than 180,000 copies in Germany. It declares that the people of Germany are "marching toward a new beginning" and that other peoples are perishing and aging. Furthermore, it is firm on the point that this new beginning can come "only from the Germans themselves, and not from Rome or Israel." The battle is for "the German Man's soul, and the fight is conducted on two fronts; one is called Christ, and the other is Germany."

This will not be good news for the Italian people, who are deeply devout. Their papers have been telling them that the religious situation in Germany is "reassuring." What reassurance is there for them in this doctrine of the German Soul, and Christ and Germany? What place may they hope for in that barbaric soul, what mercy from a Nazi Christ? The Germans, having robbed Italy of her earth, may rob her of her heaven, too.

And what a repellent exhibition of folly this Germanic attempt to enlist Christ is! What blasphemy to claim as a national possession what belongs to Christendom! Surely the bloody doctrine of nationalism which sprang from the wreck of the Middle Ages has never been so stupidly, so ignorantly, propound. This is another error which the powers of Christendom, in alliance with China and Russia, must painfully set right. Hearing of the Nazi blasphemy, who would not rather be allied with Russia, which respects the greatness of Man, and China, which respects the greatness of Virtue, than with Germany, which has made a travesty of the faith which we profess? At this season of the year when the people of the western democracies are observing either Easter or the Passover we must spare time to think on this matter and to renew our resolve to rid the earth of this perverse ideology.

Canadian Art Goes Visiting

On Monday next an exhibition of Canadian art will open in the Grand Central Art Galleries in New York and it will remain on view there for two weeks. This show has been arranged by the Maple Leaf Fund, and it is designed to encourage cultural relations between this Dominion and the United States. The proceeds from the exhibition will be given to the Allied Nations War Relief.

The principal part of the exhibition is to be a group of twenty-five paintings by contemporary Canadian artists, and these have been chosen by a group of critics in Montreal. In addition will be shown a collection of Canadiana which is the property of W. H. Coverdale, the president of the Maple Leaf Fund. Ordinarily Mr. Coverdale's collection is housed at the Manoir Richelieu. It is perhaps the most extensive privately owned collection of Canadiana in existence and it contains furniture, household objects, maps and charts, and paintings and pictorial representations of all kinds. Understandably, the importance of the collection is more historical than artistic, but it will provide a splendid complement and extension to the main exhibition.

One of the treasures of the Coverdale Collection is the very well-known painting of the death of General Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, by Benjamin West, a picture familiar to every school child in this Dominion. It also contains some fine examples of the art of Cornelius Kreighoff, the Canadian primitive painter who left so many charming and detailed pictures of Indians, habitants and the fashionable figures of Quebec and Montreal in the early nineteenth century. At one time Kreighoff's pictures were popular in this country in lithograph reproduction, but the daintier taste of the later Victorians condemned them as "crude" and the gay little pictures were banished to attics and junk heaps. Today original Kreighoffs bring handsome prices, and even the despised lithographs are collector's items. One o. the important Kreighoff canvases to be shown in New York is the large one depicting the New Year's Day Parade at Quebec.

The value of such an exhibition as this is almost impossible to over-estimate. We may become great industrially, we may fight like tigers in war, we may astound, with such economic innovations as our price-ceiling, but we shall only dispell the current notion that Canada is an outlying district of the Arctic Circle by achievement in the artistic field. Art is the one thing which cannot be discounted or ignored; a nation is great only when it fosters great art.

Comparative Cleanliness

Mr. W. L. Clark, writing in our valued contemporary, the Windsor Star, says: "Canadians overseas place emphasis on the maintenance of a high standard of sanitation" and he continues: "It should be remembered that sanitation standards in Canada and the United States are far above those usually found in Europe."

We feel that this writer, in this complimentary reference to our Canadian standards of sanitation, lays a flattering unction to his soul. Standards of sanitation in Europe very widely. Before the war it would have been hard to find an area on this continent as large as the Scandinavian peninsula which had a higher standard in this respect than Norway and Sweden. Some of the finest plumbing in the world was to be found in Germany. The canals of Holland were all that canals should be and Dutch sanitation in general was of a very high order; the streets of The Hague were miracles of cleanliness. There were some very dirty places in Europe, and some very clean ones. The same thing may be said of this country and this continent.

For too long we have contented ourselves with this myth of superior sanitation and it is time that we did more to make the myth a fact. The possession of indoor plumbing is not in itself a guarantee of good sanitation, as recent reports on slums in our large cities have shown. In our rural districts the privy still flourishes, and the privy at its best is an unsanitary affair; at its worst it is a breeding ground for every sort of infection. Some of our farmyards are spick and span, and some of our cattle-houses are as clean as such places can be. But can we honestly claim that this is true of more than fifty per cent. of such places? And in our Canadian cities, are not the eyes and the nose all too conscious of the garbage which sits upon the sidewalks, awaiting a collection which comes thrice or twice in a week? Are all our water supplies above reproach? Our Canadian winter leaves our streets filthy in spring, and how soon is the filth cleared away? Let us answer these questions and remove these reproaches from our own country, before we accuse Europe of being dirty.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Dandelions, we read, are high in latex. They used to be just high in nuisance value.

A Canadian critic has advised Canadian poets to put more fire into their poems. Or vice versa.

"Raw German Recruits Sent to Russian Front" says a headliner. Never mind; those geese are cooked anyway.

The Kitchener Daily Record says: "No doubt if Cripps gives the Indians enough rope they'll do the trick."

Just as a matter of curiosity, we should like to know what sugar-daddies are using for bait these days?

Chinese wisdom makes itself felt in Canada; the old "no tickee—no shirtee" principle has been applied to the gasoline supply.

We learn with interest that a wife may be bought for $60 in the Republic of Liberia. But with this, as with many another purchase, it's not the initial expense so much as the upkeep.

The Yugoslavian statesman, Cvetkovicz, is not very well known in this country, says a news commentator. Though we once noticed his name on an oculist's sight-testing card.

We have gasoline rationing already, and it is rumored that pleasure travel on railways is to be curtailed soon. The days are coming back when a trip to Toronto was a rare treat, anticipated for weeks beforehand, enjoyed with tremulous excitement, and the subject of a lantern-slide lecture in the Sunday School after returning.

HILL JOURNEY

This be the record—unseal'd, unadorn'd;
Les it be said to count the cost is vain,
That you and I have loves that must be lost;
Lest men forget why they have fought, and when,
Lest every cry be smothered in the dust.

Let every grain of sand at Dunkirk's shore
Be reckoned hence, and closely kept the score
Of every child who, in man's wisdom, creeps
In stifled silence toward an open door.

Let every man whose mind and heart are free
To push the wheel of ages from the mire,
Bend with a will to shoulder liberty,
And grasp the burning embers from the fire.

This be the record of our "sweat and tears,"
To carry to the hills and through the years.

Drama for Easter As Told In In Medieval Play

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

IN the Middle Ages, when few people could read, it was the custom of the church to instruct by preaching; now that general education has made a man who cannot read something of a curiosity preaching is no longer strictly necessary, though it persists. The church had another method of instruction too, which it used on special occasions, and this was the drama. Plays of an edifying nature were acted either in the church itself, or in the square outside it, and the folk of the parish gathered round to see the fun and to take in the moral lesson which was contained in it. Few of these religious dramas have been preserved but the examples which we have are simple, lively, full of plot and surprisingly good entertainment. There is plenty of comedy in them, sometimes of a rather coarse nature, and the religious feeling which inspires them is deep and impressive. They are good plays in their way, interesting in themselves and as forerunners of our more elaborate drama.

There is one of these medieval plays, however, which is an acknowledged masterpiece, and it is often played today. Whether it was originally written as an Easter play or not, it is particularly well suited to this season, and in times of peace hundreds of performances were given every Easter in Europe and in North and South America. We do not know who wrote it, and perhaps it is inaccurate to call it a 'medieval' play, for it seems to date from the fifteenth century; quite possibly it is older by a century or more than the earliest copies of it which we possess. Some scholars think that it originated in Holland, and that our English version is a translation; we cannot tell. The name of the play is "Everyman."

The story of "Everyman" is simple and moving. As the play begins God speaks, telling of his displeasure at the idle, dissolute life of Everyman, His creation, and His favorite among His creatures. In these old plays God was often introduced, and the actor who played this part wore handsome ecclesiastical robes. In order to bring Everyman to a sense of his duty, God calls upon his servant Death to seek out Everyman and demand that he appear before God shortly, to give an account of himself. Death accepts order humbly.

IT IS at this point that Everyman himself appears, and this character, as the name makes clear, is meant to represent all mankind. Everyman is gay and impertinent, and when Death asks him where he is going he returns a saucy answer. He keeps his bantering manner, until Death explains who he is and what his message is from God, and explains that Everyman has but one day in which to prepare for his last solemn journey. Everyman is naturally perturbed, and begs to know if he may take companions with him, and to this Death answers wryly that he may take anyone who will dare to accompany him.

Everyman now begins his search for comrades to go with him to the great reckoning of God, and he turns first to Fellowship, his boon companion, but Fellowship is only interested in boozing, fighting and wenching. And so next he turns to his relatives, Kindred and Cousin, but they are full of excuses and cannot go. Distracted, Everyman appeals to his Goods and Riches, but this character explains synically that his business is to kill man's soul, and not to save it. So at last, reluctantly, Everyman appeals to his Good Deeds to help him, but Good Deeds is so weak that she is scarcely able to move. However, she calls upon her sister, Knowledge, to help Everyman, and this character advises him to cleanse his soul by visiting the good hermit, Confession, which he does. Confession gives him a robe of repentance and a scourge of sorrow, and after Everyman has scourged out his sins and has donned the robe he calls upon his Discretion, Strength, Beauty and his Five Wits and when these characters answer his call he explains to them the nature of the journey upon which he is about to embark. But they too, for reasons implicit in their several natures, are unable to go with him beyond the grave. Even Knowledge explains that she can only go with him to the brink of the grave; beyond he shall have no friend and no help but his Good Deeds. And so, accompanied only by the friend whom he had esteemed least, Everyman goes to face his God.

Strongly didactic though this play is in tone, its complete sincerity disarms criticism or argument. The poetry in which it is written is as fresh and pure as it was five hundred years ago; there is not a word too few or a word too much. The lesson of humility which it teaches is as apt now as it has ever been, and the characters of Fellowship, Kindred and Cousin, Strength, Beauty and Five Wits are to be met with in every street today, and will be there for centuries to come. This unpretentious little play, written hundreds of years ago by an unknown priest to teach a lesson to his flock, is one of the masterpieces of our drama, and a better Easter lesson, I venture to say, than many a more elaborate work produced since.

"COMING UP IN THE SPRING"

—Wilmington News.

• Strong New Burma Line

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 4 (AP)—Contour maps of the Prome area in Burma indicate there are far stronger defensive positions available to the British forces north of the town than any the Japanese have yet encountered in their northward surge up the Irrawaddy River Valley.

Just how far British lines have been withdrawn from Prome is not indicated. However, there seems justification for the view that the town itself was of small value to the defense of the Irrawaddy oil fields more than 100 miles further north.

Just southeast of Prome within less than ten miles is a 500-foot hill upthrust from the level valley floor. It lies east of the river and west of the Prome-Tharrawaddy railroad. New Delhi reports indicate it was Japanese capture of this height which forced the British withdrawal from Prome.

Immediately northwest of the town, however, a 900-foot jungle-clad peak juts up. If that still is in British hands, Prome can be but a no-man's land, untenable by either side and with the advantage of higher ground with the British side.

POWERFUL BARRIER

The narrowest point in the valley of the Irrawaddy lies just north of Prome. A sharp buttress spur of the Arakan Yoma Mountains to the west comes down virtually to the bank of the Irrawaddy at that point. It rises to nearly 1,400 feet midway the river and the main Arakan ridge which shows 5,000-foot level passes in that sector but no roads.

That spur forms a powerful barrier to a Japanese advance up the west side of the valley beyond Prome. It seems unquestionable that it figures importantly in British defense strategy. Heavy jungle growths cover it to offer efective shelter to troops from air attack.

East of the Irrawaddy and north of Prome there is a 500-foot peak dominating the road to Mandalay, which swings eastward from the river.

Between the Irrawaddy and Sitang Rivers rises the Pegu Yoma Range, far less rugged than the Arakan Yomas, but still studded with sharp peaks that would afford the defenders successive gun positions overlooking all approaches from the south. A westward spur of the Pegu Yomas, which marks the northern boundary of the Prome district, comes down to within ten miles or less of the Irrawaddy to form the Prome waistline north of the town.

GROUND FOR STAND

On the map that waistline is strongly indicated as the predetermined ground for a major British stand to hold the Irrawaddy gateway. Events eastward beyond the Pegu Yomas on the Chinese-held left flank in the Sittang Valley, however, must be considered in weighing British chances of halting the Irrawaddy drive until the monsoon breaks late this month or in May.

Loss of Toungoo, the eastern anchor of the Anglo-Chinese defense front, and the evacuation of Prome appear to have ruptured road contact between the two wings of the front. It may compel deeper Chinese withdrawals and expose the east flank of the British Prome waistline front, compelling a further retirement.

As far as the present lines can be mapped from the meagre information available, however, there seems good reason to expect an increasingly stubborn Allied retreat step by step, bolstered by strong natural defensive positions and calculated to slow the Japanese advance until the wet monsoon comes to halt major action.

• Canadians In Britain

The following is a clipping from the Brighton and Hove "Gazette," sent to us by Pte. H. J. Girard, who describes himself as "an old Examiner reader," and who is now with the Canadian Army in England. We think that our readers may find it interesting, although they will be surprised to learn that 42 per cent of our population is French:

TO understand the Canadian soldier it is necessary to understand the background of his life in Canada, and Major W. G. Abel, Public Relations Officer of the Canadian Army, told the Hove Rotary Club something about this background in a talk at the Lido yesterday.

Major Abel declared that it is important that Canada should have the goodwill of the people of Britain, as this country is its principal market for agricultural and industrial product. The Canadians are fighting in this war to defend their own homeland as much as Britain is fighting in her self-defence.

The people of Canada are not all of British ancestry; 42 per cent of the population is French, and there are large German and Scandinavian colonies, Major Abel pointed out. They are all loyal citizens of Canada, but it should be remembered that they came to the Dominion to sever their ties with their homeland. The English people are rightly proud of their traditions and of their links with the past; the others came in order to break with their traditions and their past.

The Canadian educational system encourages self-reliance; in industry and commerce there is a keener competitive spirit. Major Abel denied that Canadians receive much more money than the British soldiers; a single man has only a shilling a week more than the Tommy. So if Canadians seem rather more boisterous it is not because they have plenty of money but because they lead a tougher life, and still have the instincts of the cowboy or the frontiersman.

Major Abel spoke of Canada's war effort, and concluded by expressing the hope that as the outcome of the war the links between Canada and Britain would become stronger.

Major Abel mentioned that when he first came to Brighton he had the impression that it was a sort of English Coney Island, and he was surprised to find it so quiet, with people enjoying the sun and sea air on the front.

The Vice-President (Mr. H. M. Symes) presided, and the Club's thanks were admirably voiced by Mr. Roland Smeed.

A Bit of Nonsense

An inspector, after examining a class in school one day, asked, "Who drove the Israelites out of Egypt? You!" he said, pointing to a small boy in the corner.

"No, sir, 'twasn't me," replied the boy, trembling. "I only came back from the country last week."

A Bible Message For Today . . .

This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord our Saviour.

But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night: in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?

Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.—II Pet. iii: 1, 2, 8-14.

Samuel Eakins Honored At Funeral Service

MILLBROOK, April 4 —(ENS)— Places of business were closed on Wednesday, from 1 until 3 p.m., out of respect to the memory of a prominent citizen, who had long been connected with the business life of the community, Samuel Edgerton Eakins, whose funeral took place at 2 p.m. from his late residence, Anne street, the large representative number of friends and acquaintances from the village and a wide area of the countryside, who gathered for the service filling the homestead to capacity, and overflowing unto the verandah and lawns. Mr. Eakins' death took place with startling suddenness on Sunday evening, March 29, in his sixty-first year.

The pastor of the deceased, Rev. A. Raeburn-Gibson, minister of Grace Presbyterian Church, had charge of the service, assisted by Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson, who offered the prayers, and Rev. A. L. Sisco, who read the lesson. In his address, Mr. Gibson spoke from personal experience, of Mr. Eakins' interest in the children of the community, both in Public and Sunday School, and the practical help which he had frequently given them. His capacity for making friends, and his cheerful disposition, were also mentioned with appreciation. The verse chosen for the talk, and from which general application was made, was: "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy," Ps. 103:8.

Many beautiful floral tributes were laid in loving memory on the casket, among these being wreaths from Grace Presbyterian Church, and from the Brantford Roofing Company, with which deceased had been connected for several years. The pall-bearers were two cousins, Wesley W. Clarke, of Havelock and Bruce Eakins, of Peterborough; a brother, William J. Eakins, of Toronto; two brothers-in-law, A. J. Mulligan, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Henry D. Armstrong, Toronto; and Mr. J. Keister, also of Cleveland. Interment was in the family burial plot at the Presbyterian cemetery, Millbrook.

Among those from outside points who were here for the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. C. Lech, Mr. Hubert Eakins, W. J. E. Gillott, Mr. and Mrs. George Hunter and son, Reginald, of Peterborough; Mrs. Percy Hill, of Woodville; Mrs. J. Black of Feversham; Mr. P. Levittch, representing the Brantford Roofing Company; Ernest Butler, Toronto, representing the Hardware Association; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Clarke, and daughter, Natalie, Havelock; Mrs. J. Diamond, Mr. W. J. Eakins, Mr. Jack Eakins, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eakins, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Armstrong of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mulligan, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Banks Accept Bills Thirty-five Years Old

TWEED, April 4 (ENS)—Feeling that his money was apparently more secure in his pants pocket or secreted in his home, than deposited in the bank, a district resident presented an amount totalling $250.00 in out-of-date "folding money" to a local bank this week. The wad included ten dollar bills issued by The Traders' Bank in 1907, similar bills issued by The Sterling Bank in 1906, and currency in smaller denominations which had been out of circulation for some time. Predominant was an old Imperial Bank $100.00 bill, given circulation in 1907. The bill was about double the size of that issued by banks today. Despite the fact that most of the money had been out of circulation for over twenty-five years, it was accepted at face value and the man received an equal amount of crisp new bills.

Plan To Amend Parking Bylaw

Parking is to be prohibited on the east side of Rubidge street from Charlotte to Rink street, and on the south side of Albert street from Park street to Monaghan Road.

The two aldermen who are employees of the Canadian General Electric Company, Cotton and Sands said they were in full agreement with the residents on both those streets, that parking should be confined to one side, and any way the employees were not making full use of the parking lot on the plant property.

This change will be incorporated in a traffic bylaw amendment for Tuesday night desginating Monaghan Road south of Charlotte street to Lansdowne street as a through street, with police direction of traffic in the business period of the noon hour at Monaghan Road and Chamberlain street. The township council has already put through its bylaw and followed it up with stop sign action.

"Some of those people down there complain that cars are parked even in front of their laneways and they are prevented from getting in and out," said Alderman Cotton about the Rubidge and Albert streets parking. "We shouldn't permit anything like that to go on."

"The company's parking lot is not fully used yet," said Alderman Sands.

City Engineer Parsons will be asked for fast work in getting up "no parking" signs as soon as the authority is provided.

Special The Examiner By a P.C.V.S. Student

If this column seems to have an unfamiliar ring this week-end please do not blame your regular writer. Due to sickness he has been forced to take to his bed and this correspondent, in answer to an emergency call, has rushed in where angels fear to tread to produce the following hash.

P.C.I. Defeated

Last week the Senior Boys' Basketball team journeyed to Toronto to compete for the C.O.S.S.A. championship. In a close, action-filled game P.C.I. went down to defeat at the hands of Albert College of Belleville by the score of 41-38. The teams were evenly matched during the first half. In the third quarter the P.C.I. boys piled up a convincing lead but in the last quarter Albert College came back fighting and made a brilliant rally to take the final honors.

The leading point-producers for P.C.I. were Jim Ferguson and Gordon Burns, each scoring 10 points.

With this game all inter-collegiate basketball is finished, but do not forget that P.C.I. is tied for second place in the city league.

In the near future they will play off with Dominions to determine the Quakers' opponents for the finals.

Mart Kenney Entertains

Yes, believe it or not, our own auditorium was the scene for an informal entertainment of some three hundred Collegiate students by Mart Kenney and his Western Gentlemen. Of course Mr. Kenney was not playing expressly for P.C.V.S. students but was practising for his evening radio program over CHEX. However, the fact that they were not formally invited to the practice made no difference to the students who filtered in by groups as soon as their examinations were over. Also present were a number of the teaching staff who seemed to be enjoying Mart Kenney's "Sweet and Low" music as much as the students.

Combined with pleasure was an element of education as the onlookers could see how an actual radio program is produced, and how timing is an essential feature of program production.

We will see after the holidays whether Mart Kenney's "Sweet and Low" was conducive to concentrated studying. If results are encouraging we might suggest to the management of CHEX to broadcast the music of this orchestra each night during the next set of examinations.

Jottings

The sale of War Savings Stamps dropped again last week to $250. We wonder if the coming Easter Parade would have anything to do with this low total!

It is reliably reported that the new windbreakers to be presented to the football team are actually at the school. They will be presented as soon as school recommences.

Before next month our ranks may be diminished as a number of students have declared themselves willing to do farm work.

April Fool's Day seems to be virtually forgotten this year. However, as the saying goes: "There is no fool like an old fool" so perhaps our time is yet to come.

On Thursday morning the last examination-writers gave a sigh of relief, threw their well-worn?? books in their lockers, and skipped gleefully homeward to begin celebrating.

And if the older generation can not see why we should be celebrating the end of this term, they should have written those examinations!

There seems to be a great scarcity of news this week so we may as well stop here. Before doing so, however, in case there are any who have read this far, we would like to wish you all a very happy Easter. We also extend best wishes for a speedy recovery to your regular correspondent.

Sugar Rationing Explained To WI

ROSENEATH, April 4—(ENS).— Mrs. C. Grigg, president of the society, was hostess also when the regular meeting of the W.I. was held in the Town Hall on Thursday afternoon.

Two quilts were put on the frames before the meeting opened and while the president conducted the meeting the quilts were finished and will be handed over to the local Red Cross branch. The tops were made and donated by Mrs. R. Halstead and Mrs. Charles Sandercock.

The financial statement presented by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Frank Brown, showed receipts of $16.90 during the past two months.

The correspondence consisted of a letter from Superintendent Miss Mary A. Clark with instructions regarding duties of conveners of standing committees.

A letter also was received and read from Mrs. H. A. Dunham, president of the W.I. of Canada, explaining the reasons for rationing sugar and urging all members to observe the regulations. In connection with this item, pamphlets were distributed explaining the price ceiling as it applies to the consumer.

A letter of thanks for two pairs of socks was read from Sig. Sgt. George Turner. A nominating committee was appointed, consisting of Mrs. Leslie Sherwin, Mrs. Clark Sandercock, and Mrs. J. W. Pacey.

Mrs. Clarence Thackeray, program convenor, announced the following numbers:

A reading, "The Problem of Poverty," by Miss Doreen Nichol. The many problems arising out of unemployment; the uses and abuses of charity; Old Age Pensions, and legislation governing these problems, and several others, were enlarged on.

Mrs. Grigg conducted a guessing contest, when the members were asked to guess the weight of a jar of beans. The contest was won by Mrs. Frank Brown, guessing the exact weight, one pound.

Mrs. J. W. Packey, in a paper, presented many reason on "Why I Belong to the W.I."

A sewing contest was conducted by the convener and won by Mrs. Frank Brown and Mrs. Frank Nichol.

Mother And Daughter Banquet Is Planned

MARMORA, April 4 (ENS)—The regular weekly meeting of the C.G.I.T. was held at the United church parsonage on Wednesday afternoon. Arrangements were made to hold a Mother and Daughter Banquet at the parsonage on Wednesday evening at which there will be several guest speakers. The girls will conduct a special worship service at St. Andrew's Sunday School on Sunday morning. In course of Wednesday afternoon's meeting Mrs. T. Dickson gave a talk on "Home Behaviour."

Member Asked To Attend Council Meeting

Announcement late Thursday that Hon. T. B. McQuesten was withdrawing the bill to expand and establish the scope of the authority of the Department of Municipal Affairs had not reached the finance committee of the city council Thursday night when its members were objecting to some of the features which have stirred up considerable rumble of protest of late throughout the province.

"In view of existing public uneasiness," was the Minister's explanation of the government's action in stowing this proposed legislation on to a shelf until Old Man Ontario develops a more receptive attitude.

The finance committee received a telegram from Horace L. Brittain, secretary of the Ontario Municipal Association urging Peterborough to join in a protest against the bill, especially a clause which Alderman Bradburn denounced as "to much like Hitlerism."

"I would not go that far," Alderman Gordon remarked, as the two lawyers of the committee led the criticism which the telegram stirred up.

The offending clause which Mr. Brittain frowned on was as follows:

"The Department (of Municipal Affairs) shall exercise general oversight over municipalities and the administration of their affairs and shall in respect to any municipality have control and charge over the exercise of any of its powers and over the performance of any of its duties and obigations and without limiting the generality of the foregoing the Department shall have and may exercise in respect of any municipality any of the powers of the Department conferred by this Act."

Mayor Hamilton suggested that the best thing to do was to invite A. L. Elliott, M.L.A., to attend the meeting of the council Tuesday night, and discuss the bill. His motion to that effect, seconded by Alderman Sullivan, was carried unanimously, but with the announcement from the Minister it is hardly likely that the council will expect Mr. Elliott to call around Tuesday.

"After all, we hav to submit our budget to them now," His Worship said. "The province has already supervision over many of the affairs of the municipalities."

He said that thirty-nine Ontario municipalities had bogged down in financial trouble to the extent that the government had to step in and administer their affairs. They owed $105,000,000 debenture debt, were failing to make interest payments and had got themselves into difficult positions and could hardly keep up the necessary services as a municipality.

Alderman Glover agreed that there was wisdom in trying to prevent a repetition of those troubles, but some distinct difference should be made as between sound and solvent municipalities and the other weak ones.

"No man would want to be member of an elected body if it was stripped of power," Alderman Dutton said.

The county council made no gesture of courtesy when they were discussing the municipal bill a week ago. They did not like the sound of it from the outset, and the advance reports were all unfavorable, so they immediately sent a protest to the government, objecting that the province was about to make further encroachment on municipal rights if the bill was enacted.

Dr. Magee Urges First Aid Work

LAKEFIELD, April 4.—(ENS)— Mrs. Dora MacMillan was the hostess on Tuesday evening to the members of the Young Women's Missionary and Service Club of the United Church for the regular meeting, a special feature of which was the educational address by Dr. G. K. Magee of the clinic, Peterborough, on "First Aid."

Miss Irene Darling was in charge of the opening exercises which included a hymn, prayer and scripture reading and a short poem by Mrs. C. H. Hunter.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Alex Graham, Mrs. J. N. Brown the first vice-president was in charge of the business discussion. A report of the month's work was presented by the convener, Mrs. George Graham.

Introduced by Rev. G. F. Kelly, Dr. Magee said: "The civilian population must be trained and educated in case of national emergency. This is the first time that war has been in such terms that the civilian population is more threatened than the forces. No more should we let ourselves believe that it can't happen here.

"First aid," continued the speaker, "is intelligent handling of an emergency. Fear is the greatest enemy of clear thinking and paralyses one's power to act and think. At the time of Hitler's invasion of France and Belgium, fear in the untrained and uneducated masses of the population was their downfall. A country must be educated against mob hysteria.

The description of a proper air raid shelter concluded Dr. Magee's interesting address.

On behalf of the club a hearty vote of thanks was extended Dr. Magee by Mrs. W. W. Leonard. Mrs. C. Butcher contributed a vocal solo. Refreshments served by the committe in charge closed the evening.

Used Tubes Key To Purchase Of Toothpaste

WASHINGTON, April 4—(AP).— The United States War Production Board yesterday prohibited retail merchants from selling toothpaste or shaving cream in tubes to any customer who fails to turn in some type of used collapsible tube for each new one purchased.

The provision, first of its kind and effective immediately, makes retailers responsible for the trade-in transaction.

At the same time the board placed drastic restrictions on future use and production of collapsible tin tubes and prohibited their use entirely for foods, cosmetics, and most toilet preparations.

Under the terms of the trade-in provision, a production board spokesman declared, retailers are liable to penalties prescribed under the War Powers Act—a maximum of $10,000 fine and a year's imprisonment—if sales of tube toothpaste or shaving cream are made in violation of the order.

Purchasers will not be required to exchange a used tube of the same type as the tube being purchased.

It was understood the used tubes eventually would be reprocessed and allocated back to the tube manufacturers — possibly representing the entire supply of tin they can expect for the duration of the war.

The order provides that tubes containing 100 per cent tin may be used only for certain medical ointments and pharmaceutical preparations, while tin-coated tubes must be used for toothpaste and shaving cream.

HYDRO and CHEMISTRY
Power Team for Victory!

● Hydro-Electric energy, handmaiden of progress in peacetime, is indispensable in time of war!

In guarded laboratories all over Ontario, night and day, chemists are seeking out formulas for ever more powerful explosives that will help to shorten the war. The chemical industry and Hydro go hand in hand. Between them they produce explosives for aerial torpedoes, depth bombs, land and sea mines, chemicals for flame throwers—and many other weapons that will hit the enemy hard.

From the day that war was declared Hydro's two million electrical horsepower was ready to be harnessed to the war effort and today more than half of it is at work, fashioning the myriad tools of victory. In Ontario's chemical industry, huge plants using over 150,000 Hydro horsepower are turning out chemicals and high explosives—and more such plants are being built. That means greater demands for electrical energy, demands your Hydro must and will meet.

Here, every citizen can help by conserving Hydro current, by using it sparingly. That's an important way we can all "help to finish the job" . . . sooner!

CONSERVE ELECTRICITY

In cooking, use automatic controls and watch the switches. For large quantities of toast, use top oven element with broiling pan and rack instead of open elements. Cook complete "oven" meals in range oven, with bottom elements. Have your electrical dealer or local "Hydro" keep your appliances in first class order.

DOMINIONS TAKE 11-POINT LEAD OVER P.C.V.S. IN FIRST CONTEST

School Quintet Outplayed In Final Minutes

A red-hot scoring splurge in the dying minutes of the game enabled Dominions to come from behind and run up an 11-point lead over P.C.V.S. in the first of their two-game, points-to-count City asketball League semi-finals at the Y.M.C.A. Thursday night.

It was one of the hardest fought, most exciting contests of the season. Dominions took an early lead and after P.C.V.S. came back to go out in front midway in the period, the winners eased into a slim 19-18 lead when the half-time whistle blew. P.C.V.S. came back strong after the rest period and took the lead as play opened. They kept up the pressure and built up a 31-25 lead with half of the period gone. At that point, point, Dominions took command of the situation and completely outplayed the school quintet in the final ten minutes, firing baskets from all angles and holding the P.C.V.S. attack at a stand still to build up their lead. During the final half of the last stanza, the winners took the long end of a 19-3 count and were still going at the finish.

It was a bitter battle with both clubs opening the throttle early and forgetting to close it for the balance of the game. Checking was close and fouls frequent as play around both back boards was rough and no quarter asked or give by either club. Both missed a lot of chances with hurried shooting, necessitated by the unusually hard checking.

Play was just about as close as would be expected from the fact that the two teams finished tied for second place in the regular schedule. The winners held an edge in the first half; the Garnet and Gray five looked a little the better of the two teams for a while in the last half, and the final minutes it was all Dominions. Prior to that last minute rally there had been little to choose between the semi-finalists.

Dominions counted four points on their 12 free throws and P.C.V.S. counted five of their 10 chances.

All the winners shared credit for their triumph, Craig and Gillespie leading the attack with 18 and 14 points, respectively.

Taylor with 20 points, Ferguson and Saunders stood out for P.C.V.S. The teams:—

P.C.I. 33—Richardson 3, Gardner 2, Saunders 3, Dinsdale, McTavish, Graham, Taylor 20, Ferguson 5.

Dominions 44—Gillepie 14, Rogow Grose 3, Burns 4, Johnston, Craig

Referee—Doug. McPherson.

NEW YORK, April 4—(AP).—Is the Stanley Cup hockey series that begins tonight the last for the duration?....Answer: No....With most of the young players going into the services this Summer, there's sure to be tough sledding ahead, but our idea is that they'll be able to patch up the big league teams with exempt players, veterans and minor leaguers, to keep going even if the minors do have to fold....Boston's Art Ross is to air his ideas tonight and one suggestion will be that all profits should go to war funds.... Other sports likely will keep going in the same way—the big leaguers at the top and sandlot and industrial teams at the bottom and not much in between.

Mr. Warwick Tries A Bit Too Hard

Warwick, of the New York Rangers, goes down to the ice after trying to get through the Toronto Maple Leaf defence in an effort to score. This was the fifth game of the Stanley Cup playoffs at Madison Squar Garden. By winning the game, 3-1, the Rangers made it two wins as against three defeats in the playoff series with the Maple Leafs. The teams returned to Toronto for the sixth which the Leafs won 3-2.

Joe Dean's Boys Capture 2nd In League

Taking their first game by one pin in their 3 to 1 victory over Big Five the Joe Dean boys clinched second place in the league standing with two nights to go. Quakers upset Jay's 3 to 1 and Outlaws, Old Timers and Huffman's won by the same margin from Dunn's, Royal Yorks and Freeman's.

Good three game totals were scarce, Chief Gimblett with 831 and Bill Lewis with 807 being top men. 700 scores were turned in by: J. Wade 719, B. McCarrell 751, W. Burford 703, H. Fisher 780, W. Weese 752, L. Martyn 780, V. Anthony 725, E. White 708, W. Harris 752, M. Caccavella 771, F. Scates 717.

Good single games were turned in by Lewis 324, Wade 314, Gimblett 309, Fisher 307, Curvin 304, Abraham 304, L. Martyn 301.

Outlaws had the best team score with a three-game total of 3370.

Bud White of Capitol Grill has enlisted for active service with the Prince of Wales Rangers and all the bowlers from the city league wish him all success and we know he will be "right in there" the same as he was on the alleys.

League standing: Jay's 73, Capitol Grill 61, Dunn's 52, Outlaws 52, R. Yorks 50, Freeman's 50, Old Timers 50, Big Five 48, Huffman's 39, Quakers 25.

FOR TBENNING, Ga.—Manager Leo Durocher and several of his Brooklyn Dodgers got a taste of army life yesterday. They used army Jeeps for the six-mile trip from Macon, Ga., to their game with the Camp Wheeler team.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Some railbirds already are discounting St. Louis Cardinals because they lack power. Detroit Tigers don't believe it, not since they spent yesterday chasing 16 solid base hits off Cardinal bats, one of them a homer by young Stan Musial.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Don Ross, the most consistent hitter of any Detroit player this Spring, has about won the nod at the right field post. Doc Cramer's great throwing arm gives him the edge of the centre field job, and Barney McCosky will be in left when the season opens.

"Mexican Masquerade"

By CECIL CARNES

EXPLORATION
CHAPTER IX

"AH, now you misjudge me," protested Escobar quickly, and if his tone was equable, there was still a trace of red to color the clear olive skin of his cheeks. "As the officer responsible for this district, I have lately found it advisable to keep an eye on telegrams. A mild censorship, you see, quite unofficial and very extra-legal. The wire to you came through the San Saba office while I was there, and it was placed before me as a matter of routine—police routine, senor."

"I beg your pardon," said Allan, rising and holding out his hand to make it more convincing. "I should have remembered your official position and not spoken out of turn. With the whole world going to hell in a hack you are certainly justified in doing everything you can to keep this little corner of it peaceful."

"My sentiments exactly," nodded the Mexican, and gave a friendly pressure of his strong fingers to Allan's hand. "And now—you will excuse me, yes? Perhaps we shall have the pleasure of your company at dinner this evening."

His smiling, debonair self again, he sauntered back to where his charming companion awaited him.

Allan made a grimace at the treacherous telegram and stuck the thing in his pocket.

He gave some thought to the incident that afternoon when he wasn't wondering if the axles would snap or the radiator blow up. Whatever else Escobar might be, he was still the Government with a capital G in this neck of the woods and it made Allan a bit uncomfortable to think he might have become an object of suspicion to the police. It would be ruinous to his mission if he were slapped into the local hoosegow on charge of being a spy or fifth-columnist or something.

But the colonel had seemed quite good-humored about it, he tried to reassure himself, and if he really had serious doubts of Allan's bona fides he would hardly have tipped off his hand so openly about the "extra-legal" censorship. Moreover, his suggestions of dinner together had sounded cordial, and he had drifted away smiling.

Not that the smile meant much, mused Allan dissuading the sedan from plunging into a clump of cholla cactus. Mexicans have a reputation for taking life easily, but they stand for no foolishness.

Damn' efficient' these rurals!" muttered Allan. "The way he spotted that San Diego date-line-!! Dammit, he's good!"

When his speedometer had jolted off nearly ten miles of highway hell, Allan slowed up and began to look about him for Sun Su's landmark. He discovered it presently, well off to the left of the road he was on and evidently quite near the shore of the Gulf. It was a steep little hill, perhaps 30 feet high, and the top was crowned by a grove of knotty, gnarled old pines. If he should gain their shelter unseen, he could be comfortably sure of remaining so.

There was a jungle of caucus to the right. He located a break in the gray-green wall, turned into it daringly, and parked the long-suffering sedan where it would not be noticed from the road.

Not a soul was in sight. He might have thought he had Lower California to himself but for faint sounds of human activity which came from the direction of the gulf. Distant voices, and mixed with them the rattle of chains and the clank of machinery.

"The cannery,' I expect. The cannery-and what else?" His right hand went back to touch his hip-pocket, though the weight of his automatic was proof enough of its presence. Just for look, and thinking of poor Harry Bishop, took it out and made sure it was in readiness for use in case anybody came after him with a hypodermic needle. "Well' here goes!" Stooping a little, his eyes watchful, he left the dusty road and headed cross-country for the pine-topped hill. He had on canvas leggings which protected him from cactus spines-and other more deadly perils. Several big scorpions scuttled away at his swift approach, and at one side-wider rattled an angry warning at him to watch his step. He did.

He reached the base of the hill with no more than these reptilian alarms. He began the steep ascent, climbing fairly quickly till he was within a few feet of the top. Then he crouched and went the rest of the way on hands and knees. He came to the grove of pine, crawled through it to its farther edge, and dropped flat on his stomach in as nice a front-line observation post as nature ever devised.

Stretched before him was the blue-green expanse of the Gulf, glinting and twinkling in the reflected rays of sunlight. Across the water, nearly ten miles dis-

Fans Storm Rink To Watch Krauts Work Out

MONTREAL, April 4 — (CP). — Generally speaking, two hockey teams playing on neutral ice don't draw enough customers to keep the ticket sellers awake. But it certainly isn't the case in the Eastern Canadian Senior final between Ottawa Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers and Quebec Aces.

By some twist of fate, Montreal fans have demonstrated a keen interest in the best-of-five game round between the two outside clubs, which meet in the first game of the series here tonight. And it seems likely that a sell-out crowd of 10,000 or more fans will jam the Forum to watch the contest.

Close to 3,000 spectators turned out yesterday to watch the Flyers, featuring two-thirds of the famed Kraut line, go through a light drill. It was obvious that the fans were mainly interested in the work of Milt Schmidt and Woody Dumart, the former Boston Bruins. Bobby Bauer, the other member of the line, is out of action with a shoulder injury.

Schmidt and Dumart set the crowd talking with some of their rushes and they were nearly swamped with requests for autographs from youngsters crowding the rink rail. The kids that didn't get the Krauts then did so later as the players came from the dressing room after the drill.

Crowd Into Rink

Tommy Gorman, general manager of the Forum, said the fans "nearly tore down the front doors in their eagerness to get into the rink to watch practice." The Good Friday holiday, said Gorman, helped to swell the crowd beyond the usual proportions.

Undoubtedly one of the main reasons why so much interest in the series is that the Krauts play for the Flyers. But another reason is that Montreal fans know the worth of the Aces from seeing the Quebec team in action many times during key League matches.

Opinion here is divided over what will be the outcome of the series. Some followers hold that the Flyers have too much strength up front for the Aces. Others maintain that the Aces have too strong a defence for the Airmen.

In addition to Schmidt and Dumart the Flyers have such top line forwards as Pickles MacNichol, Buddy Helyer, Johnny Acheson and El Campbell. Those forwards will be rolling up against one of the strongest defences in the country, featuring Goalie Lionel Bouvrette, Mike McMahon, Frank Stahan and Jo-Jo Graboski.

Coach Don Penniston brought his Aces into town late last night from Quebec. Denniston would only say that "we'll do our best" when he asked for a prediction on the outcome of the series. He added that the Flyers "have had a long rest since their series with Hamilton Majors, whereas we've been forced to play nearly every second night for the past two weeks with some long train trips to boot."

Penniston said that his only worry was that the heavy schedule and travelling would cause staleness.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Peterborough fans will have a somewhat divided allegiance so far as the Stanley Cup finals are concerned. Normally local hockey enthusiasts are Leaf supporters and the majority of them will be on this occasion but among older fans there will be a minority ballot cast by folk who well remember rotund Jack Adams, manager of the Red Wings, as one of the most popular players who ever wore a Peterborough uniform and who would like to see him have the honor of piloting another Stanley Cup winner. It is a quarter of a century since Adams played right wing on the 247th Battalion team here but the friends he made on that occasion still remember him and by the same token he has not forgotten them. The inimitable Jack has never let success go to his head. He has gone a long way up the hockey trail since he played at Brock Street Rink, but while his waist measure is considerably bigger than it was then he still wears the same sized hat.

* * * * * *

Adams was one of a quartette of Fort William players brought to Peterborough in the winter of 1916-17 by the late Jack Meharry who in his day and generation was responsible for importing into Peterborough a lot of high-class hockey stars, some of whom did not linger long enough to get into action here. If the pick of all the hockey celebrities who had dealings with Meharry could be assembled in one team and were at the peak of their career now the result would be a lineup that would make a real bid for the Stanley Cup. Anyway, when the residence rules were abolished so far as soldiers in uniform were concerned it was a great time for the former rink manager, and Jack Adams, Bobby Armstrong, and Pat and Alf Flanagan were persuaded to come down from Fort William and throw in their lot with the local soldier team. That was the outfit that was eliminated by Hamilton in the intermediate semi-finals and Adams was one of the outstanding stars, scoring a flock of goals for the 247th. Older fans will remember how he would dash up right wing and let go with a low hard drive into the right hand bottom corner of the net from well out that had every goalie he played against guessing. Adams could fire shot after shot in about the same spot, six inches off the ice and travelling with Spitfire speed. It was that faculty that got him into professional hockey in a hurry and that kept him there for years after as an active player before he won himself a managerial job with Detroit.

* * * * * *

The manner in which the Red Wings' manager put himself so prominently before the scouts of the professional loop, they couldn't ignore him, is interesting. At the close of the season in which he was in Peterborough the Toronto St. Pat's were an amateur club and Adams and Grover Halpin of the 247th were invited to go to Toronto for an exhibition game with the St. Patrick's outfit. All the two visitors from the 247th did, was to score all seven goals credited to the Saints that night, Adams driving five of them into the net and Halpin being responsible for the other two. After that performance the 247th right-winger was a sure-fire professional possibility and next winter he was in the monied ranks to star for many years both in the N.H.L. and on the Coast.

Dominions Take First

Dominions set up an eleven point lead in the first game of the City League semi-final series with Collegiate and Vocational School cage team in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium Thursday night but only after the hardest kind of a battle. The game was one of the best in the loop this season, with the lead see-sawing all through the tussle. With ten minutes to go Coach Bamforth's school team were in front 31 to 25 but Dominions uncorked a final rally that carried them through to a 44 to 33 victory. In that scoring splurge the Dominions piled up 19 points in the last quarter as against two by the school team. It was rather a surprising windup to a game that had been nip-and-tuck all the way until the ultimate winners took full command of the Collegiate squad was top scorer for the night with Jack Craig with 18 and Chum Gillespie with 14 sparking the winners' offensive. The second game of the series will be played early next week with total points in the two games settling the argument. The winners of this series will clash with the first-place Quakers in a series for the City League championship, with the first game scheduled for a week from tonight.

How a Peterborough lacrosse team of many years ago won the Calcutt Cup after taking three hours and 40 minutes to knock off the Norwood team and only 15 minutes to dispose of the Millbrook outfit is recalled by one of the old guard of sportsmen Robert J. Begley. That was, of course back in the days when the first team to score three goals won the argument and as a result some games were terminated in a hurry and others dragged out for hours. Mr. Begley recalls that the Millbrook team was late in arriving that day and Peterborough Seconds and Norwood were stacked against each other first. It was nearly four hours later that Peterborough managed to score its third goal and take the decision. Then Millbrook challenged and the Petes consented to play them provided they could replace their injured centre player. Millbrook agreed and the Petes called into action a former star from Montreal Shamrocks who happened to be in town. He ran in three goals in 15 minutes and it was all over. Of the Peterborough team of that day only two players are now living. One is Mr. Begley; the other Jack Canning, now a resident of Oshawa.

Generals Come Through

That unpredictable Oshawa junior squad came through with a sensational finish to take their second straight game from the Montreal Royals last night and now lead the Eastern Canada final series 2 games to 0. It is a best four-of-seven affair with the next game in Montreal Monday. Thanks to a sensational display of goalkeeping by Renaud in the nets for the Montrealers, the Royals had a 2 to 0 lead until late in the third period when the Generals took advantage of a Montreal penalty to sew up the battle by scoring twice within a minute. They followed that success with another speedy goal to take the lead but the Royals struck back quickly with a counter to send the battle into overtime. With a little over seven minutes gone Buck Davies who played a lot of hockey for the Oshawa Bees against the Colts last season took a pass and sailed in to beat Renaud with a million dollar counter. At that Royals did everything but tie it up in the short time remaining.

* * * * * *

Even in Detroit the Maple Leafs have been installed as 8 to 5 favorites to take the final series which opens tonight in Toronto. On the season's record those odds are just about right but on the other hand the annual playoffs have usually made the dope look sick and it could easily be that Jack Adams' collection of hard-bitten veterans and fast rookies may prove the toughest kind of opposition. They will play fighting, socking hockey, close-to-the-vest brand, hoping to cut down the Leafs' speed by hitting every Toronto puck carrier with plenty of dynamite. And at that Detroit has a lot of hockey talent. That Grosso-Abel-Wares line has outscored all of the Leafs' forward divisions and there is nothing much wrong with the veteran Syd Howe-Mud Bruneteau-Carl Liscombe second line or the Brown-Carveth-Brown kid line. Anyway it should be quite a series with Detroit a lot better than many fans seem to imagine.

TRAINING GOSSIP

ORLANDO, Fla., April 4—(AP).—"This is the ball club I'm depending on to put us in the first division," said Manager Bucky Harris of Washington Senators as he named his lineup for today's game with Philadelphia Phils. Bobo Newsom will make his first start as a Washington pitcher, caught by Jake Early. Mickey Vernon will be at first, Frank Croucher at second, Bobby Estalella at third, Bob Repass at short, and Stan Spence, George Case and Bruce Campbell in the outfield.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Ted Williams will spend most of his time during Boston Red Sox' two-day visit here having his injured foot X-rayed. The slugger was nicked by one of Bucky Walters' pitches Thursday and Manager Joe Cronin warned him he would play no more until he produced a negative print.

City Carpetball

Robins and other items of interest bring about thoughts of gardening, but the fact is that we are on the last leg of our carpetball schedule, which is a real fact that Spring and all its various asks and pleasures is here.

The President's Cup games have all been played to date, but we have only received half of the regular schedule reports in the President Cup playoffs. Both S.O.E. teams were eliminated.

The Auto Tops were extended three games to take the edge over the C.N. Freighters, with the score of 11-3, 6-7, 9-5, whilst the Mad Masons put out the Fighting Parsons with two straight hooks to the jaw 8-6, 6-4.

L.O.L. No. 3 beat out the Old Soldiers in two straight 13-5, 6-5, but we understand that the Old Sweats had some very tough luck.

The Westclox also came through with two straight, taking the Brintons for 9-7, 10-7. So fade out four good teams, whilst the winners will play their second round this week.

President's Cup Games

LOL No. 4 v. Auto Tops, No. 12, at SOE Hall on Thursday, April 9. F. Parsons, referee.

LOL No. 3 v. Moose, No. 10, to be played at Legion Hall. J. S. Mason, referee.

BESL No. 5 v. PFD No. 7 at Moose or SOE. Skips to arrange. E. Holden, referee.

St. George's No. 9 v. PFD No. 8. Owing to No. 8 working nights this week, this game will be played at the SOE Hall on Monday, April 12.

Draw for second round will be made at the No. 4-No. 12 game on Thursday.

It would be well for the referees to note that they are to measure balls only in cases of dispute between the vice skips. Also that no penalties shall be imposed.

In the schedule game the Auto Tops were trimmed by the league-leading Westclox gang, but gave that team a real run for their money, and are looking for revenue this week. Scores, 8-17, 6-8.

The Fighting Parsons took it out of the Smoke Eaters last week by the scores of 13-12, 18-3.

The game between King Billie and the Smoke Eaters was deadlocked at one each, 10-11, 13-5.

The Quebec squad was unable to stop the C.N.R. from pulling the freight out of their yard, although they managed to put the brakes on for a while. It does not improve with position very much. Scores, 16-10, 22-6.

The balance of schedule is as follows:

PFD No. 8 v. Brintons No. 11.
BESL No. 6 v. Moose No. 10.
BESL No. 5 v. No. 5 v. Auto Tops No. 12. To be played at Fire Hall on Wednesday, April 9.
LOL No. 3 v. PFD No. 7
SOE No. 2 v. St. George's No. 9.
SOE No. 1 v. LOL No. 4.
Games not heard from:
SOE No. 1 v. PFD No. 7.
PFD No. 8 v. Brinton No. 11.
BESL No. 6 v. Moose No. 10.
SOE No. 2 v. St. George's No. 9.

Top Six Teams:

	W.	L.	D.	Pts.	Ave.	TP
BESL No. 5....	26	13	3	55	53	1
SOE No. 2	23	13	4	50	52	2
St. George's, 9.	23	16	1	47	57	2
PFD No. 8.....	21	15	4	46	53	2
LOL No. 3' ...	21	19	1	44	52	1
PFD No. 7	21	18	1	43	54	2

There are no other teams within reach of the prize lists of the Elsie Bennett Trophy. The next being the Quaker squad with 44 points and 48 average.

We are glad to report that for the first time all fees are paid up to date. No hangovers. On the banquet versus social evening, the score stands as: Banquet, 19 ballots; social evening, 29 ballots. Forty-eight ballots out of 60 received.

Some ballots have not been returned and we feel that it is safe to pick the committee for the social evening.

A meeting of the executive and skips is called for 7-15 sharp on Wednesday evening to discuss this matter fully. Please be on time as some games are to be played afterwards. Meet at the Fire Hall Wednesday, April 8, 7.15 sharp.

Saskatoon Beats Kimberley 8-1 To Tie Up Series

By The Canadian Press

Final games in three Western Canada semi-final hockey series will be played tonight with Port Arthur Bearcats meeting Lethbridge Maple Leafs at Lethbridge and Kimberley Dynamiters battling Saskatoon Quakers at Saskatoon in the Senior division. The third game at Regina is a Junior tussle between Edmonton Maple Leafs and Regina Abbotts.

Bearcats, Thunder Bay-Manitoba champions, have the edge in their Senior affair, leading Maple Leafs 2-1 in a best-of-five series with one game tied. The Lakeheaders need but a draw at Lethbridge to enter the Western final.

Saskatoon overwhelmed Kimberley 8-1 Thursday night at Saskatoon to deadlock their series 2-2.

The Regina-Edmonton Junior series was scheduled as a best-of-three, but Regina's 7-6 overtime win Thursday night forced a fourth encounter. The first game ended in a 2-2 draw and Edmonton won the second 5-4.

Winner of the series will meet Portage La Prairie Terriers at Winnipeg in a best-of-five Western final opening Monday.

The Manitoba champions began workouts at Winnipeg Thursday after a three-day rest following their three game victory over the Thunder Bay champions, Fort William Hurricane-Rangers.

Terriers have been practicing without the services of Wally Stefaniew, centre of their second forward trio. Stefaniew has an infected arm and it is not certain whether he will be ready for action Monday.

Six Brantford Lions Sign With Red Wings

KENTVILLE, N.S., April 4—(CP).—Laurie Jordan, a lef winger with Brantford Lions of the Ontario Hockey Associations' Junior loop until an injury forced him out of the game last December, says six of his team-mates have signed up with Detroit Red Wings of the National League for next season.

The Lions ended the regular season on top of their circuit, but lost out in the playoffs to Oshawa Generals. Jordan did not mention the names of the players who signed up with Detroit. As for himself, he says he will be out of the game for another year at least, because of the injury he suffered in a game with St. Michael's College of Toronto. His Achilles tendon was severed.

Jordan came back to his home here during the week-end, firmly convinced that the people of Brantford and the Detroit club are tops. He said the following things were done for him after he was injured:

His $900 hospital bill was paid in full;

He was given his full salary for a job he was No. 3 to work on;

He was given a gold wrist watch, countless gifts for his comfort while in hospital, and a new hockey outfit.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—Bob Johnson's late start in Spring training, caused by his holding out, apparently hasn't affected his power. The Philadelphia Aethletics' outfielder slammed a 400-foot homer with two on base to lead yesterday's victory over Pittsburg and added a single for a perfect day in two official trips to the plate.

This Week In Radio

Easter morn will bring to the world that joyous story "He Is Risen," and with it will come this year through radio, special services on the networks which will span the continent starting with the sunrise service over WABC at six o'clock.

Charles McCarthy is going to have as his guest on Sunday night the lovely Jeanette MacDonald, singing star of screen and concert stage over CBL at 8.00.

Lovers of mystery dramas will be pleased to know that Boris Karloff (who is at present playing in the smash Broadway melodrama 'Arsenic and Old Lace' will be heard over WJZ at 8.30 in a shivery drama, "Death by Choice."

Prime Minister Curtin of Australia will broadcast a special Easter message to the people of Canada. Mr. Curtin will speak as CBL's "Guest of Honor" in the series of talks being presented under that title on Sunday at 9.00 p.m.

"The Goldbergs," famous serial now in its 13th year, begins new time schedules on Monday, April 6, and will be heard at 2.45 daily instead of 5.15, WABC.

The complicated political problem of India currently spotlighted because of that great country's position in the Pacific war and the visit of Sir Stafford Cripps will be discussed over WABC on Tuesday at 10.00 p.m., by Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to Washington.

Barbara Everst, the distinguished British stage and screen actress who plays the role of "Gran," head of the house of whiteoaks in the special radio adaptation of Mazo de la Roche's famous story heard Sundays, CBL, at 10 p.m.

An editor, a farm representative and an industrialist, all Canadians, join in "People's Platform" to discuss Canada's war effort on Thursday at 8.30 p.m., CBL. The guests will be R. J. Scott, vice-president of the Daily Farmers' Association of Canada; James S. Duncan, president of the Massey-Harris Company, and Miss Margaret Gould, a Toronto newspaper woman. The program originates in Toronto, and while WABC usually carries all these broadcasts, CBL will broadcast this one program.

In defiance of the old adage that children should be seen and not heard, youngsters from 6 to 16 will be presented in a new dramatic series designed especially for children of their own ages. The Little Blue Playhouse will ring up the curtain on Saturday morning at 11.30, WJZ; and just in passing "The Grown-up Blue Theatre Players" will be heard Sunday at 2.00 p.m., WJZ.

TRIP PENALTY COSTS ROYALS 2nd GAME AGAINST OSHAWA CLUB

Generals Snatch 3 in 5 Mins. Win In Overtime

TORONTO, April 4 — (CP). — Coach Lorne White of the Montreal Royals to-day had joined the crowded ranks of sports strategists whose strategy failed to jell.

A tripping penalty to Johnny Gauthier late in the second game of the best-of-seven Eastern junior final series between Royals and the Oshawa Generals here last night was the difference between success and failure for White's deep thinking. That penalty supplied Generals with the spark they needed for their 4-3 overtime victory.

White's plan to counter Oshawa's speed was to send three forward lines, but only two defencemen, into this second game. By switching his lines constantly he kept his three forward lines fresher and more effective than Oshawa's two. Late in the third period the strategy seemed to be paying off. Montreal led 2-0 with less than five minutes to play. Then came Gauthier's penalty.

Bep Guidolin got Oshawa's first goal a few seconds later, firing through a crowd of players. Jean Paul Renaud in the Montreal goal didn't even see it. Just 22 seconds later Lloyd Curry tied the score. In another 91 seconds, Tommy Depew sent Oshawa out in front. Royals maanged to come back in the second last minute to tie the score on the goal by Eddie Emberk, but had lost their drive.

Tracey Loses It

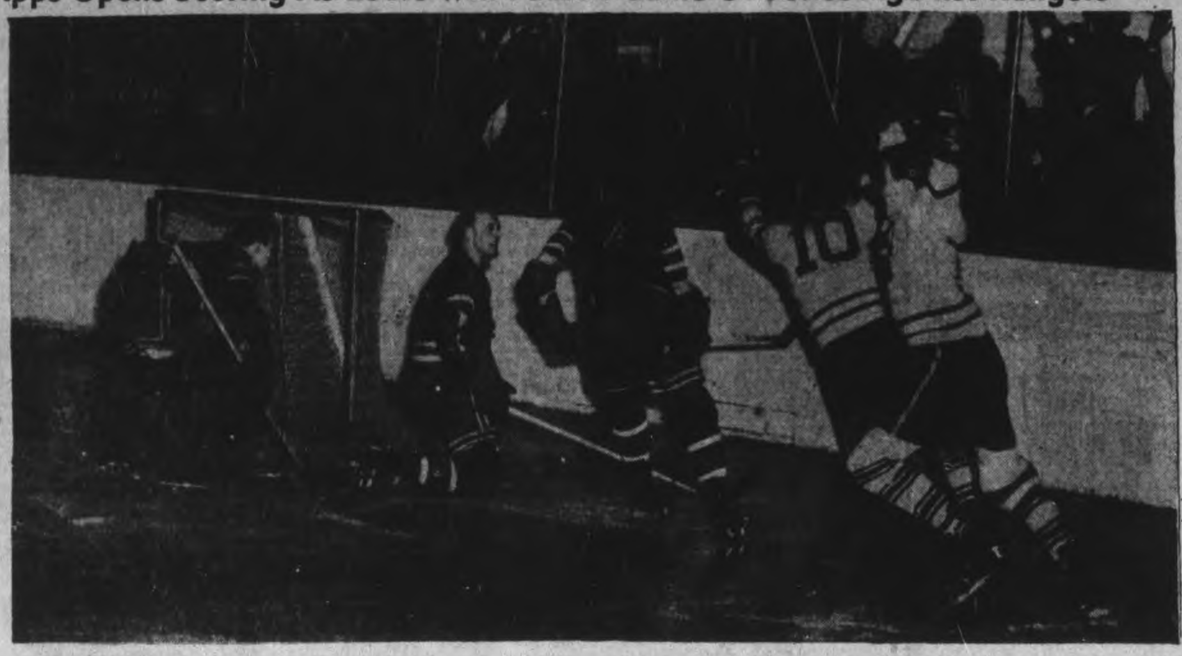
The death-blow for White's plan came in overtime, when Pat Tracey—one of the two Montreal defencemen and leaden-limbed from his heavy, unrelieved campaigning—lost the puck to Buck Davies behind the Royals' blueline. Davies stormed in to score the winner.

The victory gave Generals a 2-0 lead in the series, which will resume in Montreal Monday night.

Albert Voss, Don McQueston and Eck Miller were forwards used in last night's game by Montreal for the first time in this series. McQueston was in on the play for the second of Montreal's first two goals, both scored by Bert Sheppard. He bagged his first in the first period and scored again in the second.

Oshawa and Montreal met in the Eastern Junior final last year, with Montreal taking the title. Royals lost to Winnipeg Rangers in the Canadian final, with Bill Mortimer, a Winnipeg defenceman, one of the strongest single forces in their defeat. Mortimer is a first-string Oshawa defenceman this year.

Apps Opens Scoring As Leafs Win Fourth Game Of Series Against Rangers



"Sugar Jim" Henry fishes the puck out of the Rangers' net as Syl Apps opened the scoring in the third period of the fourth game in the Rangers-Leafs Stanley Cup playoffs series. Lynn Patrick of the Rangers is the gent on his knees. Watson (7) of the Rangers may also be seen. Apps (10), who scored the first goal of the game, and Goldham of the Leafs are on their way behind the Rangers' net. The Leafs took the game, 2-1, and then journeyed to New York, where they lost the fifth game of the series, 3-1.

MacPhail's Gold May Get Dodger's Flag

TAMPA, Fla., April 4 (AP) — If Larry MacPhail's bank roll holds out—and a fine, lusty bank roll it is—Brooklyn Dodgers probably will fight off both St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds and win themselves another National League pennant.

It should be a tight race right down to the wire. It appears safe to dismiss the other five outfits from the real contention, though Pittsburg might, as usual, set a hot early pace.

A Sound Club

The Dodgers are a little sounder club all around than either the Reds or the Cards. If their pitching shows signs of falling off, MacPhail will go after Buck Newsom hard enough to get him. He might get Buck anyway.

Already Brooklyn has one of baseball's outstanding infield quartets in Dolf Camilli, Billy Herman, Peewee Reese and Arky Vaughan, and it has the league's best young outfielder in Harold Reiser. It has a brace of top pitchers in Kirby Higbe and Whit Wyatt, and two good catchers in Billy Sullivan and Mickey Owen.

The Cardinals are the fastest team in baseball today, and oldtimers say they might be the fastest ever. They possess two truly outstanding men in Third-Baseman James Brown and Centrefielder Terry Moore, and they have by far the best southpaw pitching staff in the game.

They May Miss Mize

But a weakness in the club appears to be the lack of a slugger or two who can bang extra-base hits with fair consistency or clout the long fly when a mate is on third. The team shows symptoms of missing Johnny Mize's big bat.

Cincinnati must be considered a dangerous contender, despite the loss of Billy Werber at third base and a comparative weakness at that point. If the veteran Gerald Walker, purchased last week from Cleveland, can hit .300 in a new league the Reds will go a long way.

If any one insists upon a complete final standing, here is one guess: (1) Brooklyn, (2) Cincinnati, (3) St. Louis, (4) Chicago, (5) Pittsburg, (6) New York, (7) Boston, (8) Philadelphia.

OLA Loses 50 p.c. Of Players

TORONTO, April 4.—The Ontario Lacrosse Association tightened its belt yesterday and looked forward confidently to its third wartime season, a year which, paradoxically, seems destined for such complete success in many ways that it may well overshadow the less happier (for lacrosse) though that "almost 50 per cent" of its playing strength will be engaged in a bigger battle. A fight in which guns will hold complete authority—not a referee's whistle.

Dopp Serving 30th Year

Gene Dopp, entering into his 30th year as a servant of lacrosse is authority for the statement that playing strength in the O.L.A. will be down at least 50 per cent over last season. And no better authority is around today than the same Eugene Dopp. He is practically Mr. Lacrosse himself, youngest member ever elected to a board governing Ontario lacrosse. That was in 1914.

But unlike '14, Gene recalled after the annual meeting of the association, Canada's national game plans to carry on in this second Great War. As long as it can, at least. Dopp was again unopposed for the secretary's chair as a surprisingly enthusiastic conclave held at the Prince George Hotel. He announced that the books showed that the O.L.A. had $1,986.85 in the bank and had purchased a Victory bond to the value of $1,000 in excess of the cash it has in the vaults.

Times Have Changed

This he contrasted to the secretarial job he took over in Ontario lacrosse when a mere fledgling of 20 years. The O.L.A. had $35 in the bank and debits crowding the $500 mark at the time. But he tells you this with the same modesty for which he has always been known. Disclaiming all credit for this remarkable financial transformation, Gene says simply: "It's only that way now because times have changed in our handling of member clubs."

One surprise of yesterday's annual was the election of Dan Millar of St. Catharines to the president's chair, succeeding Jack McDonald of Mimico. Frank Curran of Orillia was a third contestant for the presidency, but Millar won away off by himself in balloting.

Four senior clubs have already signified their intention of operating this year, despite the rationing on gasoline, about which the lacrossists would rather not talk. Reading from left to right, and not necessarily geographically, these are Etobicoke Indians, Mimico Mountaineers, St. Catharines Athletics and Owen Sound Georgians. The Sounders are new to the senior field. Hamilton and Brampton may swing along, too.

Holmes May Retire

Dr. Wendell Holmes, treasurer of the O.L.A., asked to be relieved of his duties after eighteen years' service. Demands on his time encroach too heavily for him to take over the job, the meeting was told. Gene Dopp will likely saddle this responsibility from here in unless the estimable doctor relents. Other officer elected were: First vice-president, Chuck Rowan, New Toronto; second vice-president, Ed McDermott, Toronto; third vice was left vacant and the appointment will be made by the incoming executive. The executive is pretty well the same with Ted Johnstone, Toronto; Bruce Leighton, Toronto; J. C. McLeod, Owen Sound; Alex McPherson, Hamilton; Bill Scott, oronto; and J. Vipond of Brooklin, holding office.

The business sessions were preceded by dinner at which W. (Bill) Hanley, K.C., was guest speaker. The Jimmy Murphey Memorial Trophy and Querrie Medal for the senior player adjudged most valuable to his team and most sportsman like was presented to Flight-Lieutenant Don McCallum, Hamilton Tigers captain. Len Ingram, Inglewood, won the Jimmy Bailey Trophy for juniors acknowledged to combined the same sterling qualities.

Leether Elected To Executive At OASA Session

SIMCOE, April 4. — Harry Sniderman of Toronto was re-elected to his second term as president of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association at the twentieth annual meeting held here yesterday.

Other officers elected were: Honorary president, S. H. Armstrong, Toronto (acclamation); honorary vic-president, H. S. Briggs, Hamilton (acclamation); first vice-president, G. H. Spooner, Galt; second vice-president, Harry Rollins, Belleville; secretary Verne McIlwraith, Guelph (acclamation); treasurer, W. L. Lloyd Alguire, St. Catharines (acclamation); auditors, A. Webster, and R. Horning, Hamilton (acclamation); executive, Otto H. King, Simcoe; E. A. Simpson, Kingston; J. R. Brush, Sarnia; H. D. Ovenden, Wainfleet; Dave Leether, Peterborough; F. R. Feaver, Hamilton. Delegates appointed by the executive were: D. G. Smith Toronto; W. Morris, Stratford; Frank R. Buscombe of Hamilton. The sub-commitee appointed was: George Spooner, H. K. Champion of Hamilton, Verne McInwraith, Lloyd Alguire, and Frank Feaver.

Amendments to the constitution and rules which were passed were as follows:

That the pitching distance be 40 feet and hte base lines 56 feet in all series.

Ball with or without cork centre will be permitted provided it has the official stamp of the O.A.S.A.

The matter of location for 1943 annual meeting was left to the executive committee. The secretary's annual report showed that forty-three district associations affiliated in 1941 with sixty-four clubs competing for the eight Ontario championships.

At the annual dinner, Mayor James Holden of Simcoe and Warden Bruce Whitside welcomed the delegates.

Wings On The Bit For Battle To Test Leafs

By DICK HERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 4 — (CP). — The series to end all hockey series —for this N.H.L. season—starts here tonight between Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings.

These clubs are the sole survivors of the seven who started the National League campaign; struggled through the 48 games in the regular schedule and then fought their way through the usual intricate play-off system to reach the Stanley Cup finals. This ultimate rounds is on a best-of-seven basis, the second game in Toronto next Tuesday and the next two in Detroit on Thursday and Sunday.

Red Wings arrived here late last night, not the least bit dismayed that they, a club which finished fifth in the final standing, should have progressed so far in the post-season games.

"I only hope we don't disgrace the National Hockey League," said Manager Jack Adams in a facetious vein.

Asked what he meants, Adams replied: "Well, the way some of these Toronto guys have been writing you'd think we had no business in the league."

Day Saying Little

On the other hand Coach Clarence (Hap) Day of Toronto contends the playdowns have passed "beyond the talking stage."

"In any event the Detroit club already has done enough talking for both of us," he added.

Day's reference, without a doubt, was to earlier remarks attributed to Adams who had been quoted as saying: "We're just sorry we can't play Toronto seven nights in a row."

Both coaches have elected to stand pat on the lineups which carried the clubs through the earlier rounds. The Leafs eliminated New York Rangers in six games, while Red Wings polished off Canadiens in three matches and Boston Bruins in two.

The game is expected to attract a crowd of more than 15,000.

Probable lineups:

Detroit		Toronto
Mowers	goal	Broda
Orlando	defence	McDonald
Stewart	defence	Goldham
Grosso	centre	Apps
Wares	wing	Drillon
Abel	wing	Nick Metz

Allan Cup Survivors

Ottawa District—Ottawa R.C.A.F. Flyers.

West—
Thunder Bay District— Port Arthur Bearcats.
Saskatchewan— Saskatoon Quakers.
Alberta—Lethbridge Maple Leafs.
British Columbia—Kimberley Dynamiters.

Whirly Seeking Money Record

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 4.—(AP) —If Whiralaway, soon to embark upon a campaign to establish a new all-time money-earnings record for race horses win half of his races this season Trainer Ben Jones will be satisfied.

"He's in the hands of the handicappers now," Ben Jones remarked yesterday, and he said it as is heavy, heavy hung over his head.

Just how many times the long, bushy-tailed Calumet Farm star, winner of the "triple crown" last year, will be sent to the post in an all-out effort to earn $8,069, the sum he needs to tie Seabiscuit's record of $437,730, is uncertain. However he'll probably have a couple of tune-ups in Kentucky before his first major test in the Dixie Handicap at Pimlico in May.

Although Plain Ben has fifty-one events with a pot of gold aggregating $10,000 to choose from, he said Whirly's course virtually is uncharted, but he made it plain that the spots—the richest races—would be picked.

"It all depends upon the handicappers, Whirly's condition and track and weather conditions," Jones said, adding that the son of Blenheim II is ready to go to work at any time.

It is possible that Whirly, with Eddie Arcaro on his back, may make his season's debut April 9 in the $2,500 added Phoenix Handicap at the opening day of Keeneland's spring meeting, but Jones wouldn't say for sure.

If Whirly doesn't start in that race his first outing as a 4-year-old may come in the $2,500 added Ben Ali Handciap at Keeneland April 18.

Knox Y.P.U.

Thursday's meeting of the Knox Young People's Union was held in the form of a debate against Springville Young People's Union.

The meeting got under way with a sing-song led by Gladys Gerard.

Marjorie Louis was in charge of the worship service, assisted by Grace Stewart, Phyllis Kidd and Velma Stewart.

Knox culture convener, Betty Allen, took charge of the debate. Jim Hunter and Clarence Johnson of Springville upheld the affirmative of the subject, "Resolved that co-operation should replace competition in the business world." Irene Graham and Stewart Barkwell, debating for Knox, took the negative. Mrs. McIntosh of Springville and John Donaldson of Knox were judges, and Rev. Mahoney acted as neutral judge.

After the debate, all the young people entered into the games introduced by Gladys Gerard. Refreshments were then served.

On Sunday evening there will be a fireside service at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claire Jones, Rubidge Street.

Knox W.M.S. Holds April Meeting

An interesting missionary program was presented by members of the Women's Missionary Society of Knox United Church at the Easter thankoffering meeting held in the church parlors on Thursday afternoon.

The meeting was opened by the playing of soft music of a sacramental hymn by Rev. H. J. Mahoney in the absence of the pianist, Mrs. H. Lewis.

Mrs. J. Gerrard led in the impressive worship service, when the Easter message was brought afresh by scriptural passages and appropriate hymns. Mrs. Todd rendered a much appreciated solo.

The society was privileged in having a returned missionary address the members and bring first hand facts from the mission field in which she had labored.

A brief silence was observed in memory of Mrs. Andrew McKenzie, an honorary president, a life member, and one whose life had been linked with the missionary activities of the church.

Prayer by Rev. H. J. Mahoney and the singing of a hymn closed the meeting.

Audrey H. Cole Marries Alfred Skinner

PORT HOPE, April 4—(ENS). — On April 2, at the United Church parsonage a very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized by the Rev. J. W. Gordon, when Audrey Helen, eldest daughter of Mrs. A. Cole and the late Mr. Cole, of Port Hope, was united in marriage to Alfred Skinner of Port Hope.

The bride, who was gowned in a street-length pink sheer wool with which she wore brown accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses and forget-me-nots, was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Cole, wearing a street length dress of robin egg blue sheer wool with black accessories and a corsage of spring flowers. Mr. Francis Currier attended the groom.

After a short wedding trip to western points the happy couple will reside at 39 Princess Street, Port Hope.

Choir Member Honored At St. George's

On Good Friday evening St. George's Anglican church choir, under the leadership of their choirmaster, Mr. Jack Branson, presented the well known beautiful cantata, Maunder's "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," with Mr. Johnson at the organ. Guests of the choir were Mr. W. Farr, Mr. S. Roberts and Mr. G. East.

At the close of this service the members of the choir assembled to bid farewell to Miss Beatrice Curtis, their president, who leaves to serve in the 'Canadian Women's Army Corps.' The choirmaster, Mr. Branson, on behalf of the members, presented Miss Curtis with a Parker's pen and pencil set and read the following address:

Peterborough, Ont., April 3, '42.

Dear Bea—It is with sincere regret, but, a most honourable one, that we learn of your severing permanent connections with our choir, of which you have been a most faithful and cherished member for many years.

We are proud of you Bea, and in offering your services to His Majesty's forces we all know that you will carry out your duties as faithfully as you have in the choir.

Please accept this gift as a token of esteem and affection of every individual member and may God give you courage to always carry on the new work you are about to undertake.

Your presence with us will always be welcome and if you are to be stationed in Peterborough, we shall be more than pleased to see you in your choir seat.

Signed on behalf of the members of St. George's Church Choir—J. Branson.

A suitable reply of acknowledgment was given by Miss Curtis.

Belmont Honors Clayton Kennedy And His Bride

HAVELOCK, April 4.—(ENS)—Petty Officer Clayton Kennedy, lately of Esquimalt, B.C., and his bride, formerly Miss Gladys Newton, Kirkland Lake arrived here, to spend a few days with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kennedy, while enroute to Halifax.

The Belmont Institute sponsored a shower in their honor at the Stone Hall on Tuesday evening. A suitable program of community singing, readings and instrumental numbers was given.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy were called up to the platform and presented with a cabinet of silver and many other useful gifts. The following address was read:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy:

Once again the people of this community have met to do honor to one of their boys, who has nobly given his services to His Majesty's Navy. We know of none, who more justly deserve our honor and respect, than those who so unselfishly devote themselves to the cause of freedom.

We congratuate you, Mrs. Kennedy and Clayton and share a friend's delight in your new-found happiness. You have our earnest good wishes for a long and happy married life. May each succeeding year find you happier than the one before, and we ask you to accept these gifts as freely as we offer them. May God bless you both and surround you ever with His choicest gifts.

Signed by friends, neighbors and members of Belmont Women's Institute.

Humane Society Hears Talk At Annual Meeting On Animals of Korea

The Peterborough branch of the Humane Society held its annual meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on Thursday evening. Mr. C. E. LaBranche, president, was in the chair and Dr. D. B. Avison was guest speaker.

Dr. Avison spoke entertainingly of animals in Korea, and described many of the animals, both wild and tame, which are found in that country. In spite of the fact that Korea is a temperate country, and the winters are sometimes very severe, Dr. Avison said that in his boyhood tigers and leopards were fairly common there, and their skins especially the heavy winter coat, were much prized by wealthy citizens. Koreans have a profound respect for the tiger because of his strength and fierceness, but they also fear him greatly because he is a man-eater. When a tiger is shot the natives will gather quickly round and bid fabulous prices for parts of the tiger, which are said to be endowed with peculiar properties. A tiger's blood, drunk while still warm, is said to produce strength and courage in the drinker.

In Korean cities, equipped with open sewers, are the haunt of rats of tremendous size and fierceness. The Koreans believed for centuries that rats brought the plague, a fact proved to be true by modern scientists, but the Koreans thought that if a picture of a large and very fierce tiger were painted on the house the rats would stay away and the family be secure from the plague.

Bears are still common in Korea and the big black bears are very fierce if cornered. They will play possum if wounded and attack when their enemy is off his guard. Deer are common in Korea, but the most popular animal for hunting is the wild boar. Disliked by farmers because it roots in their cultivated fields, the fierce animals are widely hunted and make excellent eating. Sea lions are protected by law in Korea, and are friendly, inquisitive beasts.

Among domestic animals the pony is most common and Dr. Avison said it was a wicked animal. The ponies are not used for riding but for carrying packs. They are strong, tough and ill-tempered. Koreans never drink milk if they can help it and so their cattle are chiefly beasts of burden. The Korean ox is a tremendously strong animal whom it seems impossible to overload. Dogs in this country are of the wolf breed and are very cowardly; but they are good watchdogs. The cat is disliked because it is naturally a thief and all cats in Korea must fend for themselves. If they are hungry enough they will attack and kill the huge rats and for this reason they are useful.

There is practically no pasture land in Korea and all animals are hand fed. The beasts of burden are fed a mash of beans, cooked and mixed with water and straw and seem to thrive on it. Koreans have no instinctive love of animals and their treatment of them is regulated by their usefulness and the respect in which they are held.

Mrs. W. A. Young read the secretary's report, in which she stated that the problem of lost, strayed and injured dogs was becoming increasingly difficult, due chiefly to the indiscriminate selling of puppies for as low as 25 cents. Neglected cats are also a serious probem and the public is asked to refrain from giving away female kittens. Another problem which is becoming more and more serious is the problem of children with air rifles who shoot at every furred and feathered thing they see. These thoughtless cruel children are becoming a menace to our song birds and Mrs. Young strongly favored the passing of a bylaw forbidding the destruction of song-birds. The United States has such a law, which permits the imposition of a fine of $1,500 on anyone found guilty of destroying song-birds.

In his report, Dr. Johnston said that he had covered 7,000 miles and dealt with 1,800 animals during the year in the performance of his duties. A total of 300 cats were brought in, of which 279 had to be destroyed; 300 horses were inspected, of which 6 had to be destroyed.

Mr. J. Skinner read the treasurer's report and stated that the Society had collected $658 during the year, of which 400 was collected at the annual tag day. During the year 150 calendars were sold and special tribute was paid to Mrs. R. N. Stuart, calendar secretary, for her work in this respect.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Mr. Gordon K. Fraser, M.P.

With Peterborough Red Cross Branch

The regular meeting was held in the Y.W.C.A. on Wednesday evening, April 1. Mrs. F. Hooper presided.

Mrs. Upper reported 142 articles of new clothing for Britain had been sent in March, and a huge bale is being sent this week.

Provincial Chapter will now accept used clothing, to ship to Britain, if the cleaner's mark is affixed.

Mrs. W. Belleghem reported 1,500 magazines had been collected and distributed to the camp at Exhibition Grounds and to the Isolation Hospital, also 44 books were added to camp library and 10 decks of cards to the recreation room.

Members and friends are asked to leave magazines for the Navy at Halifax in Belleghem's Furniture Store. Hereafter the local salvage committee will gather magazines for the Peterborough camp.

The Regent requested that "Diminishing Teas" be carried on another month, since they have proved so popular.

Mrs. H. Toole described the excellent work done by the local salvage committee, stressing that the government's intention to collect and save useful material for further use, rather than a money-making business.

A donation was made to the fund for a "Hurricane for Australia" which the Dominion I.O.D.E. plans to send at once.

Representatives to the provincial annual convention at Hamilton will be the Regent, Mrs. Hooper, War Convener Mrs. Upper, and two of the executive officers.

DOROTHY DIX

HUSBAND WANTS COMFORT BUT WIFE DEMANDS ROMANCE

Men Are More Easily Satisfied Than Women to Settle Down To Prosaic Lives

Dear Dorothy Dix—The reason so few husbands come up to their wives' ideal is because the wife, having attended countless movies and being on the most intimate terms (vicariously) with such great lovers as Charles Boyer, Clark Gable and Melvyn Douglas, expects her husband to sweep her off her feet with a band of love-making that combines the finest attributes of the art of Boyer, Cable, et al. The husband, unfortunately, not having an Ernst Lubitsch or a Frank Capra at his elbow to direct his love scenes, fails miserably to live up to his wife's desires. So she breaks down in tears and accuses him of having lost interest in her. The next place the husband stubs his toe is on the financial plank. Being a business man, he feels that his wife should keep a budget, but by the middle of the month it invariably breaks down and she can't imagine for the life of her where the money went. When walking along the street with his wife a husband must wear blinders as far as all other females are concerned—or else. He dare not express his appreciation of the beauty or wit with which Nature has endowed some other woman, or he is in for a lecture on philandering. But if she happens to spot a debonair man-about-town sauntering along the street, the husband receives a disdainful glare and she demands to know: "Why can't you look like that?" Every husband must be prepared to come home from work to find a note saying that friend wife has gone out to play mah jong with the girls, and to get his own dinner. If, however, he stays downtown for a poker game with the boys, he doesn't hear the last of it for weeks to come and is reproached for not being willing to spend a quiet evening at home occasionally. These are a few of the things that wives expect of a husband, and rare is the one who comes up to the demands. Maybe that is what makes marriage such a wonderful institution—Bewildered Married Man.

Men More Easily Satisfied

ANSWER: Not long ago a questionnaire was sent out to 400 married couples in which the husbands and wives were asked to tell how they rated each other after 15 years of matrimony, and the replies showed that nearly twice as many husbands were satisfied with their wives as there were wives who were satisfied with their husbands. This surprising glimpse into the domestic skeleton closet does not necessarily prove, as it seems to do at first glance, that there are more good wives than there are good husbands, but that men demand less of their wives than wives do of their husbands.

There are few middle-aged husbands, for instance, who expect their middle-aged wives still to act like sweethearts and who are made unhappy unless their grizzle-headed Marias continually assure them that they are still the Fairy Princes of their girlish dreams. But millions of fat old wives are miserable because their husbands take them for granted.

Nor is the average middle-aged man made unhappy by his wife making no effort to entertain him of an evening. He feels that people who have lived together for 25 or 30 years don't really need talk for communion between them. Each knows everything the other knows and even what they are thinking, and that they can be just as close together reading their papers or their books as they could if they were jabbering. But one of the chief complaints that women have against their husbands is that they are dumb fireside companions.

Perhaps it all boils down to the different views men and women take of marriage. A man considers his marriage a success if he can settle down to it in comfort, and is satisfied with his wife if she makes him a good home and is easy to live with; while women expect marriage to be a never ending romance and for their husbands to be always thrilling lovers.

Don't Be a Fall Guy

Dear Miss Dix: I am very much in love with a girl who has been married twice and divorced and who has an eight year old child. I am 18 years old and she is 25, but we are much in love and are planned on getting married. But my mother objects because the girl has already two living husbands and is so much older than I am and because she has a child and because I have no way of supporting a wife. I think she is more settled than a young girl and would make me a better wife. What do you think?—Bill.

Answer: The only thing that seems settled about the girl is her habit of swapping husbands, and if at 18 you marry her you are dead sure to be No. 3 in her collection of divorces.

There is every reason in the world why you should not enter into this foolish marriage. You are too young to know what you want in a wife, and you would be sick and tired of this one before you are grown. You have no way to support even yourself and you certainly couldn't expect your parents to take on the burden of providing for a strange woman and her child. She has two husbands already and a ready made family. Think it over, son, and don't do it.

Veda Grace Scott Is Wed To Gordon McFarland

MARMORA, April 4.—(ENS)—A charming wedding took place at St. Pau's Angican church, Marmora, on Thursday, April 2, at 12:30 p.m. when Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell united in marriage Veda Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Scott of Marmora and Gordon Eugene McFarlane, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McFarlane of Belmont Township. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was prettily gowned in blue crepe with matching accessories and wore a corsage of red roses. Her bridesmaid, Miss Betty Kennedy, cousin of the groom, was attired in pink chiffon wearing matching hat and silver shoes. Her corsage was of pink roses. The duties of groomsman were discharged by Gordon Scott, brother of the bride. Wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. L. R. Runde. During the signing of the register, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Rundle sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden."

Following the ceremony, the wedding banquet was served by Group 2 of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild in the Parish Hall, about forty guests being in attendance. The happy young couple who were the recipients of many useful gifts, left later in the afternoon on a short honeymoon to Toronto and Niagara Falls. Out of town guests were Mrs. Jack Wylie and children, Patricia and Michael of Peterborough and Mr. and Mrs. E. Wood and daughter, Linda, of St. Catharines.

Mr. and Mrs. McFarlane will take up residence in Marmora.

FROGS ARE SINGING

Residents at Lakefield report that the frogs were whooping it up along Lake Katchawanooka on Wednesday evening, and the piping could be heard for a considerably distance. This was April 1, and should just about set a record for the early broadcast of the "MarumB" chorus from the bull rushes.

RIVER IS RISING

The Otonabee River has risen ten inches during the week and a raise of a few more inches will start the water flooding Riverside Park. The big stream is so well regulated by the many dams between the city and the Kawartha Lakes, that fluctuations in the water level are readily controlled. The river should show a steady rise for the next ten days with ice melting in the back lakes.

FEW EASTER LILIES

The tall white Easter lilies, cherished blooms of Eastertide are few and far between this year. Ninety per cent of the lily bulbs come from Japan and about 10 per cent from Bermuda. Next year even if war continues, Canadians will have their own lilies, the "White Swan" variety which is being grown from seed now for next year's trade. The only advantage which the Jap lily has is that one can tell to the day when it will bloom.

HEARD AT ACTON

Thos. G. Jones, former resident of this city and a son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Jones, 426 Park street north reports that he heard the inaugural broadcast of radio station CHEX at Acton. He is now living at Acton, which is a small place on highway 7 between Georgetown and Guelph west of Toronto.

QUITE A RECORD

The senior room down at Keene School set up something of a record during the month. There are about 30 pupils in the class. No. 7 Otonabee has been stepping along in high gear to aid the war effort and the total amount of money raised for the various war charities is $660.34.

CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

Joseph Cleary was charged with vagrancy in police court this morning, pleaded not guilty and at the request of the Crown was remanded for a week in order to give the police a chance to make an investigation. Cleary was charged with wandering abroad, sleeping in a parked automobile and not giving a satisfactory account of himself. He suggested that he should be granted an adjournment, but Magistrate Langley acted on the crown's request for a remand.

Lindsay Mourns P.O. McLean Crash Victim

LINDSAY, April 4 — Cambridge Street United church was crowded with hundreds of mourners yesterday afternoon when Rev. J. J. Black, the minister, conducted the funeral of Pilot Officer J. K. McLean, killed in a plane crash near Port Burwell. The mourners and fiends included a company from No. 1 Manning Depot, Toronto, as well as officers from other military centres. Members of the Lindsay Central Exhibition Board and the Lindsay Kiwanis Club, of which the father of the young pilot was an officer, attended in a body.

Flight Lieutenant Bruce Miller, chaplain, Manning Depot, paid a tribute to the qualities of character, the ability and the achievements of Pilot Officer McLean, who secured his training at Toronto, St. Catharines, Dunnville, Trenton and Aylmer.

Rev. J. J. Black, in announcing the Lord's Prayer, sung by Mrs. Oliver Cameron, stated that it was a favorite of Pilot Officer McLean and was to have been sung by him on his next visit home. Pilot Officer McLean enlisted at North Bay where he was employed in the Bank of Commerce.

A guard of honor and pall-bearers from Manning Depot attended the interment in Riverside cemetery.

One Week-end Leave Granted Per Month?

(By P.W.R.'s Reporter)

Men of the Prince of Wales Rangers learned with much satisfaction yesterday that army life has much more to offer that what appears on the surface. The latest news which, needless to say went well with the men, was an announcement that leave may be granted for one long week-end per month to each man. This means to say that he may leave Friday evening at five o'clock and not return until the following Tuesday morning, which amounts to three days.

OBITUARY

CHARLES E. SMALLEY

Charles Edward Smalley, who died suddenly at his Toronto home, 73 Highcroft Road on April 1, was a former resident of this city and worked at the Examiner when it was on George street. He was employed as a linotype machinist for quite a number of years.

The late Mr. Smalley married a Peterborough girl, whose maiden name was Miss Tura Moore, and whose parents lived on Aylmer street, near Parkhill Road. He is survived by his widow, one daughter Vera, and one son Moore. He was a son of the late Joseph and Annie Smalley, and was a brother of Pearl Smalley of Stratford.

The funeral took place this afternoon at three o'clock in Toronto.

Mayor Hamilton To Welcome Four Men Home

(By P.W.R.'s Reporter)

An official welcome will be extended tonight at 7.45 p.m. over CHEX by Mayor James Hamilton to four Peterborough men recently returned from overseas, where they served with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders. They are Major James Turnbull, Major Allan MacNab, Captain Gordon Armstrong, and Sergeant Bud Clarke. The men will bring messages to radio listeners from many men of Peterborough and district now serving overseas with the unit.

Good Friday radio messages were given over CHEX yesterday by three Peterborough clergymen on the Prince of Wales Rangers series of radio broadcasts. Adjutant Norman Buckley of the Salvation Army gave the noon message; Rev. Dr. George S. Easton of Trinity United spoke on the early evening broadcast, and after the late news at 11 o'clock, Rev. Monsignor O'Sullivan of Immaculate Conception parish was heard. Messages given by the clergy were on the subject of the sacrifice made by a soldier who enlists and this was tied in with Good Friday, the day commemorated by Christians as the day on which Christ made the supreme sacrifice by dying on the Cross.

Receives Promotion

Another acting sergeant of the unit has been promoted to be acting company sergeant major. He is A/Sgt. W. W. Butcher, who has been with the Rangers since 1940. Some years before that, he was a member of "C" Company of the 4th Machine Gun Battalion for about seven months.

A/C.S.M. Butcher lives at 583 Walnut street, is married, and has two children. He was formerly employed at the Quaker Oats Company for six years in the maintainance department and prior to that he was chauffeur for George A. MacDonald, then manager.

Five N.C.O.'s of the Rangers have proceeded "On Command" to the Junior Leaders' Course at Megantic, Quebec. They are A/Sergeants J. B. Chambers, G. L. J. Martin, M. Moncrief, C. J. Stedman; Lance-Corporal M. Parnell.

Second Offender Is Fined $50

Pleading guilty as a second offender to a charge of consuming liquor while on the interdicted list, Norman Graham was fined $50 and $2.50 costs in police court this morning, with the alternative of a month in jail. He intimated that he would take the latter.

On a second charge of obstructing Sergt. W. E. Wigg and Provincial Constable L. A. McClure to which he pleaded guilty the accused was fined $10 and $1.75 or ten days in jail to start at the expiration of the jail sentence under the other charge.

There was a third charge of wilfully damaging the uniform of Constable McClure and the accused asked for an adjournment in that case. Magistrate Langley adjourned the case until Friday of next week.

With Ottawa Unit

Lt. Jack Couper, now serving with the Cameron Highlanders, is the son of Stanley Couper, tax collector and Mrs. Couper, 247 Engleburn avenue. He was formerly an officer with the Prince of Wales Rangers, (Roy Studio Portrait).

Capt. H. A. Craig Acting Adjutant

Captain Harold Allan Craig, D.C.M. who has been officialy appointed acting adjutant of the Prince of Wales Rangers has been connected continuously with the militia since the last war and joined the Peterborough Rangers in July, 1940, upon re-organization. Captain Craig is acting adjutant while 2nd Lieutenant Jack G. Nicholls "On Command" is attending the Canadian School of Army administration.

(By Park Studio)

Captain Craig is a graduate of Queen's University and was teacher of mathematics, physical training instructor and cadet supervisor at P.C.V.S. prior to his enlistment with the Prince of Wales Rangers First Battalion. He served in the Great War with the P.P.C. L.I. and Royal Air Force, during which time he was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal.

He is one of the popular officers of the Rangers and many of his former pupils have joined the regiment and speak warmly of him. Captain Craig is married and has two children.

Alderman Named To Represent City

Alderman Bradburn, Sands and Dutton were appointed Thursday night to attend a district meeting here Monday evening to prepare a new appeal to the C.N.R. directorate to continue indefinitely the present train service between Peterborough and Port Hope.

J. J. Dorris, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, wrote the finance committee of the council that Lindsay, Port Hope and one or two other interested communities were sending deputations. Mayor Hamilton will probably attend with the council's representatives.

The Dominion Board of Transport has given permission to the C.N.R. to cancel the service through Millbrook on and after April 27.

"The C.N.R. can close the line if they wish," City Clerk Outram said. "It is no longer a matter of appealing to the Transport Commission."

"In view of the shortage of rubber and gasoline," said Alderman Bradburn, "I think we should try to persuade the C.N.R. that the line from Port Hope should be kept in operation."

A Flying Wizard

London, April 4 (CP)

THE new Newfoundland-to-Britain flight record is 400 minutes, the holder is a Liberator bomber and the pilot isn't going to be penalized for aerial speeding after all, British authorities disclosed today.

The old trans-Atlantic mark was eclipsed by an hour. The average speed for the 2,200-mile trip was 330 miles an hour.

The pilot was warned when he landed of prospective "strict disciplinary action" because of a belief he had pushed the bomber's four motors beyond the limit assigned for ferry operations, but he was exonerated at a ferry command inquiry.

"A combination of the qualities of the airplane, an exceptional tail-wind and magnificent navigation" were then credited.

The ferry command said the bomber, after arrival at night over its designated field, circled about in the air for three hours because it still had too much gasoline aboard to be landed safely in the darkness.

Fire Damages Apartment Of F. H. Johnston

Fire raced through the apartment owned by Mr. and Mrs. F. H. (Tony) Johnston at the corner of McDonnel and George street, shortly after 7 o'clock on Good Friday evening to do extensive damage to furniture, apartment and some damage to the big stock of radios, refrigerators, and electric appliances in the show room on the ground floor.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston were visiting friends when the fire was discovered by a woman passing by, who noticed the flames shooting from an upstairs window and phoned in the alarm. When firemen arrived the front part, used as a living room was a roaring mass of flames and the fire had spread to two other rooms in the six room apartment.

The firemen battled the flames for more than an hour before bringing them under control, and a squad of four had to don smoke masks to fight the flames in the attic over the apartment. One fireman Tom Nice, made the only rescue of the evening when he heard a Pekinese dog whining and crawled in on his hands and knees to secure the little dog.

The fire apparently started in the living room, and had gained quite a hold when it was discovered, and it spread through the apartment rapidly. The face that there were good hardwood floors in the apartment prevented the water from seeping through in great quantities but some water damage was done to a shipment of new chesterfields which had just been brought in within the past few weeks.

In conversation with the Examiner today Mr. Johnston said he feared the damage would run to $10,000 because several oil paintings, rugs, all the silverware, and the furniture had been destroyed, and this coupled with damage to the building, and the downstairs would soon mount up.

He had no idea how the fire started, and the fire department has not been able to ascertain or determine the cause.

The business is known as Johnston's Tire, Battery and Radio service and the building is located on the northwest corner of Mcdonnel street diagonally opposite from the Public Library. A few years ago considerable damage was done when a car swinging off George street on to McDonnel went out of control and smashed off the gas pump, causing a fire which did extensive damage to the building.

HOME ON LEAVE

Lieut. Jack Raine, R.C.N.R., officer commanding the Wasaga, is home on leave, and was married to Miss Marion Worboy at All Saints' Church this afternoon. He is a brother of Dick Raine, well-known George street merchant.

Dance Service Nets $67.36 For War Victims

On Tuesday a dance was held in conjunction with the initial broadcast of Radio Station CHEX, and the cloak room service, together with a refreshment booth was provided under the direction of the management of the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, from which all the net proceeds amounting to $62.36 are credited in to-day's list of acknowledgments for the fund.

This was made possible by the co-operation of E. Brown, W. Lott, and J. O'Donoghue, who gave their services for the cloak room service which netted $30.70 as a result of voluntary givings from those who attended. The refreshment booth was operated by Mrs. Fred White of McGill street and Mrs. H. C. Crouter of Edison avenue, and in this connection donations of home-made sandwiches given by T. H. Hooper and Mesdames M. Copson, E. Doleman, F. Wells, J. Freeman, W. Anderson, L. Watkiss, M. Parry, R. Whalon, H. Naish, C. H. Crouter, F. White, H. McMahon, L. Pullyblank, C. Barnes, A. Davies, C. Turnbull, E. W. Cooper, and W. Wood, and Miss R. Quartermaine, were responsible for a considerable proportion of the net proceeds, while assistance was also rendered by Sanitary Ice Supply and J. W. Steinkraus, with Boorman's Beverages and Coca Cola Co. Ltd., giving the use of coolers for the soft drinks to net in all the sum of $31.67, making a total for the eevning's effort of $62.36.

The most recent collection from the penny box stationed at the Capitol Theatre produced $12.65, which is credited today, making a new high for the fund from this particular kind of activity on its behalf.

The pupils of Grade Five at Central School, taught by Miss Buck, made $2 by saving their pennies, and this they voted unanimously to give to the fund, and it appears today having been handed in by Janet.

A number of personal donations are listed, that by Mrs. A. J. Hall being a repeat of help given a number of times previously, and little five-year-old Sam Kingdon emptied his savings bank to add a further $1.10, this marking his third donation to the fund.

A little over half of the next £500, is now safely tucked away in the bank, which when completed will bring the total sent by the generous voluntary givings of the people of the city and district above the £9,000 mark.

He has many friends in the Quaker Oats organization and a broad knowledge of Canadian advertising.

Boy Pleads Guilty Attempting Car Theft

When a 16-year-old boy pleaded guilty in police court today to the attempted theft of an automobile from a parking lot Magistrate O. A. Langley suggested that the case should be adjourned to give the accused a chance to get some legal advice.

"It looks to me as if this charge might better have been laid under the joy-riding section," he said. "In this kind of attempt case it would be difficult for anyone to say whether the intention was to steal the car or merely drive around a block or two. From what I heard in another case, I think the second explanation is the more likely.

The case was accordingly adjourned until Tuesday of next week. A 15-year-old boy pleaded guilty in juvenile court the other morning to a similar charge arising out of the same circumstances and was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Special Course To Start For A.R.P. Wardens

Special training for Air Raid Wardens for Civil Defence will commence next Wednesday and Thursday and continue for a period of 8 to 10 weeks. Wardens of Centre, North and East wards will meet in the second floor east room of the Lyceum Hall on Simcoe street at 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday, April 8th. The room has been fitted out with seating accommodation for over 170 through the kindness of the Peterborough Exhibition Board.

The wardens of North Monaghan, South and West wards will meet at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday, April 9 at Knox Church Hall on Reid street (just north of Wolfe street.) The hall has been kindly loaned each Thursday night by the Board of Management of Knox Church to the civil defence committee.

As the lectures of each week are similar, wardens can attend to either Wednesday or Thursday nights. Wardens must attend so that they can receive the necessary training to fit themselves for their duties, and also that the controllers of the various services can give them the necessary credits on the back of their identification cards.

Wednesday lectures will be under Lt.-Col. T. D. Johnston, V.D., who as deputy chief warden, is in charge of this section of the city, and Captain G. H. Outmore will be in charge of the Thursday lectures as deputy chief warden for this section of the city.

The first two lectures will be on "fire services," the next three on "first aid," the following on "gas" and the remainder on special wardens' training. This training is of course necessary in addition to the basic course which all A.R.P. workers must attend. Wardens are advised to bring notebooks to these lectures.

One group of male first aid workers of the A.R.P. have already started their training on Tuesday nights at the Lyceum, while the volunteer firemen are also meeting each Tuesday night at the fire hall.

Prosecution Of Railways Is Threatened By City If They Do Not Repair Crossings

"There is nothing for us to do but prosecute both railways if they don't repair their crossings in this city," said Alderman Gordon at the finance committee meeting Thursday nght.

"The C.N.R. starts out down around Trenton and Belleville and they get up here along about September or October," he continued. "We want them to change their order and start up here and finish down at those places. Let us have it for one summer any way.

Alderman Bradburn seconded the Gordon motion to prosecute the big transport corporations if they do not fix up the crossings within a reasonable time.

Mexican Masquerade

tant at this point, was the hazy shore of Mexico, barren, sandy and with no sign of habitation.

THESE details held Allan's attention no more than an instant. What he was interested in was a group of islands which lay close inshore, almost directly below him. They stretched out in a chain parallel to the shore and separated from it, as Sun Su had said, by strait hardly more than a hundred yards in width. There was a perceptible current flowing south through the passage, and Allan remembered the ocean tides reached up the gulf even as far as this.

Only two of the islands appeared to be occupied. One, much the biggest of the group, had several substantial buildings on it; The "cannery" obviously. There was a boat dock on its nearest shore; on the farthest, a long pier jutted out into the water. It was easily big enough to berth a freighter while loading a cargo of canned fish.

The other occupied island was a good deal smaller than the first. Allan noted a roomy, white stone bungalow in the centre, and a small structure, apparently a boathouse, on its nearest shore. He saw the figures of a man and a woman pacing to and fro on a tiled path, and he focused his glasses on them curiously. Neither was Japanese. The woman was young, blonde, and rather pretty in a piquant way, he decided.

The man was blond, too, tall and broad-shouldered; he might have been an American but for the way he gesticulated with his hands as he talked.

Still and all, the chief feature of the scene to hold Allan's bemused attention was on the Peninsula itself. A little way off, a crew of Japanese workmen were digging into the side of a small mountain with picks and shovels. They seemed to be excavating a dark, clay-like substance which was put on hand barrows and carried to a big scow by the water's edge. When it was loaded, the scow was towed by a launch to the cannery island and another scow came up to be filled.

"Something wrong about this," muttered Allan, wrinkling his brow in perplexity. "You don't use clay in canning fish, do you? I wonder why the Sam Hill Sun Su didn't mention this digging? It could have started, I suppose, after he received his last report from his pals." He shook his head regretfully. "Wish I knew more about soils—"

In the middle of that wish, a rattlesnake whirred some yards behind him. He had done nothing himself to startle the most nervous of side-winders; he turned his head quickly to see what had.

He found himself looking straight into the muzzle of a rifle. It was held by the squat Eurasian and behind him were six short but strongly built Japanese. The squat man growled a guttural order.

"Hands up, Senor Steele, Pronto!"

Spring Curtains You Make Easily

Shirred Valance a Smart Style

Sweet spring curtains strewn with rosebuds and wearing the most feminine of valances — a shirred, ruffled one!

Though your Home Service reporter saw them in a fashionable shop (in rose-sprigged crisp white chintz), they're really easy to sew when you have our booklet on making curtains.

The valance is only a straight piece of goods shirred on a drapery rod! To make it, use a piece of chintz 1½ times the length of the rod. In measuring depth, allow for rod casing, standing frill and hem.

Finally, apply a narrow ruffle. Split the hem, turn in raw edges, insert top of ruffle and stitch.

As for the curtains, measure from top of window casing to floor for finished length. For width, allow at least 1½ times the space each curtain will cover.

With our 32-page booklet you can quickly re-curtain your whole house. Shows with diagrams and clear instructions how to make many lovely styles in glass curtains, drapery-curtains, formal draperies. Shows how to make swag and fitted valances, French headings, cornices, trimmings.

For your copy of "New Ideas in Making Curtains and Draperies", send 15 cents in coins or stamps to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"The Authority on Authorities"

EVEN WITH BLACKWOOD

ACE - SHOWING conventions like the Blackwood are fine on most hands, but even if your pair is employing such a convention, there are times when you should use some other way to invite a slam. That is especially true if you have a blank suit, so that possession of its ace by your partner would be of little value to you. At these times, if you have already learned that your partner has an emphatic fit for your major suit, it may be better to invite slam by cue-bidding some suit in which you have the ace, or by bidding five of your major, unless you feel strong enough to bid slam yourself.

Here South was slam-minded, as soon as he heard his partner's jump in Trumps, but he knew North as a light bidder who might not have as much stuff as he should. He therefore was afraid to bid 6-Spades, as he would have done with most partners. He thought about a Blackwood 4-No Trumps, but banished that idea, as he didn't care much whether North had the club A or not. What interested him most was the general merit of North's hand, and so he bid 5-Spades to find out. When North accepted the invitation he was happy, but felt dubious when East doubled. As it turned out, though, the double helped him to make an extra trick.

West led the diamond 2 to the 8, Q and A. The diamond 6 to the K was an entry to try the double-finesse in spades, which he would not have attempted had East kept silent. After the spade 10 brought the J and Q, he laid down the heart A and then the Q, which West foolishly covered with the K, and the spade 7 ruffed it. Now the spade 5 to the 9 blanked East's K. The heart 7 was ruffed by the spade 8, the club A furnished a discard of the diamond 7, the club 2 was ruffed by the spade 3, the spade A dropped the K and the remaining tricks were scored by the heart J, diamond 9 to the J and the spade 4.

Name Bennett Commander Of Aussie Corps

MELBOURNE, April 4 — (CP). — Reorganization of the Australian army, rapidly being keyed to a peak war pitch, was virtually completed today with the appointment of Lt.-Gen. Gordon Bennett as a corps commander and the assignment of various other high officers to important posts.

The appointment of Gen. Bennett, who commanded the Australian Imperial force in Malaya and escaped after the surrender of Singapore, was announced by Army Minister Francis Forde.

Gen. Bennett's chief of staff will be Brig. W. M. Anderson, who formerly was attached to an armored division and served in the Middle East last year.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the United Nations forces in the southwest Pacific, expected to announce soon how United States higher commands would be dovetailed with Anzac commands.

Millions of pounds already have been allocated to provide United States forces in Australia with air bases, living quarters and some forms of equipment, Air Minister Arthur S. Drakeford said, and more millions will follow.

A number of former Royal Australia Air Force stations used for training purposes, aircraft assembly factories and other facilities also have been turned over to the U.S. forces, he said.

Speeding Training.

Mr. Drakeford also announced that Americans are taking part in the conversion of Royal Australian Air Force pilots from advanced trainer types of aircraft to fast combat machines.

This aspect of the co-operation, he said, is of tremendous value to Australia and has assisted in speedin up the final stages of the Empire training system.

Previously, all Australians who had completed their flying training had to undergo their conversion course abroad or in operational training units in Australia.

An added value, he said, is that member of the Australian and American forces rapidly are becoming "buddies" and producing a well-oiled fighting machine.

The halting, at least temporarily, of the Japanese is proof, Mr. Drakeford said, that Australian and American co-operation had a truly iron ring about it.

Mess Room Chatter From Britain

By LOUIS HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

A ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE STATION, SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, April 4 — (CP). — —Mess-room chatter:

A map found beside the wreckage of a German bomber shot down by a Canadian during an attack on an airdrome in Sussex during the Battle of Britain is one of the prized trophies in the officers' mess on the station. The Canadian was Flying Officer R. L. Edwards of Cobourg, Ont., who was killed during the action.

The tattered map, showing a course to Debden Airdrome, hangs over the fireplace in the mess.

Sgt. William Smith, 21-year-old observer from Vancouver, is one of the toughest men in the Royal Air Force. He was flung out of an aircraft, had his skull fractured one eye knocked out of the socket, and both legs broken in 12 places. Now he is back with his unit. His injuries have healed, and the bones of his legs have been bolted together so that he can walk, run, and even play soccer. As to his eye—he says he can see quite well with it.

He was in the same hospital ward with another tough flier, Flt.-Sgt. Harry Gill of Southampton, who survived a 1,000-foot fall from a machine without a parachute. He landed in a flax field and escaped with a fractured pelvis, broken jaw and bruises. Doctors said he probably survived because he was unconscious when he fell and his muscles were relaxed. He landed in a sitting position.

Pilot Officer Paris Eakins of Minnedosa, Man., is one of the group of Canadian newspaper men who have forsaken the City Room for the airdrome. Members of an R.C.A.F. Spitfire fighter squadron stationed in the South of England, the 26-year-old flier used to cover general news and sports activities for the Winnipeg Free Press. He joined the Air Force in 1940.

A Whitley bomber known to the men who fly it as "Annie," is a veteran of this war who knows Germany well. Annie has made 50 trips over enemy territory and some of them have been rough, as her scars show. Her wings have been broken, her rudder and tail damaged, petrol tanks holed, shrapnel and bullets have torn into her "body," and she has flown home on one engine.

Few bombers have reached Annie's record. Most of them are replaced when they reach her age, but her captain wouldn't change her for anything, and "she is good for another 50 flights."

Dog, Wolf Pack Menacing E. Hastings Tots

TORONTO, April 4 — Wild dog packs, like wolves, are ranging through some sections of East Hastings, Lanark, and adjacent counties, giving concern to farmers for the safety of their young children and seriously threatening the entire sheep-raising industry in those districts, Dr. Harold E. Welsh (Con., Hastings East) yesterday told members of the Legislative Agriculture Committee.

Yesterday it was reported that children in the district of Ivy Lea were being conveyed to and from school by automobiles due to the presence of wolves in the vicinity. A cow was attacked on Hill Island, and police and farmers are hunting the wild animals.

There are packs of the wild dogs and their near-kin brush wolves, along the Salmon River, north and west of Deseronto, and within fifteen miles of No. 2 Highway, said Dr. Welsh in telling how organized hunts have been made, with considerable success, against the sheep killers.

Only a month ago Jack Brennan, Lonsdale farmer, ran into a den of the wolf dogs, got one adult and took seven pups, partially grown. George H. Doucett (Con., Lanark) backed his associate in stating that wild dog packs have been a menace for a number of years in his riding.

The wold dog and wolf bounty question was broached during the committee's discussion upon the need, as a war production measure, of promoting sheep raising. One of the strongest backers of this proposal was W. J. Gardhouse (Lib., York West), who stressed that Canada must bolster wool supply to counter losses from Australia. He urged sheep production as a definite program for the Department of Agriculture. Of losses by dogs, he said that the compensation provided was a fair one, adding, that at the Gardhouse farm a rifle and a shotgun are kept handy at the barn and dogs have been known to disappear mysteriously.

Wool Runs Low

Agriculture Minister Dewan also warned the committee of a possible wool shortage, stating he had been advised that North America reserves have been cut to seven months' supply. Canada produced but one-fifth of her requirements, he said, although tests showed that Canadian wool had more strength and durability than any other wool in the world.

"Western Ontario conditions are different than those in our section," said Dr. Welsh. He said it was believed that the wild dogs were a cross between dogs and brush wolves—both Alsation and collie strains being apparent in the packs.

"They are not only attacking sheep but young cattle as well. The situation is so bad that during the past year, there are 25 farmers, whom I could name, who have gone out of sheep because of these wild dogs," he said.

Inasmuch as there was a difficulty in collecting bounty—that is wolf bounty—on the crossed strains, the department at his request, made an investigation in the field of the situation and last year agreed that a $10 bounty should be paid on each wolf-dog killed that could not be classified either as dog or wolf, the department to bear half the cost and the municipality half.

In color, he and Mr. Doucett agreed, the wild dog varied in color from a dark gray to ones with reddish tinges and ones showing a trace of collie yellow, including sometimes, the whiteneck ring and breast of the collie.

"When they attack sheep, they go into the flank and don't rip and tear like a killer-dog will. They seem to act more like wolves than dogs, they yip and howl like wolves and their habits are distinctly wolf," said the doctor.

Dickson's Night Held By Omemee Y.P.U.

OMEMEE, April 4—(ENS)—The Y.P.U. of Trinity church held its regular meeting on Monday night with the dramatic convener, Miss Marion Rea, in charge.

Mrs. Collins favored the members of the Union with a solo, entitled "Break Thou the Bread of Life." A recitation was given by Frances McPhee, followed by a very interesting account of the works of Charles Dickens by Miss Rea. Several humorous sketches were given of the various characters found in Dickens' novels.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Mosquito Fleet Protects Vital Panama Canal

Ready to dart with the sting of destruction against any enemy vessel that seeks to approach the Panama Canal, a fleet of the U.S. navy's mighty "insects"—the 77-foot, shallow draft motor torpedo boats—is now based secretly somewhere in the Panama defence area. The existence of this fleet was revealed with the release of this picture taken during patrol-torpedo (PT) boat manoeuvres off the canal. Here we see them travelling a thigh speed. They are in the single file that enables them to break rapidly into any one of the various attack formations. The canal is guarded by the combined team-work of the army, navy and aviation arms. In this picture, for instance, we can see an airplane working with the lethal little fleet.

Makers To Test Own Cheese

CAMPBELLFORD, April 4 (ENS) —A new regulation affecting the cheese-maker has been announced by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. According to District Dairy Instructor J. A. Murray, the department has decided to abandon for the next season the policy of supplying men to do the testing in the various cheese factories, leaving the job entirely up to the cheese-maker himself who will have to do his own testing this season. This will not result in any lowering of quality since bonuses and grading will still be the controlling influence, however, it will mean that each factory will have to provide itself with the necessary equipment to do this work. Recognizing that this will mean a heavy demand for supplies, Mr. Murray points out that the maker would be well advised to order early so that he will be in a position to take over at the close of this season.

Jolliffe Heads

plying to a question, he said if electors in one of the six vacant seats approved of him as a candidate he would contest the constituency in event of a by-election.

Aim at Government Rule

"We've definitely stopped thinking of ourselves as a third party or even as a balance of power," he added. "We don't want it. We think we have the policy and the people to take over the government—not only in Ontario but also in British Columbia and Saskatchewan.

Again last night, at the convention banquet where he was introduced by M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader in the House of Commons, he elaborated on his views. Listing eight things the Ontario Government should do and the C.C.F. would do, he said: "We stand for the maximum contribution of Ontario to the winning of the war and the winning of social security for all our people. That is a new program for Ontario."

His eight points included co-operation with the other provinces overhauling the provincial tax structure, evolving a 10-year-plan for Ontario's economic development, a program of social betterment, an agriculture survey, mobilizing labor strength with such things as collective bargaining.

From other sources also came indications of the C.C.F. outlook on Ontario politics. President Lawrence told the convention that the people of Ontario were beginning to realize "that they have no effective representation at Queen's Park at all."

Meantime the report on the political situation, read by C. H. Millard of Toronto, declared: "The future of Canada as a whole may depend upon our readiness to.....remove from office in the greatest province of Canada a reactionary, Fascist-minded demagogue."

That charge was echoed in attacks made upon Premier Hepburn by Coldwell and Jolliffe in speeches at last night's banquet.

Sees Hepburn Dangerous.

Mr. Coldwell called Premier Hepburn a "dangerous man" and said it was "about time" the people of Ontario had an opportunity of repudiating him.

"There is no man in the public life of Canada who is as grea a danger to the Dominion and to our war effort and to the people of Canada," he said.

Coldwell said that last August the Ontario Premier was "tripping the Great Lakes in a yacht owned by an American publisher who has been the most bitter anti-British publisher in the United States." In September, the Premier was in New York "giving aid and comfort to the isolationists by telling the people of the United States that their efforts in support of Russia would be lost because Russia was already defeated."

In December, Coldwell added, "he was belittling the naval strength of our great American ally." People in the United States thought his words represented the ideas of the people of Canada and Ontario, the C.C.F. leader said, and "it was about time the people of Ontario had an opportunity of repudiating this dangerous man."

"I know he gives lip service to the Allied cause but we can't win this war without unity. No man has sewn the seed of disunity in Canada to greater extent than the Premier of Ontario.

"He represents in his person some of the most reactionary elements of this province, the mining corporations of the north, who have ground down labor to the limit, who have defeated temporarily the brave men of Kirkland Lake."

Coldwell described the C.C.F. as the only Canadian government which stood for a really all-out war effort. It can't be an all-out war effort without the country mobilized and that involves mobilization of industry, wealth and manpower, he said.

Asserting there was "too much complacency in this country, too much self-satisfaction on the part of Mr. King and his government," he said there was no room for complacency because "we are nearer defeat than we ever were." He urged an affirmative vote in the forthcoming manpower plebiscite and promised his group in the House of Commons would see that Canadians realized there must be conscription of industry and wealth as well as manpower.

The Ontario Premier's references to the Russians and the United States navy were criticized also by Jolliffe who said Hepburn knew nothing about the defence forces of any country but he was an authority on one armed force, the police.

"I refer particularly," Jolliffe said, "to the force known as Hepburn's Hussars, or the Horseless Hussars, or the Useless Hussars. These heroes do all their fighting on the home front and for Field Marshal Hepburn the home front means the Labor front.

"He sent an expeditionary force of these bottle-scarred warriors to a hotel at Kirkland Lake, where they made the nights loud and long and noisy...They were there to help Mr. Hepburn's friends defy the law and defeat the miners. That little expedition cost the taxpayers nearly a quarter of a million dollars."

Like Jolliffe's "plan for Ontario," the C.C.F. agriculture program was also an eight-point declaration. It provided: establishment of parity prices to assure the farmer a full return for his labor and investment; public or co-operative ownership of processing, packing and cold-storage plants; organization of milk distribution as a public utility under municipal or provincial control; replacement of such existing bodies as milk and tobacco boards by new ones to include representatives of farmers, consumers, distributors and the government.

The labor policy involves collective bargaining and outlawing of company unions.

Successful Euchre

HAVELOCK, April 4 (ENS). — Eight tables of progressive euchre were played in the Orange Hall on Wednesday night, sponsored by Royal Black Preceptory Lodge No. 946. Game, Fisheries Have Top Year

TORONTO, April 4—(CP).—Ontario's Game and Fisheries Department collected more revenue in the fiscal year ending March 31 than in any previous fiscal period, Premier Hepburn disclosed today in his budget speech.

Collections in the 10 months ended January 31 reached $1,068,764, an increase of $53,000 over the 1939-40 fiscal year, the best in the Department's history. Estimated February and March revenue of $76,675 will boost revenue to $1,145,439, the Premier predicted.

Sale of non-resident angling and hunting licenses, principally to United States visitors, provided 55 per cent. of the 10 months' revenue. Non-resident angling licenses hunting licenses brought $118,423.

The Department maintained existing services satisfactorily, Mr. Hepburn declared. Some 21,168 pheasants were liberated in the various townships designated as regulated game preserve areas, on Pelee Island and in Essex, Kent, Oxford and Northumberland.

Mrs. Hamblin Hostess To Willing Workers

NORWOOD, April 4 — (ENS). — The regular meeting of the Willing Workers was held at the home of Mrs. G. A. Hamblin with sixteen members present.

Joan Nelson and Isobel Giffen gave reports as to the activities of their groups the former being declared the winner. Shirley Hadley and Eileen Hotts were chosen as the next group leaders.

The program leaders took charge and the following numbers were enjoyed by all: A reading by Barbara Cuthbertson, "In the Spring"; reading, Marjorie Davis, "Romance in the Swan's Nest"; duet, Eileen Hotts and Shirley Hadley, "That Little Kid Sister of Mine"; reading, Joan Raymond, "To-day."

Refreshments were served and the meeting closed with the National Anthem and Mizpah benediction. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the hostess.

Honor Bride and Groom.

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Tedford opened their home for a social evening in honor of a recent bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bongard of Toronto, about twenty-five guests gathering to extend their best wishes.

Social games were enjoyed during the evening.

The main event of the occasion was the presenting of an abundant pantry shower to the guests of honor. A lifelike imitation goose had been constructed which the bride was required to pluck. On each feather was written the location of the presents which were hidden about the house, and it was the bridegrooms portion to find them.

At the close delicious refreshments were served.

hastened in her direction to transfer the survivors to the tanker and resume combat duties.

The destroyers and tanker made contact the next day near a small island south of Java, but a formation of Japanese bombers appeared, and a Japanese submarine was known to be lurking somewhere in the vicinity. This made it too dangerous for the American vessels to halt for the transfer.

At dawn the next day, March 1, they made contact again. The Pecos lowered a motor launch and 11 trips were made to the destroyers and back. By 8 a.m. the transfer of survivors was completed and the Pecos headed for Australia.

Soon enemy planes were sighted. About noon, a formation of six dive bombers dropped six projectiles. One explosion knocked the crew from a gun. Another crew took over.

After pulling out of their dives the same six bombers struck again. Then a second flight of six planes dived at the tanker and loosed the third salvo of bombs. The ship was hit again, but the crew kept shooting.

Next, nine bombers attacked, and new hits were scored. The order came to abandon ship.

Several lifeboats had been bombed out of commission, and about 50 men were killed and 50 wounded by the bombs. Dozens dropped overside with life belts.

Before the Pecos sank, a Japanese plane swooped low to bomb and machine-gun survivors in the water. Lieut. L. J. McPeake stayed with the Pecos to the last, manned the aft machine gun and drove off the Japanese plane. He is missing.

Men Drift Four Hours

Four hours after the attack began the Pecos sank. The men floated about for another four hours. Once they saw planes in the distance and heard bomb explosions, indicating another ship was being attacked. Finally a destroyer appeared and picked up the survivors. Two-thirds of the officers and men of the Langley and the Pecos had been lost.

Soon after the war began the Peary was bombed in Manila Bay and a number of her officers and men were wounded. She escaped with other Asiatic Fleet units before Cavite was abandoned to the Japanese.

On the way to Australia she was bombed several times. She was repaired at Port Darwin and was bombed again while on a convoy trip. Back at Port Darwin after this adventure, the Peary was sunk in a heavy bombing attack. Gun crews remained at their stations, firing their anti-aircraft guns until the water came up around them. They then swam away as the ship went down. No men abandoned ship until it sank from under them. A number of survivors were rescued.

Farm Workers Not All Free Of War Service

OTTAWA, April 4—(CP).—Labor Minister Mitchell said last night that essential farm workers may be granted indefinite postponement of but not exemption from, military service under the Government's new national selective service plan.

Mr. Mitchell said there appeared to be "an erroneous impression that all farmers were "frozen" on the land from now on."

Under the new orders, a man of military age who was chiefly employed on the land on March 23, 1942, is placed in a preferential position, but he is not automatically excused from anything.

A farm worker who receives a notice to report for military service or medical examination must still answer that notice, Mr. Mitchell emphasized. The man called must communicate in writing with the divisional registrar who sent out the notice, as was the case before the new regulations were introduced.

Now, however, instead of actually undertaking military training, the farm worker may apply to that registrar for an indefinite postponement on the grounds that his farm work is essential to maintain production. He need not prove that claim, but it may be challenged.

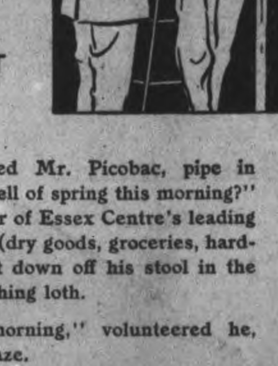
While postponement may be granted, failure to respond to the initial notice to report still makes the farm worker, as any other man similarly called, liable to penalties under the law.

Final Meeting Of Douro Farm Forum

LAKEFIELD, April 4 (ENS). — Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Dunford gave the hospitality of their home on Monday evening for the last meeting of the North Douro Farm Forum for this season. A short discussion followed the radio talk after which euchre and chinese checkers were played with Mrs. Charles Frankish and Braden Bullock winning in the cards and Elwood Dunford the checkers prize.

Following the games the ladies served refreshments, bringing to a close a successful series of meetings with members looking forward to next season's gatherings.

The SMELL of SPRING



"Morning, Henry", boomed Mr. Picobac, pipe in mouth. "Do you get the smell of spring this morning?" Mr. Henry Cotton, proprietor of Essex Centre's leading departmentalized emporium (dry goods, groceries, hardware, boots and shoes), got down off his stool in the little back private office, nothing loth.

"Heard the crows this morning," volunteered he, coming out into the public gaze.

"Do you know how a fine spring morning like this makes me feel?" inquired Mr. Picobac, bringing forth his handy Picobac pouch.

"Yes," said Mr. Cotton. "I feel that way myself. Give me a pipeful of that good Picobac burley of yours and we'll take time for a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke."

KUIBYSHEV, Russia, April 6 — (AP).—The Germans were reported feeling out the Russian front for a possible start of their expected Spring offensive, but chances for an early lanuching of the massive attack grew dim today with new developments.

Soviet reports of drastic weakening of German spring reserves on the southwestern front were considered in informed Russian circles as bound to mean changes in the Nazi strategy.

In addition, Red army claims to have killed 40,000 Germans between March 23 and April 3 on the western front, together with the recapture of 161 communities, and the loss of 102 planes shot down or destroyed on the ground Saturday, were felt to have caused the Germans to modify their plans.

Such western front successes brought new threats to German defenders in the Gzhatsk-Vyazma area, directly west of Moscow on the Smolensk highway, where Red army units have already knifed deep into territory which German prisoners have reported as the offensive's starting point.

Another factor which may delay the attack in Spring weather now breaking over the Russian plains with accompanying quagmires, slush and mud, making roads, highways and bypaths impassable.

2 Spring Armies Already In.

From the southwest front, where the fighting lately as been described as violent, as Marshal Semeon Timoshenko struck forward, came reports that the German 6th and 17th armies are being used for defence work.

Hint Kidnapping In Ottawa Case

OTTAWA, April 6.—(CP).— With two of three missing Ottawa persons accounted for, police to-day continued their four-day search for 2½-year-old Donald Taylor, and one officer said the possibility he was kidnapped is not being excluded from the investigation.

Police headquarters, however, declined any comment on this phase of the search for the son of Pte. and Mrs. Donald Taylor who disappeared last Wednesday afternoon and the generally accepted theory is he was drowned.

Two other missing persons—76-year-old Arthur Powney and nine-year-old Arthur Paquette—were returned to their homes. The boy had been missing since last Wednesday and Powney since Thursday.

U.S. Takes Hand In Mollifying India As FDR Envoy Sees Native Leaders

NEW DELHI, India, April 6—(CP).—Louis Johnson, head of a special mission named by President Roosevelt, held exploratory conversations with India's native leaders in what was widely believed today to be a projection of United States influence in an effort to smooth the country's difficult political problem.

Mindful of the importance of India's political problems if this country is to be converted into a military bulwark against the Axis, Mr. Johnson conferred for 2½ hours yesterday with Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, past president of the Congress party.

He conferred for an hour this afternoon with Nehru and the Congress President, Maulana Abul Kalan Azad.

Mr. Johnson, a former assistant Secretary of War, who heads a mission to build up India's war industry potential and who in addition has been made a special Minister to India, did not give to Nehru a letter which he has brought from President Roosevelt for some one of India's native leaders.

Neither the contents of the letter nor to whom it is addressed has been divulged.

The Congress Party Working Committee, which has conditionally rejected the proposals brought by Sir Stafford Cripps, met for two hours this morning. The exact text of the committee's resolution on the proposals still was undisclosed but Azad said it might be published tomorrow.

Azad was expecting today a communication from Sir Stafford which presumably would give the British War Cabinet's decision on the Congress party's proposals concerning Indian defence.

Stroke At Narvik

LONDON, April 6—(CP).—Reuters News Agency quoted a report today in the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet that British troops and planes raided the Narvik area of the German-held coast of Norway last Friday.

Explosions, it said, could be heard on the Swedish side of the frontier which runs close to the coast in the Narvik area, almost touching the back of Narvik Fjord.

Authoritative London sources, however, said they had no information about such a raid.

Canada's Forces Now Almost Equal 1918 Peak

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OTTAWA, April 6.—(CP).—Canada's armed forces of the land, sea and air are approaching the maximum strength attained in the last year of the First Great War.

Something more than 400,000 men now are believed to be on active service in Canada and overseas which compares with a force of more than 450,000 in the Canadian army at Nov. 1, 1918. That figure, considered about the peak for the last war, included 418,000 overseas and 27,423 in training or on other duties in Canada.

Exact figures for the present strength of the forces are not released by the authorities but the latest official statement, in February, reported more than 28,000 in the navy, more than 265,000 voluntarily enlisted in the army, more than 16,000 conscripted for home defence and on active service for the duration of the war in the army, and more than 100,000 in the air force, a total of more than 409,000. Enlistments have been proceeding since then.

As in the First Great War the total is made up both of volunteers and men called up compulsorily, but the compulsory system this time is quite different from that used in the last war. So far men now are compelled only to serve on home defence duties whereas in the last war when a man was called he was liable to serve anywhere.

New Two-Corps Battle Units Feature Armored Power Mean Adding Tank Brigade

Crerar Chief of One Corps Under McNaughton Eight Other Promotions Made "Army To Be Complete And Self-Contained"

OTTAWA, April 6—(CP). — Formation in the United Kingdom of headquarters for the 1st Canadian Army, under Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, was announced today by National Defence headquarters.

Formation of the headquarters is effective from today.

Acting Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, acting corps commander during Gen. McNaughton's recent trip to Canada, was named commander of one of the new army's two corps. Commander of the other corps has not been named.

Eight other promotions and appointments were made public in the Departmental statement on formation of headquarters for the first army in Canada's history.

The announcement came almost 25 years to the day after the first Great War battle of Vimy Ridge.

Three brigadiers were promoted to rank of major-general—Brig. G. R. Turner and Brig. C. S. L. Hertzberg, appointed to the army staff, and Brig. J. H. Roberts who becomes a divisional commander.

Four colonels were promoted to brigadier—Col. J. E. Genet, appointed to the army staff, Col. J. L. Melville and Lt.-Col. A. E Walford, appointed to corps headquarters, and Lt.-Col. E. C. Pow, named to command the artillery of the Canadian division.

A Hard Hitting Outfit

The announcement said:

"The establishment of the 1st Canadian army overseas will create a thoroughly-modern, self-contained and hard-hiting fighting force capable of operating in any theatre of war.

It is particularly strong in armored fighting power.

"It will prove a worthy successor to the traditions of the Canadian Corps in the last Great War."

Intention to form a two-corps army overseas was announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in the House of Commons last Jan. 26, but the step was forecast months ago by Defence Minister Ralston.

Mr. Kings' statement, however, disclosed that the new army set-up would mean a new armored division—to be created by conversion of the existing 4th infantry division—and a new army tank brigade, both to be sent overseas this year.

Transformation of the 4th Divisio into an armored division now is proceeding at an eastern Canadian camp and only last week army officials intimated they are pleased with the progress being made.

The Canadian corps of three infantry divisions, an armored division and an army tank brigade thus will become an army of two corps—one containing three infantry divisions and two army tank brigades; the other containing two armored divisions.

Mandalay Razed 2,000 Killed

LONDON, April 6 — (CP).— The Daily Sketch's war correspondent in Burma wrote to-day that two-thirds of the centre of Mandalay was destroyed by Japanese bombers on Friday and that 2,000 to 3,000 persons were killed.

(There was no indication from official or other sources that the damage was severe.)

The correspondent, Alfred Wagg, added that 5,000 others were injured by the 35 bombers which swooped upon the city.

He wrote that no alarm was sounded before the raid and that huge fires broke out swiftly.

"Cholera has been threatening for many weeks," he wrote. He said the water system was destroyed, making the threat of epidemic grave. The electric system also was bombed out of commission, he said.

Japanese Punch At 2 Indian Coastal Cities

NEW DELHI, Auril 6— (CP). — Japanese bombers carried the war to India proper to-day by raids on two coastal cities north of Madras, British Headquarters announced. The planes were based on an aircraft carrier, operating with a Japanese task force in the Bay of Benagl.

Nizampatam a town situated at the estuary of the Kistna River, was attacked twice.

Cocanada also was raided. It is on the coast north of Nizampatam. Both lie between Madras and Calcutta.

The raids followed closely on an attack on Sunday on Colombo, Ceylon, in which the British defenders shot down 27 planes and damaged 30 others.

Hunt on For Carriers.

LONDON, April 6 — (CP). — British warships were believed scouring the Eastern Indian Ocean to-day for at least two Japanese aircraft carriers from which the Easter attack on Colombo, Ceylon, was launched, informed naval experts said.

The fact that the surprise attack was launched against Colombo instead of the naval base at Trincomalee found no official explanation here.

Blackout for the Coast.

MADRAS, April 6 — (CP). — The Madras fortress area will be blacked out, beginning next Sunday, it was announced to-day.

150 Smash At Cologne Others Rake Paris, Only 5 Are Missing

By ALAN DANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 6—(CP Cable).—R.C.A.F. graduates of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan whacked the German war effort on two widely spread fronts in night raids which took more than 300 bombers with 1,000 tons of explosive over enemy and enemy-held territory.

A spokesman said that while one R.C.A.F. squadron formed part of the striking force attacking the German Rhineland, with Cologne as one principal objective, other Canucks flew over a factory in Genevilliers near Paris which has been producing aero-engines and other war material for the German army.

The squadron commanded by Wing Cmdr. Johnny Fauquier, Ottawa was among the first to launch the Cologne attack. Last week Fauquier's squadron took a prominent part in the smashing assault on the Matford Truck Works at Poissy, Paris suburb.

"This was the best of nine trips I've made," said Flt. Sgt. Owen Field of Montreal, second pilot of one of the Canadian-manned bombers. Wireless operator with Field was Flt. Sgt. R. J. Campbell of New York.

PO. R. P. Locke of Vernon, B.C., whose crew included Flt. Sgt. N. Leftley of Ottawa, and Flt. Sgt. J. W. Sanderson of Vernon, reported he got his plane right over the objective.

"They shook us up a bit," he said, commenting on the ground fire. "We have a hole in the bomb flap doors."

Nazi Bombs Rock Belfast Theatre

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, April 6—(CP).—Three German-type incendiary time bombs exploded harmlessly in a movie theatre which just had been emptied of a Saturday night crowd of United States and British troops, and a search disclosed other explosives hidden like Easter eggs in the building.

Besides the explosions, the rattle of gunfire in a running fight between police and members of an armed band marked the anniversary of the so-called Easter rebellion of Irish Republicans who revolted in Dublin 26 years ago and who now, in Northern Ireland, are seeking union with neighboring Eire.

The outbreaks followed arrests recently among alleged members of the outlawed Irish Republican army in Northern Ireland.

The police, fired on from an air raid shelter as their car p[illegible]ed by in broad daylight, were among many on patrol to guard against such incidents.

One policeman was killed in the ensuing fight. A man who police said was a member of the armed band was wounded seriously, and five other men and two women were arrested.

Aussies Pile Up 1,500 Japs on One Beach

Invaders Stacked 6 Ft. Deep On Wire As 20,000 Men, 150 Bombers Blast Rabaul

MELBOURNE, April 6.—(CP). — The bloody story of the Japanese conquest of Rabaul, New Britain, in which 150 Australians mowed down some 1,500 Japanese in a single 200-yard stretch of beach, was told to-day with the arrival at Australia bases of some 600 survivors of the Australian garrison.

Rabaul, former capital of New Britain, fell Jan. 23 after the Japanese had pitted a landing force of 20,000 men, a formidable naval force and an air fleet of at least 150 bombers, dive bombers and fighters against Rabaul's garrison of 1,400 men and air force of five planes.

Rabaul's casualties were 700 killed, wounded or missing, while Japanese losses were in excess of 2,000.

It was at Ralauna Beach that a unit of 150 Australians blazed away at a Japanese force which was caught in barbed wire at the water's edge.

Over a 200 yard beach front, it was reported, Japanese were stacked six feet high as an estimated 1,500 fell before the Australian fire—and the Australian cost was only 20 men slightly wounded.

The aerial attack on Rabaul, 800 miles north-east of the Australian mainland, began Jan. 20 with 60 bombers and 20 fighters.

Against them the defenders were able to put into the air only five Wirraways—single-engined, general purpose monoplanes. The Australian planes accounted for two enemy craft before they were shot down, leaving Rabaul entirely without air protection. Anti - aircraft fire brought down five other planes.

Two days later, refugees from the island said, 110 Japanese aircraft bombed Rabaul heavily—blasting Praed Point fortress for an hour. They attempted to land on the airport but demolition charges were exploded and two of the invading planes were destroyed. Machine-gun fire brought down a third.

The actual invasion began at 2:30 in the morning by a force of Japanese with blackened arms and faces and clad in shorts and singlets.

That force was repulsed but at dawn thousands of troops came, covered by the guns of warships and 100 dive-bombers and fighters.

The Australian garrison caught many landing barges with 50 to 100 men in each before the terrific slaughter of Raluana Beach.

By noon the Japanese were swarming everywhere, survivors of the defence said, and further resistance was seen to be useless.

Some Australian troops then withdrew through Okopo toward the bush.

Four hundred others took the Malabonga Road toward Rabata, a village 30 miles distant, harried by Japanese planes. At Rabata food was picked up and the troops moved into the jungle for what turned out to be a struggle of many weeks with mud, mosquitos, malaria, rain and crocodile-infested rivers.

On many days, veterans of the struggle said, each man had only a single biscuit and 1/12th of a tin of beer. Later, natives helped them supplement their food supply with yams and coconuts until they could reach Australian-held points on the island.

Tojo Predicts Calamities

Sees Dark Days For India While Bowing British

TOKYO, (From Japanese Broadcasts), April 6 —(AP)—Premier Hideki Tojo asserted today that "great calamities" in India would be unavoidable "in the course of our subjugation of British forces" in India.

Tokyo recalled Japan's progress through Malaya, Burma and the Andaman Islands in the Bay of Bengal and added:—

"The grim determination of our empire to crush the United States and Britain is thus being steadily translated into action.

"If India should remain, as before, under the military control of Britain, it would, I am afraid, be unavoidable in the course of our subjugation of British forces there that India suffer great calamities."

At another point he commented that "British influence in India is now about to be exterminated."

Tomokazu Hori, spokesman of the information board, in a similar statement, declared it does not matter who obtains command of the armed forces in India, "the only way left is to crush that army."

Australia Feeling Better

Heavy U.S., British Reinforcements Rips Morale

U.S. Army Headquarters in Australia, April 6 —(AP)—The encouraging word that Australia's position is much safer after two months of acute danger was given by Army Minister Francis Forde today after a series of week-end successes in which Australian and American airmen destroyed at least 20 Japanese planes and damaged 19 others.

But he warned that Australia must be everlastingly prepared against attack.

"I am encouraging body to believe the tide has turned," he said after inspecting an American troop camp.

"We must be vigilant and ready. There is a long way to go yet."

He said Australia owed her easier position "to speedy and generous held" from Britain and the United States plus meaures taken by the Dominion itself.

"These joint measures have built up in the Commonwealth a force which in the north has already shown the Japanese the sharpness of its range," he said.

His warning, however, that Australia must remain vigilant was underscored by press reports that the Japanese were receiving air reinforcements at their much-battered New Guinea invasion bases.

JAP RAID ON CEYLON BACKFIRES AS 57 OF 75 RAIDERS DOWNED

Sudden Death Coup Turns Into Disaster

Raiders Find Colombo Full Of A.A.'s, R.A.F. On Guard Over India

COLOMBO, Ceylon, April 6 (CP)—Japan tried a "sudden-death" air blow on this island flank to India yesterday but alert defences turned the attack, instead, into one of the sharpest air defeats the Japanese have suffered.

About 75 raiders streaked out of the early Easter morning sun in the first raid of the war on Ceylon, which lies in the Bay of Bengal just southeast of the tip of India, and British authorities declared that 57 of them may never have regained the aircraft carrier from which they were presumed to have come.

Twenty-seven were counted definitely as having been shot down, five more as probably destroyed and still another 25 as damaged.

Vice-Admiral Sir Geoffrey Layton, commander in chief of armed forces on Ceylon, supported the belief the raid was sea-based and declared it was doubtful whether the damaged planes could have reached their ship.

The harbor area of this city, capital and southwest port of Ceylon, the air field and the Ratmalana Railway were chief targets of the attack.

Japan's air smash at Ceylon added to the growing evidence that the Japanese, stalled at the gates of Australia, may have made India and its surrounding waters the goal of their next big campaign.

The air attack coincided with increasing Japanese pressure on the Burma front eastward across the bay and with counter air blows by United States fortress bombers which pounced on the enemy-held Burmese port of Rangoon Friday night and set three great fires on the docks.

Closest Blow To India

The attack on Ceylon, guarding important Allied shipping lanes and holding Trincomalee, site of a big British naval base, stretched Japan's air arm 850 miles southwest of the occupied Andaman Islands and the closest yet to the Indian mainland.

Both air fighters and ground gunners proved the efficiency of Ceylon's carefully-prepared defences in their baptism of fire. Twenty-five of the 27 planes listed as certainly destroyed were credited to British fighter pilots who roared up to meet the low-flying Japanese as air alarms sent the well-rehearsed populace to cover.

of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell as Viceroy of India with the Hindu Leader Pandi Jawarhalal Nehru as Defence Minister is one of the suggestions under consideration for settlement of the Indian question.

Assurances of the United States Government's interest in India's freedom and future are believed already to have been given Indian leaders, although these are in no way guarantees, The Associated Press added.

(Some London sources expressed belief the final outcome of the negotiations would come from deliberations today of the British War Cabinet on suggested changes in Britain's terms, offered originally on an all-or-nothing basis.

(The core of the difficulty, evidently, was the insistence of Indians, particularly the All-India Congress party, that India control her own defences.

(British sources said the Government would consider any responsible suggestion. One possibility, mentioned by The London News-Chronicle, was that an Indian would become defence member of the executive council, and that Gen. Archibald Wawell, Commander-in-Chief for India, would succeed Lord Linlithgow as Viceroy, to ensure full co-ordination of all defence measures.)

per, said these armies had figured prominently in Hitler's plans for the spring.

The 12th and 24th divisions said to be exclusive spring units, already are fighting and are tired, it was said.

The dispatches said that the second army under Col.-Gen. Baron Maximilian Von Weichs had had to hurry to the help of the defeated 34th army corps near Yelets, 220 miles south of Moscow in the Don River region.

(The army of Von Weichs was one of the group commended in a German communique last Oct. 18 for what the Germans declared was the annihilation of the grand army under Marshal Timoshenko in the encirclement battles of Bryansk and Vyazma).

It was said that the 299th and the 111th divisions are also rushed up to stem Marshal Timoshenko but that the Soviet defender of South Russia still was moving forward.

Red Star said the Germans are moving up "strategic reserves" from the deep German rear.

Booty Rolls In.

The Russians also announced the capture of huge quantities of war material in that bloody area.

The Red army organ, Red Star, declared Russian soldiers pressing on westward on the central front had crossed a river behind which the Germans had established their line of resistance.

German planes pounded furiously at Leningrad Saturday night in the first big raid reported on that key Russian city in months but the Moscow radio said anti-aircraft batteries and fighter planes dispersed most of the invading craft. The Moscow broadcast said anti-aircraft guns brought down 13 German bombers and Red fighters shot down five more.

The report said some persons were killed when the Germans jettisoned their bombs over living quarters.

The 18 planes downed in Leningrad were part of a bag of 102 German planes the Russians said were shot down or destroyed on the ground along the whole front Saturday while the Red Army lost only 16 planes.

The Russian mid-day communique said there had been no substantial changes at the front. It reported that one artillery unit on the Kalinin front killed 780 German soldiers and officers and destroyed six tanks, while five German tanks were destroyed in a battle on the northwestern front.

On the northwestern front, the trapped German 16th Army at Staraya Russa was reported dissolving daily under the blows of the Red army.

Ninety Russian Divisions Wait

Indications came from foreign sources that Germany and Russia are lining up for the Spring offensive the Germans are expected to launch.

Russian reports in London said that 90 new Soviet divisions, or about 1,350,000 men, are concentrated in the 250 miles of defences between Kharkov and Taganrog. The Ankara radio said these men were trained during the winter on the banks of the Volga.

The Ankara radio added that the Soviet troop movements indicated the first German drive is expected in South Russia, pointed toward the oil of the Caucasus.

Other reports said Rumanian troops are being massed on the Russian frontier; fresh Italian divisions are reported en route to the front along with Italian aircraft.

Russia's ally, Britain, has not been idle, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, indicated in a speech in London to a Co-operative Party conference. He said, "convoy after convoy" had sailed through the Arctic all winter long with Allied war supplies for the Soviet Union.

Painful, Pus Filled Boils the Cause of Much Misery

If you suffer from boils you know how sick and miserable they made you feel.

Boils are an outward indication of impurities in the system, and just when you think you are rid of one another crops up to take its place and prolong your misery. All the lancing and poulticing you can do may not stop more coming.

To help overcome boils you should purify the blood, so why not give that old, reliable blood medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters, a chance to show what it will do in helping you get rid of them? Thousands have used it for this purpose for the past 60 years. Why not you?

first Great War were 619,636 and of these 424,589 served overseas. The corresepondent figures for the present war is not available but it is somewhere above 450,000 allowing or casualties and discharges to date.

There is some uncertainty about the total number actually drafted into the forces under conscription in 1917-18 but a recent return to the House of Commons placed it at 124,-588, of whom a certain number were on harvest or other leave and never actually entered training. It is estimated 51,000 drafted men served overseas.

A total of 82,893 fit men were delivered to the army for 30 days' training in 1940 and 1941. Then the period was extended to four months and all men called were kept on active service for the duration of the war.

Since the four-month system started 33,856 fit men have been delivered to the army while more than 10,891 of the 30-day men have been recalled. Thus there now are more than 44,000 men who were called up compulsorily on active service with the Canadian forces.

Many of these have volunteered for service anywhere in the world and a considerable number have entered the Air Force and the Navy.

Canada's casualties in the present war have been light, a reflection of the role assigned to the Canadian army in Britain and the circumstance that a German invasion of that island has not yet occurred. Total dead and missing in the three services is something less than 3,000, not counting casualtiese in the force of 1,985 Canadian at Hong Kong, on which a final report on the number of deaths has not been received.

(The Japanese have reported taking prisoner, 1,689 Canadian officers ese hands. The 298 Canadians unknown to have died while in Japanse hands. The 296 Canadians unaccounted for in the Japanese figure of 1,689 captives are assumed to be dead or missing.)

In the first Great War Canadian fatal casualties numbered 59,544 and non-fatal 172,950.

"It was a good trip," said P.O. W. Baldwin, Ottawa, a navigator. "Two fires were going when we got there. We nipped between searchlight cones to spread the blaze."

Sgt. W. L. Platt, Toronto, was happy because he wore for the first tie a blue leather jacket sent from home and was happier because his aircraft carried a British superbomb.

"I saw it drop," he said. "There was a just a wide circle of light, then a fountain of sparks."

Locke's crew included Flt.-Sgt. C. P. Montgomery, Chapleau, Ont.

Among the rear gunners praised is Sgt. J. Morrison, Winnipeg, tail-end Charlie for P.O. W. A. McKay, Vancouver.

"A jerry night fighter followed us right into the target, but Morrison's directions were so good we were able to keep beyond range," said McKay.

"I was able to spot him, that's all, and the skipper followed my directions," Morrison added. "When we reached the edge of the target, Jerry had faded as the flak appeared."

Canucks in the Rhineland attack were Flt.-Sgt. Phillips, Cornwall, Ont. and Flt.-Sgt. R. J. Gardiner, Hanover, Ont.

Some Pretty Flak.

Sgt. H. J. W. Stewart, Montreal, and Flt.-Sgt. R. J. Heather, Toronto, helped heave heavy stuff on Genevillier, braving close flying shrapnel

"I could hear the stuff behind me rattling on the aircraft and from the tail turret could see it," said the tall, blond Stewart. "Some was very pretty colored. We were 13 minutes early over the target and could see the flares dropped. Haze clouded the factory but it was easy to pick out anyway on the side of the Seine. We first saw incendaries, then white and green explosions."

"It was just like day when we got there, with all the flares dropped," said Heather.

Other Canucks described the attack as nearly as devastating as the recent Renault raid. They included Sgt. R. J. Demers, Timmins, Ont.; Sgt. A. E. Shaw, Paris, Ont., and Sgt. J. R. Cattle, Toronto.

105th Visit To Cologne

Indicative of the weight of the attack, it was reported that more than half of the 300 planes took part in the bombing of Cologne, raided for the 105th time.

British sources estimated that the big R.A.F. bomber squadrons unloaded about 1,000 tons of high explosives and many incendairies in the raids which spread from Le Havre, on the occupied French coast, to the Rhineland.

Scores of four-engined Stirlings, each carrying eight tons of bombs, were believed to have taken part.

The loss of only five—less than two per cent—of the air armada, one of the heaviest raiding fleets ever sent out, was called "very satisfactory."

By contrast, Britain lost 37 bombers last November in a raid on Berlin of a similar heavy scale.

That more than 300 bombers participated was fully and quickly advertised—contrary to the usual policy of concealing numbers—suggesting that the attack ranged among Britain's biggest.

The raid on the Paris area was the fifth there since March 3, when Britain began hitting at French industries working for the German war machine with an attack on the huge Renault works.

Twice last week R.A.F. bombers struck at the Nazi directed Matford works at Poissy, on the Seine River eight miles from Paris.

A patrolling British fighter was reported authoritatively to have shot a German fighter down over the Channel this morning.

An authoritative statement said: "The main Royal Air Force attack last night was on the Rhineland.

"Over 300 R.A.F. bombers were engaged in the night's operations from which five of our bombers are missing."

Easter Toll Of 11 Sees Only 3 Road Deaths

By The Canadian Press

Eleven fatalities were reported in Ontario during the holiday week-end from Good Friday to Easter Sunday inclusive. Four deaths in industrial accidents, three drownings, three traffic fatalities and a suicide made the total.

Three workmen engaged on the construction of a pumphouse for a Sarnia gas-mixing plant were killed Friday when tons of clay caved in on them in the excavation they were digging. Killed were Stanley Chivers of Sarnia, Lyle Lester of Courtright and Hugh Stewart of Niagara Falls, Ont. A score of workmen worked franctically to reach the trapped men, but all were dead when found.

Melvin Fitzgerald of Chatham died in a Toronto hospital Friday from head injuries suffered the previous day when he was crushed between a crane bucket and a railway freight car at the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company yard in Chatham.

The body of Mrs. Pearl Gregson of Waterdown was found in Hamilton Bay Friday. Mrs. Gregson is thought to have taken a weak spell and slipped into the water from the pier on which she was seen sitting shortly before her body was discovered.

2nd Man Missing

Joseph Bureau of Timmins drowned sometime Saturday night when apparently he fell into the Metagami River there. His body was found in the river Sunday and efforts are being made to locate his companion, Bonat Mageau, who is missing and feared drowned.

The body of Dewey Thomson was recovered from the Sydenham River Sunday by searchers alarmed by his brother's report that he had not spent Saturday night in his home near Bothwell. Police said marks on the river bank indicated he had slipped into the water at the point where he was last seen fishing Saturday.

Nineteen-year-old Eric Pickerell of Queensville died Sunday of injuries suffered a few hours before when the car in which he was riding swerved into a ditch and turned over twice. The driver of the Pickerell car was trying to avoid a collision with a car police said was driven by Murray Johnson of Queensville. Pickerell's brother was injured in the accident also.

Thrown to the pavement through the door of the car in which he was riding, Russel McNeill, eight, of Toronto was killed Sunday. Police said the car went out of control on a Toronto street and crashed into a pole. Two others in the car suffered severe injuries in the crash.

George Paddock of Hespeler was killed Sunday when the car in which he was riding crashed into a tree in Hespeler. The four other passengers in the car suffered minor injuries.

Police said Friday they found Hugh Mavor of Buffalo, N.Y., dead, hanging by his necktie from a bar in the door of the cell in Niagara Falls police headquarters where he was confined following a minor highway collision a few hours before.

Preston Beaten By Everton 2-1

LONDON, April 6 —(CP Cable)—Huge Easter Monday crowds turned out today to watch games deciding the first round in the football league championship and saw Preston, last year's winner, eliminated from the race as the northerners lost to Everton 2-1.

Preston, which tied Everton 2-2 in the opening game of the series Saturday, was beaten on a goal four minutes from the end of overtime.

Though league-leading Blackpool withdrew from championship play Saturday because of player difficulties, other favorites stayed in the running. Second place Cardiff tied Southampton 1-0 but won the round 4-2. Northampton, which was third, lost 3-1 to Bristol City but won out on the aggregate, 4-3.

Derna Raided

CAIRO, April 6 (AP)—The R.A.F. announced today that the Axis airdrome at Derna was bombed yesterday for the second successive day and said one German fighter plane was shot down and others were badly damaged.

In Axis raids on Malta Thursday and yesterday British fighter planes shot down one German bomber and anti-aircraft guns three, the communique said.

CCF Campaigns For Victory At Next Ballot

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

TORONTO, April 6—(CP)—Organizing Ontario's constituencies for the next provincial election looms as the immediate job for the province's Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party.

Members, who drew up a platform at their 10th annual convention Saturday, will undertake this work with the injunction "go forth and conquer" voiced by their newly-chosen leader, Edward B. Jolliffe of Toronto.

The provincial party's first political leader, Jolliffe told the 115 delegates to the largest C.C.F. convention in the provincial party's history that a campaign plan already had been devised and constituency organizations would be informed of its details.

As ammunition in their campaign, the workers will have the declaration of C.C.F. policy on such problems as wealth conscription, public ownership, civil liberties and wartime economic organization. Resolutions defining the party's attitude to these questions were approved at the convention.

Meantime, while Jolliffe leads the party's political campaign, its administrative work will continue to be supervised by Controller Sam Lawrence of Hamilton, who was unanimously re-elected president at the convention's closing session Saturday. The Hamilton man sat in the provincial legislature from 1934-37 as the first C.C.F. member ever to enter it.

Out To Fight Most Seats.

Whether the Legislature's life will be extended or by-elections called for the six vacant seats remains to be seen, but Jolliffe told cheering delegates Saturday that when by-elections are called "we'll be there." He added that the party is confident "that the great majority of constituencies in Ontario can and ought to be contested by the C.C.F."

The party has served notice that it will campaign for an all-out war effort involving "conscription of large accumulations of wealth and war industries." It wants nationalization of financial institutions "so that without inflation or accumulating debt, we can finance our war effort." Another proposal is replacement of dollar a year men by full-time national administrators paid by the state and working in conjunction with War Board containing representatives of farm and labor organizations.

It also wants a different recruiting policy. Asserting that a large number of men of military age, employed in industry, had been released or refused employment, a resolution approved Saturday protested "against this short-sighted and unfair practice of obtaining recruits for the armed forces by such economic pressure."

A Parade Riot

BELFAST, April 6—(CP).—Two policemen were wounded today when they attempted to break up an Irish Republican Army parade at Duncannon, Tyrone County.

Searching in the darkness for members of the parading group, who defied an official order prohibiting the demonstration, police surprised four men hiding in a backyard. The two forces fought a running battle with tommy guns and revolvers. The I.R.A. band escaped.

Rev. J. J. Ralston Called By Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, April 6.—(ENS).—At a congregational meeting on Thursday evening members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church extended a call to Rev. J. J. Ralston, M.A., of Parry Sound. If the call is accepted Rev. Ralston, who addressed the local congregation at their Sunday services on March 22nd, will replace Rev. B. Simpson Black, who was called from here to Bonar Presbyterian church, Toronto, in February, 1941 Rev. Ralston has been in Parry Sound for upwards of eight years and is currently the moderator of that Presbytery. He was a chaplain in World War 1. The call will be forwarded to him through the Peterborough Presbytery and the congregation hopes to receive word of his acceptance by April 16th. Interim Moderator Rev. D. K. Perrie of Hastings, presided for the meeting, which was well attended.

Alimony Order.

Pleading guilty to driving without due care and attention James L. Duff, 18, Hastings, paid $5.00 and costs when he came before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., on Thursday afternoon. Questioned by the magistrate Chief Constable Geo. Hardy who laid the charge, said it arose as the result of an accident in town on March 22nd when the accused's car failed to negotiate a curve and skidded off into a lumber pile where it was badly wrecked. He said Duff had been driving too fast considering the road was slippery at the time.

In a charge under the Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act brought by Mrs. Grace Simpson against her husband, Bert Simpson, the magistrate gave judgment, stating in part that he found the wife entitled to the benefit of the Act' as the husband has not made adequate provision for her maintenance. There have been long laches on the part of the wife in bringing proceedings, but this is partially explained by the fact that until recently she was able earn a living. I do not think she has lost her right by reason of the laches. Magistrate Langley fixed the sum to be paid by the husband at $5.00 weekly, explaining that this was based on his ability to pay rather than on his cruelty of moral turpitude.

Victory Club Meets.

Eleven members of the Victory Club met at Miss Winnie Spencer's for their regular meeting this week, when they began work on another crib quilt and a full size quilt for the Red Cross here.

Easter Parade In Cobourg Smaller

COBOURG, April 6—(ENS). — Balmy weather on Easter Sunday brought out the girls in their new Easter finery. Thunder showers before daybreak left a grey sky for the early morning churchgoers and many went in their "old duds," only to find the sun shining merrily when church was out. In the afternoon King street was bright with the latest spring fashions, although the turn-out for the Easter parade was not as large as in other years. Some of the girls wore new spring suits and hats, but many contented themselves wtih the coats they had been wearing plus a new hat. Red was a predominant color in hats, with off-the-forehead brims and dominated the color scheme in many spring suits and coats seen during the parade.

LOANS

$25 FOR $1.76 (TOTAL COST)
$50 FOR $3.58 (TOTAL COST)
$100 FOR $7.10 (TOTAL COST)
when repaid in six monthly instalments

WOULD a cash loan help you? If you have a job, you can borrow at Household Finance without fuss or bother—and at reasonable cost. You may repay your loan in monthly instalments which fit your own pocketbook.

Just this to do

All you do to apply for a Household Finance loan is to tell us how much you need and how you wish to repay.

You may choose the most convenient payment plan from the table below. Suppose you borrow $100 to be repaid at $9.46 a month. Twelve instalments of $9.46 each will repay your loan in full. You may prefer to repay sooner in order to reduce the cost. Six monthly instalments of $17.85 each—a total of $107.10—will also repay a $100 loan. The cost of your loan, in this case, is just $7.10. A $25 loan, repaid in six monthly instalments of $4.46 each costs only $1.76.

You need no endorsers or guarantors to borrow at Household—just the ability to repay in monthly instalments. This spares you the embarrassment of asking friends or fellow-workers to sign the loan papers with you. And at no time do we question friends or relatives about your credit.

Household Finance loans are usually made on furniture or car. But we consider character and regular income far more important than the value of your security. You can get your loan quickly—usually in 24 hours or even sooner if necessary. If you should get sick or lose your position while paying on your loan, Household will show you every consideration.

Let Household help you

People borrow at Household to pay taxes, insurance, medical, dental, hospital and funeral expenses, school fees, and overdue bills of many kinds. Household service helps men and women, both married and single, to take care of emergency expenses and work their way out of debt.

If you can make good use of a loan, see us at once. We are in business to make loans to folks with money problems. Phone or visit us without obligation.

Port Hope Lions Raise $200 On Hockey Pools

PORT HOPE, April 6.—(ENS)—The regular meeting of the Lions Club was held at Seaton Hall with Lion Sherm. Gifford as chairman, ably assisted by Lion Elton Comfort. These two Lions are the newest members of the club and were complimented by the other members for the splendid program which they had arranged.

Lion Frank Lewis was acting secretary for the meeting. The chairman of the hockey draw, Lion Gordon Bradley, reported a net profit of a little over $200. This was made on a draw for tickets for the games played at Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, on Saturday nights during the winter season. Four lucky names being drawn each time.

The chairman of the war work committee Lion Bob Wickett reported some $290 has been raised from the sale of salvage and he also outlined a busy but profitable program with regard to the salvage campaign.

Spoke On Mining

The business for the evening being completed Lion Eton Comfort then introduced Mr. Carl Falcon, who was born in Hungary and now resides in Port Hope. Mr. Falcon speaks French fluently and is interested in mining, having spent much time in the north in 1938 and again in 1941.

Mr. Falcon gave a very interesting and informative talk on pioneer mining in the North West Territories, where gold was discovered in 1904 and a rush to stake claims took place in 1928. He claims that few people know this northern territory with its large inland lake. The Great Bear, and such magnificent rivers as the Mackenzie and Liard. Mr. Falcon also claims that the Mackenzie Valley county has hardly been scratched in regards to mining and the territory is full of rich mineral deposits. In this district are several beautiful and modern towns such as Fort Simpson and Fort McMurray which enjoy all modern conveniences and a social life such as southern Ontario.

Also in this vicinity are Indians and half breeds, who are reluctant in adopting the white man's customs and still indulge in fur trading and trapping.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Falcon on behalf of the club for a most interesting and instructive evening.

Supper Meeting Held By Kawartha Kids

LAKEFIELD, April 6, (ENS)—Bringing to a close a series of meetings in the Supper Club project, the Kawartha Kids Klub members were the hostesses at a delightfully arranged supper at the home of the leader, Miss Hazel Northey on Friday evening.

A pleasing feature of the supper hour, was the presentation of a delicious birthday cake to the hostess' mother, Mrs Graydon Northey, Friday being her birthday, and singing of "Happy Birthday" by the guests.

Later gamese and singing were enjoyed and also several vocal numbers by Ralph Beavis, who played his own guitar accompaniments. The singing of "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" and a hearty vote of thanks voiced by Miss Minnie Charlton to the Northey family, concluded another pleasant event for the Klub.

Along The Burma Road To Alaska

This young man of the U.S. army engineers couldn't have picked a bleaker spot if he tried. He is one of the men who are building a 1,200-mile road across the wild, rock terrain of British Columbia. Heavy tractors and giant bulldozers have already been put to work as Col. Hoge and his men tackle the big job that means so much to the U.S. and Canadian war effort.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard McMillan Observe 40th Anniversary

COTTESLOE, April 6.—(ENS). — The McMillan family entertained about 60 guests on Thursday evening, April 2, in honor of their parents, Mr and Mrs. Richard McMillan, who were married 40 years that day.

While the guests were gathering, telephone calls were received from their son Allan and family of Detroit and from Mr. Harry Cannon and family in Toronto, a brother of Mrs., McMillan. Her sister, Mrs. Mary Hearns of Trenton, was also present. Music and dancing furnished amusement and an address from the community was read by Mr. Robert Martin and Mrs. M. Clysdale, and Mr. Robert Patterson presented the bride with an umbrella and pair of gloves, and the groom with a cane. Many more beautiful gifts were received, including flowers from the grandchildren.

Lunch was served and speeches made by Messrs. E. N. McDonald, Rork Ferguson and George Barr, all voicing the wish for many more happy years.

A few faithful Red Cross workers met at the home of Mrs. Webster on Wednesday afternoon and quilted one quilt and prepared other work. Much work as been handed in, including two turtle-neck sweaters.

Fewer Cars Seen On Highway Sunday

COBOURG, April 6 — (ENS). — Effect of gasoline rationing and the tire shortage was evident in the marked reduction in week-end traffice over the Easter holiday. Whereas last year there was a steady stream of cars from Friday until Monday, this year the number of cars passing through was much less. Bus operators, however, reported a record number of passengers, with all available busses pressed into service. Trains also were packed with passengers. There were more bicycles to be seen this past week-end than at any time before during the year, and with more turning to this mode of getting about, bicycle dealers look forward to a rushing business, if they can get the bicycles.

OBITUARIES

MRS. MARY McCONNELL

NORWOOD, April 6 — (ENS). — The death occurred recently in the village of a very well known resident for the past twenty-four years, in thte person of Mary Emma Shortt, widow of Philip McConnell, in her 80th year. She had been in failing health for some time, and was residing at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Maitland Kirk, when she died.

A daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs George Shortt she was born in Rawdon Township and was married to the late Philip McConnell 41 years ago. Twenty-five years later Mr. and Mrs. McConnell came to reside on the farm in Asphodel now occupied by their son Victor.

She was the mother of four children, two of whom, Mrs. Maitland Kirk and Victor, are left to mourn her loss. Also surviving are one sister, Mrs. Frank Barton of Springbrook, and five grand children, Miss Greta Kirk and Audrey, Geraldine, Harold and Donald McConnell.

The late Mrs. McConnell was a member of the Methodist church for many years and since Church Union of the United Church.

Funeral service was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Maitland Kirk with interment in Norwood cemetery. Rev. M. I. Robinson officiated.

The pallbearers were three nephews, Mark Shortt, Roy Barton and Corrie Barton of Springbrook and Geo. Clements, Gilbert Barton and George Kirk.

MRS. GEORGE PALMER

PORT HOPE, pril 6—(ENS).—The funeral of the late Margaret Ellen Gifford, wife of Mr. George T. Palmer, was held on Saturday, April 4, from the family residence, 9 South street at 2.30 p.m., with Rev. J. W. Gordon, minister of Port Hope United Church, in charge and interment at the Union Cemetery.

Mrs. Palmer, who was in her 75th year, died very suddenly on Thursday night, and leaves to mourn her passing her husband, Mr. G. T. Palmer, one son George H., of Port Hope and four daughters, Mrs. Wilson (Pearl) of Belleville, Mrs. C. Minaker, (Edna), Mrs. Harry Bongard (Ethel) and Miss Myrtle Palmer, all of Port Hope.

MARMORA

Special Easter Services Fill Churches

MARMORA, April 6 — (ENS). — Large congregations attended the Easter services at the various churches on Sunday. High Mass was celebrated at the Sacred Heart Church at 10:30 a.m., Rev. Father H. J. Farrell, parish priest, officiating. This was followed by Benediction. The church was beautifully decorated with Easter flowers.

At St. Paul's, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell officiated at the services, which included Holy Communion at 8 a.m. children's service at 10 a.m., Choral Communion at 11 a.m., and Evensong at 7:30 p.m Appropriate discourses were given at the latter two services. At the Choral Communion Mrs. P. Gray rendered "Open the Gates of the Temple" and at Evensong joined with the organist, Mrs. L. R. Rundle, in the rendition of the duet, "Up from the Grave He Arose." At the children's service the Lenten mite boxes were brought in by the scholars. Choice Easter blooms graced the altar and canctuary.

At St. Andrew's. Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher preached to good congregations. At the morning service special music was rendered by a male quartette, consisting of Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher, G. Woodhouse, W. A. Sanderson, and H. A. Burwash. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper followed this service. At the evening service the C.G.I.T. took the choral portion of the service.

Holiday guests included Mary and George Smith of Toronto with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith; Miss Muriel Leonard of Toronto with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Leonard; Miss Jean Reynolds of Ottawa with Mr. and Mrs. John Reynolds; Miss A. P. Wilson B.A., of Stouffville, with Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bleecker; William Bonter, of Niagara Falls, with Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Bonter; Mac Bonter, Belleville, with Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Bonter; Mr. and Mrs. K. Johansen and family, Toronto, with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee; Frank Grant R.C.A.F., Guelph, with his family here; Gerald Harris, St. Catharines, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Harris; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gray of Hamilton with relatives here; Miss Gertrude Gray, Toronto, with her mother, Mrs. P. Gray; John Dougall, of Toronto, with his father, John Dougall Sr.; Pte. Tom Crawford, Hamilton, with Dr. H. Crawford; Max Green, Toronto, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Green; Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, Vancouver, with Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Wright; Miss Henderson, Coe Hill, with friends here; Miss Betty Wright, of Toronto, and Miss Nancy Wright, Vancouver, with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Wright; Pte. William Wright, Camp Borden, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wright; Miss Teresa Shannon, Hotel Dieu, Kingston, with Mr. and Mrs. E. Shannon; Corpl. Clare O'Neill, Petawawa, with Mr. and Mrs. G. O'Neill; Miss Dorothy O'Neill, Toronto, with Mr. and Mrs. John O'Neill; Jack Shannon, Peterborough, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Shannon.

Mrs. C. Nichol was admitted to Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. H. Melville let on Friday for Toronto to reside there with her daughter, Mrs. Dowdell.

Cobourg Personals

Corporal Dorothy Adcock of the C.W.A.C. spent Easter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Adcock, Cobourg.

Eileen Currey of the R.C.A.F. spent Easter in Cobourg.

A. C. Alan Boundy visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Boundy, over the holiday.

Pte. Charlie Earle of Kingston was a week-end visitor in Cobourg.

Pte. Jack Skitch of the Ordnance Corps, Kingston, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Skitch over Easter.

Miss Janetta Jenings of Toronto spent Easter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Jenings.

Miss Jean Douglas of Toronto spent Easter at her home in Cobourg.

Miss Marion Pratt of Toronto visited Cobourg over the week-end.

Sgt. George Mitchell of Petawawa spent Easter with his wife in Cobourg, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Mitchell, Sr.

Constable Donald Erskine of Parry Sound was a week-end visitor at Cobourg.

Mrs. W. Jones of Toronto visited her mother, Mrs. L. Nicholls, over the Easter holiday.

Sgt. Ormond O'Sullivan of London and Miss Mary O'Sullivan of Pickering spent Easter with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Sullivan, Cobourg.

Mr. Leo O'Grady of Toronto visited his mother at Cobourg on Easter Sunday.

Jack Holman, R.C.A.F., spent Easter with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Holman, Albert street.

Constable Clarence Middleton of the R.C.M.P., Cobourg, who has been in the hospital for over a week with a throat infection has recovered and left the hospital yesterday.

Hastings Club Beautifying Community Park

HASTINGS, April 6 — (ENS). — Hastings' softball club officials have lost no time in beginning beautification work on the local Community Park. Working in conjunction with the council, they have already begun work on the front of the park.

It is planned to plant maple trees across the park front and later to erect two stone pillars to form a suitable entrance.

Only a few years ago a miniature wilderness, and one of the biggest eyesore of the district. Hastings Community Park is a credit to the village, its societies and its citizens. Now these same societies are utilizing the park for war charity events and with reorganization of the Softball club in the near future there is ample evidence that the "big" days for which this Trent Valley town is famous will be even bigger and better during the coming summer.

J. M. Baker, village clerk, reports that during the past month nary a birth, a marriage, or a death has been recorded. Chief reasons for this condition are the many enlistments and the numerous young people who have left Hastings to secure employment in other centres.

Feature of the Trinity United church April Mission Circle meeting, held at the home of Mrs. Walter Peck Wednesday night, was a talk delivered by Mrs. A. C. Herbert dealing with her experiences in the far north. For several years before he came to Hastings, Mrs. Herbert's husband, Rev. A. C. Herbert, rector of St. George's Anglican church, was a missionary in the land of the Eskimos.

There for the discussion period, under the direction of Mrs. Grant Sine, was "The Easter Message."

Discussion during the business period centered mainly on the war work being carried on by the Mission Circle. The society has completed a beautiful baby's layette and is preparing a hospital bale. It was decided to hold a cooking sale Saturday, April 23, in the Fleming Block.

Lunch was served by the hostess.

Yes, YOU BOYS AND GIRLS can help win the War!

What if you can't fly a bomber, or drive a tank, or help make guns and ammunition? You can do your part in winning the war.

When you boys go out and cut lawns or collect paper and scrap, you are doing a man's work. That releases one more man for the armed forces or to work in a munitions plant. When you go to the store and carry parcels home you relieve a man; you also relieve a truck and make more tires and gasoline available for carrying on the war.

When you girls wash the dishes and help with the housework, your mother doesn't need to get help. That means more hands to work in munitions plants. When you bring dad's slippers, do little chores for him when he is tired, he will be able to do better work and more work next day—perform a bigger part in winning the war.

So, boys and girls, do all the odd jobs you can find to do. Make yourselves useful around your home and in your community. Every single job you do willingly brings victory one step nearer.

The Ontario Budget

Members of the Ontario Legislature will commence this week the debate on Premier Hepburn's eighth budget. It is a typical wartime budget and the sort of one which would be expected from Ontario's Prime Minister for no matter how much people at times have disagreed with him and his policies there are few in Ontario who will not say that he has sought to give to this province the type of leadership in wartime which this country needs. He has been in bitter disagreement with Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the way the war effort is being prosecuted from Ottawa but he has always been ready to place the resources of Ontario at the beck and call of the federal authorities. He has placed 133 buildings rent free at disposal of Dominion Government.

First he announced that the province will not seek new money or intrude on the borrowing field of the Dominion during the war. No new taxes are to be levied and none of the present forms of taxation will be increased. Policies like these will certainly meet the wishes of Ontario people. Capital outlays are to be curtailed to the limit which should mean that no huge sums will be spent on highways, for did not the Premier declare that all motoring for pleasure should be abolished to conserve money and gasoline.

Premier Hepburn announced an interim surplus on ordinary account for 1941-42 of more than $13,000,000, the largest on record, and reduced to $1,383,000 by lumping ordinary and capital accounts for the first time. Likewise his estimated surplus on ordinary account of $473,600 for 1942-43 promises to become by same process $13,000,000 a year hence. During the depression a pay-as-you-go policy was inaugurated and each year Mr. Hepburn has reported a surplus.

On the other hand when the gross provincial revenue has reached nearly $121,000,000 and the gross expenditure, apart from relief, exceeds $104,000,000 a revenue and expenditure which have more than doubled in recent times there can be no credit for outstanding economy given.

However, all municipalities will again secure the one-mill subsidy, a form of financing introduced when the municipalities went out of the income tax field and while we in Peterborough will stand to lose on this form we can hardly imagine our heavy taxes citizens submitting readily during wartime to a municipal income tax.

Of interest to the farmers will be the continuance of the hog and cheese bonuses, for with the prices on bacon and cheese for export being more or less pegged these bonuses with the increase in the cost of production give financial help to the agriculturists.

The Flowers o' The Forest

The Finns are reported to have lost 200,000 men in their present war with Russia; in the Russo-Finnish war of 1939-40 they lost 60,000. From a population which was estimated at 3,807,163 in 1937 this is a dreadful toll. Some districts, it is said, are threatened with the loss of their entire male population.

The terrible losses of men sustained in modern warfare will have a powerful effect upon the world's future, though we are not clever enough to predict precisely what it will be. Prolonged periods of war-making leave legacies which cannot be disposed of for a century or more. It has been said that the loss of men in the Napoleonic campaigns cut five inches from the average height of the French people, for only the small and infirm men were left at home to ensure the continuance of the race. Certainly the losses of men in the Great War created a curious situation in Britain, where, in the past twenty years, there has been a considerable number of women who were unmarried for no better reason than that there were no men to marry them. The effect of this surplus of women upon the British social structure was amply apparent to anyone who chose to observe it.

Losses of men in this war have been great, and one of the principal sufferers has been Germany, the mighty warmaker. Her losses in Russia have been tremendous, and it is poor comfort for the Germans to think that Russia's losses have more than matched her own. Russia has a population which has never accurately been counted but it was well over 165 millions in 1933; Germany, considered with all the Hitlerian appendages, has 86 millions. It will take many decades to restore those losses, and many of the Hitler maidens who have been assured that their destiny is to be wives and mothers of warriors will be disappointed of their work.

The bitterness of defeat is always mingled with regret for the useless sacrifice of youth. Parents mourn lost sons, but hundreds of thousands of hopeless women mourn the sweethearts and husbands whom they never met. No end has been accomplished, no great purpose has been served, and, in Jane Elliott's words, "The flowers o' the forest are a wede away."

The blame for their desolation must rest upon one man only, and he is the man whom they now acclaim as a leader.

Reform For Reform's Sake

It is observable throughout history that when a nation feels itself nearing a crisis in its development the desire to abolish something becomes strong. Sometimes the thing chosen to be abolished is the cause of all the trouble; frequently it is nothing of the sort, but a hastily and arbitrarily chosen scapegoat. There have been murmurs in this country lately about the abolition of the Senate and some citizens, whose desire to do something drastic is stronger than their judgment, have discussed the matter seriously. We do not think that the Senate should be abolished, and we do not expect that it will be abolished, and we deplore idle talk on the subject which serves merely to create unrest in a quarter where there is no need for unrest.

The existence of two legislative houses is a part of our Parliamentary system and the abolition of one of those houses would immediately lay the road open to abuses. The lower house of Parliament discusses national affairs and initiative legislation; the upper house considers the legislation if the lower houses passes it, and gives the legislation its approval, after which the Governor-General's signature is all that is needed to complete the matter. The upper house acts as a critical body, and this is an extremely important and necessary function. Good legislation, in most circumstances, is slow legislation. The idea of abolishing the Senate in order to speed up Parliamentary procedure is fraught with danger. The critical function of the Senate is infrequently used, but it exists and it is possible to imagine a time when it might save this country from disastrous mistakes. Senate deliberation, like the Royal Veto, is one of those curiosities of our governmental system which may, once in a hundred years, prove the salvation of the country. Bernard Shaw, in his political fantasy, The Apple Cart, demonstrated the paradox that the interests of the King were closer to the interests of the people than were those of Parliament; the same thing may be said of the Senate, for, though senatorial appointments are political, senators, once appointed, may speak their minds without fear of party reprisals.

The question as to whether or not this country is over-governed is one which will have to be debated at length soon after this war is over. We may decide then to prune and pare, but we will be most unwise if we try to abolish the Senate, though we might possibly alter its form. Meanwhile, let the abolishers control their passion for reform; the fact that fourteen senatorships are vacant at present is no reason to abolish the upper house entirely.

In this connection it is interesting to hear that a reform in the Lords is mooted in some circles in England. The suggestion is that an upper chamber be formed there of "leaders of professions." Of course, the Lords originally were leaders of the two most powerful professions — the Army and the Church, controlled when sitting by the leader in the profession of law. Whatever reform may be made in this direction we hope that a few hereditary peers will be left in the House, for they are still leaders in the sphere of agriculture, and have done many a service to the farmers of England in the past. Reform merely for reform's sake is a vice which has made much mischief in the past, and, unless human nature changes very markedly, will make quite as much in the future.

Life Without Newspapers

When we compare the enormous newspapers which still appear every day on this continent with the four-page journals which arrive from Britain, we are lost in admiration for the ingenuity which is shown by the editors and the technicians of the latter. They perform a daily miracle of compression. They give all the important news; a table of their contents compiled in 1938 would be valid today. Nothing of importance or general interest is omitted. News of the war, parliamentary reports, financial news, book reviews, criticisms of the theatre and of music, even cross-word puzzles and the news of the Court are all included, every item being edited and edited again until the distilled essence of the news is presented to the reader. Perhaps this inforced compression will leave its mark on journalism even when the war is over. It is astounding; it is also worrying.

For Britain at present is starved for informed opinion. We on this continent can hardly realize what that means, for we are overwhelmed daily and hourly with opinion of all kinds, some informed and some not. From the newspapers, the magazines and quarterlies, from the radio commentators we are able to select interpretations of the news. These interpretations are necessary to us; it is a full time job at present to keep abreast of developments in the war and to decide their probable significance now and in the future. The average citizen has neither the time nor the necessary military and economic background to do it for himself and he is happy to have it done for him by experts whose past records in this sort of work he knows and whom he feels that he can trust. It is not, as is the case in the Axis countries, that they tell him what to think; it is rather that they tell him what they think, and he is free to accept their opinion in whole or in part, as he pleases. In Britain there is no shortage of men capable of performing a similar task, but there is no room for their opinions to be expressed at suitable length in the press, and the number of them who can be heard in a single day's broadcasting is also limited.

There are large numbers of people in Britain now who never see a newspaper from one month to the next. Circulation is limited; subscribers receive their papers, but street sales are no longer possible. This involuntary non-reading public must be content with a bare statement of facts in the newscasts and what interpretation thereof may be gleaned from such sources as the short-wave commentaries of Raymond Gram Swing. Readers who may have cursed the verbosity of newspapers in the past are invited to consider the prospect of living without them in such times as these. That is the fate of millions in Britain today.

NOTE AND COMMENT

German radio says that despite R.A.F. attacks, Europe has never been so busy. Or should the words be "occupied?"

"Thieves Mistaken For Laundrymen" says a headline. Probably because they made such a clean get-away.

An expert finds that human teeth are deteriorating. But our bark is still in good condition.

Alcohol is being used in the manufacture of smokeless powder. That's all very well, but can we afford to have guns half-shot?

Italy is sending figs to Germany to relieve the fruit shortage there. The Fuehrer used to supply the Reich with dates, but these can no longer be relied upon.

"To be exclusive nowadays is to render oneself ridiculous," says the Chatham News in a curious little essay on manners. But, alas, to be ridiculous nowadays is by no means to be exclusive.

As a war measure American newspapers are to be smaller, but as the print will be closer they will contain the same number of words. But it will probably be more difficult to read between the lines.

PRAYER

Lord, Lord—these miracles, the streets, all say—bring to us soon thy best most golden day, that every stick and stone for thee may shine,
thy praise be sung in every shaft and line.

Lord, Lord—the steeples and the towers cry—deepen beyond belief this ancient sky, darker than time, or terror, be that blue,
and we'll still praise thee by still pointing true.

Lord, Lord—the fountains weep — hear our delight,
these waters for birds and children we keep oright,
where children shout, and the stone dolphin sings,
thy rainbow blessed by holy eyes and wings.

Lord, Lord, all voices say, and all together,
stone, steel and waking man and waking weather, give us thy day, that once more we may be the endless miracle that embodies thee.

A Yorkshire Editor Speaks

By W. L. ANDREWS of the Yorkshire Post.

THOSE American friends who wonder how we ordinary Englishmen are getting on in these soul-trying times would understand our spirit the better if they had experience of the Western Front in the First World War. Our rough and often humiliating experience has made us a tougher people than we were in September, 1939. That alone has been well worth while.

A great Cambridge Don used to tell us that all general statements are lies, but I think we may claim that the people of this nation as a whole have undergone a mental change like that of a man who passes through the age-old phases of soldiering.

Many who fought in the last war will remember the bright springtime of its beginning in some rapidly recruited unit. Men grown humdrum in industry rediscovered great fun and sport in being back in a communal life like that of school. The evenings were gay with music and sport. Route marchers stepped out proudly to cheers from the onlookers. There was the lightest of discipline. Even at the front the spirit of adventure persisted. Almost the whole unit would volunteer for the most dangerous jobs with heart-in-the-mouth excitement which was assurance that the task would be done.

DISCIPLINE APPARENT

It was not till the bitter fighting came, not till the men saw their dead, not till the idealist saw his best friend lying slashed and bloody and crushed, that adventuring zest gave way to a cold, grim sense of duty and a belief in ruthless discipline. Tempered and hardened in the fires of battle, the unit would become as trustworthy as the most famous Legions and Guards in the annals of the world. It would see and condemn the blunders of those in command but still carry on as best it could. The British nation, it seems to me, is now reaching the same efficient kind of discipline. And this also is well worth while.

This state of mind has expressed itself in a much more critical attitude toward those set in authority over us. Not that we have lost faith in Mr. Churchill. American comment apparently based on such a thesis, recently caused us surprise bordering upon bewilderment. Mr. Churchill wields to this day, in spite of all disaster and hardships, an uplifting and sustaining influence over almost all the millions of the British people.

Most of us have said from time to time that this magical prestige could not last. We have told ourselves we expected too much of a mortal man, and that if disaster came he would be blamed, and blamed furiously, just as others, hailed at first as inspired leaders, had been blamed in the hour of icy-heated disillusionment. But Winston Churchill remains our trusted leader. He is without question and by all odds the best man we could possibly have at this juncture.

CHURCHILL A SYMBOL

Mr. Churchill not only symbolizes but also directs with unflagging zest our tense effort to carry on the war till we reach the breathless far end. He is our warrior-hero to a far greater extent than David Lloyd George was in the most critical years of the First World War.

But we do not expect eloquence to sustain us as it did after Dunkirk. No enthusiast today would hail a speech by the Prime Minister as equivalent to a victorious army corps. Polished periods are today no substitute for victory. Our problem is now a far different one from that which we had to solve, and did solve, when France so unexpectedly and bewilderingly fell.

Mr. Churchill then made a noble appeal to the people, and the people's answer was quick and manly. None of us who then carried on under the bombs, night after night, and felt the surge of the onset of those days, will ever forget how Britain rose to the challenge. Americans know from the splendid and fearless work of their newspaper correspondents how there was a new birth of devotion to our country and faith in her future, and how in danger we stood mentally shoulder to shoulder. The old difference between the Chamberlainite and the Churchillite finally faded out of sight.

Our problem today is not one to be solved by appeals, however nobly phrased, to the mass of the citizens. We have begun to go on the assumptions that this will be the most critical year of the war, but will not bring final victory, and that, while we can count on the United States and Russia for gigantic help, we must prepare without the loss of a single hour or the misuse of a single worker for a long struggle. We must all be war-minded; that is, we must visualize the new kind of war clearly and do our utmost to meet the heavy demands it will assuredly lay upon us all.

The main task of preparation must lie within the powers of those at the top. They need not fear to ask us for more. No Cabinet Minister in this country has been unpopular at any time during this struggle because he was too exacting. It is those who say smooth things, foster complacent illusions and grandly wave aside peril who have angered the people.

ACTION DEMANDED

Feeling in the House of Commons as I have watched it lately has made it clear that the electors want rigorous action, especially an end to go-as-you-please among luxury-lovers, to trivial punishment of "black market" profiteers, to circumlocutory bureaucratic delays, under which we groan; to the all-to-ready forgiveness of inefficiency.

An equitable wages policy is also increasingly demanded. Perhaps a clearer and more inspiring view of war aims will help us too. But such efforts, though they would allay harsh feeling and resolve some doubts, would leave a great many people still far from war-minded, since those I mean are making only small adjustments to their point of view. They endure war as an inconvenience; they do not share in it as a crusade and this, of course, is not as it should be.

Harsh war conditions cry out for a more tense, devoted spirit on the home front. We started the war with the usual uprush of emotion. Any patriotic appeal melted our hearts. We were ready with subscriptions to good causes. But as time has gone on, that mood has been sorely tried. We have all suffered more or less from war strain. Taxation has done much to cripple the generous impulse.

COMPULSION NEEDED

The majority of British people at home are working hard, honorably and even heroically, but there is a minority—there must, it seems, always be a minority—that must be taken in hand and if it cannot be persuaded it must be compelled to do its duty.

A commonplace of present-day political speaking is that we need more drive. We begin to see what this means: we need more driving. It is a notable fact, which has not always been brought out clearly in leading articles and cables in the day-by-day rush of events, that Britain, reflecting, has assumed a much more serious attitude toward the war, and that a great many citizens now call upon the leaders of their government for more compulsion to improve our war effort.

The British people, though bitterly disappointed by military failures, are not half-hearted about fighting. They are ready to endure sterner control in order to get more power and might into action against our foes.

• April a Month of Portents

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, April 6 —(AP)—As April, the historical war month, opens a new chapter for sombre significance, there is a baffling babble of prediction about where its main scene will be laid.

A new disaster in Burma for the United Nations—the loss of a great oil reservoir—seems to impend, but there are brightening skies on the Australian flank of the Pacific-Indian Ocean war front. The first meeting of the Pacific War Council in Washington, with President Roosevelt presiding, revealed nothing of its deliberations or planning; but following it was a wave of rising optimism over ability to hold the Japanese at bay and prepare a counter attack in Australia.

That confidence strongly underscores every Washington development, to give a silver tinge to otherwise dark war clouds to westward. General MacArthur shares it. If he didn't, he would not have assented to his assignment as supreme commander in Australia. He would have preferred otherwise to stay with his troops on Bataan.

PREMATURE DEMANDS

In Europe, except for probably premature demands in Britain for an immediate counter-offensive against Hitler by land as well as by sea and air, the initiative rests with the Nazi warlord. Hope is waning that Russian armies can decisively clinch their winter gains by capturing key points still in German hands.

Moscow still forecasts enlarged victories. Hitler's own terse war bulletins are the best possible evidence that Red Army elan is undiminished. The Russians are still on the attack all along the front, nibbling at Nazi reserves, threatening Nazi strong points. Yet the Red Army seems now waging a war of attrition rather than fighting toward definite strategic goals. And the effect of that attrition campaign on Hitler's resources, the degree to which it may have sapped the striking power of his armies, cannot be measured until they strike.

The question, then, is both where and when Hitler will strike as April restores at least some degree of mobility to his armored battering-rams, the armored units. Hampered by mud, snow, sub-zero temperatures and now mud and flood again, tanks have been of limited value to either side since late fall.

And until the ground is hard enough in Russia for full use of tanks there seems small chance that the full scope of Hitler's promised offensive can develop.

HITLER'S FAVORITE MONTH

This April, nevertheless, seems certain to see the prelude of an attempted final Nazi victory drive. It is a favored Hitler month for the attack and in Southern Russia, in the Ukraine and Crimea, weather conditions should permit major operations before the end of April.

That controlling weather factor, plus Hitler's known need of oil, makes most observers look to the south for his first significant move. This might be in Russia, or through Turkey or around Turkey via the islands of the Aegean and the Eastern Mediterranean—coupled with a new Axis offensive against the British 8th Army in Libya.

But there are other possibilities. Growing concern in Scandinavia as to Nazi intentions is indicated. German attempts by sea and air to close the Murmansk - Archangel supply route to Russia, which her Finnish allies have failed to seal, is obvious. Neutral Sweden is mobilizing if not fully mobilized.

And Sweden is the road Hitler might take if he attempts the task of breaking Russian supply routes or outflanking Leningrad from Finland in preparation for his Russian "annihilation" campaign.

A Bit of Nonsense

A minister was asked by one of his least respectable parishioners to say prayers on Sunday for Anna Bell. He did so.

A few days later the pastor asked the church member if he wished the prayers for Anna Bell to be repeated. "No, thank you kindly," answered the man. "She won last Wednesday at seven to one."

HOW TO WIN

THE best-known example of sure-fire, copper-riveted prophecy is the reply which the Delphic oracle gave King Croesus of Lydia. The oracle said that if Croesus attacked Persia he would destroy a great nation. Croesus attacked, suffered defeat and destroyed his own kingdom. Delphi could not have played it safer.

Modern prophets do not go in for ambiguity. They use the simpler and bolder method of simultaneously predicting yes and no, victory and defeat. A is right and B is right. On the same page or even in the same chapter these contradictions might give the reader pause. But in a moderately large book the opposites can be kept sufficiently far apart. After the event we turn to the appropriate page and find the author's wonderful foresight. The other inconvenient pages are forgotten.—New York Times.

WARNS OF UNIFORM'S LURE

DR. Sara Stinchfield-Hawk, instructor in a new University of Southern California course on problems of the war bride, offered these suggestions to co-eds:

"Beware of the glamour of the uniform. It dramatizes romance in a way it would not in time of peace.

"Girls should avoid taking a 'noble sacrifice' attitude in marrying a service man during wartime. This does not augur well for the future.

"It's best to know a man for more years than the time he has worn a uniform. Then don't marry without talking it over with your parents.

"Most important of all: Marriage as a widow is less likely than if a girl is single. Most men do not care to support other men's children."—New York Times.

Hard To Believe How Time Flies

APRIL 6

1912 Spring floods cause considerable inconvenience in several sections of the city with Aylmer street north flooded by the failure of the Argyle street drain to function.

A Bible Message For Today . . .

And the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem, and found in the temple those that sold oxen and sheep and doves, and the changers of money sitting: and when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables; and said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise....

Then answered the Jews and said unto him, What sign shewest thou us, seeing that thou doest these things? Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days? But he spake of the temple of his body.

When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.—John, ii, 18-22.

Edna Playfair Is Wed To Clifford Wrightly

HAVELOCK, April 6 (ENS). — A quiet but pretty wedding took place in the United Church, Smith Falls, on Good Friday at 10 a.m., when Miss Edna Playfair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Playfair, was united in marriage to Mr. Clifford Nelson, formerly of Havelock, and second son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wrightly. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Tanten, and Miss Jean Frances played the wedding march.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attired in a navy tailored suit, with contrasting hat, veil and shoes, and she wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. Her bridesmaid was Miss Madeline Taylor, Smith Falls, who wore a grey tailored suit, with navy blue accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

A reception was held at the bride's home for the immedia: members of each family. The bride's mother received, wearing a grey tailored suit with a corsage of rose buds. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who wore a teal blue dress with navy accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The bride and groom left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto and points West, and on their return will reside in Smith Falls, and their many friends in Havelock extend congratulations for a long and happy wedded life.

Sacred Heart CWL Elects Officers At Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Sacred Heart Subdivision C.W.L. was held in the parish club house. The president, Mrs. B Law, opened the meeting and the recording secretary, Mrs. H. Connelly, read the annual report of the year'. activities.

The membership, under the leadership of Mrs. O. Halloran, has increased to 307. Mrs. Willis, assisted by Mrs. J. Grady, is convener of education, visited the school, and ten dollars was donated for the needs of the pupils. Red Cross work under the convenership of Mrs. F. Collins, ably assisted by Mrs. Willis, Mrs. H. Duffus and a great many members, had six gowns and five quilts completed. Gifts were sent overseas to soldiers of the parish. A bale of used clothing and literature was sent to the northern parishes.

A number of members, under leadership of Mrs. F. McCarthy, assisted at the salvage depot, five members giving their services one afternoon a week. In parish work the league assisted at the annual social and gave service in the canteen. Days of special prayer were held on feast of Our Lady of Good Council and Immaculate Conception. The sick were visited and rosaries were said at the homes of the deceased. A number of members called on new citizens.

The financial statement, read by Mrs. G. Fleming, gave a complete report of receipts and expenditures, leaving a satisfactory balance to continue activities.

Rev. Father Hoolihan, who has been giving instruction in Christian doctrine, spoke on Holy Week. The retiring president, Mrs. Law, thanked the members of the executive for their splendid co-operation and her enjoyment of her two years in office.

A beautiful quilt has been donated by Mrs. Duffus, and an afghan by Mrs. J. Gagnon, towards raising of funds. Mrs. Law then called on Mrs. J. McCarthy, convener of the nominating committee, to take the chair. The nominations were as follows:

Chaplain, Rev. J. J. O'Brien; Past President, Mrs. B. Law; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. Hallihan, Mrs. F. Collins, Mrs. H. Duffus; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. J. Grady; Recording Secretary, Mrs. G. Fleming; Treasurer, Miss Mabel Desautel; Councillors, Mrs. Willis, Mrs. Zbernowsky, Mrs. F. McCarthy, Mrs. Lajoie, Mrs. V. Grady, Mrs. E. La Plante

The new officers were installed, and a few words of thanks were tendered by Mrs. Connelly with hopes for the next yea-

Parker—Robertson

CAMPBELLFORD, April 6 (ENS). —A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. John's parsonage at two o'clock on Thursday, when Minta Isobel, daughter of Mrs. John Robertson and the late Mr. Robertson became the bride of Milford T. Parker, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Parke of Nowood. Rev. G. N. Maxwell officiated. The bride wore a floor length gown of baby blue net over crepe with a richly raced bolero jacket with puffed sleeves. Her waist length veil was caught with a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and fern. Miss Madeline Robertson was her sister's bridesmaid and she chose soldier blue taffeta crepe with white hat and gloves and silver and black shoes. Mr. Raymond Rogers of Norwood assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner and reception was held at the home of the bride's mother and later the couple left on a trip to Toronto and Hamilton, and on their return they will reside in Norwood.

Shetler—Thompson

The wedding was quietly solemnized on Saturday of Helen Junia, eldest daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Thompson, and Reginald Ross Shetler, of Shannonville, in George Street United church, with Rev. H. L. Roberts officiating.

The bride wore a grey tailored suit with navy accessories and a silver fox fur, the gift of the groom. She wore a corsage of sweet peas and carnations. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Bonney, of Peterborough

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of Mr and Mrs. Bonney, 711 Water street, following which the happy couple left by motor for Montreal and points east. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Shannonville.

Celebrate Silver Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Henry were at home to their friends on Saturday afternoon and evening on the occasion of their silver wedding anniversary. Mrs. Henry received her guests dressed in a gown of fuchsia shade and wearing a corsage of Talisman roses. The rooms were adorned with spring flowers, potted plants and ferns, and pussy willows with birds in Easter colors perched on them.

Mrs. F. Barlow of Havelock poured tea at a table covered with a Quaker lace cloth and adorned with mauve and yellow streamers at the end of which fluffy chicks stood guard over nests of yellow eggs. In the centre of the table stood a lovely yellow and mauve bowl of daffodils and tulips. Mrs. H. Rigby of Toronto, Miss Norma Adlam and Miss Leah Davis waited on the guests, wearing midnight blue dresses with corsages of pink roses. Mrs. L. S. Adlam opened the door and the guests were shown to the tea room by Mrs. D. McEwen. Mrs. Henry's gifts included a beautiful silver tea service, the gift of her husband.

Save Old Socks For Kinettes

Have you ever wondered if something could be done with the tops of old socks and woollen gloves and the unworn parts of old sweaters? Or have you just blithely tossed the tops of your husband's old socks out along with the darned and worn out feet, without giving it a further thought?

In many cases the latter will probably be nearer the truth. We Canadians have never been a frugal people. We have had so much of this world's goods that we have been wasteful. Now we must learn to economize and the Peterborough Kinettes have shown us the way to use up old woollen socks and sweaters. If you haven't seen it already, go and look at the soft warm afghan made from the tops of old socks, which is on display in Grant and Loucks window. It is double thickness and is most attractive to look at, and it was made from things most of us throw away without thinking about.

The chief work of the Kinettes is still, of course, their work for the Milk for Britain Fund. Any small expense that occurs in the making of these afghans is met from a small fee levied at the meetings, and materials are donated by the members. None of the money raised for, or donated to, the Milk for Britain Fund is used for anything else.

Now the Kinettes need more materials and they think that house-cleaning time would be a good time for you to get rid of those old socks and sweaters you've been hoarding. Please don't bother to cut them up. The ladies prefer to do that themselves, as they made use of everything. Good pieces too small for afghans are made into patchwork quilts; and the feet as well as any small scraps, are sent to the salvage depot.

When you have your contribution ready, Dial 9161 or 4447 and arrangements will be made to pick up your donations. The quilts are sent to Britain through the I.O.D.E.

Baby Band Holds Easter Meeting

Mark Street Baby Band Mothers held their Easter meeting at the home of Mrs. K. Ferguson. The president, Mrs. H. Alton, opened the meeting with the thought, "The Risen Christ is vital assurance of our immortality." This was followed by prayer by Mrs. E. Rowland, president of the W.M.S. A story, "The Old Rugged Cross," telling how this song came to be written, was told by Mrs. W. King. Mrs. J. Brown conveyed a beautiful thought in a clipping, "The Liberator." An orchestra comprised of Noel Easson, Alec McLeod, Jean DeNure and Murrel Dauncey, played "The Old Rugged Cross."

Reports showed the work well advanced and a unique display of Easter baskets, numbering 88, pointed to the splendid work of the Baby Band Mothers. Mrs. H. Rehill, of the Presbyterial, gave an inspiring message on missions in Canada, touching on work among new Canadians, the Church of All Nations and how the work is brought into the homes through Sunday schools and hospitals. The meeting closed with prayer by the president and refreshments were served by Mrs. Hendren and her committee.

Marmora

Among week-end guests are Miss Beatrice Caldwell and Miss Marion Piggott, R.N., of Toronto, with Rural Dean and Mrs. A. Caldwell; Miss Peggy Murray, of Ottawa, with Mr. and Mrs. John Murray.

Miss Josephine Paquet, of Notre Dame Convent, Montreal, is spending Easter holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Paquet.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Burwash and daughter, Audrey, spent Friday in Toronto.

Easter guests included Miss Mary Murray of oronto with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Murray and Miss Teresa Sullivan of Toronto with her sisters, the Misses Sullivan.

Edna A. Haig Weds Charles Byam

HAVELOCK, April 6 (ENS)—A very pretty spring wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Haig, Concessio Street, Havelock, on Saturday, when their youngest daughter, Edna Adelaide, was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Morley Byam, son of Mrs. M. Cochrane and the late Charles F. Byam, Toronto. Rev. J. W. Wilkinson officiated in the presence of about 80 guests. The wedding music was played by an aunt of the bride, Mrs. Hattie Hawley, London.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and looked charming in a floor length gown of heavenly blue suede lace over taffeta, silver slippers, and hat and veil to match. She carried a bouquet of red Talisman roses and fern, tied with satin ribbon. She was attended by her only sister, Mrs. Lynn Anderson, Toronto, as matron of honor, who was dressed in a floor length gown of burgundy Chantilly lace over taffeta, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of yellow Briarcliffe roses. The groom was assisted by Mr. Ellson Varcoe, Oshawa.

The wedding dinner was served by the Women's Association at the United Church, which was picturesquely decorated in pink and white. A reception was held in the bride's home, which was most attractive with spring flowers and ferns. The bride's mother received, wearing a grown of Churchill blue sheer, with hat to match, and a corsage of rose-buds. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a grey sheer frock and hat to match, with a corsage of orchids and lily-of-the-valley.

Later the bridal couple left, amid showers of confetti and good wishes, for eastern points. For travelling, the bride wore a dressmaker suit of wool boucle in skyline blue with accessories to match. On their return they will live on Logan Avenue, Toronto.

Out-of-town guests were present from Oshawa, Toronto, London, Chatham, Norwood, Bowmanville, Brampton and Akron, Ohio.

Evelyn Carpenter Marries Maurice Dixon

A very pretty wedding took place on Friday, when Evelyn May Carpenter, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Carpenter, was united in marriage with Maurice Dixon, youngest son of Mrs. W. C. Wilks. The Rev J H Sutcliffe performed the ceremony and wedding music was played by Mr Arthur Collison. During the signing of the register, Miss Phyllis Rome sang, "At Dawning." The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and spring flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of white sheer over taffeta, with a gathered bodice, a wide fitted waistline band, and a full skirt. She wore a finger-tip veil of white net and carried a bouquet of calla lilies. She was attended by Miss Irene Graham, who wore a gown of powder blue chiffon gathered at waistline and with short puffed sleeves. She wore lace mittens with a matching lace turban and carried a bouquet of red roses. Raymond Dixon was best man and the ushers were Arthur Cumming and Clayton Nolan.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, at which the bride's mother received, wearing a gown of heaven blue crepe and lace with a hat of navy felt, and a corsage of premier roses. The groom's mother also received, wearing a gown of ice-blue sheer in redingote style with a matching hat and a corsage of pink roses.

After the bride and groom left for a trip to Toronto and points west. For travelling the bride wore a printed silk jersey dress, a tweed coat and brown accessories. On their return they will live at 584 Chamberlain street.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon received many useful and beautiful gifts, among which were several substantial cheques.

WHY NOT INTRODUCE SOME DEMOCRACY IN THE HOME?
Teamwork Instead of Bossism or Dictatorship Will Bring More Happiness.

While we are all so steamed up and ready to fight, bleed and die to establish democracy in the world, what's the matter with introducing a little democracy in the home? Nobody seems to have thought of that; or, if they did, they realized that it would precipitate such a civil war that they lacked the nerve to tackle it. Yet, when all is said, domestic freedom is just as necessary to our happiness and well-being as is political freedom. As it now exists, the average home is an autocracy, established much along the lines that Hitler used in setting up his alleged benevolent despotisms over the countries he conquered, and it is ruled with an iron-handed tyranny that even the fuehrer has never surpassed. Although it is not romantic to speak of it it is true that the beginning of virtually every marriage is a struggle between a husband and wife for supremacy, and to this may be attributed most of the discord in families. For the conquered seldom give in gracefully and accept the theory that they are being ruled for their own good. They grow sullen and peevish in their slavery, and if their spirits have not been entirely crushed they are likely to make a break for freedom that lands them in the divorce court.

Sometimes in this fight over who shall rule the roost, the husband

THINK before you use so much SUGAR

THINK before you use two or three spoonfuls or lumps in your coffee or tea. Use less and stir thoroughly.

THINK before you make or ask for over-sweetened pies and puddings, frosted cakes and rich confections.

THINK before you use sugar extravagantly with tart fruits or cereals. A pinch of salt will save much sweetening.

THINK before you make sauces and icings. Use condensed milk, honey, syrup, or canned fruit juices to do part of the sweetening job.

The lawful allowance of sugar is ¾ pound per person per week. No one is allowed to have more than two weeks' supply on hand at any time, except in remote areas.

Jack Sords Sizes Up the Big League Teams

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian Writer

NEW YORK, March 31.—Despite a reported new spirit in their Miami Beach, Fla., training camp, and an aggressive new manager in John (Hans) Lobert, the lowly Phils apparently are doomed to another "bottom of the pile" fate in the National League this year.

Ten years ago the Phils finished in the first division. Since, they have wallowed in seventh and eighth place. The 1941 edition was the worst in the club's history, winning but 43 games against 111 losses for a percentage of .279.

The club was composed of many young, inexperienced players last season. A year's hitch in the big-time should make those youngsters better and wiser ball players this year.

A glance at the Phil roster in the Miami Beach camp discloses several new faces. If Lobert can find a few winning pitchers, which shouldn't be so difficult considering the many fine pitchers the Phils have come up with—and then sold—perhaps the club can make a better fight for a higher berth than the cellar spot.

The Phils have had some outstanding hurlers in recent years, to wit: Kirby Higbe, Claude Passeau and Hugh Mulcahy. Passeau and Higbe were sold for big chunks of cash, and Mulcahy is in the army.

Best hurlers on the club last season were Johnny Podgajny, the big Chester, Pa., righthander, who won but nine games against 12 losses, and Tom Hughes, another Pennsylvania product, who won nine games against 14 losses. Ike Pearson, the busiest of the Phil moundsmen, won but four games against 14 losses.

Dispatches from the training camp indicate the young hurling corps will be headed by Podgajny, Hughes and the southpaw, Frank Hoerst. Silas Johnson, 34 years old, and Cy Blanton, the one-time Pirate star, probably will be the other starting moundsmen. Lee Grissom, Walter Beck and big Rube Melton, the last-named a six-foot five-inch giants, complete the veteran list. Sam Nahem, once in the Cardinal chain, and Andy Lapihuska, from Allentown, are rookies in camp.

Only addition to the catching staff is Bill Peterman, a 20-year-old youngster from Wausau, who hit .336 in 109 games for that Northern league team last season. The other catchers are Ben Warren, No. 1 receiver; Thomas Livingston and Bill Harman, none of whom has shown any ability at the plate. Warren is hitting better in the training camp, according to reports.

In the outfield, Joe Marty and Johnny Rizzo, regular gardeners last season, are gone. Marty is in the servicce and Rizzo was sold to the Dodgers last December.

Returning regulars are Stan Benjamin, who is competing against several rookies for the right field post; Danny Litwhiler, one of the club's two .300 hitters in 1941, and Lloyd Waner, who spent last season with the Pirates, Braves and Reds.

Litwhiler is the left fielder and Waner will play centre. Rookie competitors are Paul Busby, from Martinsville; Earl Naylor, a .305 hitter at Memphis, and Ronald Northey, who played with Williamsport last year.

The Phil infield probably will line up with Nick Etten, .311 hitter last season, at first; Bob Bragan at short and Merrill May at third. Second base apparently is wide open, with Danny Murtaugh and Harry Marnie from last year's team and the rookies Alban Glossop, Bill Burich, Ed. Hodge and Dan Reynolds being tested for the keystone sack. Glossop, who once played with Cincinnati and who hit .301 for Kansas City last year, appears to have the best chance of getting steady work.

Capitals Win American Title

INDIANAPOLIS, April 6—(AP).—Indianapolis Capitals won their first American Hockey League championship last night with a flourish, thumping Hershey Bears 8-3 in their fifth and deciding game of the Calder Cup series, before 8,867 fans.

The Caps pumped in three goals in 51 seconds midway in the first period, added three more in the second and poked in two more in the last 20 minutes. Hershey got one in the first period and two in the third.

Jack Keating and Les Douglas of Indianapolis, already holding a new scoring record for the championship playoffs, added four points apiece for a total of 21 each. Billy Taylor of Pittsburg, set the old mark of 12 points in the 1940 series.

Baseball Training Camp Notes

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., April 6—(AP).—Big Paul Derringer, Cincinnati's Opening-Day hurler the last two seasons, is recuperating from a heavy cold and a slight touch of pleurisy.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Washington's Senators said goodbye today to their Spring training quarters at Orlando and headed northward, stopping off here for another game with Philadelphia Phils, the team they defeated 7-1 yesterday. Bruce Campbell, newly named clean-up hitter, drove in four runs.

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—New York Yankees met Brooklyn Dodgers today minus the master-minding of Manager Joe McCarthy, who is in Philadelphia attending the funeral of his brother. McCarthy will rejoin the club Wednesday at Baltimore.

GREENVILLE, Miss.—Big Johnny Mize, taking cognizance of New York Gaints' fears that he had lost his hitting prowess, said today, "I won't see why anyone is worrying. I never hit in the Spring. I can recall hitting only two home runs in all the Spring games I have played."

LAKELAND, Fla.—Detroit Tigers broke camp today and headed for North Carolina. They open a three-game series with St. Louis Cardinals at Durham tomorrow, then tangle with Cincinnati Reds in a similar three-game series.

Deland, Fla.—Maybe Manager Luke Sewell of St. Louis Browns is directing the successors to Chicago White Sox as the hitless wonders. The Brownies got only four hits in yesterday's fray with the Boston Braves but triumphed, 3-1.

GREENVILLE, Mass.—As Cleveland Indians rejoined New York Giants today for their joint trip north, Manager Lou Boudreau indicated that either Jim Bagby or Al Milnar would hurl the American League opener against Detroit Tigers.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.—Chicago White Sox defeated Chicago Cubs again yesterday, 9-2, and now lead five games to two on their trek to the Windy City.

NEW YORK, April 6—(AP). — Why wouldn't it be logical to stage next Summer's heavyweight title fight between Private Joe 'Louis and Private Billy Conn at Soldier Field, Chicago? . . . . But if we know Mike Jacobs and his liking for running things right in his own backyard, there's about as much chance that it will be staged at MacArthur, Ohio . . . . SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

Jack Adams is a man of his word. He told the Toronto newspapermen there would be plenty of sock in Saturday night's Stanley Cup game and the Red Wings really lived up to that promise. They hit the Leafs with everything except the goal posts and the stick bag and they weren't a bit choosey about where they hit them. It wasn't a case of waiting until the Toronto puck carrier steamed across the Detroit blue line and then piling into him. The Wings bumped into the Leafs in the Toronto defence area or in the neutral zone with the same enthusiasm as they crashed them in front of Mowers. Interlarded with all this bumping the Detroiters kept firing the puck into Toronto territory and battling for it there. It was not pretty hockey—perhaps it was not hockey at all—but it was effective and the Leafs who looked so good against the stream-lined checkerboard passing of the New York Rangers were knocked back on their heels so often that they were punchy in the third period and failed to take advantage of the fact that the Red Wings were short-handed for seven out of the last 20 minutes.

* * * * * *

It is a best four-of-seven series and one victory for Detroit does not mean that the Leafs are on their way out. However it could be exactly that for the Red Wings have been invincible on their own ice for the last twelve games and three out of the next five Stanley Cup fixtures are billed for Detroit. Losing their first home game was disastrous for the New York Rangers and by the same token the 3 to 2 victory of Detroit on Saturday night might be equally serious for the Leafs. On the season's record the Wings do not rate beating the Toronto gang but form goes out the window in these playoff battles. The simple fact is that Jack Adams' team won the first game on Toronto ice and the Don Grosso-Syd Abel-Eddie Wares trio was by far the most effective forward combination out there Saturday night, having a big edge on the Leafs' ace line. Grosso fired two goals and Abel was responsible for the third while the Apps-Drillon-Metz line failed to hang up a marker. The second game will be played in Toronto tomorrow night, after which the teams will jump to Detroit for two fixtures. Tomorrow's game is likely to be another dog fight.

Packing of army and air force hockey and basketball teams has been drawing some caustic comment. The following taken from Bill Walshe's Kingston Whig-Standard sport column is a sample of the criticism that is being voiced: "Don Brown, an official of the Windsor basketball team, registered the following complaint this week in the Windsor Star about the Ontario cage finals: The same situation which was evident in hockey circles until the C.A.H.A. clamped down, has shown its unpopular head in the centre of the O.A.B.A. senior playoffs. That is the switching of players by the R.C.A.F. to strengthen certain clubs for playoff games. One case in respect to the Air Force hockey team was the transfer of George Snell from Winnipeg to the Ottawa club, which is in the middle of the Eastern Canada finals now. Without much stretching of one's mental capacity, it appears clear that a carbon copy movement has been made in respect to the R.C.A.F.'s basketball team stationed at Belleville. The lineup shows several changes since the team first entered the O.A.B.A. playoff bracket against Toronto a few weeks back. The latest instance was the change of Stan Jackson from Toronto to Trenton last week to make him eligible for the game in Belleville on Saturday night. Jackson, a former University of British Columbia luminary, was the main reason the Alumni was defeated. He scored 16 points. While everyone likes to see our armed forces successful in the field of sport as well as the field of warfare, one questions the meaning of the word when such movements are allowed to proceed unchecked. Of course, there is the possibility that Jackson's exchange was legitimate and on the up-and-up. But the circumstances surrounding the happenings of the last week tend to cast a shadow of suspicion on the whole thing. The Air Force lost the opening game here just a few days before Jackson reported for duty at the Trenton base."

* * * * * *

The Walshe comment on the above is as follows: "Hamilton Majors ran into one soldier player on three different teams during the schedule and playoffs. He was no sooner eliminated with one club than he popped up on another, in fact the O.H.A. champions probably got so tired trying to knock him out that they finally gave up. The main trouble about packing teams by timely service moves is the bad impression it makes on the general public. Airmen, soldiers and sailors have a big job to do and they are doing it well but there is the danger of the eternal critic complaining and there are too many complaints these days. For their own protection the the Service Forces should set up regulations that will check wide open packing although in a year or so all the players of any class will likely be in the Active Forces and all the sports will be controlled by the Air Force, Army or Navy."

Referee King Clancy is being criticized in Toronto because of a goal scored by Pete Langelle that was disallowed. Orlando, the rugged Detroit defence man had crashed Goldham into the boards and Clancy blew his whistle. Meanwhile, Langelle had picked up the loose puck and gone in and scored—after the whistle of course. Toronto contention is that he should have allowed the play to go through before he sounded the whistle. Vern DeGeer in the Globe and Mail says that Referee Clancy told the Toronto management afterward that he sounded his bugle because he figured that Goldham was badly hurt. "He didn't explain," complains DeGeer "why he had disregarded a cardinal hockey rule requiring a play to be completed by a non-offending club before sounding his siren." There is another cardinal hockey rule that Mr. DeGeer is forgetting, however. If Clancy stopped the play because he believed Goldham had been injured then he would have to stop it while Leafs were in possession of the rubber. The rules are quite clear that play is not to be stopped in the event of an injury if the puck is held by a player of the opposing team. So Clancy was quite right Saturday night if his reason for stopping was the apparent injury to Goldham. Of course if he merely stopped action to impose a penalty he should have allowed the play to go through.

Peterborough football players and fans will be sorry to hear of the tragic death of Tommy Burns, well known Montreal line star who was instantly killed in an accident on a dredge at Liverpool, Nova Scotia. When the Orfuns were in the senior loop Burns played against them in a Montreal uniform and the big fellow commanded a lot of respect from the Petes players. He could hit a line plenty hard and defensively he was a tower of strength. He had won Eastern all-star rating a number of years with Argos and Montreal. He was a hard fighter on the gridiron but a good fellow as soon as the battle was over.

SENTENCED!
CHAPTER X

No side-winder ever struck faster than Allan Steele. He pivoted in his own length on the ground and came to his feet in the same swift movement. His foreward leap and an upward thust of his powerful left arm knocked aside the barrel of the menacing rifle. It exploded harmlessly. He swung a haymaker with his right which would have torn the East Indian's head from his shoulders if it had found the mark.

Probably the fellow was unprepared for any resistance at all, let alone a counter-attack so dynamic. Perhaps his orders were not to shoot unless necessary. He gave ground almost automatically, and gave it barely in time to escape the looping fist which buzzed by his nose. He shouted something in Japanese, then went spinning into a patch of cactus as Allan's left reached his jaw in an uppercut full of authority.

If the Japanese words were a command to close in, his six yellow henchmen had not waited for it. They rushed forward at Allan's first movement. One of them tripped over the Eurasian's rifle, another was knocked sprawling by the Eurasian himself in flight, a third folded up with a grunt and went to earth as Allan's knee drove his stomach against his spine and plastered it there.

But still there were three of the formidable Orientals left. They bored in, grim, silent, purposeful. Two leaped for Allan's arms, caught them and clung like leaches. The last man dove headlong to grasp his knees in a football tackle, but a well-aimed kick in the face diverted his aim. He sprawled, his arms still groping blindly for their objective.

By now the Eurasian was on his feet again, but standing prudently to one side. His hideous face even more repulsive from hate, he snapped orders in words that crackled. As if prodded by imaginary elephant gods, the temporarily disabled Japs sprang erect and tore in again like men possessed of fiends; they descended upon Allan with the impact of six battering-rams.

He fought them tooth and nail, also with elbows and knees and fists and feet. The knot of struggling men swayed this way and that, spinning around in a series of crazy circles. No sound came from the straining bodies except Allan's gasping breath and an occasional grunt, with a Japanese accent, as one of his desperate lunges connected with some vital spot in an enemy's anatomy.

His aim was to break loose for just one instant he needed to get out his automatic. He could not do it. He was fighting a 12-armed human octopus, and every time he broke the clinging grip of a single tentacle, two others replaced it.

By sheer weight and brute force, he rushed the sextet through the clump of pines and to the edge of the steep declivity. A moment the twisting group teetered on the brink; another saw them over it and pinwheeling down the sharp incline in a choking cloud of dust and rubble. Allan fared best of them all; in the center of the revolving mass, his protective covering of enemy bodies shielded his own from thorn and castus.

In the end, it was the Peninsula itself that beat him. At the foot of the hill something akin to a display of fireworks dazzled his brain; but before he could really appreciate the rockets, shooting stars and Roman candles, a curtain of blackness fell on the show.

Quite simply, his head had hit a rock with a force that nearly split them both . . .

He was stunned only momentarily, but that was enough for the pack of wolves who had pulled him down. He opened his eyes to find himself helpless, his arms lashed behind him at wrist and elbow. Two Japanese, breathing heavily, were sitting like leaded weights on each of his legs. The Eurasian stood above him, staring down vindictively.

"So you've come back to life," he commented, and drove a booted toe deep into Allan's side. "Believe me, it will be a pleasure to watch you go out of it again—presently!"

He added something to his men. The four who were holding Allan to the ground got up, raising him with them. He caught his balance uncertainly, still dizzy from the crack on his head, but he was able to control his limbs when his captors marched him around the base of the hill and down to the shore. They passed several squads of workmen, all Japanese, who merely stared at the party incuriously and went on about their business.

There seemed to be a whole fleet of small launches in the company's service. Allan and his seven keepers tumbled into one and headed for the largest island. He kept his eyes open as they putt-putted toward a dock, and apparently the Eurasian noted his alertness. A curt order from him in Japanese and one of the men produced a dirty yellow cloth which he wrapped about the prisoner's head, blindfolding him effectively.

He could not make much of his surroundings as he was guided ashore and led inland. There seemed to be a concrete path under his feet. The sound of many chattering voices indicated quite a crowd had turned out to inspect him. Flattering, but unsatisfactory; a little while before he had been wishing he knew soils; now he was regretting his education had stopped short of the Japanese language.

Presently the party halted. Allan heard a door unlocked and opened. They passed through and the door was shut behind with a rattle of bars and a metallic clang that suggested iron. A short walk—he counted 10 paces—then down a flight of 10 stone steps. Another door, complete with sound effects of bars and metal. Another stairway, again leading down, and another stone-flagged passage. He was reminded unhappily of a movie he had once seen in which a man was taken down into the bowels of the earth and left to rot in a medieval dungeon.

Another door, and when this was unbarred and swung open, he sensed a change in the light even through his bandage. He felt he was in a room, brilliantly illuminated even if 30 feet underground.

A voice spoke in Japanese. The cloth was whipped from his eyes. He was in a comfortably furnished room, equipped like any modern office and lighted by electricity from an overhead fixture. The company, he reflected, must have its own dynamos. He was noticing such details—noticing everything and storing it in his memory against a time such data might be useful. He was down but not yet out; his mind was active and fighting even if his body was helpless.

He was standing in front of a flat-top mahogany desk, the Eurasian on one side of him, a guard on the other. The rest of the capture-party, he supposed, must have dropped out somewhere en route. Two middle-aged Japanese were seated in chairs behind the desk, one of them in a well-cut uniform. It was he who came briskly to the matter in hand, speaking good Spanish in a high-pitched voice.

"You are Senor Allan Steele? American? Here to photograph the Peninsula for a magazine?" Allan inclined his head to each query, though they were more statements of fact than questions. "I am Colonel Wantanabe, of the Japanese Army. This is my colleague, Dr. Ishizuka, of the Tokyo Academy of Science."

Allan bowed. The pair rose as one man and bowed back.

"I regret, Senor Steele," went on Watanabe, "that your enthusiasm for photography should have led you to a hilltop from which you were observing our little settlement through a pair of field glasses." The offending glasses were on the desk before him, together with Allan's automatic. "I further regret, senor, that you thereby intruded on a privacy we deem essential to our safety." Watanabe paused as if to give emphasis to his next words. "The penalty for your transgression, senor, is—death."

Ottawa Flyers Defeat Aces In First Game

MONTREAL, April 6. —(CP). — Prior to the start of the Eastern Canadian senior hockey final, Coach Bill Touhey of Ottawa Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers went on record with the prediction that his club would defeat Quebec Aces. And now that the Flyers have won the first game he'd like to double that forecast—"in spades."

After the Flyers trooped off the ice here Saturday night with a 3-2 victory in the opening game of the best of five series, Touhey declared that he was "doubly certain of winning the round now." The Flyers' coach said that he was certain before the start of the game that "we'd take the series—and I can't see any reason to change my mind now."

Win In Three Straight.

Touhey left the impression, although he didn't come right out and say so, that he considers his Airmen good enough to take the Aces in three straight games. The second game is being played in Ottawa tomorrow night with the third game scheduled for Montreal on Thursday night.

Saturday night's contest produced a number of stars for the flyers, with the most prominent being Pickles MacNichol, Goalie Len Pinke, Jack Cain and the two-thirds of the Kraut line now in action with the Airmen—Milt Schmidt and Woody Dumart. Eddie Bruneteau stood out for the Aces, along with Billy Reay, Mike McMahon and Goalie Lionel Bouvrette.

Scored Two For Flyers

MacNichol fired home two of the Flyers' goals while the other went to Buddy Hellyer. Both Quebec goals were scored by Bruneteau. All three goals by the Airmen were scored while men were in the penalty box, with two of them—the ones by MacNichol—coming while the Ottawans were shorthanded.

MacNichol scored his first goal while Cain was serving a minor. MacNichol raced up the rink after a puck that had been iced, snared the disc from McMahon and then coasted in all alone on Bouvrette. On his other goal, the one that won the game, he broke away from a Quebec power play while El Campbell was off for elbowing and raced the length of the rink for the score.

Hellyer pushed home the puck while Butch Stahan of the Aces was off for charging. Bruneteau got his first goal while Schmidt and McMahon were in the penalty box for separate misdemeanors and his second on a bullet-like shot from about 20 feet out.

Schmidt and Dumart failed to pick up any scoring points but their all-round play helped a great deal in the victory. Besides working up front they also saw plenty of service on defence since Touhey dressed only Cain and Walter Murray of his rearguards.

DETROIT RED WINGS TAKE FIRST STANLEY CUP GAME FROM LEAFS

Toronto Team Must Change Tactics To Win

By DICK SHERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, April 6.—(CP)—Outsmarted in the first exchanges. Toronto Maple Leafs are almost certain to change their tactics when they meet Detroit Red Wings here tomorrow night in the second game of the Stanley Cup hockey finals.

The rugged Red Wings slapped the Leafs around with relish in the opening of the best-of-seven series here Saturday night to win 3-2 before 14,185 customers. It was rough hockey and the Leafs erred when they attempted to outrough their robust rivals.

Sweeney Schriner, who scored one of the Toronto goals, summed it up after the game as follows: "They made us play their kind of hockey and we were putrid. Next time we'll throw the puck around so much they'll be dizzy watching it."

The hard-charging Detroit crew were never behind after they piled into the Leafs for a goal in the first two minutes of play. This goal was the first of four scored in that session which ended in a 2-2 tie.

The defence tightened in the second and more than half the period had elapsed before Detroit got the goal that broke the deadlock and decided the game.

Grosso Scored Twice

Don (The Count) Grosso was the scoring star of the visitors with two tallies—the first and the last. Syd Abel got the other.

In addition to Schriner, Johnny McCreedy also scored for Toronto. It was McCreedy's fourth goal in the playoffs.

In addition to his two goals Grosso got an assist on Abel's tally to run his point-total in the playoff to nine—three more than his teammate, Carl Liscombe and Apps of Toronto who are tied for second.

Each club had a goal cancelled. Liscombe scored for Detroit early in the first period but Referee King Clancy ruled Mud Bruneteau was in the crease.

Pete Langelle scored early in the third only to learn that Clancy had blown his whistle to penalize Jimmy Orlando for cross-checking Bob Goldham near the Toronto blueline. Orlando got a major for drawing blood.

Coach Hap Day of the Leafs claimed later that Clancy should have alowed the play to be completed before penalizing Orlando.

"We were on the attack when Clancy blew his whistle and it cost us an important goal," said Day.

Aside from the good work of both goalies—Johnny Mowers, Detroit and Turk Broda, Toronto—the work of the Detroit rearguard during the third period was one of the features of the game.

During the five minutes Orlando was off the Leafs got through for only one real shot on Mowers and this came in the final minute of the penalty when Billy Tayor slipped through for a close-in drive.

They're Aiming At Pirate Outfield Job

Five outfielders, three of them rookies, are in the race for one of the outfield jobs with the Pittsburg Pirates this year. Detroit Fans "Shell Out" To Red Wings

TORONTO, April 6. — Back-slapping in hockey dressing-rooms is pretty commonplace. but when the hands that do the whacking contain crisp dollar bills there is absolutely no pain, and eight members of Detroit Red Wings are prepared to vouch for this contention.

There was the usual bedlam that accompanies victory when the Wings pulled off their togs after trimming Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 in the opener of the Stanley Cup finals here on Saturday night — and the boys had a trifle more than usual to celebrate. thanks the the philanthropy of Detroit't two most ardent fans.

That Man's in Again.

Harry Jacobson, No. 1 fan and a coal dealer when he's not following the Wings, raced into the dressing-room waving currency and promptly distributed $115. Not far behind was Fan No. 2 Dave Ferguson, a tool manufacturer, who shelled out the long green to the extent of $75.

Don (The Count) Grosso, marksman for two of Detroit's goals, counted $70 as his slice of the victory plum, while his line-mates, Syd Abel and Eddie Wares, received $45 and $20 respectively. Goalie Johnny Mowers gained $15, and all four defencemen. Jimmy Orlando, Jack Stewart, Eddie Bush, and Alex Motter were handed $10 each.

After only one game in a best-of-seven round its usually difficult to pry predictions from either side, but there's plenty of confidence in both camps as to the outcome of hockey's World Series which resumes here next Tuesday night.

Ebbie Goodfellow, Detroit coach, said the victory in the opener on Toronto ice is just what the Wings needed, and called his Redshirts to win the cup round in six games. He lauded the Wings' defensive play in the third period when they were shorthanded for seven minutes due to penalties and seldom allowed the Leafs to approach the Detroit net.

Leafs Not Downhearted.

In the Toronto dressing-room there was no merriment, but the players were not downhearted. Coach Happy Day thinks his team worked a bad game out of its system, and will even the series Tuesday night. He declined to call the length of the series, "but we'll take them all right."

"King Clancy (the referee) should have allowed play to continue when Pete Langelle shot that third-period goal which would have tied the score," said Day. "We were on the attack when Clancy blew his whistle to penalize Orlando. and it cost us an important goal."

Manager Jack Adams of the Wings jumped around like a colt as he roared at his charges: "Great stuff, fellows—you outgamed them right on their own ice—I guess we are not going to disgrace the National League after all." Adams then delightedly pointed to wall placards containing what he termed "belittling remarks" about the Wings by Toronto sports columnists.

"We licked them because we are a better club." said Motter. "A lot of people underrate us because we finished fifth in the league standing. We did didnt get started until late because the boss was experimenting to obtain a well-balanced team. But were hottest club in hockey right now and this series should end in six games."

Rookie Eddie Bush figures the Wings came through because "we played the kind of hard-checking game that the Leafs don't like—they were backing up when we hit them, and just wait till we get them on our own ice."

The Leafs just wanted to forget the game, and Dave Schriner summed up their feelings with: "They made us play their kind of hockey, and we were putrid. Next time we'll let them do the bumping and we'll throw the puck around so much they'll be dizzy watching it."

"We were becoming used to the Rangers' style and weren't set for the slap-bang stuff the Wings threw at us," said Wally Stanowski. "The Rangers didn't check much in our zone and these guys did. They didn't give us a chance to get organized, and we didn't have as much fight as they did. It will be different next time."

ONE FINAL TRIAL — by Jack Sords

Quakers Drop 4-3 Decision To Kimberley

By The Canadian Press.

Long hockey schedules and playoffs have sent all but four Western Canada teams to the sidelines today—the latest victims being Saskatoon Quakers, Saskatchewan Senior titlists; Lethbridge Maple Leafs, Alberta Senior champions; and Regina Abbotts, Saskatchewan Junior monarchs.

All three teams bowed out during the week-end, the two Senior sextets when Coaches Jimmy Arnott of Quakers and Pete Slobodian of Maple Leafs failed to succeed in their strategy of using six forwards on the offensive in the final minute of their games at Saskatoon and Lethbridge, respectively.

The Quakers dropped a 4-3 decision to Kimberley Dynamiters and Maple Leafs fell by the same score to Port Arthur Bearcats who got their victory margin when Lethbridge's goal-keeper, Andy Young, was replaced by the sixth forward.

For Kimberley, their entrance into the Western Canada Senior final agains Port Arthur Bearcats —a best of five series opening at Calgary Tuesday night—came three weeks after the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association gave them a new lease on life.

In the Junior section, Edmonton Maple Leafs walloped Regina Abbotts 4-0 in the fourth game of a scheduled best-of-five series, winning the round 2-1, with one game tied.

Maple Leafs arrived in Winnipeg early today and will begin a Western Canada final best-of-five series against the highly respected Portage La Prairie Terriers tonight.

General Mixup

Kimberley Dynamiters early in March were down 2-0, with one game tied, in a best-of-five Alberta-British Columbia League semi-final with Lethbridge Maple Leafs. Dynamiters announced intention to default the series and with approval of the C.A.H.A. the semi-final was "terminated" and Lethbridge advanced into the A.B.C. final.

Then Frank Sargent, vice-president of the C.A.H.A., ordered a Senior playoff in British Columbia when Victoria Navy requested that its team represent the province in Allan Cup play. Kimberley and Trail Smoke Eaters, also members of the A.B.C. League and also eliminated in playoffs, were asked to take part in the B.C. playdowns. Trail declined, but Kimberley accepted and defeated Victoria Navy 2-1 in a three-game series to advance against Saskatoon in a Western semi-final.

To win the fifth game against Saskatoon, Kimberley fought off a six-man Quaker offensive in the final minute of the game. Goalkeeper Stan Pickell was replaced by a forward, but smart netminding by Jakie Nash, formerly of Port Arthur, saved the contest.

Gordon Wilson scored twice for Kimberley and Sammy Calles and Playing Coach Ralph Redding, once each. Syd Fenn, Tony Leswick and Mel Neilsen scored for Saskatoon.

Six Forwards Used

At Lethbridge the Bearcats were ahead 3-2 when Goalkeeper Andy Young was removed for a sixth forward. Edgar Laprade scored what proved to be Port Arthur's victory margin, while Young was off in the last minute of the game. Lethbridge replied at 19:45 to make the final score 4-3.

Waikko Koivisto, Bobby Manahan and Bill McKenzie bagged the other Port Arthur counters which were matched by Walter Rimstad's pair and Mel Lunde's single tally.

In the Junior contest, Johnny Black, with two, Buzz Johnston and Russ Klesko scored for Edmonton Maple Leafs.

Tommy Burns Grid Star Fatally Hurt

LIVERPOOL, N. S., April 6—(CP) —Tommy Burns, veteran linesman with Quebec and Ontario football teams, was killed late Saturday in an accident here aboard a dredge on which he was working.

The 33-year-old Burns, who had played for many years with Montreal and Toronto teams, was believed to have met instant death when a whirling brake drum disintegrated beneath the dredge's deck and hurled chunks of metal in all directions. Several pieces struck Burns and severely injured another man.

Burns won Eastern all-star rating several times since he broke into senior football company with Montreal's Winged Wheelers when they won the Dominion championship in 1931. Later he played for two years in Toronto with Argonauts before returning to Montreal to play with Big Four clubs.

He joined Montreal Nationals of the Ontario Rugby Football Union in 1935, and was with Westmounts in the O.R.F.U. the next year. He returned to the Interprovincial Union with Montreal Clubs in 1940. Last fall he played in the first half of the schedule with Montreal Bulldogs.

Craft Being Dismantled

The athlete, who lived in Montreal had been employed since 1934 with the firm of J. P. Porter & Sons, owners of the dredge.

The craft on which he was killed was being dismantled at the time of the accident. Eighteen months ago it ran aground, and it had been recently refloated. It was lying near the mouth of Liverpool Harbor when Burns was killed.

Workmen had removed one of the tall, vertical "spuds" that dig into the bottom to anchor the vessel when it is dredging and they were engaged in taking off the second one. Burns was below deck in the "well" of the spud.

he spud was braked by a cable running to a drum. Suddenly the brake gave way and, as the spud plunged downward, it set the drum revolving at a speed so high the cylinder broke into pieces.

Funeral in Montreal

R. Fred Porter, Jr., a member of the firm, told a coroner's inquest last night he heard a crash and then saw the unconscious forms of Burns and Clarence Levy of nearby Mersey Point. The football player apparently was killed at once. A doctor who was rushed out by motorboat found him dead.

The inquest found that Burns had "died accidentally in the proper discharge of his duty." No blame was attached to any one.

Kingston Midgets Ontario Champs

TORONTO, April 6 — Kirkland Lake Juveniles and Kingston Midgets were crowned Provincial champions in their respective groups, in an Ontario Minor Hockey Association final doubleheader at Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday afternoon.

The Limestone City Saints fashioned an 8-3 decision over Owen Sound Crescent Greys in the opening game of the twin bill, while the Holy Name squad, Northern Ontario titlists, blanked Hollanders, Ottawa District champions, 8-0 in the nightcap.

Bill Moore Stars

Sparked by a four-goal scoring effort by their ace centre player, Bill Moore, Saints had little difficulty disposing of the lighter Crescent Greys. Moore completely stole the show with his brilliant playmaking and, in addition to his four tallies, set the stage for another pair. The Sounders fell down badly in the shooting department, and found Saints' stalwart defense of Silliman and Metcalfe a tough unit to crack. Wainwright with two and Jordan were the Owen Sound marksmen.

The Northerners proved worthy champions in the juvenile tilt as they romped through Hollanders for a one-sided victory. It was the second game in eighteen hours for the Holy Name squad, who qualified for the final by defeating Port Colborne 6-3 at Port Colborne, Friday night.

Heavy Offering Of Young Pigs On Farm Market

Probably the feature of the Easter Saturday market was such a prosaic product as young pigs, highly important in the war time economy of the country, instead of foods for the home tables on the gretat festal occasion of the celebration of the Resurrection.

More pigs, recently weaned, were seen on the market Saturday than on any other day in many years. One farmer brough in a whole truck load. Demand was indicated by one man's purchase of five for $32. Another breeder priced his lot, all seven weeks old, at two for $15. Another farmer was offering his six weeks old Yorkshires at $6 each. From $6 to $7.50 each seemed to be the price range.

Maple syrup held firmly at $2.75 a gallon with quite an ample supply in sight and a brisk demand.

Potatoes were $1.75 to $2 for table stock, and Erle Tuly was asking $2.25 and $2.50 for seed Cobbers and Chippewas.

Butter was 37 and 38 cents a pound with some baskets tagged at 36 cents. Eggs were 25 to 35 cents a dozen, slightly lower in price from the previous week. The most frequently mentioned prices were from 28 to 32 cents. The largest grades were down from 40 cents of last week to 37 cents.

Chickens were 27 to 32 cents a pound, broilers bringing, the top price at 32 cents and hens ranging from 26 to 30 cents, most of them at 28 cents.

Fresh pork sold at 19 and 21 cents a pound at E. A. Hunter's stand, and apples and vegetables were unchanged from recent prices. Norman Moncrief asked 60 cents a peck for Stark variety of apples, and J. H. Johnston had Bellflowers and Ganos at 65 cents.

One of the maple syrup producers was H. H. Fife of Norwood and another was J. H. Moon of Orillia. Their prices were $2.75 the gallon.

General's Son On Corregidor

Arthur MacArthur, baby son of General Douglas MacArthur, is pictured in his soldier's uniform, at the entrance to a tunnel on Corregidor island. This photograph was made while Arthur and his mother were still living on the island citadel, before they, together with his father, left for Australia.

New Two-Corps

there were no special Canadian tank formations. The 1st army is Canada's first venture in development of a specialized formation as large as an armored corps.

The expectation had been right along that Gen. McNaughton would command the new army upon its establishment. The belief is he will ultimately be promoted to full general's ranks.

Gen. Crerar, who reverted from rank of lieutenant-general to go overseas to take command of a division and subsequently assumed his lieutenant-generalcy again as acting corps commander, had been slated unofficially for command of the 1st corps of three infantry divisions.

The present commander of the overseas armored division, Maj.-Gen. E. W. Sansom, has been considered the probable choice for command of the new armored corps when it is set up.

Able To Operate Anywhere

The wording of today's defence department announcement on formation of 1st army headquarters was very similar to that used by Mr. King in his Jan. 26 speech, when he described the proposed two-corps set-up as "a thorough modern, well-balanced and hard-hitting Canadian overseas army."

"This army will be complete and self-contained," Mr. King said. "It will be capable of operating in any theatre and can be effectively maintained both in respect to manpower and equipment."

In the modern army establishment, the armored division operates independent of infantry and in operation may operate far ahead of the rest of the army, as did the German armored division in the drive through France and the Low Countries in the spring of 1940 and in other campaigns.

The army tank brigade, on the other hand, works in co-operation with infantry serving something the same purpose as cavalry used to before the day of mechanized warfare.

"One of the Best."

Gen. Crerar, 52, named to command one of the two corps which will constitute the 1st Army was described by Defence Headquarters as "one of Canada's best soldiers." While he was Chief of the General Staff—just before he went overseas—he shouldered a huge burden and responsibility.

After the present war began he was sent to England as senior combatant officer at Canadian Military Headquarters in London, and there made preparations for arrival of Canada's 1st Division. He also commanded Canadian troops not included in Gen. McNaughton's command, like permanent holding units, hospital services and Headquarters' troops.

Gen. Crerar, a native of Hamilton, was educated at Upper Canada College and Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont. He worked for a time with the Hydro-Electric in Toronto and when the First Great War broke out went overseas with the 1st Division as a field artillery officer. In June, 1918, he became staff officer, artillery, Canadian Corps a position previously filled by the officer who now is Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

In October, 1918, he was promoted to lieutenant-Colonel, and made corps counter battery staff officer, assuming the appointment previously held by Lt.-Col (now Lt.-Gen.) McNaughton.

Returning to Canåda after the war, Gen. Crerar decided on a military career, and in April, 1920, joined the permanent force and was appointed to the general staff at Ottawa. Later he attended the staff college, Camberley, England and served as a general staff officer for two years at the war office. London.

Returning to Canada in 1927 he commanded "B" Battery, Royal Canadian Heavy Artillery, was later appointed professor of tactics at R.M.C. and then went to Ottawa as general staff officer (operations). In 1935 he became director of military operations and intelligence at defence headquarters and three years later was named commandant at R.M.C.

Enlisted At 16

Gen. Turner, now on the 1st army staff, was born at Four Falls, N.B., and is 52. He was educated at New Brunswick normal school and University of New Brunswick.

He enlisted at 16 in the 3rd Field Company, Canadian Engineers, and served in France as a sergeant and sergeant-major, being commissioned in September, 1915. He was promoted to captain a year later.

His subsequent appointments included regimental and staff service and in May, 1918, he was promoted to major. He was mentioned in dispatches, awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal and the Military Cross and Bar.

In 1920 he was appointed to the permanent force with rank of captain, studied at the school of military engineering, Chatham, England and was an instructor in military engineering at R.M.C. He has been district engineering officer at M.D. 10 (Winnipeg), assistant director of engineering services at defence headquarters, general staff officer, grade 1, branch of the general staff, and general staff officer, M.D. 11 (Victoria).

When the second great war broke out he went overseas as general staff officer, Grade 1, with the 1st Division, was promoted to Colonel and later Brigadier, and on formation of the Canadian Corps was appointed Deputy Adjutant and Quartermaster-General of the Corps.

Began as a Sapper

Gen. Hertzberg, 55, was born at Toronto and began his military career as a sapper in the engineers of the non-permanent active militia—now the reserve army—in 1902, later being appointed to a commission.

In December, 1915, he was appointed Lieutenant in the Canadian Engineers, Canadian Expeditionary Force, proceeded overseas and went to France with the 7th Field Company. He was awarded the Military Cross in January, 1917, for conspicuous gallantry in action, and was wounded shortly afterwards and invalided to Canada.

In September, 1918, he was appointed second in command of the 13tht Field Company of Engineers and went to Siberia with rank of Major. In 1926 he was appointed to the command of the 2nd Divisional Engineers with rank of Lieut.-Colonel and in 1930 was transferred to the reserve of officers. Shortly after the outbreak of the second great war he was appointed to command the 1st Divisional Engineers, was promoted to Colonel in May, 1940, and shortly afterwards to Brigadier on his appointment as Chief Engineer of Corps.

Four Years in the Ranks.

Brig. Genet, 50, was born at Brantford. Ont., and served four years in the ranks of the 38th Regiment before being commissioned in the N.P.A.M. unit in 1912. He was appointed to the C.E.D. Force in 1915 as a lieutenant and served in France and Belgium with the 2nd and 1st Canadian Divisional Signal Companies. He was promoted captain before the war ended.

In 1924 he was appointed to the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, Permanent Force, after serving with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, and for a period was District Signals Officer at Headquarters of M.D. 2, Toronto.

He was promoted major in 1932 and lieutenant-colonel in 1939 and attended the Senior Officers' School at Sheerness that year. Shortly after the outbreak of the present war he was appointed officer commanding the 1st Division Signals, and in July, 1940, was appointed Chief Signal Officer of A Corps with the rank of colonel.

Roberts an R.M.C. Man.

Gen. Roberts was born at Pipestone, Man., and is 50. He graduated from R.M.C. in 1914, and immediately joined the Royal Canadian Artillery serving with them throughout the war, including a period of active service during which he was severely wounded. On demobilization he was appointed to the permanent R.C.A., and was later posted to the Royal School of Artillery at Kingston as gunnery instructor.

From there he went in 1924 to Winnipeg, first as gunnery instructor and later with "C" Battery, R.C.H.A. Thence he was transferred to Halifax for duty with heavy artillery. At the outbreak of the present war he was appointed to the first Field Regiment and July 19, 1940, was appointed commander of the 1st Divisional Artillery with the rank of Brigadier.

In Advance Party

Brig. Harold Brownfield, 47, born at Inglewood, N. J., was in charge of the advance party which made preliminary arrangements for arrival of the 1st Canadian Division in Britain. A soldier most of his life he was at the R.M.C. when the last war broke out and obtained a commission as a lieutenant in the R.C.A. He won the Military Cross for heroism in saving wounded men under fire. After the war he served with the R.C.H.A. at Kingston until 1931 and then went to England to attend the Imperial staff college for two years. He returned to Kingston in 1933 to become professor of tactics at R.M.C. In 1937 he became general staff officer at London, Ont., two years later was transferred to Saint John, N.B., and went to England almost as soon as the present conflict began.

He was appointed commander of the Artillery Brigade, 3rd Canadian Division, returning overseas with thtat division.

With Engineers Last Show

Brig. Melville was transferred to the Corps Reserve of Officers, R.C.E., in 1936, after commanding the 3rd District Engineers from January 1, 1934. In the last war he went overseas with the Engineers as lieuteant and was promoted captain in May, 1918. He served in France and Belgium from August, 1916, to April, 1919. He was promoted from lieutenant-colonel last year when appointed to command R.C.E. headquarters corps troops after serving as officer commanding, 1st Canadian Pioneer Battalion.

Brig. Melville, 53, is a native of Scotland and before going on active service was with the War Veterans' Allowance Board in Ottawa.

Accountant in Peace Time

Brig. Walford, in civil life a Montreal chartered accountant, is 45 and was educated in Montreal. He joined the C.E.F. as a gunner in the 3rd Siege Battery and served overseas with the Artillery, winning the Military Medal, and was commissioned lieutenant in January, 1918.

Between the First and Second Great Wars he was active in the N.P.A.M. Artillery in Montreal, rising to the command of the 2nd Medium Brigade, R.C.A. On the outbreak of the present war he was appointed Deputy Assistant Adjutant of the 1st Division, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. Later he was Assistant Adjutant and Quartermaster-General of the same division, and later A.Q.M.G. at Corps Headquarters.

A Vermont Man

Brig. Plow, 37, was born at St. Albans, Vt., and graduated from R.M.C. in 1925. Appointed to the Royal Canadian Artillery as a lieutenant, he served with "A" Battery, R.C.H.A., and then took an artillery course at Halifax In July, 1929, he became brevet captain and the following year was attached to the Imperial Army. spending two years overseas with a mechanized brigade of the Royal Artillery

He was promoted to captain in 1934, and transferred in 1937 to "C" battery, R.C.H.A., Winnipeg. Next year he was on the R.M.C. staff. On the outbreak of war he was appointed major and officer commanding "A" Battery, 1st Field Brigade, R.C.A. In April, 1940, he became brigade major and in the following July deputy assistant adjutant general (traffic). In August of that year he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel and given the command of a field regiment. Last September he was appointed to the counter battery officers' staff and later became acting commander of divisional artillery.

knockedd own two raiders and raised a heavy curtain of steel which slowed the attack and inflicted damage on the tight squadrons of bombers and their fighter escort.

Some bombs fell in the city, according to British reports, and Admiral Layton said half the civilian dead were at a medical establishment.

"It was not a matter of luck that we got off so lightly," he declared, "but entirely due to the manner in which we prepared ourselves."

He called the Royal Air Force's performance "a great piece of work" and the people's behavior "second to none."

Britain had been preparing for just such an attempt for more than a month, moving in reinforcements, strengthening docks, laying out new airdromes, building shelters, organizing a civilian air raid defence system, demolishing blocks of flimsy dwellings and cutting fire lanes through the city to check any incendiary-lighted fires.

The last of a series of practice alarms before the first real one sounded only Saturday.

Home In Percy Razed In Blaze

HASTINGS, April 6 — (ENS). — Fire destroyed the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Pulfer, situated in Percy Township, two miles southwest of Hastings, shortly after noon on Thursday less than five days after the couple had moved in.

Mr. Pulfer first discovered something amiss when shingles began dropping in the front yard as he was eating dinner.

Rushing outside he discovered the roof near the chimney was a mass of flame. Although a bucket brigade was quickly organized the fire, which is believed to have started from a defective chimney, was too far advanced.

Farmers from the surrounding district were quickly on the scene, and aided Mr. Pulfer in saving the entire furnishings, including the unwashed dinner dishes. A high wind forced watchers to keep an eye on straw stacks situated near the barn of Norman Rusaw, 100 yards distant.

Earl Clarke of Hastings, owner of the house, estimated the loss at $2,500, and said it was partially covered by insurance.

TRAFFIC HEAVY.

City motorists believe in using tires while they have them, judging from the volume of traffic on the city streets, and highways on Sunday. It was a beautiful day and traffic was so heavy on Highway 28, that it looked like a funeral. Chemong, Lakefield, Young's Point and even Burleigh all received a good quota of Sunday visitors, and a great many went to Port Hope.

SWALLOWS ARE BACK.

It is realiably reported that the swallows are back, and if this is true they are ten days ahead of time. All the other birds are just ten days a head of schedule and a few which have been noticed are the meadow lark, yellow warbler, phoebe, kildeer and bluebird. Alex Kay, the loca oirnthologist states that swallows are insect feeders, and if they are here, they will probably be noticed skimming creeks and streams for insects.

Easter Business Sets New High On Rail And Bus

Stimulated by war industry wages, Easter business surged substantially above the volume a year ago, according to various reports.

Candy counters said that every last Easter egg and chocolate bunny moved across the counters leaving none of the special holiday stock by Saturday evening. In the corresponding week last year prices were cut before the week end.

Both railways carried more passengers than at Easter time in 1941. The C.P.R. local Sunday night left here at 7 p.m. with nine or ten coaches, all of them crowded, except a few seats in the last one.

Highway buses due to get away from Peterborough shortly after 7 p.m. Sunday were literally packed.

Stocks Bread anticipated a bigger demand than a year for all their products, but even that excess was cleaned out Saturday afternoon, and some emergency baking was started to meet the community's needs. Incidentally the approximate output of 8,000 dozens of hot-cross buns also vanished to the very last one.

A main street candy shop turned the lock in the door before the usual time Saturday night, apparently with nothing much left but some odds and ends of confection.

Apparently the women's wear stores cut a sizeable slice of the seasonable business, and everybody seemed happy apart from those whose men in khaki and the blue of the navy and the air force were home on furlough or briefer holiday leave.

Woman Being Sought For Theft Of Coats

City police are looking for a middle-aged woman who is wanted on a charge of stealing two ladies' coats from a Charlotte Street store by means of false pretences.

The woman looked at a number of coats in the store and finally selecting two stated that she wanted a coat for her daughter who was in hospital here and she asked to be allowed to take the two to her daughter to look at and make her choice.

When she failed to return with the coats the police were notified and it was discovered that the story of the daughter in hospital was a falsehood and that the name and address given were fictitious.

So far nothing more has been heard of the woman or the missing coats.

6 MONTHS FOR SLOW-UP

LIVERPOOL—(CP).—A man who was alleged to have adopted "go slow" methods in the stokehold of a ship in convoy was sentenced to six months hard labor on a charge of having neglected his duties while aboard ship.

Charge Soldier With Faking Holdup Story

Charged with making false statements to police, Pte. James W. Wilson, an active service soldier in training at the local Military Training Centre was arrested by Provincial Constable Price Morris at the Exhibition camp this morning and will be arraigned in police court this morning.

Wilson is the soldier who was found in an apparently unconscious condition on Sherbrooke street, west of Monaghan Road, on the night of March 26, with the contents of his pockets strewn around him and with marks on his wrist that looked like rope burns.

Interviewed by police Wilson told a story of having been accosted on Simcoe street by men in a car and declared that he could not remember anything more after two men had got out of the automobile and approached until he found himself in the camp hospital later that night.

Unusual Charge

Not satisfied with his story the military authorities and police have been making further investigations and as a result Wilson's arrest today by Provincial Constable Morris followed.

The soldier is charged under the English common law and the charge is an unusual one.

The warrant aleged that he "unawfully did, by means of a false statement, to wit that on March 26 two men, whose description he then gave, did assault, kidnap and rob him, cause officers of the Provincial Police and of the City of Peterborough, maintained at the public expense for the public benefit, to devote their time and services to th investigation of false allegations, thereby temporarily depriving the public of the services of the public officers, and rendering the liege subjects of the King liable to suspicion, accusation and arrest and in so doing did unlawfully effect a public nuisance."

Grass Fire Sets House Afire

A grass fire that got out of control destroyed a one-storey dwelling occupied by two bachelors at the northwest corner of Business street and Western Avenue shortly before seven o'clock on Saturday evening.

It is understood that the men had been burning the grass off the field immediately north of their home, during the later afternoon and had gone to supper, believing that the fire was out. While they were eating the house caught fire, and in spite of their efforts and the assistance of neighbors, the building and contents were a total loss.

The two occupants of the house, Charles Gravelle and Jack McGrath, lost all their furniture, and six cords of birch firewood which had been sawed, spit and piled in an adjoining shed. The fire was so hot, that a small sheet iron cook stove in the kitchen was transformed into a shapeless mass of twisted metal, and the steel side pieces of the beds were also twisted badly.

A call for assistance to the Peterborough Fire Department brought one of the chemical units out, and the firemen were able to save a partially built garage on the property of E. Godfrey, Business street, directly behind the burning house.

Easter Rally Held By Omemee W.M.S.

OMEME, April 6 — (ENS).—The Easter meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the school room of the church on Thursday, with Mrs. Moyer presiding. The annual thankoffering service will be held on Sunday evening, April 19, if a special speaker can be procured. Rev. R. M. Patterson sang "The Holy City," which was much appreciated. The Easter program was divided into three parts: Part 1 "The Church is Christ living throughout the centuries," led by Mrs. Morcombe; Part 2, "Forward through the ages in unbroken lines," led by Mrs. V. Lang. In this part several passages from the Bible were read by Mrs. Shield, Miss Irene Faulkner, Mrs. Morcombe, and Mrs. Rehill. Part 3, "Enlisting youth for Christ to-day," led by Mrs. Rehill. Mrs. Moyer made an urgent appeal to the parents to bring their children to Sunday School every Sunday and to the church services.

Personals.

Mrs. Herbert Wilson of Sunderland spent Thursday afternoon at the parsonage.

Mrs. H. B. Baker and daughter Jean of Sunderland, and Earlby Miller of Peterborough called at the parsonage on Thursday.

Miss Florrie Sloan has been confined to her bed for the past week. All wish her a speedy recovery.

BRISBANE, Australia — (CP). — Rejected when he offered to enlist for military service, a milkman went home and hanged himself. Another rejected jumped from a tram and was seriously injured.

Arrives In Britain

Corp Robert Willshaw, of the S.D. and G. Highlanders arrived in Britain last week according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Willshaw, 721 Elcome Crescent. His father served in World War 1 with the 93rd Battalion.

Bancroft Youth Rescued From York River

BANCROFT, April 6. —(ENS) — Donald Jones, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon W. Jones, narrowly escaped drowning Saturday above the York river dam where his brother lost his life here some years ago.

With this dog he pushed off from shore in a skiff Saturday afternoon. In some way he lost his paddle, and without any other means of control and propelling the boat, the boy and his dog were soon threatened with danger as the current began to carry them toward the dam. Donald managed to grasp a "dead head" log and clung to it while Roy Barker, who was passing, crawled out on a boom with the intention of helping him. A twenty foot span of water separated them, and finally the boy decided to take a chance on swimming. Weighted with his clothes and rubber booots he swam the twenty feet and Barker reached out and pulled him on to the boom. Meanwhile the boat floated off down the stream and tumbled over the dam with Donald's dog.

Survey Certificate To Accompany Permit

An Ontario Land Surveyor's sketch and certificate must accompany any application for a building permit for any structure that is to be erected within three feet of the street line.

This recommendation from the Board of Works will go on to the Council on Tuesday night following a recent Hilliard Street experience of discovery that all the houses on that street encroached over the city's boundary, and one house offended by twenty feet. This irregular condition was exposed by enquiry to purchase one of the houses. Time was wasted in searching the title, and the cloud of encroachment stopped the sale.

Alderman Dutton said that private infringement for street properties was often revealed, and he said it might be worth while having a complete and progressive survey of bounds. It could be carried on from year to year, doing a little at a time to distribute the expense.

The Board adopted Alderman Gordon's resolution, seconded by Alderman Bradburn, requiring an engineer's certificate that buidings to be erected within three feet of the street line do not trespass beyond it.

Week's Sales Total $664

Examiner Carriers did another splendid weeks work in selling $664.00 in War Savings Stamps to their customers during the week ending March 28. Though not the record week of the campaign it is some $45.00 ahead of Christmas week when many stamps and certificates were bought for gifts.

Again in the top positions were two boys whose sales have been consistently high ever since the campaign opened. George Clark, last month's winner of the Examiner Gold Trophy, is first with sales of $77.00. In second place is Keith Orde, also second in last month's monthly competition. Keith's total was $74.25. In third place in a young lady with regularly high sales. Nancy Leith whose week brought in $57.50. Another energetic worker in the Examiner force is Wilbert Edgar, next in the running with $47.25, followed by an up-and-coming salesman, Lorne ("Bud") Eakins with $46.00. Donald Pagett, January winner of the cup, is next with $30.00 and Wellie Borland, a newcomer but an active one, brought in $22.00 for his week's efforts.

One of the youngest of Examiner Carriers, Ray Douglas, came in with a fine $21.00 along with another hard worker, Victor Doughty, with a similar amount. Ralph Dallin, another new boy on the staff, is doing well in War Savings Stamp sales and his week brought forth $20.25. Weldon Fanning is next with $16.00 and Dougas Burrows with $14.00. Bob Shadgett follows with $11.75 Grant Finnie $10.75 and Bill Leahy with $10.50. Gerald Rose, pinch hitting for Alan Sage recovving from an operation, brings in an even $10.00 followed by Dan McIsaac with $9.00.

Others worthy of mention this week are: Cyril Robinson, $8.25; Jack Brown and Gerry Field $8.00 each; Adrian Langhorne, $7.50; Tom Douglas, $7.50; Ted Pearson, $6.75; Bill Dundas, Lewes Russell and Wallace Manbeck all with $6.50 Don Payne and Carlotta Laing, $5. Many others made splendid additions to the cause of the War Effort and their work is also greatly appreciated by the War Savings Committee of Peterborough.

Many Visitors Attend Knox Church

Many visitors worshipped Sunday with the congregation of Knox United Church at their Easter services. In a stirring message of hope and faith the minister, Rev. H. J. Mahoney delivered a sermon on the subject "Through Tragedy to Triumph."

"At the Cross those who loved and followed Jesus were plunged into deep distress and overwhelmed with a despair that knew no hope," said the speaker. "Then the glory of the first Easter morn bathed the world with light and beauty. It was the brightest day which ever broke upon this weary, sin-cursed, disappointed world. The whole horizon of life was transformed. The resurrection banished the darkness, inspired hope, conquered death and triumphed over the power of evil. What came was the conviction that human life has a permanent reality.

Easter is the celebration of the immortality of the soul, of love and beauty. Easter means that nothing lovely ever dies and to give all that one has is to gain eternal life. Men may be snatched from the scene of human history but men like Jesus never die. The resurrection is an appeal to faith, a simple faith which is content to say of those who die, whether as soldiers in battle or quietly in bed, "we shall meet again when the day breaks and the shadows flee away. 'Tis always morning somewhere in the world."

"These days through which humanity is now passing are undoubtedly the darkest in its long history. The forces of falsehood, treachery and brutality seem on the ascendency. Defeat and death seem to be the appointed lot of the noblest aspirations of men. Yet spiritual values are indestructable and for every Calvary where love lays down its life for its friends, where atoning self-sacrifice is revealed, there must follow a resurrection morning."

At an impressive evening service the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated. Six new members were received into the fellowship of the church, two by church letter and four members of the communicants class.

Bicycle Crash Injures Laborer

Harry Frank Dixon, 60, a farm laborer employed by Bert Taylor, near Fowler's Corners, was knocked down by a bicycle on Highway 7, just outside the city limits, Sunday night and is in Nicholls Hospital, suffering from bruises and shock.

Dixon had been in the city for the Easter week-end and had started to walk to the home of his employer when Carman Chase, who had been visiting his relatives in Lakehurst and was wheeling back to Peterborough, rode down a hill on his bicycle and collided with the pedestrian, who was knocked over.

An army truck happened along at this moment and the driver gave Dixon first aid and then removed him to hospital.

Driver Is Arrested Following Crash

Following a traffic accident early Sunday morning, Mark J. Collins, Romaine street, driver of one of the cars involved was arrested by Constable Leo Murphy who investigated the crash, on charges of reckless driving and breach of the Liquor Control Act.

The accident happened at Park and Romaine streets at 1:40 a.m. Jack Finnie was driving south on Park street and at the intersection of Romaine street, his machine and a car driven west on Romaine street by Collins came into collision.

Constable Murphy who was patrolling in a police cruiser car placed Collins under arrest, after inquiry into the crash.

Captain Morley Returned To The Rangers

MORE RECRUITS

The usual post weekend splurge of recruits for the Prince of Wales Rangers was in evidence this morning when 11 men were waiting in line at 9.30 a.m. to be interviewed. On Saturday, four men presented themselves and were sent to the medical board. Several of the men who have been medically boarded and given categories high enough to be taken on strength of the Rangers have left to wind up any personal affairs before coming back to be attested and taken on strength.

REMOVE GREAT COATS

Orders were issued on Saturday that great coats will not be worn as of April 4, except in the case of a cold snap which at this time seems unlikely. Winter melton hats are to be returned to Sergeant Sid Whatley in stores by companies after tomorrow.

The men's canteen at the west end of the drill hall was opened the latter part of the week and is under the charge of Corporal A. G. Henwood and Pte. Leo English. Soft drinks, cigarettes and chocolate bars will be sold during all break periods during the day and at other times when the men are at their leisure.

A class of instruction in quartermaster stores will be held this week with 2nd Lt. H. Borland in charge and R.Q.M.S. J. Field as instructor.

Major R. Honey, officer commanding number one company of the Rangers has been detailed as area recruiting officer. Recruiting in this area was formerly handled by the First Midland Regiment for all branches of the army.

R.S.M. ON CARPET

Tonight at 11.10, the tables are going to be turned on R.S.M. Andy Jackson whom listeners of CHEX have come to know as the one who interviews. Four privates of the Rangers are going to interview the R.S.M. and it is reported they are not going to be too easy on him. You will hear John Kapralik, who left Czecho-Slovakia ahead of the German invasion of his country and who wants to be a ski soldier. Leo Herr of Peterborough and formerly of Norwood is understood to have some embarasing questions up his sleeve with which he intends to put the bee on the R.S.M. Pte. Allan Taylor of Curve Lake, first Indian to enlist with the regiment, has threated to take charge of the program tonight, R.S.M. or no R.S.M. Pte. Bruce Castle will also be heard.

TRUE SACRIFICE

Sergeant D. W. Hull of the Rangers who has been personally interviewing young men who have received their call for compulsory military training and parents of these boys, reported today something of the sacrifice one Peterborough woman living in the south end was prepared to make that the forces of good may win.

During the Great War, her husband went overseas with the C.E.F. and fought in France. In a few months she went to England to be near him. A child was born during an air raid on an English town. Her husband was killed in the fighting in France, hereupon she returned to Canada with her children. One son has since died here in Canada, one son is now serving in the Canadian army and the last son at home has received his call for compulsory training.

When Sergt. Hull called at her home, Mrs. X revealed her story but added: "I will certainly not put anything in the way of him going into the army. He can go if he wishes. I have no objections."

P.W.R.'s 2nd BATTALION

Lt. Col. M. H. Park, officer commanding the second battalion of the Prince of Wales Rangers has pointed out that all pay not claimed and received before April 10 will be forfeited. In order to give everyone a chance to get his pay, he stated that pay will be given to those properly entitled to it at the regular battalion parade to be held Tuesday evening, April 7.

Those who did not obtain their pay at the regular pay parade last Tuesday are given another chance to collect it before April 10, the deadline for paying members of a reserve battalion, he said.

CAPT. MORLEY RETURNS

Captain J. A. Morley, who was for many years an officer of the Prince of Wales Rangers and was lately a member of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, has been transferred back to the first battalion of the Prince of Wales Rangers. Captain Morley has returned from special courses at Brockville, Ontario, and Three Rivers, Que.

Since the junior officers of the first battalion are slated for a three-month course at Brockville to start the middle of this month, Captain Morley has been detailed to give them a preliminay toughening-up course, one of the features of which will be a daily route march of from five to ten miles with full equipment.

In civil life Capt. Morley was foreman of the Meter Department at the C.G.E. and his return to the Rangers is warmly welcomed by all ranks.

Chancel Lights Dedicated At St. James'

A large congregation attended the Easter service at St. James United Church when a group of young people were received into church membership and the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Hewitt was baptized. The choir sang an appropriate anthem, "Arise from the Dead and Christ Shall Give Thee Light." The minister's theme was, "The Memories of Easter"; a message of strength and hopefulness for these anxious days.

The Eastertide was a fitting time for the dedication of the new chancel lights placed in the church by the family in loving memory of their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Payne, who were laid to rest on the same day, July 1st, 1940. Rev. Fred Craik dedicated the beautiful chancel lights in a brief but impressive service in the following words:

"In the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ we dedicate these chancel lights to the glory of God and in memory of his servants, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Payne, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." During the dedicatory prayer, the hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was played softly on the organ chimese.

Obituaries

PERCY MASON WARD

A building contractor in this city for many years, and a resident of the city for more than 32 years, Percy Mason Ward, died at his home, 9 McLennan avenue, on Saturday, April 4. He was in his 70th year.

The late Mr. Ward was born in England, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Mason Ward, and he had been ill for some months. He was well known to members of the building trade in the city and district, and built many homes in this city.

Surviving is his widow, formerly Elsie Elizabeth Pritchard, and five sons. Percy of Toronto, Sidney of Peterborough, John of Durham, William of Chatham, and Frederick of Kingsville. Two brothers, Archie and William, two brothers live in England.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday April 7 at 2 p.m. from the Comstock Funeral Home, 305 Water street. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church and Rev. M. MacLean of Gilmour Memorial Church will conduct the funeral services. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. WM. J. BEATTY.

Mary Venard, widow of the late William John Beatty died in Toronto on Saturday, April 4, in her 88th year. The late Mrs. Beatty was born in Ireland, and came to this country as a child. Her maiden name was Mary Venard. Her husband predeceased her 23 years ago.

The late Mrs. Beatty lived for several years at Bridgenorth and then at Peterborough, and she has many friends in both places. For the past 18 months she has resided in Toronto. Her illness was quite brief. Surviving are three sons and six daughters, James, William and Thomas all of Peterborough, Mrs. William Harvey of Port Hope; Mrs. Ernest Davies, Miss Lila, Miss Ida and Miss Maude Beatty all of Long Branch and Mrs. Elva Curtis of Toronto.

The funeral was held on Monday at three o'clock from the Funeral Home of D. Belleghem and Sons, 190 Hunter Street West with interment in Bridgenorth cemetery. The Rev. E. W. Rowland conducted the funeral service.

Pallbearers were Thomas Beatty, Merle Harvey, Kenneth Harvey, Milton Beatty, Ernest Beatty, and Kerwin Beatty.

Pet Dog Show On Wednesday For War Victims

Much interest is being shown in the Pet Dog Show to be held in the Peterborough Armories on Wednesday at 7 p.m., on behalf of the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund. A large number of entry forms have been given out, and any who may still wish to procure them, may get one at the W. J. Welch barber shop on Hunter Street, the Routley China Shop on George Street, or the Peterborough Pet Stock Store on Charlotte Street.

The dog fanciers of the city have co-operated in a splendid manner to arrange the details in connection with this event, and a large number of special prizes have been donated, which will be displayed for the next few days in the windows of the Men's Style Shop on Hunter Street.

Admission tickets to the show itself are on sale at 25 cents each and may be procured from interested workers in the industrial plants, and uptown at the same places mentioned above for the entry forms, as well as at the Examiner Office.

Each admission ticket carries the chance for a door prize donated of a registered Boston terrier donated by Mrs. W. J. Welch, and tickets will be on sale for a registered cocker spaniel nine weeks old, donated by A. C. Wolfe, the draw for which will be made that night by Lieut.-Col. J. A. Dewart.

The judges will be Mrs Wm. Thompson, Mrs. A. N. Pomeroy of Port Hope, Mrs. Jack Stuart, Mrs. H. Smith and Miss Large, while Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson will pick the best of the winners chosen by them to award the prize for the best dog of the show.

An enthusiastic committee composed of Dr. Harold Worton, Dr. King, H. S. Routley, Dr. Temple of Millbrook, W. J. Welch, J McMartin, Wm. Thompson, A. C. Wolfe, R. Runnett, L. F. Dyer, R. Kingdon, A. H. Radford, R. Reid and L. L. Maguire with others will have charge of events, and Harold Howay with his trained dog, will give a floor show in the early part of the evening, and Dr. Worton will safeguard all pets entered by acting as veterinary for the show, as is customary in all events of this nature. All things necessary to run a successful show have been donated by a host of friends, so that all proceeds will come to the fund.

In today's list for the fund, the Get-Together Club, per Mrs. P. Curran, make their 13th donation, this time in an amount of $12.05, bringing their total up to $147.25, a splendid amount from a small group of friends, organized purely to assist the fund to extend aid to the people of Britain.

One personal donor, a lady who gives under the name of "Love Thy Neighbor," is listed with a repeat of previous help given, demonstrating that very thing in a practical manner.

The Lily Lake Sunday School and Christian Endeavor occupied the market stall under the direction of Miss Enid Hancock for the second time, and from this $9 is credited today in their name. The secretary of the fund would be glad to arrange future bookings for this stand which has been made available by the City Council, and has succeeded in being the means of a good amount collectively coming to the fund.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

TO BUY TRUCK

The Board of Works was authorized Thursday night to buy a truck with hoist costing $1,900.

BITTEN BY DOG

An Em street child Jean McNab was bitten several time on the left leg by a wire-haired terrier Sunday before her grandfather drove off the dog. The little girl was playing in front of her own home when attacked.

BUY HALF PAGE "AD"

Continuing its contribution to the advertising pages of Ackerman's Sportsmen's Guide, the manufacturers committee of the council has subscribed to a half a page in the 1942 edition at a cost of $35. The motion by Alderman Glover, was seconded by Alderman Sullivan, Thursday night. Alderman Bradburn, chairman, presided.

SIX ARRESTS MADE

This being Easter Monday there was no session of the police court this morning. Police made six arrests over the week-end, two of the prisoners were turned over to the military authorities and the other four allowed to go on Sunday to appear in police court on Tuesday morning.

CAMERAS BUSY

"Hadn't time to count them," was the comment from the Parks Studio about the number of films turned in Saturday and today for development. Amateur photographers made the most of the fine Easter weather, including Good Friday, and the circumstances of new raiment, soldiers home on leave, and then of course the old time stuff of youth and beauty.

IT TOOK 20 YEARS

The resignation of L. D. W. Magie, from the Library Board has been regretfully accepted by the Board of Education. Apparently when Library officials were checking over their rules they discovered that only a British subject can hold office on the Board, and thus the veteran member had to resign. Mr. Magie, retired works engineer of the C.G.E. Company, has represented the Board of Education on the Library Board for upwards of 20 years.

WINS DEAN'S STICK

His friends down at the Alparka corner are delighted with the news from Toronto that Murray Irwin was awarded the "Dean's Stick," a comparatively new accolade in the junior class of the School of Pharmacy. Mr. Irwin came from Madoc to Bert McLeod's drug store and made a lot of friends down at the steel plant corner. The Dean "Stick" is a cane that is given by vote of the class to the junior student for popularity, athletics, academic standing and so on.

SOLD OUT.

Many stores handling Easter novelties were completely sold out on Saturday evening. Some of the stores had nothing left except a few jelly beans late in the evening, and one manager stated that he could have sold twice the quantity that he was allowed. An extra shortage was caused by the fact that one large candy company made no Easter novelties this year.

MAY EXTEND BUS LINE

The special rush hour bus service to the C.G.E. Company may be extended down Albert street to the Geneko gate, according to a suggestion heard at the recent meeting of the city council. Nothing has been decided by the bus company, Lawrie Mitchell told the Examiner today. The idea is still in the suggestion stage, and will require considerable improvement of the road surface. Mr. Mitchell said that the new bus which arrived a week ago will soon be put into service.

A PLUG FOR THE WAR.

A small rubber tire off an ash tray, is used by Sid Goldstone of the Centre Theatre to impress on people the need for buying War Savings Stamps. He has the tire mounted on a card in the ticket office window, and the printing indicates, that money won't buy tires, but it will buy War Savings Stamps.

EASTER DINERS.

Nearly two hundred guests dined at the Empress Hotel Easter Sunday, 110 at noon and 75 in the evening, and most of them were Peterborough people with visiting friends.

WITH LORNE SCOTS.

Pte. Alvin Todd, a despatch rider with the Lorne Scots, a unit recruited in the Guelph district is believed to be the only man from this city in the unit. His home is at 495 Chamberlain Street, and he was home over the week-end.

TRAFFIC HEAVY.

City motorists believe in using tires while they have them, judging from the volume of traffic on the city streets, and highways on Sunday. It was a beautiful day and traffic was so heavy on Highway 28, that it looked like a funeral. Chemong, Lakefield, Young's Point and even Burleigh all received a good quota of Sunday visitors, and a great many went to Port Hope.

SWALLOWS ARE BACK.

It is realiably reported that the swallows are back, and if this is true they are ten days ahead of time. All the other birds are just ten days a head of schedule and a few which have been noticed are the meadow lark, yellow warbler, phoebe, kildeer and bluebird. Alex Kay, the loca oirnthologist states that swallows are insect feeders, and if they are here, they will probably be noticed skimming creeks and streams for insects.

Easter Business Sets New High On Rail And Bus

Stimulated by war industry wages, Easter business surged substantially above the volume a year ago, according to various reports.

Candy counters said that every last Easter egg and chocolate bunny moved across the counters leaving none of the special holiday stock by Saturday evening. In the corresponding week last year prices were cut before the week end.

Both railways carried more passengers than at Easter time in 1941. The C.P.R. local Sunday night left here at 7 p.m. with nine or ten coaches, all of them crowded, except a few seats in the last one.

Highway buses due to get away from Peterborough shortly after 7 p.m. Sunday were literally packed.

Stocks Bread anticipated a bigger demand than a year for all their products, but even that excess was cleaned out Saturday afternoon, and some emergency baking was started to meet the community's needs. Incidentally the approximate output of 8,000 dozens of hot-cross buns also vanished to the very last one.

A main street candy shop turned the lock in the door before the usual time Saturday night, apparently with nothing much left but some odds and ends of confection.

Apparently the women's wear stores cut a sizeable slice of the seasonable business, and everybody seemed happy apart from those whose men in khaki and the blue of the navy and the air force were home on furlough or briefer holiday leave.

Woman Being Sought For Theft Of Coats

City police are looking for a middle-aged woman who is wanted on a charge of stealing two ladies' coats from a Charlotte Street store by means of false pretences.

The woman looked at a number of coats in the store and finally selecting two stated that she wanted a coat for her daughter who was in hospital here and she asked to be allowed to take the two to her daughter to look at and make her choice.

When she failed to return with the coats the police were notified and it was discovered that the story of the daughter in hospital was a falsehood and that the name and address given were fictitious.

So far nothing more has been heard of the woman or the missing coats.

6 MONTHS FOR SLOW-UP

Charge Soldier With Faking Holdup Story

Charged with making false statements to police, Pte. James W. Wilson, an active service soldier in training at the local Military Training Centre was arrested by Provincial Constable Price Morris at the Exhibition camp this morning and will be arraigned in police court this morning.

Wilson is the soldier who was found in an apparently unconscious condition on Sherbrooke street, west of Monaghan Road, on the night of March 26, with the contents of his pockets strewn around him and with marks on his wrist that looked like rope burns.

Interviewed by police Wilson told a story of having been accosted on Simcoe street by men in a car and declared that he could not remember anything more after two men had got out of the automobile and approached until he found himself in the camp hospital later that night.

Unusual Charge

Not satisfied with his story the military authorities and police have been making further investigations and as a result Wilson's arrest today by Provincial Constable Morris followed.

The soldier is charged under the English common law and the charge is an unusual one.

The warrant aleged that he "unawfully did, by means of a false statement, to wit that on March 26 two men, whose description he then gave, did assault, kidnap and rob him, cause officers of the Provincial Police and of the City of Peterborough, maintained at the public expense for the public benefit, to devote their time and services to th investigation of false allegations, thereby temporarily depriving the public of the services of the public officers, and rendering the liege subjects of the King liable to suspicion, accusation and arrest and in so doing did unlawfully effect a public nuisance."

Grass Fire Sets House Afire

A grass fire that got out of control destroyed a one-storey dwelling occupied by two bachelors at the northwest corner of Business street and Western Avenue shortly before seven o'clock on Saturday evening.

It is understood that the men had been burning the grass off the field immediately north of their home, during the later afternoon and had gone to supper, believing that the fire was out. While they were eating the house caught fire, and in spite of their efforts and the assistance of neighbors, the building and contents were a total loss.

The two occupants of the house, Charles Gravelle and Jack McGrath, lost all their furniture, and six cords of birch firewood which had been sawed, spit and piled in an adjoining shed. The fire was so hot, that a small sheet iron cook stove in the kitchen was transformed into a shapeless mass of twisted metal, and the steel side pieces of the beds were also twisted badly.

A call for assistance to the Peterborough Fire Department brought one of the chemical units out, and the firemen were able to save a partially built garage on the property of E. Godfrey, Business street, directly behind the burning house.

Easter Rally Held By Omemee W.M.S.

OMEME, April 6 — (ENS).—The Easter meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the school room of the church on Thursday, with Mrs. Moyer presiding. The annual thankoffering service will be held on Sunday evening, April 19, if a special speaker can be procured. Rev. R. M. Patterson sang "The Holy City," which was much appreciated. The Easter program was divided into three parts: Part 1 "The Church is Christ living throughout the centuries," led by Mrs. Morcombe; Part 2, "Forward through the ages in unbroken lines," led by Mrs. V. Lang. In this part several passages from the Bible were read by Mrs. Shield, Miss Irene Faulkner, Mrs. Morcombe, and Mrs. Rehill. Part 3, "Enlisting youth for Christ to-day," led by Mrs. Rehill. Mrs. Moyer made an urgent appeal to the parents to bring their children to Sunday School every Sunday and to the church services.

Personals.

Mrs. Herbert Wilson of Sunderland spent Thursday afternoon at the parsonage.

Mrs. H. B. Baker and daughter Jean of Sunderland, and Earlby Miller of Peterborough called at the parsonage on Thursday.

Miss Florrie Sloan has been confined to her bed for the past week. All wish her a speedy recovery.

Arrives In Britain

Corp Robert Willshaw, of the S.D. and G. Highlanders arrived in Britain last week according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Willshaw, 721 Elcome Crescent. His father served in World War 1 with the 93rd Battalion.

Bancroft Youth Rescued From York River

BANCROFT, April 6. —(ENS) — Donald Jones, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon W. Jones, narrowly escaped drowning Saturday above the York river dam where his brother lost his life here some years ago.

With his dog he pushed off from shore in a skiff Saturday afternoon. In some way he lost his paddle, and without any other means of control and propelling the boat, the boy and his dog were soon threatened with danger as the current began to carry them toward the dam. Donald managed to grasp a "dead head" log and clung to it while Roy Barker, who was passing, crawled out on a boom with the intention of helping him. A twenty foot span of water separated them, and finally the boy decided to take a chance on swimming. Weighted with his clothes and rubber booots he swam the twenty feet and Barker reached out and pulled him on to the boom. Meanwhile the boat floated off down the stream and tumbled over the dam with Donald's dog.

Survey Certificate To Accompany Permit

An Ontario Land Surveyor's sketch and certificate must accompany any application for a building permit for any structure that is to be erected within three feet of the street line.

This recommendation from the Board of Works will go on to the Council on Tuesday night following a recent Hilliard Street experience of discovery that all the houses on that street encroached over the city's boundary, and one house offended by twenty feet. This irregular condition was exposed by enquiry to purchase one of the houses. Time was wasted in searching the title, and the cloud of encroachment stopped the sale.

Alderman Dutton said that private infringement for street properties was often revealed, and he said it might be worth while having a complete and progressive survey of bounds. It could be carried on from year to year, doing a little at a time to distribute the expense.

The Board adopted Alderman Gordon's resolution, seconded by Alderman Bradburn, requiring an engineer's certificate that buildings to be erected within three feet of the street line do not trespass beyond it.

Week's Sales Total $664

Examiner Carriers did another splendid weeks work in selling $664.00 in War Savings Stamps to their customers during the week ending March 28. Though not the record week of the campaign it is some $45.00 ahead of Christmas week when many stamps and certificates were bought for gifts.

Again in the top positions were two boys whose sales have been consistently high ever since the campaign opened. George Clark, last month's winner of the Examiner Gold Trophy, is first with sales of $77.00. In second place is Keith Orde, also second in last month's monthly competition. Keith's total was $74.25. In third place in a young lady with regularly high sales. Nancy Leith whose week brought in $57.50. Another energetic worker in the Examiner force is Wilbert Edgar, next in the running with $47.25, followed by an up-and-coming salesman, Lorne ("Bud") Eakins with $46.00. Donald Pagett, January winner of the cup, is next with $30.00 and Wellie Borland, a newcomer but an active one, brought in $22.00 for his week's efforts.

One of the youngest of Examiner Carriers, Ray Douglas, came in with a fine $21.00 along with another hard worker, Victor Doughty, with a similar amount. Ralph Dallin, another new boy on the staff, is doing well in War Savings Stamp sales and his week brought forth $20.25. Weldon Fanning is next with $16.00 and Dougas Burrows with $14.00. Bob Shadgett follows with $11.75 Grant Finnie $10.75 and Bill Leahy with $10.50. Gerald Rose, pinch hitting for Alan Sage recovting from an operation, brings in an even $10.00 followed by Dan McIsaac with $9.00.

Others worthy of mention this week are: Cyril Robinson, $8.25; Jack Brown and Gerry Field $8.00 each; Adrian Langhorne, $7.50; Tom Douglas, $7.50; Ted Pearson, $6.75; Bill Dundas, Lewes Russell and Wallace Manbeck all with $6.50 Don Payne and Carlotta Laing, $5. Many others made splendid additions to the cause of the War Effort and their work is also greatly appreciated by the War Savings Committee of Peterborough.

Many Visitors Attend Knox Church

Many visitors worshipped Sunday with the congregation of Knox United Church at their Easter services. In a stirring message of hope and faith the minister, Rev. H. J. Mahoney delivered a sermon on the subject "Through Tragedy to Triumph."

"At the Cross those who loved and followed Jesus were plunged into deep distress and overwhelmed with a despair that knew no hope," said the speaker. "Then the glory of the first Easter morn bathed the world with light and beauty. It was the brightest day which ever broke upon this weary, sin-cursed, disappointed world. The whole horizon of life was transformed. The resurrection banished the darkness, inspired hope, conquered death and triumphed over the power of evil. What came was the conviction that human life has a permanent reality.

Easter is the celebration of the immortality of the soul, of love and beauty. Easter means that nothing lovely ever dies and to give all that one has is to gain eternal life. Men may be snatched from the scene of human history but men like Jesus never die. The resurrection is an appeal to faith, a simple faith which is content to say of those who die, whether as soldiers in battle or quietly in bed, "we shall meet again when the day breaks and the shadows flee away. 'Tis always morning somewhere in the world."

"These days through which humanity is now passing are undoubtedly the darkest in its long history. The forces of falsehood, treachery and brutality seem on the ascendency. Defeat and death seem to be the appointed lot of the noblest aspirations of men. Yet spiritual values are indestructable and for every Calvary where love lays down its life for its friends, where atoning self-sacrifice is revealed, there must follow a resurrection morning."

At an impressive evening service the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated. Six new members were received into the fellowship of the church, two by church letter and four members of the communicants class.

Bicycle Crash Injures Laborer

Harry Frank Dixon, 60, a farm laborer employed by Bert Taylor, near Fowler's Corners, was knocked down by a bicycle on Highway 7, just outside the city limits, Sunday night and is in Nicholls Hospital, suffering from bruises and shock.

Dixon had been in the city for the Easter week-end and had started to walk to the home of his employer when Carman Chase, who had been visiting his relatives in Lakehurst and was wheeling back to Peterborough, rode down a hill on his bicycle and collided with the pedestrian, who was knocked over.

An army truck happened along at this moment and the driver gave Dixon first aid and then removed him to hospital.

Driver Is Arrested Following Crash

Following a traffic accident early Sunday morning, Mark J. Collins, Romaine street, driver of one of the cars involved was arrested by Constable Leo Murphy who investigated the crash, on charges of reckless driving and breach of the Liquor Control Act.

The accident happened at Park and Romaine streets at 1:40 a.m. Jack Finnie was driving south on Park street and at the intersection of Romaine street, his machine and a car driven west on Romaine street by Collins came into collision.

Constable Murphy who was patrolling in a police cruiser car placed Collins under arrest, after inquiry into the crash.

Captain Morley Returned To The Rangers

MORE RECRUITS

The usual post weekend splurge of recruits for the Prince of Wales Rangers was in evidence this morning when 11 men were waiting in line at 9.30 a.m. to be interviewed. On Saturday, four men presented themselves and were sent to the medical board. Several of the men who have been medically boarded and given categories high enough to be taken on strength of the Rangers have left to wind up any personal affairs before coming back to be attested and taken on strength.

REMOVE GREAT COATS

Orders were issued on Saturday that great coats will not be worn as of April 4, except in the case of a cold snap which at this time seems unlikely. Winter melton hats are to be returned to Sergeant Sid Whatley in stores by companies after tomorrow.

The men's canteen at the west end of the drill hall was opened the latter part of the week and is under the charge of Corporal A. G. Henwood and Pte. Leo English. Soft drinks, cigarettes and chocolate bars will be sold during all break periods during the day and at other times when the men are at their leisure.

A class of instruction in quartermaster stores will be held this week with 2nd Lt. H. Borland in charge and R.Q.M.S. J. Field as instructor.

Major R. Honey, officer commanding number one company of the Rangers has been detailed as area recruiting officer. Recruiting in this area was formerly handled by the First Midland Regiment for all branches of the army.

R.S.M. ON CARPET

Tonight at 11.10, the tables are going to be turned on R.S.M. Andy Jackson whom listeners of CHEX have come to know as the one who interviews. Four privates of the Rangers are going to interview the R.S.M. and it is reported they are not going to be too easy on him. You will hear John Kapralik, who left Czecho-Slovakia ahead of the German invasion of his country and who wants to be a ski soldier. Leo Herr of Peterborough and formerly of Norwood is understood to have some embarasing questions up his sleeve with which he intends to put the bee on the R.S.M. Pte. Allan Taylor of Curve Lake, first Indian to enlist with the regiment, has threated to take charge of the program tonight, R.S.M. or no R.S.M. Pte. Bruce Castle will also be heard.

TRUE SACRIFICE

Sergeant D. W. Hull of the Rangers who has been personally interviewing young men who have received their call for compulsory military training and parents of these boys, reported today something of the sacrifice one Peterborough woman living in the south end was prepared to make that the forces of good may win.

During the Great War, her husband went overseas with the C.E.F. and fought in France. In a few months she went to England to be near him. A child was born during an air raid on an English town. Her husband was killed in the fighting in France, hereupon she returned to Canada with her children. One son has since died here in Canada, one son is now serving in the Canadian army and the last son at home has received his call for compulsory training.

When Sergt. Hull called at her home, Mrs. X revealed her story but added: "I will certainly not put anything in the way of him going into the army. He can go if he wishes. I have no objections."

P.W.R.'s 2nd BATTALION

Lt. Col. M. H. Park, officer commanding the second battalion of the Prince of Wales Rangers has pointed out that all pay not claimed and received before April 10 will be forfeited. In order to give everyone a chance to get his pay, he stated that pay will be given to those properly entitled to it at the regular battalion parade to be held Tuesday evening, April 7.

Those who did not obtain their pay at the regular pay parade last Tuesday are given another chance to collect it before April 10, the deadline for paying members of a reserve battalion, he said.

CAPT. MORLEY RETURNS

Captain J. A. Morley, who was for many years an officer of the Prince of Wales Rangers and was lately a member of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, has been transferred back to the first battalion of the Prince of Wales Rangers. Captain Morley has returned from special courses at Brockville, Ontario, and Three Rivers, Que.

Since the junior officers of the first battalion are slated for a three-month course at Brockville to start the middle of this month, Captain Morley has been detailed to give them a preliminay toughening-up course, one of the features of which will be a daily route march of from five to ten miles with full equipment.

In civil life Capt. Morley was foreman of the Meter Department at the C.G.E. and his return to the Rangers is warmly welcomed by all ranks.

Chancel Lights Dedicated At St. James'

A large congregation attended the Easter service at St. James United Church when a group of young people were received into church membership and the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Hewitt was baptized. The choir sang an appropriate anthem, "Arise from the Dead and Christ Shall Give Thee Light." The minister's theme was, "The Memories of Easter", a message of strength and hopefulness for these anxious days.

The Eastertide was a fitting time for the dedication of the new chancel lights placed in the church by the family in loving memory of their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Payne, who were laid to rest on the same day, July 1st, 1940. Rev. Fred Craik dedicated the beautiful chancel lights in a brief but impressive service in the following words:

"In the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ we dedicate these chancel lights to the glory of God and in memory of his servants, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Payne, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." During the dedicatory prayer, the hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was played softly on the organ chimese.

Obituaries

PERCY MASON WARD

A building contractor in this city for many years, and a resident of the city for more than 32 years, Percy Mason Ward, died at his home, 9 McLennan avenue, on Saturday, April 4. He was in his 70th year.

The late Mr. Ward was born in England, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Mason Ward, and he had been ill for some months. He was well known to members of the building trade in the city and district, and built many homes in this city.

Surviving is his widow, formerly Elsie Elizabeth Pritchard, and five sons, Percy of Toronto, Sidney of Peterborough, John of Durham, William of Chatham, and Frederick of Kingsville. Two brothers, Archie and William, two brothers live in England.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday April 7 at 2 p.m. from the Comstock Funeral Home, 305 Water street. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church and Rev. M. MacLean of Gilmour Memorial Church will conduct the funeral services. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. WM. J. BEATTY.

Mary Venard, widow of the late William John Beatty died in Toronto on Saturday, April 4, in her 88th year. The late Mrs. Beatty was born in Ireland, and came to this country as a child. Her maiden name was Mary Venard. Her husband predeceased her 23 years ago.

The late Mrs. Beatty lived for several years at Bridgenorth and then at Peterborough, and she has many friends in both places. For the past 18 months she has resided in Toronto. Her illness was quite brief. Surviving are three sons and six daughters, James, William and Thomas all of Peterborough, Mrs. William Harvey of Port Hope; Mrs. Ernest Davies, Miss Lila, Miss Ida and Miss Maude Beatty all of Long Branch and Mrs. Elva Curtis of Toronto.

The funeral was held on Monday at three o'clock from the Funeral Home of D. Belleghem and Sons, 190 Hunter Street West with interment in Bridgenorth cemetery. The Rev. E. W. Rowland conducted the funeral service.

Pallbearers were Thomas Beatty, Merle Harvey, Kenneth Harvey, Milton Beatty, Ernest Beatty, and Kerwin Beatty.

Pet Dog Show On Wednesday For War Victims

Much interest is being shown in the Pet Dog Show to be held in the Peterborough Armories on Wednesday at 7 p.m., on behalf of the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund. A large number of entry forms have been given out, and any who may still wish to procure them, may get one at the W. J. Welch barber shop on Hunter Street, the Routley China Shop on George Street, or the Peterborough Pet Stock Store on Charlotte Street.

The dog fanciers of the city have co-operated in a splendid manner to arrange the details in connection with this event, and a large number of special prizes have been donated, which will be displayed for the next few days in the windows of the Men's Style Shop on Hunter Street.

Admission tickets to the show itself are on sale at 25 cents each and may be procured from interested workers in the industrial plants, and uptown at the same places mentioned above for the entry forms, as well as at the Examiner Office.

Each admission ticket carries the chance for a door prize donated of a registered Boston terrier donated by Mrs. W. J. Welch, and tickets will be on sale for a registered cocker spaniel nine weeks old, donated by A. C. Wolfe, the draw for which will be made that night by Lieut.-Col. J. A. Dewart.

The judges will be Mrs Wm. Thompson, Mrs. A. N. Pomeroy of Port Hope, Mrs. Jack Stuart, Mrs. H. Smith and Miss Large, while Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson will pick the best of the winners chosen by them to award the prize for the best dog of the show.

An enthusiastic committee composed of Dr. Harold Worton, Dr. King, H. S. Routley, Dr. Temple of Millbrook, W. J. Welch, J McMartin, Wm. Thompson, A. C. Wolfe, R. Runnett, L. F. Dyer, R. Kingdon, A. H. Radford, R. Reid and L. L. Maguire with others will have charge of events, and Harold Howay with his trained dog, will give a floor show in the early part of the evening, and Dr. Worton will safeguard all pets entered by acting as veterinary for the show, as is customary in all events of this nature. All things necessary to run a successful show have been donated by a host of friends, so that all proceeds will come to the fund.

In today's list for the fund, the Get-Together Club, per Mrs. P. Curran, make their 13th donation, this time in an amount of $12.05, bringing their total up to $147.25, a splendid amount from a small group of friends, organized purely to assist the fund to extend aid to the people of Britain.

One personal donor, a lady who gives under the name of "Love Thy Neighbor," is listed with a repeat of previous help given, demonstrating that very thing in a practical manner.

The Lily Lake Sunday School and Christian Endeavor occupied the market stall under the direction of Miss Enid Hancock for the second time, and from this $9 is credited today in their name. The secretary of the fund would be glad to arrange future bookings for this stand which has been made available by the City Council, and has succeeded in being the means of a good amount collectively coming to the fund.

Previously acknowledged	$39,495.36
Lily Lake Sunday School and Christian Endeavor, proceeds of market stall, per Miss Enid Hancock.	9.00
Love Thy Neighbor	2.00
The Get-Together Club, per Mrs. P. Curran (13th donation)	12.05

wins out and succeeds in reducing his wife to a state of abject peonage. She may be far more intelligent and better educated than he is, but she is not permitted to express an opinion or hardly to breathe without asking his permission.

Tight Fisted with Money.

She cannot join a club, or go to a bridge party, or visit her mother without first humbly asking his consent. She may do the work of half a dozen servants in the household, but she never has a nickel for her very own. He carries the purse and doles out to her the grocery money and makes her give an account of how she spent it.

Sometimes it is the wife who usurps the throne and constitutes herself She-who-must-be-obeyed. She turns her husband into nothing but a serf who labors to supply her and her children with luxuries. She monopolizes the home and fills it with her family and friends and refuses to let the relatives and pals of the man who supports it have even a look-in. She decides where she shall live, where they shall go when they travel, whether they shall spend or save, and all matters pertaining to the upbringing of the children.

She buys her husband's clothes; she makes him eat the kind of food she likes herself; she supervises his religion and politics; she walks before him when they go out together and tells him where to sit at a lecture. She says "my" house, "my" car "my" children, and boasts that she never allows her husband to be late for dinner, or to spend an evening downtown with an old friend.

Children Often Tyrants.

Often the rulers of the home are the children who, being young and strong, give an exhibition of tyranny that must make Nero turn over in his grave in envy. All of us have been babies in the cradle who had their parents so enslaved that they dared not cross their slightest wish, and it is a matter of common knowledge that half of the fathers and mothers in this country humbly obey their adolescent sons and daughters and would not dream of disputing Johnny's or Mary's authority. Johnny and Mary simply tell the old people where they get off. And they do.

That this state of affairs is responsible for the philandering husbands, the peevish wives, the hoodlum children, and so man of the sorrows under which we groan, cannot be denied, for domestic slavery is harder to endure than political slavery because there is more of it and it gets closer to where we live.

So why not break it up? Why not, when we are fighting to give democracy to the world, save a little of it for home consumption? Why not depose our despotic rulers who have trampled over us so long, and set up homes in which husbands and wives and children will do teamwork and concede to each other the liberty they desire for themselves? It would do more than anything else to add to the sum of human happiness.

A Refugee's Love Problem.

Dear Miss Dix,—I am an English refugee 19 years of age and am greatly attracted to the American girls, especially in one who is very pretty and lively. But she is very self-centred and when I go out with her she makes me feel conspicuous. Besides, I left behind me one of the most lovely and courageous girls of all England who would be an ideal wife for me. I will soon be returning to England, but I don't see how it will be possible to live without this American girl. What shall I do? BEN M.

ANSWER: Stick to your English girl. She is the right one for you because you have the same background and the same habits and customs and viewpoints that bind you together. One of our poets says: "Like the fire upon the firestone is a neighbor's homely daughter. Like the firelight, like the starlight is the handsomest of strangers." or words to that effect. At any rate, they are a good tip to take.

I am not surprised that you are attracted by the gay and dashing American girl. She is a nice playmate, but she seldom makes a good wife for any but her own countrymen who are used to her and her ways and know how to get along with her. DOROTHY DIX.

Plan Cooking Sale For Next Month

BENSFORT April 6.—(ENS). — The April meeting of the Women's Association was held on Wednesday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. E. Wood, in the chair for the special Easter program. Mrs. W. C. Dawson read the scripture lesson, which was followed by the lesson thoughts by Mrs Harold Moncrief.

Mrs. W. C. Dawson and Mrs. Lorne Harris gave two interesting papers on the study book, which was followed by a reading by rMs. H. Moncrief on 'Easter'; a reading, 'The Spring,' by Mrs. Frank Morrison, and a third by Mrs. E. Wood was on 'Easter.'

It was decided to have a 'plant and cooking sale' at the May meeting, and to have a special W A. tea early in June, with a guest speaker.

Plans were made to buy new curtains for the basement, the money having been donated by the president.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs W. C Dawson and Mrs Janet Dawson visited Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Dawson on Tuesday.

The Bensfort Y.P.S. enjoyed a theatre party to Peterborough on Tuesday evening.

Recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wilson included: Mr. and Mrs. James Bell of Garden Hill, Mr. and Mrs. R Souder, Ferne and Marilyn of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. R. Kruse and family of South Monaghan.

The last 'fireside service' for the Young People's Union was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morrison on Sunday evening.

NORWAY'S SHIP LOSS

LONDON—(CP).— Norway has lost nearly 3,000,000 tons of shipping and 1,500 seamen since war started.

Shorthand Can Be Studied at Home

Skilled Worker Has Advantage

So many girls have ambitions—but only vague ambitions! To get on in business, it's necessary to know what you want to do and how!

So few realize that one step to advancement—learning shorthand—can be taken at home.

The principles of Pitman shorthand are really simple. When your employer dictates a word, you don't think of its longhand spelling but you just write a symbol for its sound.

And, no matter how many words your employer uses, the same sounds occur over and over again, for there aren't many sounds in our language. Naturally, you haven't many symbols to learn.

Practise a few every day, then have someone dictate to you. To get skilled in reading your notes, put them in longhand after each "dictation period."

With such practise you soon can add shorthand to your qualifications; you can get in line for promotion.

Learn Pitman shorthand from our 32-page booklet. Has step-by-step lessons, exercises, pointers on acquiring accuracy and speed. Includes abbreviated symbols for often-used words and phrases, and can be used as a foundation for a business college course.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps for your copy of "Self-Instruction in Shorthand" to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

REVERSE THE PROCEDURE

ONE OF THE most unsatisfactory combinations from which to make a standard lead is that headed by a queen and jack, dropping down to some low card. If you lead the queen, and the declarer has the king in dummy and ace in his own hand, or vice versa, with the 10 and nine on his side, you build him a marked finesse against your jack. He will take the first trick in his own hand, and then finesse. If, however, you lead the jack, he probably will win it in the dummy and then finesse against your partner's "marked queen," enabling yours to win. Bear in mind, though, that such a lead may do more harm than good, in some circumstances, by fooling your partner, too.

North: ♠ A 10 7 6 ♥ K 8 3 ♦ A Q J 6 2 ♣ 9
West: ♠ Q J 4 ♥ 6 5 2 ♦ 10 3 ♣ Q 10 8 7 2
East: ♠ 8 5 3 ♥ Q J 7 ♦ K 9 8 5 4 ♣ 6 4
South: ♠ K 9 2 ♥ A 10 9 4 ♦ 7 ♣ A K J 5 3

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	1 NT	Pass	3 NT

Bidding like that occurred on this deal at two duplicate tables. The main difference was that on his third turn South rebid clubs, then North rebid diamonds, whereupon South called No Trumps. In each case, however, West decided not to lead into South's clubs, so selected a spade. One picked the Q and the other the J.

Where the Q was led, South saw a marked finesse against West's J, so took that trick with his K. He finessed the diamond J to the K, and East returned the heart Q. Seeing another finesse set up for him against East's heart J, he won this with dummy's K, then finessed the club J to West's Q. Back came the club 10 to the A. The K also was cashed, the spade 9 finessed, 2 sent to the A dropping the J, the 10 cashed, also the diamond A and Q, then the heart 10 was finessed and the A made the final trick, producing five-odd.

At the other table, the spade J lead made South place East with the Q, so won with dummy's A. He lost the club finesse, took the returned 10, lost the diamond finesse, and East returned the heart J. This marking West with the Q, he took it with his A, cashed the club K, finessed the heart 8 and was peeved when East bobbed up with the Q. The diamond 9 brought tricks with the Q and A and South then decided to go for the extra trick by winning the marked spade finesse. When West won the 9 with the Q, he also scored the club 8 and 7, setting the contract two tricks. The same gag had worked twice.

Tomorrow's Problem

North: ♠ A K J ♥ K 5 2 ♦ A J 10 2 ♣ K Q 8
West: ♠ 10 9 7 5 ♥ A Q ♦ K 5 3 ♣ 10 9 7 3
East: ♠ Q 6 4 ♥ J 9 7 4 ♦ Q 9 6 ♣ 6 5 4
South: ♠ 8 3 2 ♥ 10 8 6 3 ♦ 8 7 4 ♣ A J 2

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

Playing for 3-No Trumps, if South wins a club, finesses diamonds to the Q, takes the returned club, finesses diamonds again, cashes two more diamonds, East discarding a heart, then leads a heart to the 10 and Q, takes the next club, tries to throw East in with the heart K, but West wins, and scores his fourth club, dummy discarding his last heart, why should East know that he must discard his heart J?

Memories Of Sinking Of Athenia Aid Star Of "Angel Street" Fiancee Of Former Local Reporter

An article in Collier's this week comes unexpectedly close to the lingering affections of many persons in Peterborough for a dear friend who was one of the first British victims of German war at sea.

It is a personal story about Judith Evelyn, star of the brilliant Broadway success of the current season, "Angel Street," and by a strange chain of circumstances it accounts to her brilliant acting some of her fleeting, soul-searing impressions as a survivor of the Athenia, the first passenger ship sunk by a German submarine after dark of that day Great Britain declared war in September, 1939.

Assuming permission, the following excerpts from the article entitled "The Perils of Judy," reflect something of the difficulties overcome by Miss Evelyn in her ascent to stardom, a phase of her career which the narrative presents in further detail.

One of the New York reviewers referred to her "as that rare and wonderful thing — a finished actress."

"A finished actress who had, before Angel Street, earned a total of two hundred and thirty-two dollars from the stage she's the answer to those young Thespians who weep that 'stock' is dead; that there's no longer any way for an actor to get experience. It's a vicious circle, my dear.'"

"For those who can take it—for those willing to chance the terrible perils of Pauline for a crack at the lived-happily-ever-after part—here's how it's done: First, book passage on the Athenia, or a reasonable facsimile thereof—which is to say, a boat aimed at a torpedo.

"Judith did precisely that. An American woman alone in London just before the war, she could hardly prove that her work on the radio was essential to the national interest. Therefore, she packed the wardrobe she had finally got together after a year and a half of hard work; packed it tenderly because the lack of proper costume had more than once defeated her professionally.

How to Learn About Life.

"The ship was overcrowded with refugees—mainly female and infant—and on the night war was declared Judith went down to dinner beset by the feeling that she was playing in a rather seedy revival of Outward Bound.

"Nothing seemed very real to her as she sat between her fiancee and his father. Then there was a crash, the smell of cordite, and all the lights went out. "This is it," she remembers remarking, and there was stumbling and carefully-not-pushing and a great deal of trying not to get panicky.

"Eighty people in a lifeboat built for a maximum sixty— Andrew her fiancee, the only able-bodied man aboard. Finally, high seas got them; the boat capsized.

"Of the eighty, nine dragged themselves on to the overturned craft, clung grimly to it and shivered. An old man slipped off into the darkness, and Andrew dived after him. A few minutes later, Andrew was back—without his father."

(Peterborough readers by this time recognize in that remembered detail of the sinking of the Athenia, the Reverend William Allen, former minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and his son Andrew, who during his father's ministry in this city, was employed for a time on the reportorial staff of the Examiner. With all deference to the athors of the article, Luther Davis and John Cleveland, it may be remarked that none of the friends of Rev. William Allen would ever have regarded his sunny add anmated spirit as 'old.')

"They say an actress has to know life, and they usually spell it Life. Nobody's ever been quite sure whether this means she should live immorally, fully, or just frequently. If it's the last two, Judith agrees. At one point in Angel Street she has the stage to herself and is required to imitate a woman blowing her top. Of her performance in this scene, a critic wrote: "If she'd played it any better, the audience would have screamed aloud — in fact, some did."

Judith thinks that maybe her portrayal of hysteria is helped by some of the things she saw on that ship; certain vivid memories of gaping, terrified faces. In particular there are the eyes of a woman who—just as the half-dead eight on that capsized lifeboat were being pulled aboard a destroyer—released her tired hold on her baby and watched it drop into the sea.

The fact that she was on the Athenia has been noted in many newspaper interviews which quote Judith as saying that those experiences helped develop her acting technique.

"Now you have to have been on the Athenia to get a part!" was the reaction of one of the young actors of the vicious-circle turn of mind.

This isn't so, Judith thinks. It's almost as helpful to have been a child prodigy. She for instance, graduated from the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Canada, at the advanced age of seventeen. She was valedictorian of her class and, equally important, had the opportunity of playing most of the leads in the dramatic club's productions."

(Although she was born in South Dakota, Miss Evelyn graduated from the University of Manitoba, toured with the Canadian Chatauqua when a reverse in family finances compelled her to forego post-graduate studies in Germany and even the University of Toronto; was a member of the famous Pasadena Playhouse, part of her experience in "stock" took a turn at radio work in Toronto "where she became engaged to a young Canadian of radio named Andrew Allen.")

That is enough to "lift" from Colliers, and the quotation necessarily omits the story's amplification of the extraordinary personality of Judith Evelyn, and of the little stepping stones of progress that won for her eventually the "rave" tributes of those exacting sophisticated theatre reviewrs of the New York press.

City To Annex 6 Lots In Smith

Six lots which have so far been left out of the annexation by the city of Wartime Housing property on Park Hill Road near Jackson Park are to be included in the additional area which the council is taking steps to acquire from Smith township.

Part of this property is owned by O. L. Dagleish and there is also a group of lots on Fairbairn Avenue, on which the last of the wartime workers' houses in the north end have been erected, comprising the extension of the proposed annexation.

Members of the council said it was "absurd" that any small property should remain part of the township while it was entirely surrounded by the land which the city is adding to its northern front.

Extension of city's sewer, water and light services to the Wartime Housing area virtually made it necessary for the city to acquire the area from Smith.

Citizens Asked To Remove Sand

A special appeal is being made by the city council to citizens requesting them to sweep the winter's sand from sidewalks this week.

The sand was spread during the winter to reduce the hazard of icy sidewalks, and it has remained where it fell. The sun cleared off the last of the snow and ice, and the sand should be swept away.

The Board of Works suggests that it should not be brushed on to grassy boulevards, becoming eventually an accumulation that would destroy the grass.

Children are home from school this week, and they could be enlisted in this little community effort.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR LIVER

Buck it up right now and feel like a million!

Your liver is the largest organ in your body and most important to your health. It pours out bile to digest food, gets rid of waste, supplies new energy, allows proper nourishment to reach your blood. When your liver gets out of order food decomposes in your intestines. You become constipated, stomach and kidneys can't work properly. You feel "rotten"—headachy, backachy, dizzy, dragged out all the time.

Bombs For Boulogne

LONDON, April 6 — (CP). — British bombers escorted by fighter planes thundered across the Channel this morning, apparently headed for Boulogne, in German-occupied France.

A British fighter-bomber swooped on a German airfield in Northern France last night and destroyed a Heinkel 111 just returning from a raid against Britain, a communique said.

The Air Ministry announced other craft attacked airdromes and a railway junction in the same area.

A German plane caused slight bomb damage in South-west England on a solo attack last night, a communique reported.

Barges Burn As Japs Bomb Cavite Navy Yard

This dramatic photograph, just released by the U. S. navy, shows some barges burning in Cavite navy yard after Japan unleased some heavy bombs during a raid on December 12, 1941. The U.S. evacuated this vulnerable point and concentrated on Corregidor, which commands the entrance to Manila Bay. To this date MacArthur's men have not budged one inch from that Gibraltar-like fortress.

Missionary Work Explained To Group

FENELLA, April 6 — (ENS). — There were sixteen ladies present at the Fenella Missionary Society meet on Wednesday, April 1, at the home of Mrs. Mary Macklin.

Mrs. N. C. Leach gave the secretary's report and Mrs. N. Chestnut the treasurer's report.

It was decided to have the thankoffering service in the church on Wednesday afternoon, May 6. The address will be given by Mrs. E. Unstead, and Mrs. Sol Leach will be the program leader.

Mrs. James Knox gave an interesting report of the morning session of the Missionary Presbyterial convention at Campbellford. Mrs. N. Chestnut with the aid of a map, gave short talks on the missionary work being carried on in India, Central China, Africa and home missions, and conducted a quiz contest following each. Mrs. N. C. Leach gave a report of the afternoon session.

Mrs. James Knox and Mrs. Sol Leach were leaders of the devotional period, with Miss Bernice McNaught, Mesdames C. McNaught, F. Down, N. C. Leach, G. Montgomery, L. Hope and C. Harper taking part.

Mrs. L. Hope gave a reading and Mrs. James Knox read a letter on missionary work in China.

Following the Mizpah benediction lunch was served and a pleasant meeting was brought to a close.

They Towed Him In

Ottawa, April 6 (CP)

ANGUS COOCH, branch manager for an oil company, had to be towed fifteen miles to town last night.

In his pocket were keys to tanks holding 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline, and a D-2 ration card, good for 1,560 gallons of motor fuel.

That's right—he was out of gas. And all stations are closed after 7 p.m. under existing regulations.

Swede Town Bombed

STOCKHOLM, April 6—(AP).—A Swedish Government communique said today fragments of eight bombs which were dropped Thursday night on the town of Haparanda, near the bridge connecting Sweden and Finland, bore "Russian markings."

The announcement said a foreign plane dropped six high explosive and two incendiary bombs, causing "only slight damage."

Plainville Girl Lived In Java

PLAINVILLE, April 6—(ENS). — On Tuesday evening the Young People's Society sponsored a much-enjoyed and profitable evening when they had as their guest Mrs. Curtis Washburn, who with her young son John is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Ames, at Gore's Landing. Mrs. Washburn, with her husband, who is a chemist in the Goodyear Tire Company, has spent seven years in Java, East Indies, returning from there last July by way of the Pacific. Mr. Washburn remained in Java, but in his latest communication by cable three weeks ago he had arrived safely in Australia.

Mrs. Washburn needed no introduction to her large audience, which well filled the church basement, as she is a former Plainville girl, living here with her parents until her entrance to the nursing profession in the Toronto General Hospital. Shortly after their marriage she and her husband went to Java. Three years ago they were home for a few months, then returning. Their now four-year-old son was born in Java and at this early age has travelled round the earth one and a half times.

Mrs. Washburn described their four voyages both by way of the Pacific and the Atlantic Oceans very vividly and her talk of life in Java was so fine one almost felt one had spent a visit in Java. Moving pictures of the island as well as pictures taken on trips, excepting the last voyage home, when picture-taking was taboo, helped to make the lecture more interesting. Mrs. Washburn is very generous in sharing to the best of her ability her experiences of travel in so many parts of the world. The voyages were leisurely made, giving time to visit many parts. This lecture is very worth while hearing and she has already given it several times, and has more engagements ahead.

W.M.S. Meeting.

The April meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Wilmot Cole on Wednesday afternoon. A goodly number of ladies were present. Mrs. Fred Bowman, vice-president, had charge of the business period and the Easter program was under the leadership of the Fourth Group leader, Mrs. Glen Cole. Mrs. M. C. Fisher brought the Easter message, in which was stated: "Not only must the joyousness of Easter be thought of at the happy Easter time, but Passion Week and Gethsemane must also be remembered."

Mrs. Louis Buttar read the remaining half of the chapter of the study book, and Mrs. Leslie Carruthers gave a report on the W.M.S. Presbytery convention recently held at Campbellford.

During the W.C.T.U. period the president, Mrs. Will Herriott, brought a short message, also Mrs. Lauder read a most interesting article on the subject, A Letter from a Saskatchewan Lady, in which she stated how the people were not questioned about the rationing of gasoline, sugar, etc., to help the war effort, but when the subject of restricting beer was brought up to conserve good food materials and space for articles to Britain the Government must have more voice from the people.

The Easter thankoffering was received and later afternoon tea and sandwiches were served.

Miss Margaret Winn of Campbellford has been visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Will Herriott.

Band Concert Given In Norwood Hall

NORWOOD, April 6 — (ENS).— A musical treat was enjoyed by those who attended the band concert in the local Town Hall on Friday evening under the auspices of the Willing Workers when the Peterborough Salvation Army Band under Chairman Adjt. Buckley were the entertainers.

The Willing Workers themselves rendered two vocal numbers. There was also a recitation by Marjorie Davies, and two monologues by Miss Laura Metcalfe. A duet was sung by the two small daughters of Mrs. Earl Cuthbertson.

The program as rendered by the band was as follows:

"Rule Britannia Suite, "The Pilgrim's Way"; vocal solo, "God's Way," sung by A. Wells; instrumental duet, "Captain and Lieutenant," rendered by B. Smith and A. Shadgett; festival selections by the band, "British Melodies"; numbers by the saxophone party "Quarter Deck" and "Moonglade"; trombone solo, Schubert's Serenade, by A. Jones; euphonium solo, "Silver Threads," by A. Shadgett. Two more numbers by the saxophone party were "H. M.S. Jolly" and "London Bridge."

The concert concluded with a march by the band, "Star Lake" and the National Anthem.

The proceeds amounted to about $40.00. After the concert several donated articles were sold by auction.

Prayer In Daily Life Was Example Of Jesus

COTTESLOE, April 6—(ENS).— The Y.P.S. held their weekly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kidd with Helen Tedford presiding, and also in charge of Bible question. Mark, 1st chapter, was read by Erwin Forsyth, and Donald Clysdale based his splendid remarks on the theme Mark 1:17, "Come ye after Me and I will make you." Jesus wrote no music; built no temple, painted no picture, yet all these things have been done well because of Him. Jesus taught by example, the need of prayer in our everyday life. Isobel Matthews and David Forsyth gave readings and Shirley Cuffe sang, "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer."

Pte. Hilliard Gallagher, R.C.O.C. of Kingston spent the week-end at his home here.

Mr. Albert Webster was in Millbrook on Sunday attending church service.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gallagher were visiting at the Gallagher home here and also with friends at Warsaw.

Mr. Milton Gallagher of Port Hope visited his sister, Mrs. George Barr.

Messrs. Fred Toms and J. S. Kidd were in Norwood on Tuesday evening.

Australians Look Aloft

With the Japanese ensconced in bases on New Guinea, only a scant 400 miles from the Australian mainland, the continent "down under" is making feverish preparations for the struggle that is to come. Particular attention is now being given to anti-aircraft defences, and hundreds of posts, like this one outside Melbourne, are springing up everywhere on the island continent.

Nurses Form New Organization

MILLBROOK, April 6—(ENS). — Emphasis was laid upon the Easter story, and the significance of Good Friday, for the opening worship period at the April meeting of the Women's Association of St. Andrew's church, held on Wednesday, with the president, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, as hostess. Assisting were Mrs. Ross Edmunds who read the lesson, Mrs. P. Stinson, who offered prayer, and Mrs. Edmund Ball, who gave the talk: "After Faith had died—then Easter!" The president made feeling reference to the death of a faithful member, Mrs. Frederick Pendrie, and all stood in silent tribute to her memory, while Mrs. F. L. Edworthy offered prayer.

The secretary, Miss Jessie Sutton, reported $4.45 in fees and $1.02 for the mile of coppers from the March meeting, and the treasurer, Mrs. J. McKnight, reported $8.50 from the afternoon tea at her home, following the March meeting, $17.00 collected from Tupper street group in lieu of the usual pot luck supper, and approximately $25.00 already in from the series of 'diminishing teas' being sponsored by the organization. A number of these are yet to be held and also some groups have not yet had their pot luck suppers.

A letter regarding the project to train practical nurses to assist graduate nurses in case an emergency should arise in Canada in connection with war conditions, to be known as "The Red Cross Emergency Reserve Organization," was read by Miss Sutton, names of those wishing to take the course to be given to Mrs. Lloyd Byam, Reg.N., or to the secretary. Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, and Mrs. W. R. Howard were appointed in charge of tables for the afternoon tea to be held in the waiting room on Saturday, April 25; Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. Arthur Fallis, Miss Sutton and Mrs. Edmund Ball to be in charge of the home baking table. Mrs. J. A. Brown and Mrs. W. C. Fallis will make the tea.

It was decided to cater for the dinner to be served the Presbyterial gathering here on the first Friday in May, and canvassers were appointed to secure supplies. Mrs. J. L. Byam invited the society for its May meeting, and the National Anthem followed the closing hymn, Mrs. Bentley offered the concluding prayer. The hostess and Mrs. Edworthy served candy during the social hour.

Havelock News

The west-end group of the W.A. of the United Church was held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Walter Nobes, and the east-end group met at the home of Mrs. Arthur McMullen, with a good attendance at each. Quilting and piecing blocks was the work of the afternoon and refreshments were served by the conveners in charge.

Mr. Fred McKenzie and Mrs. Thomas Adley attended the funeral of the late Mr. Bruce McKenzie at Gilmour on Thursday.

Miss Dora Ketchen left Thursday to visit friends in Toronto and St. Catharines.

Ottawa Steps On Army Gas Tire Wastage

New Ruling To Halt Extravagant Camp, Car, Truck Use

OTTAWA, April 7.—(CP).— The Canadian army has stepped into line with gasoline and tire conservataion pr grame with instructions for elim nation of "uneconomical and unnecessary operations of all military transport vehicles" and stringent speed regulations governing travel in army vehicles.

The instructions were issued by Defence Minister Ralston and sent to all district officers commanding in Canada by the Quartermaster-General, Maj.-Gen. J. P. MacKenzie.

An army statement said:

"The maximum speed of any load-carrying vehicles has been limited to 25 miles an hour, and on passenger vehicles 40 miles an hour under any conditions Personnel proceeding on duty from their stations must not use military transports for journeys when suitable train or bus service exists."

District officers commanding have been instructed to issue orders immediately that every effort be exerted to conserve ttires and gasline. Where necessary, disciplinary action will be taken against any misuse, speeding and unnecessary employment of vehicles that comes to the attention of officers commanding and no infractions are to be condoned.

"Full use will be made of provost personnel to check up speeding and parking of army vehicles away from unit lines without properly authorized work orders," the statement said.

New Camp Rules

The following practices must be eliminated at camps, training centres and other unit establishments:

Use of passenger cars for conveying officers and other ranks short distances when they could walk or travel on street cars without loss of time;

British Destroyer Of Narvik Fame Wrecked On Tunisia Coast—Only One Of 145 Crew Lost

LONDON, April 7—(CP).—The Admiralty announced today that the British destroyer Havock had been wrecked off the coast of French Tunisia.

Only one sailor lost his life in the wreck, the Admiralty said, adding that the 1,340-ton vessel was a total loss. The rest of the normal crew of 145 were "believed safe."

(The Italians claimed their naval units had set the Havock afire and sunk her).

The eight-year-old warship participated in the destruction of six German merchant ships and the munitions ship Ravensfeldt at Narvik April 10, 1940. She was unscratched, though two destroyers of the force of five were lost.

U.S. Private Building Construction, Consumer Durable Goods To Cease

WASHINGTON, April 7—(AP).—Production of most consumer durable goods will be stopped by May 31, Donald M. Nelson, United States war production head, disclosed today.

Declaring that "history will record whether we have moved too fast or too slow" in the drive to curtail civilian industries and convert them to war production, Nelson said the high point of the program would be reached in a few days with issuance of orders halting most private building construction and prohibiting use of iron and steel in hundreds of items.

"Their impact here and abroad will be widespread and sweeping," he predicted, adding that the two orders were part of a pattern, carefully planned by W.P.B., which changes "the face of American industry."

The goal of the program is a "sound but lean civilian economy," Nelson declared, adding that no one yet knew how "lean" it can be but that it will "get leaner and leaner as the war program goes on."

"We're taking away from the people things which make the standard of living," Nelson said in his discussion of the changes at a press conference, but "this is the way of total all-out war and the price of early victory."

Industrial "casualties" in the conversion drive would be just as inevitable as deaths on the battle field, he continued, "but we hope there will be as few as possible."

Some Cheerful Signs

In the most optimistic picture of war production so far painted by him, Nelson nevertheless reported that the over-all army, navy and maritime commission estimated requirements—now for the first time "pretty well defined"—were "in some cases greater than we can produce in 1942 and perhaps even in 1943."

But he gave these items on the encouraging side:

India Plan Slips Despite U.S. Aid

NEW DEHLI, India, April 7.—(CP)—President Roosevelt's envoy to India, Louis Johnson, has been in recent touch with the White House regarding developments in the Indian independence negotiations, it was learned today, amid growing signs that the proposals were headed for rejection.

Mr. Johnson talked again with Maulana Abul Kalan Azad, president of the All-India Congress party, and Pandi Jawaharlal Nehru, a powerful Congress party leader, after the two had met this morning with Sir Stafford Cripps, the British war cabinet member who announced the proposals.

Shortly before, Nehru had declared his opposition to any plan India from which the peoples of the Indian states were omitted—a declaration which Congress quarters said was an indication that the negotiations with Britain were breaking down.

Nehru, speaking at a reception given by Thanu Pillay, president of the Travancore State People's Conference, described those who talk of treaties with the Indian states as "lunatics, fools or knaves."

He also indicated that whatever the British government or Sir Stafford might say, the Indian people had essential unity and that he would fight those who meant to disrupt India.

"We have remained united in slavery," he said, "and we shall remain united in freedom."

Burma Units Start Firing Oil

Main British Lines Now 65 Miles From Major Fields

NEW DELHI, India, April 7 (CP)—British and Indian forces defending the rich oil fields of western Burma have fallen back to new positions within about 65 miles of the main oil area of Minbu after successfully demolishing oil and cement installations at Thayetmyo and Allanmyo, a British communique announced today.

Thayetmyo is about 40 miles north of Prome on the Irrawaddy River, up which the Japanese are pressing, and is 225 miles from the nearest point of the Indian frontier on the coast of the Bay of Bengal. Allanmyo is just north across the river from Thayetmyo.

Where the British forces are going was not divulged in the communique, which declared that "our forces are still in the process of taking up their new positions which are now north of Thayetmyo."

British authorities declared that the latest information on Japanese movements showed that a column on the west bank of the Irrawaddy was located north of Kama, which is 25 miles south of Thayetmyo, and another on the east bank of the river about Nyaungbinzeik, with other elements moving to the north-east up the Sinjek valley.

The Sinjek valley is between the Mandalay-Prome and Mandalay-Toungoo roads.

The communique said action yesterday was confined mainly to contact by enemy patrols on the Irrawaddy front.

"There was not much air activity during the day," the communique said.

It reported, however, that a town in central Burma was bombed, with "very few casualties and no damage" resulting.

Blast Kills 30

CAIRO, April 7.—(AP.)— Thirty persons, including eight British soldiers were killed Sunday by an explosion of captured Italian ammunition on a lighter wharf near the Suez canal, it was disclosed to-day.

Eighty Egyptian workers were injured. Buildings nearby were not damaged, it was said.

The ammunition was being unloaded from a captured Italian supply ship.

100,000 Cars Laid Up

TORONTO, April 7 (CP).—Provincial Highway Department officials today estimated that more than 100,000 motor vehicle owners in the province have not yet received gasoline rationing coupon books. Officials said that of 736,269 licensed vehicle owners in Ontario, about 625,000 have received coupon books.

Latest available registration figures for 1942 show 636,624 passenger cars, 93,754 commercial vehicles and 5,891 motorcycles.

5 Pembroke Men 3 In The R.C.A.F. Killed By Train

PEMBROKE, Ont., April 7.—(CP).—Five young Pembroke men were killed early to-day when their automobile was struck by an east-bound Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train at a level crossing near Meath Station, 10 miles east of here.

The dead:

Leading Aircraftman Patrick Carmody, 27; Lac. John Andrew Lawn, 26; James Goddard, 25; Philias Boucher, 26; and William Allan Foy, 25, of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The men, believed to have been in Renfrew, Ont., were on their way home to Pembroke when their car was struck by the east-bound Trans-Canada Limited.

The car, owned by J. J. Carmody, father of LAC. Carmody, was carried 200 feet and demolished. Pieces of the car were scattered along the righ-of-way.

Bodies of the five occupants were thrown clear. Which of the five was driving the car has not been determined.

The train, running 50 minutes late, was pulled by two engines. Engineer G. Dupuis and Fireman Roy Langford, both of Ottawa, were in charge of the first and Engineer J. Cumming and Fireman William Cullen, also of Ottawa, of the second. Conductor Wilfred Peverley of North Bay, Ont., was in charge of the train.

Dupuis said he saw the car before the crash but it was then too close to avoid a collision.

116 Ships Lost In 4 Mos. Off Americas

Toll Fades Past Week Blimps, Chasers Aid Ships Stick To Lanes

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP).—Navy Secretary Frank Knox reported to-day that German U-boats attacks on shipping along the United States Atlantic coast had dropped off considerably last week and that the drop might be due to protective methods recently enforced by the navy.

Discussing the submarine situation at a press conference, Knox said experience with U-boat raiders throughout the North Atlantic had shown that they operate in waves.

"In preparing your stories," he told reporters, "it might be necessary to keep that fact in mind because thta may be responsible for the decline in coastal attacks last week. On the other hand the drop may be due to methods newly adopted."

Latest figures on announced Atlantic coast shipping losses show 116 ships have been sunk since the United States entered the war. These included 59 off the United States, 23 off Canada, 30 in the Caribbean Sea, and four off South America.

Knox disclosed at his press conference that the government has "under very careful study" the problem of operating the American merchant marine, "especially those ships on long voyages." He said there had been some difficulties in manning ships but "how the problem will be solved we are not decided."

Pouring Out Patrol Boats

In describing anti-submarine measures the Navy Secretary said that "We are constantly enlarging the number of patrol craft," and revealed that the navy soon would get, for coastal patrols, an additional 200 craft 100 feet long, 250 craft 173 feet long, and 150 craft 180 feet long.

Blimp deliveries also "are coming along nicely," Knox reported, explaining that small blimps capable of long distance low speed cruises and of discharging depth charges were proving "very valuable" in hunting submarines.

The Secretary described other methods of defence against submarines as:—

Canucks For Raids

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, April 7—(CP Cable).—Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton hinted today that Canadian raiding parties may strike along the coast of Europe.

In a general interview at the new army headquarters with Canadian and British war correspondents, he was asked by a British reporter who covered the St. Nazaire raid if he anticipated that Canadians would share such raiding activities.

Gen. McNaughton replied, "Yes. Patrol and raiding activities are part of the training troops require and it is normal business for an army to get its patrols well out."

Soviets Capture 30 Towns In Past 2 Days

Kuibyshev, U.S.S.R., April 7 —(AP). — Thirty German-occupied communities and a large railway station have fallen before fierce Red Army attacks in the last two days in one sector of the Western Front, military dispatches reported to-day.

With land combats continuing in various regions, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda cited as evidence that the Germans are prematurely tapping their springtime reserves the use of tanks painted khaki rather than winter white in Nazi counter-attacks.

Intensified aerial warfare was reported to have cost the Germans 415 planes in the eight days from March 29 through April 5, while Red Army losses were held to 84.

(The Bureau's figures indicated aerial action of a scope unparalleled in Russia since the first days of the German invasion last summer. Such details, however, as the major combat areas and the proportion of victims shot down were not announced.)

Red Army men were officially declared to have killed 2,300 Germans in the two days on the Leningrad front and recaptured 18 more settlements on the Kalinin front to the south.

"On another sector of the front," the Information Bureau said, "Soviet artillerymen in two days' fighting destroyed 17 blockhouses and defence works and five machine-gun nests."

A counter-attack on the central front was said to have been repulsed by the Russians with slaying of about 100 Germans, capture of five chine guns and disabling of three tanks.

Officers Given Gun To Suicide, Men Are Stabbed

SYDNEY, Australia, April 7.—(CP)—Charges that the Japanese killed their captives in cold blood on the isands of New Guinea and New Britain were made today in a statement issued officially at Port Moresby.

The statement told the story of three Australian servicemen who said they were the only survivors of one group of 10 officers and men who were trapped on New Britain after the fall of Rabaul.

The others, with their hands tied behind their backs, were shot or bayonetted to death after they were captured by a landing party from a Japanese destroyer, it stated.

Leaflets scattered from Japanese planes had warned that any who did not surrender would be killed.

Each captured Australian officer was handed a revolver and one bullet and was ordered to commit suicide, the statement said.

One of the men who escaped shammed death when a Japanese officer went among the fallen bodies to finish off the wounded.

The three survivors said they wandered, bleeding from their wounds and numb from the horrors they had seen, for several days with their hands bound behind them before they were rescued. (How they escaped was unexplained.)

"Our hands were fastened and we were made up into parties of 10," said one of them.

"Each party was taken into the jungle. My party was stopped after going a short distance.

Screams From the Bush.

"A Japanese officer drew his sword and ordered his men to fix bayonets. One Australian after another was detached from the party and sent into the bush with a Japanese soldier armed with a bayonet.

"Soon after, we heard screams and wondered what was happening.

"One of our men asked to be shot and this was done by the officer himself.

"Another of our fellows got loose and dashed into the bush but the officer caught up with him and ran his sword through his back, then shot him.

"After that several men were bayonetted only a few yards from me without being taken into the undergrowth.

"Most of the Australians cursed the Japs and said, 'You'll pay for this when our chaps catch you'."

A 20 year old Aussie corporal, who said he had escaped from Rabaul and lived in the New Britain jungle for two months before reaching Australia, declared there still were many Australians living primitively among the island's natives while awaiting a chance to escape.

Limit Bakeries To 15 Varieties

LONDON, Ont., April 7 (CP).—Bakeries are limited to 15 varieties of bread starting today under the new rulings adopted by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, W. Harold McPhillipps, London, prices and supply representative of the Western Ontario region, announced.

A survey of bakeries through Western Ontario revealed that one has been producing as many as 60 varieties of bread.

One leading bakery announced that it was prepared to distribute cakes today with sugarless icing.

Practically all the bakeries intend to produce buns with a glucose icing instead of a sugar icing. The bakers report that such an icing will be an improvement over the sugar coating and the buns will not dry up as rapidly.

Starting today only four varieties of bread rolls will be distributed.

Tojo Barrel-Juggling to Scare India

Raids, Threats Of Calamity Seen Plot To Divide Indians, Get U.K. Plan Ousted

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

The Japanese bombing of Ceylon and cities on the Madras coast of India may or may not be preliminary to an attempt at invasion, but it patently does represent (1) an effort to disrupt strategic British supply stations and (2) terrorism which is calculated to drive the Indians into rejecting Britain's offer of Dominion status and refusing to support the war effort.

Coincident with this rain of bombs, Japanese Premier Tojo has announced his country's intention to invade. He has in effect warned the people of Hindustan to desert Britain and join the Nipponese, lest "India suffer great calamities." Perhaps he spoke the truth, since invasion certainly is possible, but the fact that he is advertising his plans in advance is no recommendation for confidence.

You have seen the Japs at circuses spin barrels on their feet. Well it strikes me that Tojo at the moment is lying on his back and doing some psychological barrel-spinning for its effect on the Anglo-Indian dispute.

Whether India is susceptible to this jugglery remains to be seen. As might be expected the immediate reaction of the Indian press was the reverse of what Tojo wanted, the newspapers urging that the two parties iron out their differences and get together for defence.

That would seem to be sound advice, since an India divided against itself is an invitation for invasion. In addition there is small doubt that Herr Hitler is urging the Japs to take the offensive either against India or Russia as a support to the German spring drive against the Bolshevists.

An attack on Siberia would compel the Russians to fight on two fronts at once—a terrific strain. As invasion of India would force Britain to withdraw troops and equipment from Iraq and Iran for use in Hindustan, thereby unguarding the gateway into the Middle East for the Nazis.

Either of these operations is possible at this moment. If the Japanese offensive against Australia goes sour, the little men of the Rising Sun will turn to something else. Their adventure at Australia has bogged down considerably, due to fierce seasonal rains which have swept their bases on New Guinea, and to the destructive pummelling which has been handed them by the Australian and United States air forces.

In many ways the Russian show would be attractive to the Japs. They know they must fight the Soviet Union sooner or later anyway. They long have coveted the rich Amur basin. And the Russian forces in the Vladivostok area have been Japan's greatest worry. The Nipponese are particularly fearful of the Red Air Force there, since it is near enough so that its bombers could play havoc with the flimsily built cities of the island empire.

Quite likely the trend of the British-Indian crisis will have much influence on the Japanese plans.

Japs Boast Transports Laden With Sugar, Rice

TOKYO (from Japanese Broadcasts), April 7—(AP).—Col. Kiusaburo Okada, chief of the War Preparations Section of the War Ministry, asserted today that Japanese transports moving troops into the Southern Pacific war theatre were returning home laden with foodstuffs and raw materials.

His article was displayed conspicuously in Tokyo newspapers.

In the three months through March, he said, troop transports have brought back 100,000 tons of sugar, 4,000 tons of corn and large quantities of rice and other supplies on their return voyages.

The writer declared that Japan hoped to transport 3,000,000 tons of products annually from the South Pacific regions and added that "not only in foodstuffs but also in other natural resources the Japanese will be able to secure self-sufficiency."

2,500 Men Involved In Wage Scale Dispute

QUEBEC, April 7—(CP).—Work remained almost at a standstill today in the Davie shipbuilding yards which closed down Saturday after workers complained about the enforcement of a new wage scale. Construction on naval and merchant ships was held up.

Spokesmen of the company's 2,500 employees agreed at a meeting late last night to return to work on the morning shift, but officials said that only 120 men clocked in this morning.

(At Montreal R. G. Thompson, vice-president of the Davie firm, said that under the wage scale, now in dispute, every man had received an increase and that there had been no decreases.

(He said that civic officials, labor leaders and employers' representativese were scheduled to give radio addresses today urging the men to report back to work "because war production is being held up seriously.")

20 PERCENT CANADA'S WORKING POPULATION TO STAY ON FARM

New Ruling Finds 18 pc Less On Land Than Last War, See Hope In Mechanization

Official C ck Estimates Up To 10 P.C. Of All Farmers Quit Land In '41 For The Army Or Work In Industrial Plants

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

OTTAWA, April 7—(CP).—Canadians held on the farm by Government selective service regulations represent about 20 per cent. of the working population, compared with more than 38 per cent. of the gainfully employed at work on farms during the First Great War, officials estimated today.

In spite of the smaller farm working force, production is high and may even be increased by reason of mechanized equipment developments.

By the selective service regulations announced March 24, the farm population was stabilized as at March 23, workers on the land at that date being considered sufficient to maintain food production for Canada and her Allies.

Through men joining the armed services and leaving the farm for industrial employment, officials estimate that up to 10 per cent. of all farm workers in Canada left this type of work in 1941. As the labor shortage developed in varying severity in different parts of the country, the need of mechanized farm equipment was reflected in sales figures.

J. M. Armstrong, technical adviser to the Agricultural Supplies Board, said the purchase of farm equipment in Canada in 1940 was nearly 40 per cent more than in 1939 and sales during 1941 held up nearly as well.

Tractor Sales the Sign

Mr. Armstrong, who made a survey of agricultural equipment requirements before quotas on production and import were established early this year, said tractor sales are possibly the best indication of what has been taking place as farmers sought to replace labor with the most modern equipment.

Tractor sales in Canada were just over 13,000 in 1938 and 1939. This figure jumped to 20,968 in 1940 and 20,422 in 1941.

"It is estimated there are about 150,000 tractors in use in Canada, and of these more than 50,000 have been purchased within the last three years." Mr. Armstrong said.

Because of this condition, agriculture department authorities believe there will be only a limited reduction, if any, in the use of power machinery on Canadian farms this year. Some farmers will have to return to the use of horses because they are unable to obtain new equipment to replace worn out machinery but with labor supplies limited the tendency is to use tractors and other equipment of top efficiency.

Specific instructions were also issued to the control and authorization of the use of transport by one officer to be subject to direct and constant supervision by the commanding officer.

Must Have Special Orders.

Henceforth no Royal Canadian Army Service Corps or unit transport will leave its garage or vehicle park without a work order or ticket signed by an officer authorizing the journey. Where guards are stationed at barracks and camps entrances vehicles will leave by these outlets and will not be permitted to pass through the guards unless the driver can produce a properly authorized work order or ticket.

When an issue of gasoline is required in cans for convoy duties or long journeys, a requisition signed by an authorized officer of the unit must be produced, stating the actual amount required and the vehicles to which it will be recorded. When gasoline is issued to workshops in connection with repair of vehicles, the requisition will be signed by the workshop officer.

Unit vehicle log sheets and log books will be entered up to date and the consumption of gasoline will be checked against the mileage at least once each month, and any excessive consumption will be drawn to the attention of the commanding officer. Records of all R.C.A.S.C. gasoline filling stations will be checked.

EVERYTHING O.K.

"He has his new cans, the covers came this morning, and everything looks like a Christmas tree," Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., told Magistrate Langley in Police Court this morning when his client, Lee Shung, proprietor of Hollywood Cafe, appeared for sentence on a charge of not using proper receptacles in placing garbage on the street, to which he had pleaded guilty previously.

"Is this man now trying to comply with the by-law," asked Magistrate Langley, and City Solicitor W. F. Huycke and Sanitary Inspector Ronald McPherson agreed that he was.

"A fine of $1.00. and no costs,' remarked Magistrate Langley.

Drunken Driver Gets 7 Days

"Thomas E. Curvin was found guilty by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning of drunken driving and sentenced to seven days in jail.

An order was issued to the police to impound the accused's car for a period of three months.

Evidence in the case, which arose out of an accident on Water street north, was heard last week and Defence Counsel T. J. Carley, K.C. and Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., presented their arguments at that time after which His Worship reserved judgment until this morning.

While I had come to a very definite conclusion at the conclusion of the argument," Magistrate Langley said this morning in delivering judgment, "I did feel that in justice to the accused I should look over my notes."

"After full consideration of all the evidence," he continued, "I have concluded that this man was intoxicated and to a degree bringing him within this section.

His Worship pointed out in registering a conviction that in addition to the evidence of the police, there had been the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. James Foskett and W. B. Gordon as well as to some extent the evidence of the doctor called by the defence to indicate that the accused had been intoxicated.

Buchanan Acquitted

Facing a similar charge, Hugh Buchanan was found not guilty when Magistrate Langley gave judgment in his case.

Buchanan, who was defended by John A. Bradshaw had been arrested at Charlotte and George streets by the traffic officers on duty there when his car stalled. The case was heard last week and judgment was reserved until today.

His Worship pointed out that this case differed considerably from the other by reason of the fact that all the evidence given by civilians in the case indicated that the accused was not intoxicated to a degree coming within the meaning of the act.

"In this case," said Magistrate Langley, "there is a reasonable doubt as to whether the degree of intoxication was sufficient to warrant a conviction and I am giving the accused the benefit of that doubt and acquitting him of the charge."

"This should be a lesosn to you," the magistrate said to Buchanan. "You had some beer before you drove that night and you came within a hair's breadth of getting a jail term."

Urge Retaining By C.N.R. Of Port Hope Line

Continuation of the C.N.R. service between Millbrook and Port Hope indefinitely beyond April 30 will be urged upon executives of the company in Toronto by a delegation from the municipalities of this district whose representatives at a meeting in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce Monday night affirmed that the public is steadily becoming more aware of dependence on rail transportation as a result of the increasing restrictions on gasoline and rubber.

The meeting authorized the members of the local Chamber of Commerce to select the delegation and to ask for an appointment with C.P.R. officials as soon as possible.

The federal Board of Transport Commissioners issued an order last December giving the C.N.R. the right to abandon the Port Hope-Millbrook line, and the time limit of operations was extended until April 30, 1942. Since then the first gasoline restrictions have become accentuated by the loss of rubber imports with consequent curtailing and rationing of rubber tires.

The meeting, attended by more than forty men from the district between Lindsay and Port Hope, with G. A. Macdonald, president of the Chamber of Commerce, in the chair, affirmed that a strong appeal should be made to the C.N.R. to keep the line in use as a precaution in the general interests of the public in a large area of Central Ontario.

Among Those Present

Peterborough was represented by Aldermen Sands, Dutton and Bradburn, from the city council; G. A. Macdonald, J. J. Dorris, T. J. Carley, Robert Abbott, Colonel J. A. Dewart, J. E. Girven, D. F. Fitzgerald, F. J. Overend and Claire Sullivan.

From Millbrook, Reeve J. E. Ball, P. I. Bentley, George Burnham, Ivan Gray and R. A. Ford.

From Lindsay, George Baldwin and C. Newton.

Hope Township, Reeve W. R. Prouse, H. G. Woodley and Councillors A. J. Reynolds, W. Bickle and Max Irwin; also H. M. Foster and Cecil G. Mercer, M.P.P.

Others present included W. F. Rickard, M.P., of Newcastle; Reeve Garnet Shield of Cavan Township; J. A. Waddell of Campbellcroft.

The consensus of the meeting pointed a new responsibility upon C.N.R. discretion and judgment in regard to the retention of the Peterborough-Port Hope railway.

Mr. Waddell, grain dealer at Campbellcroft said the signs pointed to official intention to close the line at the end of this month. Instructions have been issued to accept no more car load lots to and from that place after April 13, and Mr. Waddell said that sounded ominous.

Alarming Change

Colonel J. A. Dewart said he had not attended other meetings of protest against the proposed closing because he felt the C.N.R. was losing money and he did not feel justified in appealing for the continuance of a line that was only adding to the deficit. That situation had changed entirely, he said, and in his own experience in local grain business there had been some increase in C.N.R. haulage with the prospect of still further gaining of ground that had been lost to the rubber-tired trucks.

Reeve Prouse of Hope township said he expected that farmers might be asked before this year is out to "ship their milk by the railways the way they used to do."

"We have no idea what is ahead of us," was the comment of Reeve Shield of Cavan. "It would not be common sense to shut down a line of transportation that would be thoroughly dependable in war circumstances.

Potential War Use

Mr. Abbott mentioned the possibility of that link in the system being important in the event of military necessity. He remarked that business was turning back to the railways as restrictions curbed the trucks.

Alderman Bradburn pointed out another consideration in the plans for a new St. Lawrence canal that would open the Great Lakes to ocean shipping. In that day, Port Hope would become a lake port, a development of high importance to Peterborough and its industries.

Chairman of the city's manufacturers committee, Alderman Bradburn said that abandonment of the Port Hope line would quickly be followed by lifting of the rails, and in a comparatively short time the present connection with Port Hope and its prospective port business would be cut off.

Need Peterborough Help

"I am glad Peterborough has become active again in this appeal," W. F. Rickard, M.P., said. "I think they can exert a great deal of influence, and it is too bad they did not support the appeal to the Transport Commission in the Fall."

P. I. Bentley urged Peterborough manufacturers to swing in behind this petition to the C.N.R. He outlined Millbrook's position, with dubious truck transport after this month. The village was anxious for the continuance of the rail service.

The resolution to appeal first to the C.N.R. officials in Toronto was moved by Alderman Bradburn and seconded by Alderman Sands.

Garnet Shield moved the other resolution, seconded by Ivan Gray, that the naming of the committee be left to the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce and that they be asked to make all the appointment arrangements.

"I don't think I could put my hand today on one Case tractor in Ontario sales rooms," Art McIntyre remarked to the Examiner today. "I expect to have some more before long, but as far as today goes there is not an available machine in the province. That sounds like some kind of record."

Mr. McIntyre delivered two machines Saturday, one to Robert McAdam and the other to Milton Clark, and the two machines added a lively agricultural note in a tandem procession through the Saturday afternoon traffic on George street, heading north toward Smith township and the summer's job.

3. The Ford Motor Company's great Willow Run plant for heavy bombers in Michigan will be in production about a month earlier than previously anticipated and will turn out its first plane before the end of May.

4. The conversion of the automobile industry to war production has "been beyond my expectations—they have been doing a great job."

5. The war production drive, intended to stimulate output 25 per cent in the next few critical month on existing machinery, is proceeding at "very gratifying speed."

War—25 Years Ago

By the Canadian Press.

April 7, 1917 — British aircraft sank a German destroyer in raid on Zeebrugge, Belgium. French bombarded German positions between the Aisne and the Somme. Italians routed 5,000 Arabs in the Zcara region, Tripolitania. Cuba declared war on Germany.

TWO IN A ROW.

An out-of-town motorist had a little trouble at George and Hunter Streets just at noon. He was driving south on George and wheeled out to pass a car waiting for the light. Then his car whammed into an eastbound car doing some damage, and the out-of-town motorist then wheeled his car into the west curb, and smacked into the rear of Dr. Clark's car which was parked in front of Dickson's Store. The driver claimed his brakes refused to work, and the two drivers put their heads together to figure out the costs of the damage. Dr. Clark's car was apparently not damaged.

Propose To Call 20,000 Pupils To Aid On Farms

TORONTO, April 7. — Twenty thousand secondary school students will be asked to work on Ontario farms this season, A. Maclaren, director of the farm service force, told members of the Ontario Secondary Schools Headmasters' Association at a dinner meeting at the Granite Club last night. The headmasters are meeting in conjunction with the eighty-first annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association.

Mr. Maclaren said his department had set an objective of 40,000 extra helpers for Ontario farmers this year. Last year the objective was 10,000, and actually 23,000 were placed, including 15,000 students.

In outlining the program for the second year's operation of the farm service force, the speaker explained that it was the intention to register all farm help from twelve years of age up. Camps are being established for girls between the ages of 16 and 19, in conjunction with the Y.W.C.A. Each camp will look after sixty girls, and will actually be run by the girls themselves. The girls will be paid a minimum of 22½ cents an hour, and in areas such as the Niagara Peninsula, where piece-work prevails, the minimum must come up to the prevailing hourly rate.

$20 for Initial Month.

Boys will be paid $20 for the first month they work if they are inexperienced, and $25 if they worked on farms last year. For the remaining period of their employment the question of salary will be a matter for the farmer and his help to settle.

Mr. Maclaren explained that a survey has been made of the labor requirements of every county, and each high school will be asked to sponsor a county.

Guest speaker of the evening was Dr. C. N. Hincks, director of the National Council of Mental Hygiene, who recently returned from Great Britain. He spoke highly of present day education facilities in England, and said the war had resulted in a more "progressive' type of education.

"The English people to-day are unconcerned about their personal fate but they are enormously concerned about the fate of their children," he said. "The concern of the Government is to maintain the nutrition of the adults as much as possible, but definitely the nutrition of the children."

"British children are to-day the best nourished children in the world despite strict rationing, and this is mainly due to the communal feeding centres," he stated.

Dr. G. F. Rogers, Deputy Minister of Education, said he was unable to make an expected announcement concerning the proposed defence program in Ontario schools pending approval of the scheme by Ottawa.

Charles F. Cummings Prices' Representative

E ployees at Hood and Cumming Motors heard with pleasure today that Charles F. Cumming, president of the Owen Sound Board of Trade, had been named Owen Sound representative of a sub-regional office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, which will open soon in the northern town.

Mr. Cumming, a native of Toronto, has been manager of the Georgian Bay Motors, Limited, for the past six years. rior to that he was connected with the firm of Hood and Cumming Motors in Peterborough. He has also been connected with firms in Windsor, Toronto, immons and Fort William.

During 1939-1940 Mr. Cumming was vice-president of the Owen Sound Board of Trade, and was elected president for the term of 1941-42. He is a member of the Kiwanis ub and served on the executive of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club in 1929, 1930 and 1931.

Boy Of 18 Charged With Being Drunk

An eighteen-year-old boy was among the offenders charged in Police Court this morning with being drunk, and he was fined $10, and $1.00 costs, a little under the usual tariff.

One of the quartette charged with intoxication pleaded not guilty, but after hearing the evidence of Sergt. John Thompson and Constable Gordon Trennum for the prosecution and three defence witnesses, Magistrate Langley registered a conviction and fined the accused $10, and $3.00 costs, or ten days.

"I might as well take the prison." said the accused.

McGrath Traces Structure Of Infantry Unit

A vivid word picture of the might of the Japanese war machine, and the Japs cleverness in patterning their tactics after the best models in the word was portrayed to the Peterborough Lions Club on Monday evening at the Kawartha Club by Major Jim McGrath, M.M., of the Prince of Wales Rangers (R.F.)

Major McGrath was introduced by Pete McGillen, and first explained in detail the make-up of a modern infantry regiment, such as the Prince of Wales Rangers, Active Force, now under mobilization. He traced the structure of the unit, from the section right up to the headquarters company, and told the club, the various weapons used, and their uses in the field of action.

The speaker, who holds the Military Medal and Bar, drew from his wartime experiences to inject plenty of humor into his talk, and also to describe the German soldier. He stated the old saying that the German army was never defeated on the field of battle was just so much eye-wash, and he added that when the German of World War 1 was confronted by Canadian troops employing the "cold steel" they threw up their hands.

What Canada Faces

He said he had no desire to appear pessimistic, and went on to give a picture of the threat which faces Canada. He urged the men to compare the moderate regimentation of army life as compared to life under the heel of a totalitarian despot, and to judge for themselves where they may be serve in the war effort at the present time. "Fashion your own umbrella into a bayonet with a jagged edge" was his admonition to the Lions.

The thanks of the club was ably voiced by Victor Gallon, who served as a commissioned officer in the British Imperial Army in World War 1, and J. E. Girven, the president of the club in congratulating the speaker on his fine talk, extended a welcome to him to visit the club again.

To Aid Y's Men

A letter from the Y's Men's Club asking for assistance in operating a bingo at the Market Hall soon, was placed before the club, and ten members volunteered to assist, under the chairmanship of Stanley Darling.

J. Armitage, club secretary in a final summing up of the recent fur coat draw said the net proceeds amounted to $540.00. This money will be sent to the British War Victims Fund, aided by Lions Clubs across Canada, for the maintenance and shelter of British children made homeless or orphaned by enemy action.

Guests at the club included Gordon Cuthbertson, Henry Shepherd, and Robert Pearson.

3,700 In 12 Days

New Delhi, April 7 (CP).

THE Chinese announced today that 3,700 Japanese were killed in the 12-day battle of Toungoo, the eastern anchor of the United Nations' Burma line which the outnumbered Chinese have been forced to yield.

A Chinese communique said Japanese losses also included six mortars, one mountain gun, one field gun, 70 horses and some bicycles and rifles captured.

Town Councillor Suffers Seizure

COBOURG, April 7 — (ENS). — Stricken with a heart attack over the week-end, Councillor Bob Love of Cobourg is at his home here, his condition improved. Councillor Love and his wife were driving from Oshawa to Cobourg during the weekend when Mr. Love complained of a sudden pain as they were coming into Bowmanville. He pulled to the side of the road and stopped the car. Mrs. Love went for help and phoned for a doctor. When they returned they found that Mr. Love had managed to get from behind the wheel and was standing up by the car. The doctor stated at the time that had he remained in the cramped position behind the wheel, the results might have been mor serious. Councillor Love was taken to Bowmanville hospital and later brought to his home her.

Ottawa Checking On Suit Hoarders

EDMONTON, April 7 — (CP). — Clothing dealers in Edmonton have been asked by the Federal Government to supply the names of men who have purchased three suits or more since February 1, it was learned yesterday.

No reason was given for requesting the names, but it is understood that similar action is being taken in the rest of the Dominion. It was assumed the Government was checking on any men who might be hoarding clothes because of new wartime restrictions.

2 Minutes' Prayer

ORLANDO, Fla., April 7—(AP)—Two minutes each day, for the war's duration, have been set aside for each Orlando citizen to pray for counsel. Mayor William Beardall's proclamation also authorized the ringing of all church bells and chimes in the city from noon to 12.02 p.m. It followed an editorial in the Orlando Morning Sentinel advocating the two-minute period of silent prayer.

Insurance Men Have Merry Battle Seeking Campbellford Business

CAMPBELLFORD, April 7 (ENS). —With the help of a couple of insurance agents who sparred verbally over the corporation's public liability insurance together with some of their own problems which have been simmering for several months, but finally reached the boil, council sat for a lively three-hour session here last night. The insurance question was first to take the spotlight when A. Bain, suave representative of A. E. Wilson Co., Toronto, began to explain just why his company would have to boost the premium on the policy this year to $371. He said that only one claim amounting to $240 had been paid by the company in 1940 but over the past four years the losses had actually exceeded the premiums paid.

"Your company has used the people of this community who have had the misfortune of an accident, fairly," conceded Councillor O'Sullivan. But Deputy Reeve MacMillan was not satisfied that the boost was justified and asked if the company felt obliged to raise the premium every time there was a claim, to which Mr. Bain replied that premiums were quite naturally based on the hazard involved and loss ratio. However, he assured council that claims here were only "a flea bite compared to those of the $5 to $10,000 variety" and when asked by Coun. O'Sullivan if the premium couldn't be shaded he went all the way out on a limb stating that the rate had been definitely established by his company after taking all factors into consideration and could not be altered by him.
